BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

1940

LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

https://archive.org/details/book-review-digest_1940-1941

THE
BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

THIRTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1940 TO FEBRUARY 1941 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
SADIE BRACHFELD

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to
San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

Printed in the U. S. A.

PREFACE

The thirty-sixth Annual volume of the Book Review Digest is a cumulation of monthly issues from March, 1940 to February, 1941, inclusive. No single number for February is issued. Entries for books issued with 1941 imprint are not included in this volume.

As the result of questionnaires sent to subscribers during the year it was decided to add The Hibbert Journal to the list of publications from which digests of reviews are made. The three law reviews, from Columbia, Harvard, and Yale, have been taken off the main list, and placed among those from which the Book Review Digest quotes occasionally. The name of Chemical and Chemical Engineering News has been changed to Chemistry and Chemical Engineering News. In July, 1940, the Forum merged with Current History.

Approximately 4000 books are included in this volume.

Miss Marion Knight has continued to act in an advisory capacity to the present editors, as she has done since her resignation in 1934.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. Peabody Museum, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, Mills Bldg, Washington, D.C.

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. $5. American Economic Assn, Evanston, Ill.

Am Hist R—American Historical Review. $5. American Historical Association, 535 W 114th St, New York

Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. $5. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York

Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. $5 (libraries $3; students $2.50) University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. $5. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.

Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4. American Sociological Society, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh

Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. $5. 3457 Walnut St, Philadelphia

Atlantic—Atlantic Bookshelf of the Atlantic Monthly. $5. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston

Booklist—Booklist. $3. American Library Assn, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago

Bookmark—Bookmark. 50c New York State Library, University of the State of New York press, Albany

Books—New York Herald Tribune Books. $1. N Y Tribune, Inc, Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $7.50 (Thursday, Friday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston

Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $2. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 28 Wellington St, W, Toronto

Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto

Cath World—Catholic World. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 411 W 59th St, New York

Chem & Chem Eng N—Chemistry & Chemical Engineering News. $2. American Chemical Society, Mills Bldg, Washington, D.C.

Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York

Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 440 S Dearborn St, Chicago

Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $12. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston

Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Commonweal Publishing Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York

Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.

Current Hist & Forum—Current History and Forum. $3. C-H Pub. Corp, 366 Madison Av, New York
  Forum merged with Current History, July 1940

Economist—Economist. £3. Economist Newspaper, Ltd, 8 Bouverie St, London, EC 4

El School J—Elementary School Journal. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago

Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York

Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 32s. Longmans, Green & Co, 39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C. 4 (114 Fifth Av, New York)

Ethics—Ethics. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 45 E 65th St, New York

Forum. See Current Hist & Forum
  Merged with Current History, July 1940

Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York

Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. McGraw-Hill Book Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York

Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. 10s. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($2.50. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)

Horn Bk M—Horn Book Magazine. $2.50. Horn Book, Inc, 264 Boylston St, Boston

Ind & Eng Chem. See Chemistry & Chemical Engineering News

J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. $2.50. American Home Economics Assn, Mills Bldg, Washington, D.C.

J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W 116th St, New York

J Phys Chem—Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Avs, Baltimore

J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

J Religion—Journal of Religion. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Library J—Library Journal. $5. 62 W 45th St, New York

Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Living Age—Living Age. $5. 420 Madison Av, New York

Management R—Management Review. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York

Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York

Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Nation—Nation. $5. Nation, Inc, 55 Fifth Av, New York

Nature—Nature. $15. Macmillan Company, 60 Fifth Av, New York (£3 Macmillan & Co, Ltd, St Martin's St, London, WC 2)

New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. M. Ellis, 200 Stevens Hall, Orono, Me.

New Repub—New Republic. $5. Editorial publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 30s. New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1

N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, N.Y.

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, 229 W 43d St, New York

New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 43d St, New York

No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Review Corp, 123 William St, New York

Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $2. 129 E 52d St, New York

Poetry—Poetry. $3. 232 E Erie St, Chicago

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. $5. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. $4. Saturday Review Co, Inc, 420 Madison Av, New York

School & Society—School and Society. $5. 425 West 123d St, New York

School Arts—School Arts. $3. Printers Bldg, Worcester, Mass.

School R—School Review. $2.50. Dept. of Education, University of Chicago, 5835 Kimbark Av, Chicago

Scientific Bk Club R—Scientific Book Club Review. Subscription. Scientific Book Club, Inc, 80 Lafayette St, New York

Social Educ—Social Education. $2. American Book Co, 88 Lexington Av, New York

Social Forces—Social Forces. $4. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore

Social Studies—Social Studies. $2. McKinley Publishing Co, 1021 Filbert St, Philadelphia

Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $5. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York

Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $11. Republican Publishing Co, 32 Cypress St, Springfield, Mass.

Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2. American Library Association, 520 N Michigan Av, Chicago

Survey—Survey. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York

Survey G—Survey Graphic. $3. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York

Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. $3.50. Theatre Arts, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York

Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 330 E 22d St, Chicago; 135 E 42d St, New York

Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York

Yale R n s—Yale Review. $3. Drawer 1729, New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from America; Churchman; Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Living Church; Pratt Institute Quarterly; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

(W) Sets of Wilson catalog cards are available for all books marked with this symbol.

Publishers' directory will be found at end of volume.

KEY TO PRONUNCIATION

ā, as in fate; â, as in dare; ă, as in add; ä, as in arm; ȧ, as in dance ē, as in eve; ĕ, as in met; ẽ, as in her; ê, as in event

ī, as in ice; ĭ, as in pin

ō, as in note; ŏ, as in not; ô, as in lord; o͝o, as in book; o͞o, as in moon

ū, as in mute; ŭ, as in nut; û, as in urn; ü, as in grün; u̇, as in affair

N indicates that the n itself is silent, but that the preceding vowel has a nasal quality

Single stress ′ indicates accented syllable

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March, 1940—February, 1941

AARON, HAROLD. Good health and bad medicine; a family medical guide. (Consumers union. Publications) 328p $3 McBride

616 Medicine, Popular (W) 40-27253

"What to do to maintain good health and to treat common ailments, with advice about consulting a doctor. False ideas are corrected; the claims of widely advertised home remedies are evaluated and often denied. Commercial names are given. A practical, readable guide for the layman, by the medical consultant to Consumers Union of United States, Inc." (Booklist) Index.

"Its topics include a motley list, but it does cover the everyday health problems of the everyday man and woman. The advice given is simple, practical, and in accord with accepted medical opinion. The fallacies in self-medication for headaches, constipation, indigestion, and similar common ailments, which may be minor in themselves or may signal the onset of more serious disease, is well illustrated." W. W. Bauer

+ Am J Pub Health 30:960 Ag '40 400w

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40

"This book deserves high commendation for the accurate and up-to-date information with which it is densely packed and for the experienced common sense with which the author approaches the fallacy-ridden subject of popular health. The reader can feel the utmost confidence in Dr. Aaron's advice on bad health and its treatment and on preventive measures. How he shall regard the doctor's dicta on commercial products each reader will have to decide for himself." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p20 S 15 '40 460w

Christian Century 57:321 Mr 6 '40 70w

"Good Health and Bad Medicine is packed full of hard sense and useful information. It should form a part of the equipment of every householder's medicine cabinet together with the remedies suggested in Chapter II." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 6 '40 300w

"A volume of this type is more reliable than the old-fashioned family guide, but it is not especially valuable in facilitating home treatment, even though it offers excellent exposition concerning a diversity of foods, drugs and cosmetics, with due respect to claims made for them. Good sense, however, lies behind the content, which is presented in very readable form." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 76:247 Ag '40 140w

ABBE, GEORGE. Dreamer's clay. 304p $2.50 Holt

40-30095

Mark Darrow, a dreamer and a sculptor, returned to his ancestral home in New Hampshire to find the village in the throes of the depression and the inhabitants too crushed to do anything about it. Mark determined to change all that, but his efforts were viewed with suspicion until the day when he predicted the big hurricane.

"The author, who is also a poet, has an excellent story-teller's instinct but appears to become confused by the novel form. His major characters, Mark and Janice, are pretty mechanical; it is of minor characters and incident he writes most freely and, accordingly, most interestingly. The story of Henry, the lone Democrat, is a little epic of its own." J. W. Chase

+ — Books p14 O 13 '40 440w

Reviewed by G. H. Carroll

Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 1000w

"Mr. Abbe himself is primarily a poet, but not all his readers are. His writing is lucid, shapely, and humorous, and especially brilliant in his description of the 1938 hurricane, the purpose and theme are arresting, but the sum total is more allegory than novel."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 9 '40 550w

"A good theme, but the story is spoilt by the unconvincing way in which his 'near magic' methods are handled. It attempts to be inspirational and succeeds in being saccharine. A little more humor would have helped a lot. The style is wooden and flat. It may appeal to those who like romance in large doses." Lucy Kinloch

— + Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 100w

"It is difficult for a moderately materialistic reviewer to estimate George Abbe's new novel. . . It seems unlikely that he could believe all the whimsical unreality he writes in 'Dreamer's Clay,' but it is set down with a straight face and even an air of deep conviction. . . The New England hurricane of a couple of years ago . . . has been used too much in fiction, and every one who lived through it knows it was genuine, but it never seemed more unreal than here." C. D.

N Y Times p24 S 29 '40 360w

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 25 '41 240w

ABBE, GEORGE. Wait for these things. 83p $2 Holt

811 40-7386

First book of poems by a young New Englander, a member of the faculty of Mount Holyoke college.

"Metrically, all of Abbe's verse is interesting. His experiments in sound patterns and rhythmical effects are performed within conventional verse forms, except for a few pieces of polyphonic prose that are as good as Amy Lowell's. For the most part, they are successful experiments, producing lines pleasantly fresh to the ear if not always to the mind." Kerker Quinn

+ Books p10 Jl 14 '40 430w

Subject and title index at end of alphabet

ABBE, GEORGE—Continued

"Mr Abbe is, technically, a conservative poet. He is far, too, from being a skilled craftsman as yet. However, he is a poet. He is a poet if he never writes another line. For he has something more valuable than newness, or originality, or many other things that go today by the name of talent. What he has is an awareness of poetry per se. He is a poet because, no matter how weak his structure is—and it is weak, too often, in this book—he sees, feels, speaks, and translates poetry." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 18 '40 430w

"'Wait for These Things' is the first poem in the collection. It is significant of all the thoughts that follow. George Abbe has waited for the beauty and serenity of nature, love and friendliness, and has put into words those impressions that we have all felt, but are unable to express. The poems are sincere; they are as clean and refreshing as the New England hills and woods." Lena Ruppert

+ Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by W. T. Scott

New Repub 103:361 S 9 '40 300w

"The level of this volume is scarcely higher than that of the undergraduate poems Mr. Abbe wrote five or six years ago. There are some charming transcriptions of scenery and tributes to birds—but, unfortunately, they recall the sharper accents of more distinctive forerunners. . . There are quiet evocations of New England—but Mr. Abbe walks trails blazed by pioneers and roads charted by his immediate predecessors without cutting new timber or extending the topography." Louis Untermeyer

— + Sat R of Lit 22:7 Jl 6 '40 200w

"Mr Abbe writes with a sure hand, as well as a perceptive mind, expressing his thoughts in the medium he thinks best suited to them." A. M. J.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 400w

Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

ABBE, PATIENCE; ABBE, RICHARD, and ABBE, JOHN. No place like home. 255p il $2 Messner

B or 92 Europe—Description and travel. Children as authors (W) 40-8946

The authors of Around the World in Eleven Years (Book Review Digest, 1936) are now twelve, thirteen, and fifteen. On the eve of the war their mother took them to Europe where they visited Germany, Poland, Italy, France and England. They finally arrived home just before the war broke out, and their impressions of their trip, as evidenced in this book, left no doubt that there is "no place like home."

"Somehow, if you can once put up with the Abbe children's ideas that anything they may say is worth listening to on any subject, if you once forget that they had no business whatever to be where they were, at a time when people had quite enough on their minds already, the Abbe impressions have a fascination—and a value—all their own. They are most lifelike when least important. As soon as the children grow sententious, or draw conclusions, an adult editorial smell gets into the air." M. L. Becker

+ — Books p10 Ap 21 '40 700w

"Where once they were precocious but apparently unaffected children, the Abbes are now self-consciously, determinedly, almost desperately childish adolescents. Never did fading beauty cling to youth more dauntlessly than the Abbes, or with more unescapable loss of youthful freshness and charm. Nor can spontaneity be successfully counterfeited by confused sentence structure and bad grammar. And yet it is possible that their book may be read with some amusement and interest."

— + N Y Times p3 Ap 14 '40 650w

"Entertaining stuff. Poorly illustrated."

New Yorker 16:100 Ap 13 '40 40w

"Although the style is amusing, the Abbés are serious about conditions abroad and even more serious about being one hundred per cent American. No place like home!, they say with fervor. It is a lively and timely account." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 22:15 Ag 24 '40 360w

"The Abbe children's literary formula may not be as juvenile as it sounds and the reader may suspect that reported episodes represent a mingling of fiction and fact, as is not uncommon in tales of even adult travelers. But the Abbe books dispense an amusing type of humor."

Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 1000w

ABBOTT, MRS DAISY THOMSON. The indoor gardener. 117p il $1.50 Univ. of Minn.

635.9652 House plants. Window gardening (W) 39-29484

"An informal and practical little book on the care of house plants, covering phases of the subject usually neglected. The first chapter, for instance, is on Gardens in apartment, school room and office. Later there is a treatment of Gift plants—what to do with the poinsettia or cyclamen that comes at Christmas time and immediately begins to lose its leaves and wither. Equally good are chapters on watering and propagation." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 36:194 Ja 15 '40

Bookmark p6 My '40

"Humor, sanity and first-class guidance are well blended here in Mrs. Abbott's latest book." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p22 Mr 3 '40 90w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 17 '40 100w

"This is a practical and unpretentious little volume on house plants and their care by a woman who is well known in the Middle West for her newspaper work on gardening subjects. Though she has little that is new or unique to bring to her discussion of indoor gardening, the information which she gives is correct and clearly given." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 3 '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:14 Ja '40

ABBOTT, EDITH. Public assistance; v 1, American principles and policies, in five parts; with select documents. 894p $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press [27s Cambridge]

361.6 Charities—U.S. Poor laws. Social work (40-11917)

"This volume, a compilation of selected documents on public relief, is divided into sections: Principles of Public Responsibility; The Old Poor Law in the Twentieth Century; Local Responsibility and Medical Care; State Grants-in-Aid; and Federal Aid and Emergency Relief. Each section is headed by an interpretative statement by the author." (Survey) Index.

"In this book Miss Abbott adds another volume to the impressive list of studies of American social problems which she and her distinguished colleagues have produced. In the preface she states that the book is not a history of public assistance, and that it is written particularly for social workers. No doubt both these statements are true, but as one reads the text one gets a very good idea of the historical setting of our major welfare problems, and one is aware of the passion and insight of a great scholar and teacher whose influence extends beyond the walls of the classroom and whose message is timely for the intelligent layman as well as for the professional expert." H. F. Hohman

+ Am Econ R 30:910 D '40 500w

"Professor Abbott has realized to the full that the literature of public welfare is both rich and voluminous, but that much of the richness lies unmined and difficult of access. In the present volume, she has turned to important sources of original material and has used them to illuminate a text that is both scholarly and interesting." J. P. Clark
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1204 D '40 370w

Reviewed by Marietta Stevenson
Ann Am Acad 213:215 Ja '41 500w

"Perhaps the most valuable service rendered by the compiler is the selection and arrangement of court decisions and other documents. The social work student finds law books and law references intricate and unfamiliar and access to them difficult. The decisions on principles of poor relief and the settlement laws are especially helpful. The text is well documented." R. W. Kelso
+ Survey 76:277 S '40 490w

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). Clo; il. by Heman Fay, jr. 295p $2 Lippincott

40-30960

Clo and her slightly older brother Jode live with an uncle and aunt in a small town on the shore of Lake Erie. Their engineer father spends most of his time in South America and their mother accompanies him. This is the story of one summer when their parents return to America to get acquainted with Clo and Jode, and what comes of it.

"I do not wonder that stories by Jane Abbott hold the affections of girls just too old to be children. The secret is in her latest book, open to any one who remembers what this age is like. It takes a girl and a boy at the touchiest time of life—almost through high school—shows them as they are, and without laughing at them, and wins their confidence by deserving it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 S 15 '40 330w

"It is light reading for the younger girls in the teens." Miriam Snow
Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 110w

"Mild entertainment." Gladys Graham
Sat R of Lit 23:25 N 16 '40 40w

ABEL, JUAN C. Portrait photography as a career. 335p pl $3 Am. photographic pub. [10s 6d Chapman]

778 Photography—Portraits

Practical guide for the professional portrait photographer. It contains advice on selection and outfitting the studio, kind of staff for a small studio, buying materials, filing, publicity, costs, insurance, etc. Illustrated with portraits by American and British photographers. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:38 Jl '40

"There is so much useful information that one hesitates to criticize, but for those new to the work, fuller advice on artificial lighting installations would be an advantage. The book is illustrated with a selection of excellent portrait studies."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p283 Je 8 '40 120w

ABRAHAMS, DORIS CAROLINE (CARYL BRAHMS, pseud), and SIMON, S. J. The elephant is white; il. by Robert Robison. 278p $2.50 Farrar [7s 6d Joseph, M]

40-4087

Hilarious story of a club in Paris, most of the members being White Russians. The rule seems to be that in order to belong to the club the applicant must lead a completely useless life. Into this restful atmosphere a rich young Englishman blunders, and stays to marry one of the club's prominent members.

" 'The Elephant is White' is completely cockeyed from first to last, and boasts a set of characters who are superlatively charming, funny and easygoing." Fred Feldkamp
+ Books p11 F 4 '40 550w

" 'The Elephant Is White' is roller coaster entertainment, so be sure to keep your seat and hold your hat!" Jean Arrowsmith
Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 320w

"Pleasantly unbrutal entertainment and not at all bad if you can still stand anything with White Russian Charm as an accessory. The humour is of a refreshing kind." Anthony West
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:348 S 2 '39 70w

"A humorous yarn. . . It is amusing and clever, but it never quite rings the bell for tops in this type of gaga literature. It would probably seem cleverer and more amusing if this same sort of thing hadn't been done before—often and well for instance in the first half of 'The Mysterious Mickey Finn' [by Elliot Paul, Book Review Digest, 1939]." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p7 F 4 '40 550w

"The authors squeeze out of the situation every possible variation upon the humor of debonair crookedness, but their book remains thin and monotonous. Its only belly-laughs are to be found in the exploits of the eleven-year old daughter of Peter's love, a cosmopolitan Little Lulu, who is not a bit less of a terror for having added Bollinger '21 to her tastes." K. S.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 10 '40 200w

"It is a funny book, devised as an absolute scream. But the curious thing is that every now and then it does suddenly extract a short, surprised laugh." Kate O'Brien
Spec 163:336 S 1 '39 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 23 '39 120w

ABRAMOVITZ, MOSES. An approach to a price theory for a changing economy. 158p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [10s King]

338.5 Prices 39-18114

"This is a brief but cogent analysis of the inadequacies of static economic theory and the difficulties to be encountered in the attempt to develop a broader theory applicable to dynamic phenomena. Dr. Abramovitz points out that the orthodox theorist shows that one (and possibly only one) set of equilibrium values of economic prices and quantities is consistent with assumed market forces under the assumption that various data (tastes, technology, institutional framework, etc.) are given. But static theory does not deal with the path by which this equilibrium position is attained, nor even demonstrate that such an equilibrium will be approached or attained. And yet this dynamic problem is of crucial importance in a world characterized by rapid changes in technology, tastes, and other data." Am Econ R

Reviewed by P. A. Samuelson
Am Econ R 29:806 D '39 700w

"This is a small book but an important one; important in the first place because of its substance, but more important because of its significance. For, though perhaps only the most scholarly of the historians of economic thought will scan its pages a few decades from now, it is a part of the major investigation that economists are undertaking at the present time which is a new development in economics."
+ Economist 138:103 Ja 20 '40 360w

Reviewed by Kenneth Boulding
J Pol Econ 48:263 Ap '40 600w

ABRAMS, ERNEST RUSSELL. Power in transition. 318p map $3 Scribner

621.3 Electric power. Power (mechanics). Government ownership 40-11306

A survey of the development of the public power projects sponsored by the Roosevelt administration. The author's conclusion is that

ABRAMS, E. R.—Continued
"nothing in our experience with public power activities of either State or National governments during the seventy-five months under review would warrant any assumption that political convenience and expediency will not continue to dominate public power undertakings." Index.

Reviewed by M. I. Hart
Commonweal 32:234 Jl 5 '40 390w

New Repub 103:361 S 9 '40 60w

"If a reader is looking for a calm and factual statement of the case against public competition with private enterprise in the electric power field this is to be recommended. It is the statement, however, of an enlightened attorney rather than of a judge on the bench. A layman will find it hard to weigh the arguments, though he may be convinced of Mr. Abrams's desire to be fair." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 28 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:84 Je 1 '40 30w

"Mr Abrams assembles a good deal of information on an important subject, but his treatment of it is somewhat sketchy."
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger
Survey G 29:474 S '40 490w

ACKERMAN, ADOLPH JOHN, and LOCHER, CHARLES HUNTER. Construction planning and plant. 381p il $4 McGraw

620 Engineering. U.S.—Public works 40-31536

"The contents of this book first appeared as a series of twenty-six articles in the McGraw-Hill publication, Construction Methods from November, 1935, to March, 1938." (Pref) It is a manual for contractors and engineers, brought up to date, and based largely on dam construction, particularly in the Tennessee Valley, and on river work, and will be useful in like types of heavy construction. Index.

Booklist 37:84 N 1 '40

"Written by two practical men, this book fills a large gap in literature designed to aid the construction industry."
+ Eng N 125:63 Ag 29 '40 300w

ACKLEY, EDITH (FLACK) (MRS STOW WENGENROTH). Holiday cards for you to make; with a foreword by Wilbur Macey Stone, and drawings by Telka Ackley. 109p $2 Stokes

741 Greeting cards (W) 40-27626

Suggestions and directions for making greeting cards for Christmas, Valentine's day, Easter, etc. Partial contents: Materials, methods and ideas; Spatter and spray designs; Cards with miniature books; Rabbits for Easter; Cards that carry a gift; A valentine with lace ruffles; Having cards printed from your own design; Greeting cards from olden days.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p10 O 27 '40 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 90w

Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 10w

"The illustrations are so numerous that it is fun merely to turn the pages. There is a delightful history of cards with many old-fashioned ones reproduced. The suggestions given about making Christmas, birthday, Easter, and other greeting cards are definite and practical. There are a few valuable pages on materials and general methods of procedure. And best of all, much is left to the individual child who is urged to 'adapt and improve, invent and create.'" Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:155 N '40

ADAM, THOMAS RITCHIE. Motion pictures in adult education. 94p 75c; to members gratis Am. assn. for adult educ.

371.33523 Moving pictures in education. Education of adults 40-27370

Discussion of the use of motion pictures with adult study groups. The author attempts to show how much and how the motion picture is now contributing to education, and how much and how they might be made to contribute. Index.

Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:330 My '40 10w

Reviewed by Frederick Morton
Theatre Arts 24:459 Je '40 500w

ADAM, THOMAS RITCHIE. The worker's road to learning. 162p $1.25; to members gratis Am. assn. for adult educ.

331.85 Education of workers 40-10361

One of a series of studies in the social significance of adult education. Contents: The worker in the American educational system; The American labor movement and education; The contribution of women; The claim of workers' education on the universities; Government and workers' education; Publicly supported local program; Unions as educators; Educational tools for workers; Some pioneers; Facing the future. Index.

Reviewed by J. L. Harrington
Canadian Forum 20:292 D '40 390w

J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 20w

"It is unnecessary to point out that the author's recommendations will not satisfy both schools of thought. However, whether his interpretation is dismissed as 'reactionary' or is embraced as 'sound,' our knowledge and understanding of the extent and intent of workers' education in the United States have been increased. . . The description and criticism of the programs of the various agencies engaged in workers' education and, more specifically, the suggestions advanced for the integration of the public library with the programs will be helpful to librarians interested in initiating or in intensifying their services to workers." W. H. Kaiser
+ — Library Q 10:615 O '40 700w

Reviewed by Theodore Brameld
New Repub 103:878 D 23 '40 30w

School & Society 51:720 Je 1 '40 50w

ADAMIC, LOUIS. From many lands. 350p il $3.50 Harper

920 U.S.—Biography. U.S.—Foreign population (W) 40-33236

In this large volume Louis Adamic, under more or less fictionalized form, tells the stories, sketches the characters, reveals the personal philosophies and individual problems of a number of Americans whose origins were in foreign lands. Included are the stories of a Jewish doctor, of Manda Evanich from Croatia, of Toné Kmet, a Slovenian peasant, of a California-born American with Japanese features, and others.

Atlantic D '40 200w

Booklist 37:111 N 15 '40

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p5 O 20 '40 1500w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 17 '40 80w

"From Many Lands is a book which all Americans should read. The immigrants' problem is so clearly stated and their contribution to our culture so evident that we are challenged to approach the problem without prejudice and with intelligence and deep understanding." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 210w

"With emotional fervor and penetrating knowledge, with sweep and fire, tenderness and understanding, Louis Adamic here describes the lives of a number of immigrants and their descendants, of varying racial and geographical backgrounds, in a sociological document that becomes poetry, drama, and unforgettable literature." R. H. Reyher

+ Nation 151:426 N 2 '40 700w

"This book of Louis Adamic's has its place, in all soberness, among great books in our day. For he has done his work worthily. To say that these true records are as interesting as a novel—as half a dozen novels—is to state the obvious. These word-pictures are portraits, not mere photographs. This temper is not only earnest and magnanimous, but clear and poised. Eventful, direct, warmly human, are these stories of Meleski, Starkku, Steinberger, Evanich and all the rest. In a broken, terrified world, amid the devastation of the evil to which their very existence is defiance, they hold our challenge of destiny." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 O 20 '40 1300w

"Something between really craftsmanlike biographies and the conventional case studies, they fulfill their aim, which is to make us conscious of the enormous richness of these 'foreign' strains. They stimulate one, in Adamic's excellent phrase, to 'make America safe for differences.' The book is part of a series, indeed part of a social program (a project of the Common Council for American Unity), and is of extreme importance to Americans who now realize that this century will mark either our end as a nation or our emergence as a true and great culture-carrier." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:106 O 19 '40 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller

Sat R of Lit 23:7 N 9 '40 750w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker

Survey 76:373 D '40 400w

Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

ADAMS, CLEVE F. And sudden death. 249p $2 Dutton

40-31038

Detective story.

"Admirable hard stuff by an up and coming mystifier whose writing style is inclined to go blooey only when love's afoot." Will Cuppy

+ Books p25 O 6 '40 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 N 3 '40 120w

"Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w

ADAMS, CLEVE F. Sabotage. 252p $2 Dutton

40-7586

Detective story.

Atlantic Je '40 70w

"Meet Rex McBride, the latest thing in hard-boiled detectives. At this first appearance between book covers he is so clever at every trick of the game that he's sure of a place among the leaders." Will Cuppy

+ Books p21 Mr 31 '40 210w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 70w

"The book is recommended to those who prefer detective stories of the hard-boiled type." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 170w

"Hard-boiled epic."

Sat R of Lit 21:32 Ap 6 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 220w

Time 35:92 My 6 '40 30w

ADAMS, HAMPTON. You and your minister [introd. by George A. Campbell]. 168p $1.25 Christian bd.

253 Pastoral work 40-4927

A book for the layman interpreting the work, the needs and the duties of the minister. The author is minister of the Union Avenue Christian church in St Louis.

"The book is written to laymen, but it should be of equal interest to ministers. The style is simple, direct and personal, without the fire and the whirlwind, but rich in what John Drinkwater calls 'fusion.' The author has the gentle spirit of the late Charles Edward Jefferson, and the prophetic hope of Edwin Markham." K. B. Bowen

+ Christian Century 57:451 Ap 3 '40 700w

Churchman 154:35 Je 1 '40 120w

ADAMS, JAMES DOUGLAS. Cap'n Ezra, privateer; il. by I. B. Hazelton. 248p $2 Harcourt

(W) 40-4720

The adventures of two farm boys on the eve of the War of 1812. On the outbreak of the War, after their work in a Newburyport shipyard, where they aided in the building of the schooner Polly, the boys serve as crew members on the Polly. For junior high school age.

Booklist 36:308 Ap 1 '40

"A rattling good yarn." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 7 '40 380w

"A typical American blood-and-thunder story that goes over with any boy. If he likes a thrill, you can't miss on this."

+ Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 20w

"The background is of interest historically and the author has taken pains with his details. This book is less important than Midshipman Davy Jones which chronicles so well the part of the navy in the War of 1812, but where both are available, Cap'n Ezra may be more widely read." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 65:213 Mr 1 '40 140w

"If the two boys seem to achieve success very early in life, it must be remembered that boys grew up quickly in those days. The drawings have the adventurous, romantic atmosphere of the text. For boys and girls from 12 on." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '40 340w

New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 130w

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW, ed. See Dictionary of American history

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW. Empire on the seven seas; the British empire, 1784-1939. 391p maps $3.50 Scribner

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Colonies (W) 40-27421

Continuation of the author's Building the British Empire (Book Review Digest, 1938-1939). The present volume begins with the year 1783 and closes with June, 1939. After a long description of the political and economic situation of Great Britain in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, the book is divided into periods, in each of which events in England and her colonies are studied. Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by R. A. MacKay

Am Pol Sci R 34:1039 O '40 250w

Booklist 36:362 My 15 '40

"Mr. James Truslow Adams is fascinated by the romance of the British Empire and in this latest work of his prolific pen he celebrates its more recent history with all his customary charm and buoyance. From the title with its echo of Kipling to the solemn recessional at the close this book is an eloquent tribute to the British world imperium the overthrow of which, Mr. Adams feels, would constitute an almost inconceivable catastrophe." Geoffrey Bruun

+ — Books p4 Ap 23 '40 1400w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40 470w

Reviewed by Edgar McInnis

Canadian Forum 20:122 Jl '40 800w

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW (trŭss'lō)

ADAMS, J. T.—Continued
Reviewed by J. R. Baldwin
Canadian Hist R 21:315 S '40 160w
Cath World 151:635 Ag '40 100w
Christian Science Monitor p18 My 13 '40 500w

"Mr. James Truslow Adams has an enviable ability to transform the data of historical research into books that are as dependable as they are delightful. . . Mr. Adams's alert story, his historical integrity, and his enjoyable scholarship should convince even the scowling isolationists that a knowledge of the British Empire is important for Americans." D. S. Rankin
+ Commonweal 32:63 My 10 '40 700w
Foreign Affairs 18:759 Jl '40 30w
Reviewed by Roger Shaw
— Forum 103:332 Je '40 480w

"It may be doubted whether so old a story needs retelling especially with such brevity in all but the opening chapters that it becomes little more than a recital of facts." R. A. Sawyer
Library J 65:256 Mr 15 '40 190w

"This second and concluding volume of Mr. Adams's story of the British Empire manages to pack into some 350 pages an incredible number of facts about England at home and Britain abroad. The book bears evidence of a lack of careful planning. . . The fact of the matter is that Mr. Adams, intent to say a little about everything, manages to say very little about anything, and virtually nothing at all about some very weighty matters. He did not intend to write a textbook, and yet we fear that there is too much of the textbook in his manner of presentation to arouse much interest in the general reader." Conyers Read
— + Nation 151:55 Jl 20 '40 650w

"No one would deny that condensation is essential in such an undertaking, but it may be asked whether more elimination and less condensation might not have better served the purpose. As it is, the effect of reading the book is akin to that of standing overclose to an oil painting. One sees the brush strokes, but not the picture." Elliott Perkins
New Eng Q 13:735 D '40 460w
Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 102:733 My 27 '40 400w

"The book is masterly, well balanced and readable. It will add, if that be possible, to a great reputation. Modestly Mr. Adams, in his preface, alludes to possible 'errors'. Any such slips of the pen or obscurities—hardly avoidable in a work of this magnitude and complexity—are few and far between." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 28 '40 1700w
Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 22:6 My 4 '40 650w
Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '40 1000w
Time 35:88 Ap 29 '40 600w
Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Whispers. 313p $2 Liveright
40-5662

An eligible bachelor returning to his home town after years abroad finds himself mixed up with love, politics, and town scandal, but befriended by two charming young women and a delightfully crafty old one.

"Big business and romance in a neat tangle, guaranteed to keep you guessing." Lisle Bell
+ Books p10 F 18 '40 180w

"This latest contribution to gayety by Samuel Hopkins Adams may not make as fascinating a movie as his 'It Happened One Night,' but it has its moments. And it is peopled by a strongly differentiated little group easily pictured with the book still in one's hand." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p23 F 11 '40 200w

ADDICKS, LAWRENCE, ed. Silver in industry; contributors: Gustav Albrecht, Allison Butts, Donald S. Clark [and others]. 636p il $10 Reinhold
671 Silver. Industrial research 40-30655

"This volume contains 20 chapters contributed by 28 collaborators who have developed various aspects of a three-year program supported by a group of American silver producers in the effort to 'do something for silver' in order to 'help it find its rightful place in the family of useful metals'. In addition to the particular uses treated, such as soldering, bearings, coatings, electrical contacts, catalytic action, corrosion resistance, and germicidal effect, there are useful chapters on the properties of silver, the constitution of silver alloys, and the physical metallurgy of silver." Chem & Chem Eng N

"The preliminary feeling of doubt that so much can be purposefully written about silver in industry disappears in the reading of the text. While much of the contents should be classified as exploratory or subject to the test of wider experience, this volume is a welcome addition to the literature of metal technology." C. H. Mathewson
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:907 O 25 '40 490w
Chem & Met Eng 47:725 O '40 150w

ADDLEPATE, ERASMUS G., pseud. How to read two books; il. by Carl Rose. 107p $1 Stokes 817 40-32482

Humorous chapters on the art of reading two or more books, and allied subjects. The work is especially addressed to non-thinkers, showing them how to become near-thinkers, part time thinkers, and most difficult of all, mental giants.

"Addlepate is obviously a man of parts. His erudition is painless, his juxtaposition of ideas frequently ludicrous, and his humor has the blank charm of that pedagogue who has won both young and old to enjoyment of his fables. The publishers say that even they don't know who Addlepate is, but it is practically certain that he is not Nicholas Murray Butler or Mortimer Adler." Lorine Pruette
+ Books p14 S 22 '40 750w
New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 30w

"It's a merry bit of parody, dowered with some sharp comment and no overabundance of amiability. It differs from some other efforts of its kind in the fact that the object of its burlesque is a really good book, and in the perhaps sequential inclusion of some real thought along with the persiflage."
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 28 '40 360w

"There is some good nonsense here, and if the reader's first book has caused him mental fatigue, this is the antidote."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 330w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME. How to read a book; the art of getting a liberal education. 398p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
028 Books and reading. Bibliography—Best books. Reading (W) 40-27195

The first section discusses reading in relation to learning and thinking, whether in school or out. The second part, the meat of the book, tells us how and what to read. The third part, called The Rest of the Reader's Life, deals with the basic reasons for literacy. It discusses the obligations of the citizens of a democracy, and expounds the thesis that free minds make free men. The work is based on new theories of education being worked out at St John's College, Annapolis, and at Chicago university, and also on the Columbia list of best books which the author helped to revise. Index.

"We could think more highly of Mr. Adler's effort, conscientious as we are sure it is, if he had frankly labeled his educational plan as a makeshift, and had given due warning against the danger of putting any extravagant expectations on it."

— Atlantic Jl '40 430w

Booklist 36:279 Mr 15 '40

Bookmark p7 My '40

"This is another self-improvement book; but, in the enormous mass of educational literature, it stands out, first of all, for its scrupulous honesty. . . Its excellent sense is plain and unadorned, and the sole recipe it recommends is hard work. That such an austere, conservative manual for normal schools should prove a favorite with the general public is a high tribute to the seriousness of the American mind. . . If Dr. Adler's book is not a vade-mecum to the humanities, it is a most useful instrument in its well defined field. Its spirit is admirable throughout, free from pedantry and from smartness, unassuming, helpful. It is the living book of a living teacher." Albert Guerard

+ Books p3 Mr 31 '40 1700w

"My feeling is that Mr. Adler takes altogether too long to say what he has to say and is altogether too much like an elderly school teacher in saying it. Mr. Clifton Fadiman, I notice, thinks this is an impressive book. I don't. You pays your money and makes your choice among critics."

— Boston Transcript p11 Mr 21 '40 350w

"This is a good book about good books." J. A. Dewar

+ Canadian Forum 20:94 Je '40 320w

Cath World 151:241 My '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

Reviewed by C. R. Morey
Commonweal 32:149 Je 7 '40 1800w

Reviewed by James Orrick
Nation 150:575 My 4 '40 500w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 21:14 Ja 4 '41 1050w

"This is not one of those how-to books which beckon to a royal road that doesn't exist, or offer guidance to a goal that is not worth seeking: it is a serious and valuable invitation to an enrichment of personal life and an abler meeting of public responsibility."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 10 '40 290w

"This is a condensed book, written without literary charm, without trickery. It makes no empty promises. It says flatly that proper reading is serious work, but it shows concretely how that serious work may be accomplished and how much it may yield in the way of instruction and delight." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:86 Mr 9 '40 700w

"At the same time as it shows off the author's wit and expository talents, the book gives a generous puff to the new educational venture at St. John's College, Annapolis, much valuable information about humanities courses there, at Chicago, and elsewhere, and a fair slice of Professor Adler's spiritual and pedagogic autobiography. In other words, despite a great deal of intentional and effective repetition, these four hundred pages are packed full of high matters which no one solicitous for the future of American culture can afford to overlook." Jacques Barzun

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 9 '40 850w

Discussion by T. S. Hayes
Sat R of Lit 22:9 Jl 27 '40 260w

"This book undoubtedly fooled many people. After reading it, they may have thought that they improved their ability to read. The experimental literature, however, gives little hope for this procedure. Several studies have shown that high-school and college students with inferior scholarship records tend to follow rules of reading and study more closely than do those with superior records. The matter of reading efficiently involves more than following a few rules; it involves the whole background of experience, which the author practically ignored." A. C. Eurich

School R 48:709 N '40 900w

"Whether or not the 'jeremiad' incorporated in 'How to Read a Book' actually persuades many readers to enlist in forwarding its 'ulterior' purpose, the work obviously introduces an abundance of challenging material that should assure it wide reading and discussion in the circles to which it is addressed. Even those readers who do not attempt to master its detailed technic, or to apply it to the carefully chosen list of best books in the appendix, can hardly fail to derive more than a proportional benefit from its stimulating sprightly treatment of vital current problems."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey G 29:296 My '40 900w

Time 35:94 Mr 18 '40 1100w

Reviewed by M. H. Nicolson
Yale R n s 30:184 autumn '40 1800w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME. Problems for Thomists; the problem of species. 303p $2.50 Sheed

113 Scholasticism. Dialectic (metaphysics). Thomas Aquinas, Saint. Aristotle. Philosophy of nature 40-31753

"For all those who believe that Thomism is a living and a progressive philosophy, the series of works which Professor Adler is proposing to write under the general title of Problems for Thomists, and of which The Problem of Species is the first, appears as an endeavor of the greatest interest. . . In striving to establish a problematic of Thomism, Mortimer Adler shows us that Thomism is a continuously unfolding philosophy—just as Diogenes used to demonstrate motion by walking." (Foreword) The four main divisions of this volume are: The approach to the problem; Exposition of the issue in the philosophy of nature; The dialectic of the issue; A tentative resolution of the problem. Indexes.

"Mr. Adler thinks that he has solved the problem of evolution. I do not think so. Evolutionists may applaud his solution as indicating a weakening of Scholastic opposition, but as the solution is purely verbal and dialectical, I doubt if they will be satisfied. But all Scholastics will look forward to the publication of the rest of the series promised. Such monographs are needed to vitalize neo-Scholasticism." A. C. Cotter

America 63:471 Ag 3 '40 470w

"Though he may lose himself occasionally in the vapors of his own dialectic, Dr. Adler is an intelligent and attentive critic. His book is likely to direct attention to a steadily growing Scholastic literature being written in England and America." G. N. Shuster

+ — Books p6 Jl 14 '40 430w

Reviewed by Walter Farrell, O.P.
+ Commonweal 32:254 Jl 12 '40 650w

ADRIANCE, GUY WEBB, and BRISON, FRED ROBERT. Propagation of horticultural plants. 314p il $3 (20s) McGraw

631.53 Plant propagation 39-29853

"This book has been prepared primarily as a text for basic courses in horticulture and related courses. The essential features of plant structure and reproduction have been introduced in their relation to seed production, root formation, wound healing, and other practical phases of plant propagation. The methods of asexual propagation, including bulbs, layerage, cuttage, budding, and grafting are considered in comprehensive form. Practices followed in the propagation of certain important species are presented in detail. A discussion of certain plant diseases, and transplanting, is also included." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 36:145 D 15 '39

ADRIANCE, G. W., and BRISON, F. R.—Cont.
"Throughout, the text reads clearly; the descriptions are brief and direct. Modern methods are advocated, and the necessary equipment for carrying out the work is always described. However, the allocation of space is somewhat uneven. . . There are selected short lists of references, most of which are to American publications, for the several chapters, but the questions at the end of each chapter are of doubtful value. The index would be improved by the inclusion of Latin names. As it briefly surveys a wide field, this will prove a useful book for students desirous of learning the outlines of American nursery methods." M. A. H. T.
+ — Nature 145:762 My 18 '40 460w

AGAR, WILLIAM MACDONOUGH. Catholicism and the progress of science. 109p $1 Macmillan 215 Religion and science 40-31207

Written from the Roman Catholic point of view this is a "survey of the historical development of science and its relationship to the growth of Christian thought. Particular attention is given to the controversies around geography and astronomy. The evidences of Evolution are studied, and recent trends in the biological sciences are investigated." (Publisher's note)

Cath World 152:507 Ja '41 140w
Christian Century 57:1180 S 25 '40 60w

"The present work, written from the Catholic standpoint by a scientist who knows what he is talking about, can be especially recommended. It is short, readable, thoroughly reliable, and distinguished by its balanced judgment." K. F. Herzfeld
+ Commonweal 33:33 O 25 '40 900w

Reviewed by Dan Williams
J Religion 21:94 Ja '41 260w

AHL, FRANCES NORENE. Andrew Jackson and the Constitution. 168p il map $2 Christopher
B or 92 Jackson, Andrew. U.S.—Politics and government 39-13512

"The author of this little volume presents very clearly the opinion that Andrew Jackson, although he possessed many good qualities, nevertheless exerted, as President of the United States, a demoralizing influence on the popular mind." Am Hist R

Reviewed by St G. L. Sioussat
Am Hist R 45:974 Jl '40 50w

"A brief and exceedingly elementary summary of well-known facts concerning the President's career, written on the high-school level, and adding nothing at all to our understanding either of Jackson or of the Constitution." David Fellman
— Am Pol Sci R 34:830 Ag '40 240w

AHNLUND, NILS GABRIEL. Gustav Adolf the Great; tr. from the Swedish by Michael Roberts [pub. for the] Am.-Scandinavian foundation. 314p il maps $3 Princeton univ. press
B or 92 Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden 40-11226

Scholarly biography of Sweden's great soldier king, written to commemorate the tercentenary (in 1932) of his death. "Following a practice that has long been a favorite with Swedish biographers, Nils Ahnlund, Professor of History at the University of Stockholm, treats his subject topically. In a succession of seven chapters, preceded by a general introduction of special value to those who may be unfamiliar with the local history, he surveys the warrior king mainly from the point of view of the outstanding influences that shaped his destiny." (N Y Times) Index.

"With a long list of other admirable studies on seventeenth century Sweden, among them one on Oxenstierna, already to his credit, no one is better equipped for the task the author has chosen in this volume. Georg Wittrock and Johannes Paul may have written completer or more detailed studies but none that are more scholarly or better calculated to appeal to a wide circle of readers than the present volume. . . It may appear to be invidious criticism to point out serious omissions in a biographical essay of this sort. Yet what is one to think of a searching study on Gustavus Adolphus, who was nothing if not a great general, that contains no discussion of his military strategy or of Sweden's military organization? One may, perhaps, condone the absence of any discussion of Gustavus's impact on Sweden's economic life and administrative system, but the fact that the narrative tapers off sharply after 1630 with but a few comments on the last two most important years of the king's life leaves the reader with a keen sense of disappointment. The translation is not always felicitous." W. L. Dorn
+ — Am Hist R 46:392 Ja '41 490w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 22 '40 160w

Nation 151:281 S 28 '40 50w

"A scholarly but quite readable biography."
+ New Repub 103:126 Jl 22 '40 40w

"This scholarly volume is a significant addition to material in English on an important era in Swedish history. More than that, it is engrossing reading, and only at rare intervals does one remember that it is a translation. There are excellent photographs and other illustrations, including maps, and a brief index and an unusually comprehensive table of contents." A. L. Olson
+ N Y Times p3 Je 16 '40 1100w

"All these essays seem worthy of their subject; they embody new material, and are in themselves scholarly, intelligent, and readable. But they will leave the average American reader floundering so deep in a morass of unfamiliar Baltic names and circumstances that he will need to keep tight hold of a good, solid history of Sweden if he is to scramble out. Readers already familiar with Baltic history will welcome this book; others must look elsewhere for a clear, straightforward narrative." Garrett Mattingly
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:13 S 7 '40 320w

Theatre Arts 24:612 Ag '40 600w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. And in the human heart. 87p $1.50 Duell
811 40-35395

Forty-three sonnets, most of them on love, eternity, or nature in its varied aspects.

"The poems are full of color, music, and verbal felicities, but in spite of the subject matter they lack intensity. . . There is somewhat too much of the O altitudo about them. The note is sustained so long that it becomes strained, while the Elizabethan coloring of the vocabulary, word sequence, and sonnet structure robs it of a distinct individuality." E. D.
— + Atlantic F '41 150w

"Of love Conrad Aiken writes again and again deeply and skillfully. The depth is in the wholeness—the love of which he writes shines inward and outward—and the skill is in turning the words, repeating, echoing, modulating from chord to chord of verbal music. This skill has always characterized his poetry, and in this new book he brings it to performance at the height of his mature power." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p9 N 18 '40 280w

"Before the fluency and the rhetoric of Mr. Aiken's sonnets, all obstacles melt away. The sonnet form, which must be kept formal and stern if it is not to become a bloated literary exercise, serves in Mr. Aiken's case to accentuate the immaturity of his matter. For the mature poet does not soar above tragedy.

He accepts, examines, and describes it, in spite of the fact that in our day it is particularly difficult to remain disciplined and thus accept, examine, and describe." Louise Bogan
— New Yorker 16:62 D 28 '40 220w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Conversation; or, Pilgrims' progress. 256p $2.50 Duell 40-6292

In a modified stream-of-consciousness manner is told the story of a few days in the lives of an unsuccessful artist, his charming but Beacon Hillish wife, and their delightful small daughter. The scene is Cape Cod.

"Mr. Aiken has once more made a contribution to beauty of language. The pointed phrase, the selective word, the poet's keen imagery, the sudden upsweep of emotion, contrast pleasantly with our daily diet of pallid paragraphs." Muriel Chatain
+ Books p10 Mr 24 '40 500w

"Mr. Aiken's book has the aesthetically satisfying qualities of a lyric. It conveys a mood of heightened emotion; it conveys it with imagination, and with an economy of words that reflects the discipline of poetry. It has an impelling structural beauty in the conformity of its expression to its content." E. S. Fainsod
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 30 '40 290w

"The story is urbanely written and has a few mildly resonant passages. All in all a pretty trivial performance."
— + Nation 150:401 Mr 23 '40 140w

"Conrad Aiken is first of all a poet and second a novelist. One remembers this sharply and gratefully in his new novel, 'Conversation.' For he brings to a story, slight on the surface but subtle with implications, the delicacy and language that are his peculiar gift." Rose Feld
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 24 '40 800w

"If this were by anyone else, it would be put down as acceptable trade goods. One regrets to see it appear as a product of the author of the brilliant and unforgettable 'Blue Voyage.' "
New Yorker 16:86 Mr 23 '40 60w
Time 35:97 Mr 25 '40 400w

AIKMAN, DUNCAN. The all-American front. 344p $3 Doubleday

918 Latin America. Latin America—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America (W) 40-27056

The author analyses the mental and social characteristics of the South American, and reviews in general the history of the relationships, economic, social and political between South and North America, in an attempt to answer two questions: How prepared is the United States to get from Latin America the understanding confidence, the loyal support in world policies and the co-operative employment of resources which we need for our lasting and ultimate safety? How prepared are the Latin republics to give us these things? Index.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40

"This brilliant and persuasive exposition differs from many books which have recently appeared concerning our relationship with Latin America, in that it is not a historical geographical primer for those who know nothing of the hundred and twenty million people below the Rio Grande. It is an intelligent political and psychological survey of the twenty republics to the South, whose understanding or co-operation we have not won after a century and a quarter of talking. Its conclusions—without being dogmatic—are highly constructive." Agnes Rothery
+ Books p5 Ja 14 '40 1350w

"Of the recent books concerned with Latin America Mr. Aikman's is the most intelligent and most readable. Despite a tendency to exaggerate the idiosyncrasies of our southern neighbors, he maintains a cautious balance, filling at the same time the gap amazingly left by the inability of most writers on the subject to interpret the Latin American mind to readers in this country." G. S. Reid
+ Boston Transcript p13 Ja 19 '40 200w

"This is a book which should be on the 'must' list of every buyer of books who is interested in American foreign relations, hemisphere defense or Latin America. It is the first book in its field which this reviewer has been able to recommend to those thoughtful people who ask 'How can I, with only limited time for it, develop an intelligent background against which to measure events in Latin America?' " W. E. Barrett
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Aikman goes out of his way to express his ideas in such flamboyant terms. His language, often self-consciously picturesque, at times descends to coarse analogies that are particularly unhappy. But his manner cannot obscure the wealth of evidence he adduces to bring out his points. His greatest strength is his passion for social justice; his failure to grasp such historic realities as the zeal of the Spanish missionaries and his inability to appreciate Latin-American culture are his greatest weaknesses." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ — Commonweal 31:350 F 9 '40 250w
Foreign Affairs 19:264 O '40 60w
New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 60w

"Having completed his whirl-wind tour through Latin America's politics and economics, naïveté and sophistication, childish petulance and ripe wisdom, flamboyant wealth and abject poverty, poetry and ugliness, charm and squalor, callous bloodshed and exquisite grace of manner, Mr. Aikman, apparently as bewildered as the reader who has been absorbedly following him, remarks: 'This book offers no final answers.' That alone almost puts it in a class by itself." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 14 '40 950w

"Mr. Aikman does not pretend for one minute to give the answers, but diligently accumulates material of one kind or another to suggest some solution. A good deal of his material is anecdotal, and not a little of it is plainly barroom gossip. . . With all this, the book gives at times a really deep view into the character of the people, attaining in other places a correspondingly well balanced bit of judgment." Ernesto Montenegro
— + N Y Times p3 S 29 '40 2150w

"Wordy in spots, but a sharp and revealing estimate."
+ — New Yorker 15:71 Ja 20 '40 40w

"Mr. Aikman has taken a difficult, highly controversial subject and handled it with skill and competence. For those anxious to acquire a clear, realistic picture of Latin-American affairs it should prove invaluable. And it should be required reading for all self-appointed 'foreign affairs experts' in Washington." J. H. Smyth
+ Sat R of Lit 21:13 Ja 13 '40 700w

"In imparting vivacity to his study Mr Aikman falls into a few minor irrelevancies of phrase and comment, but his book offers a substantial interpretation of an aspect of current history which is of vital concern to all inhabitants of the United States."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 900w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams
Survey G 29:257 Ap '40 310w
Time 35:83 Ja 22 '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

AINSLIE, JAMES L. The doctrines of ministerial order in the Reformed churches of the 16th and 17th centuries. 274p $3.50 Scribner [7s 6d Clark, T.]

262.1 Clergy. Protestantism

"The problem of the Protestant reformers, and especially of the Calvinistic churches to which the author devotes his chief attention, was to preserve a true 'ministry' in the church while repudiating the Catholic hierarchical system and stressing the priesthood of all believers. How they did this, in what sense they made the ministry an 'order' clearly distinguishable from the laity but not a priesthood, why and how they maintained the idea of a ministry without ranks, what they meant by ordination and how they guarded the ministry against the admission of the unworthy—these are the topics discussed in full historical detail and with much quotation of 16th and 17th century authorities." Christian Century

AINSLIE, J. L.—Continued

"In view of the importance of the ministry as an issue in all conferences concerning Christian unity, this piece of research has more than antiquarian interest, though its method and exhaustiveness will perhaps limit its appeal to special students in this field."
+ Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 160w

"Read as a historical survey and contemporary defence of the Ministerial Order of the Presbyterian Church, this volume will be of great value, and readers will thank the author for his gift of forceful and lucid exposition no less than for his historical citations."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p348 Jl 20 '40 340w

AIR YOUTH OF AMERICA. Model airplane contests; an Air youth guide with official rules [foreword by Winthrop Rockefeller]. 106p $1.25 Appleton-Century

629.13 Airplane models (W)

Handbook on model airplane contests, containing information on how to plan and conduct various types of contests, cost of contests, selecting the site, officials and their duties, equipment and materials for indoor and outdoor contests, and rules.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 70w

AIRMAN'S letter to his mother [Eng title: Airman's letter]. 15p 50c Dutton [2s 6d Putnam]

B or 92 European war, 1939—Personal narratives (W) 41-868

Reprint of a letter found among the personal belongings of a young R.A.F. pilot who was presumably killed in action in September, 1940. The letter was printed in The London Times and called forth a constant stream of requests for copies, both in England and the United States.

"They say this war has brought out no young poets, as the first great conflict brought out Alan Seeger or Rupert Brooke. Young airmen live their poems today. Nothing they wrote in verse spoke so plainly to 1914 as this simple letter, with the self-forgetful beauty of a spirit come to terms with death, speaks to our present and our future." M. L. Becker
+ Books p2 D 15 '40 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 70w

"This Englishman's letter should take a place among the remarkable letters of literature. It touches life, death, duty and destiny with prophetic and poetic vision that seems inspired. In few words it gathers up a philosophy of life and its realities that touches time and eternity, creation and God: all couched in the personal terms of intimate concern and affection of a son for his mother."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 100w

AITCHISON, ALISON ESTHER. Europe, the great trader. 424p il maps $1.50; educ ed $1.04 Bobbs

914 Europe—Description and travel. Geography 39-5488

"A text or geographical reader giving geographic data about the more important countries of Europe for the upper grades or junior high school." Social Studies

Booklist 36:201 Ja 15 '40
Social Studies 30:240 My '39 20w

AKELEY, MRS MARY LEE (JOBE). The wilderness lives again; Carl Akeley and the great adventure; foreword by F. Trubee Davison. 411p il map $3 Dodd

B or 92 Akeley, Carl Ethan. Animals, Habits and behavior of. Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation (W) 40-27627

Biography of Carl Akeley by his wife, who accompanied him on his last trip to Africa, and who was in charge of the Akeley-Eastman-Pomeroy expedition to the Belgian Congo in 1926 and 1927. In her preface the author states that she is "attempting here to record only the gradual evolution of Carl Akeley's lifework." She stresses his work for the Field Museum of Chicago and in Africa for the Akeley African Hall in New York city. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:33 O 1 '40

"The book has substance and vitality in every subdivision of its narrative and every facet of its emphasis. And although it is written in deep pride and affection, it is never overemotional. This is a worthy tribute and an engrossing chronicle." Katherine Woods
+ Books p7 O 6 '40 1200w

"This is an exciting record of accomplishment, of interest to every biologist, adventure-lover, and museum-goer. Mrs. Akeley's own achievement as a biographer merits attention. True to the artistic standards manifest in her husband's museum groups, she never fails to keep her subject in the center of the narrative, nor intrudes herself into the scene." D. L. King
+ Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 150w

"There was gallantry in Carl Akeley's life, and his wife has brought its rugged, virile quality into her account of his great adventure." L. C. Jones
+ N Y Times p9 S 29 '40 1000w

"Mrs. Akeley has so absorbed the inspiration that was her husband's that his vision and outlook dominate this biography she has written of him. It is, in this sense, a Boswellian biography: the reader seems to meet and to merge his identity with the man himself, while the author functions merely as the catalytic agent between them." L. J. Halle, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 S 21 '40 650w

ALBEE, MRS RUTH (SUTTON), and ALBEE, WILLIAM. Alaska challenge [written] with Lyman Anson [with il. from phot. by the authors]. 366p maps $3 Dodd

917.11 British Columbia—Description and travel. Alaska—Description and travel. Eskimos (W) 40-6566

An account of an adventurous honeymoon. The young Albees decided to go to Alaska, starting from Prince George in British Columbia, then journeying north to an obscure trading post, called Liard Post, thence to Whitehorse in Yukon Territory, and thru Alaska to Bering Strait. Most of their trip was made on foot, much of it thru an almost unmapped wilderness, on trails seldom seen by white men. Their story is extended to include five years in all, part of the time spent in teaching school at Wales, Alaska, where their second child was born.

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

"Intelligent observation and comment mark 'Alaska Challenge,' but the humanness of its two people make it possible for the reader not only to follow their trail but to know intimately the pair who trod it. As the name of Lyman Anson appears on the title page with those of the two authors, he may be responsible for a good job of selection of material and a keen eye for the structure of the book. The result is that the reader comes to know a pair of likable, stout-hearted young persons who tackled a real job of adventure and grew up together while doing it." Kathrene Pinkerton

+ Books p2 Mr 31 '40 1000w

"The adventurous interest [of the book] is heightened by the fact that the Albees had almost no money. They had to pause to work their way. And the people they met, as well as the events of their own exciting pilgrimage, have part in the zestfulness of their tale."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 10 '40 470w

"This is a thrilling true story. It is likewise a valuable contribution to the literature of the North." E. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 29 '40 330w

ALBERT, ARTHUR LEMUEL. Electrical communication. 2d ed 534p il $5 Wiley [30s Chapman]

621.38 Communication and traffic. Telegraph. Telephone. Radio 40-27129

This college textbook was first published in 1934 (Book Review Digest 1935). "The second edition considers the entire subject of electrical communication, including both the wire and wireless transmission of code and speech. The various divisions of telegraphy, telephony, and radio are not treated as isolated subjects, but their interrelations in providing the public with an adequate and economical communication service are presented. In addition, the opening chapters of the book provide a foundation of fundamental subjects such as speech, hearing, and acoustics upon which a knowledge of communication must rest. . . The book has been carefully revised, substantially enlarged, and entirely reset." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 36:286 Mr 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:34 Jl '40

ALDIN, CECIL CHARLES WINDSOR, il. See Chalmers, P. R. Last muster

ALEXANDER, ELIZABETH. Hero at home. 297p $2 Doubleday

40-11016

A triangle love story in which a charming young second wife finally triumphs over her sophisticated but grasping rival—the first wife.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p12 Je 23 '40 220w

New Repub 103:38 Jl 1 '40 50w

"This is a diverting novel, full of small ironic touches [which] probe into the depths of three interestingly dissimilar characters." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p15 Je 23 '40 340w

ALEXANDER, HOLMES MOSS. Dust in the afternoon. 218p $2 Harper

40-30571

Story of a boy who wanted to be a professional ball player, of a girl who wanted to be an actress. They married, quarreled and made up, nearly wrecked each other's careers, and finally came to terms.

"This is the story of two people who loved each other and very nearly made a failure of it. It is written with feeling and without flourish in a swift, slangy economy of style. As a report of what goes on in the training camp and the ball park, it is vivid and highly entertaining. For baseball fans 'Dust in the Afternoon' should be as satisfying as a doubleheader." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 S 8 '40 320w

Reviewed by N. J. Dain

Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 110w

"It is a thoroughly amusing story, and you don't have to understand either baseball or acting to like it, though a little knowledge of how to nail the pennant to the flagpole is a help." C. D.

+ N Y Times p23 S 8 '40 200w

ALEXANDER, RYLLIS CLAIR (MRS OMAR PANCOAST GOSLIN), and GOSLIN, OMAR PANCOAST. Democracy. 59p il $1.50 Harcourt

321.8 Democracy—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27214

"In clear, definite terms that are understandable to boys and girls, the authors attempt to define democracy and to explain certain of its cardinal principles. . . Each abstraction is explained by an analogy from everyday life. Photographic illustrations point up the text." Library J

Booklist 36:290 Mr 15 '40

"There is no sign that this is meant for a school book, but I hope it may be widely adopted as one." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 17 '40 260w

"Important and timely."

+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"The tone and make-up of the book are more adult than Munro Leaf's Fair Play, but one could be used to supplement the other. Recommended for children in grades four to six." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 65:261 Mr 15 '40 110w

"The laborious, artificial and highly moralistic tone of the text makes the book dull reading, while the paired pictures are puzzling because of the false analogies they draw. . . 'Democracy' is a book likely to confuse rather than clarify." A. T. Eaton

— N Y Times p10 My 19 '40 390w

"To show children photographs of things they understand and link these with stories that help them to realize the ideals of democracy is a timely and valuable process. The book contains thoughts which all ages of children can understand."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 130w

ALEXANDER, SAMUEL. Philosophical and literary pieces; ed. with a memoir, by [John Laird]. 390p $4 (15s) Macmillan

104 [40-11854]

"The latter part of the book, after the 'Memoir,' written by Professor John Laird of Aberdeen University, is a collection of Alexander's essays written at many different dates from 1906 to 1933, both while he was at work on his great book Space, Time and Deity and afterward. The essays include discussions of literature such as those on Jane Austen, Molière, and Pascal, as well as the important essays on Art and the Material, and a long study of Spinoza. . . A short list is given at the end of the book of Alexander's books and articles." Ethics

"If ever there was a man greater in his personality than in his published work, it was Samuel Alexander. The present reviewer, as one who knew him intimately in the later years of his life, must make that assertion, for which some evidence can be obtained in the admirable 'Memoir' of Alexander written by Professor John Laird of Aberdeen University, which forms the first part of his book. . . The school of realism in England, of which Sir Percy Nunn and Professor A. N. Whitehead were the other chief representatives, owed much to the keen intelligence of Alexander and his clear and graceful prose." C. D. B.

+ Ethics 50:484 Jl '40 290w

"Alexander was second only to Whitehead among the vital philosophic influences of our time, and since, like Whitehead, though as differently as can be imagined, he had a peculiar personal charm, a memorial volume such as this, in which the personal note is uppermost, should have a very wide appeal." Basil de Sélincourt

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '40 270w

ALEXANDER, SAMUEL—Continued

"The collection is prefaced by a memoir by Alexander's literary executor, Professor Laird. This is wholly admirable; inspired by that natural piety which is the theme of one of Alexander's articles, it contrives, nevertheless, to be a minor work of art. There has, it is obvious, been patient collation of some very haphazard material; there have been judicious selection and careful arrangement, and there is also some very pretty writing. . . Indeed, as a lifelong friend of Alexander's confided to the present reviewer, if Alexander had had a spiritual double who wrote about himself, this is pretty much what he would have written." C. E. M. Joad

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:280 Mr 2 '40 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 23 '40 3000w

ALFORD, LEON PRATT. Principles of industrial management for engineers. 531p il $4.50 Ronald

658.01 Industry—Organization, control, etc. Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 40-4334

"Essentially a text for a course of instruction in management, this volume should also prove valuable as a reference work for the operating executive. It embraces such aspects of management as: theory of organization, the control of materials in manufacturing, fundamentals of time standards, cost accounting, plant maintenance, labor management and employer-employee relations, measurement of performance, and research in industrial administration and management." Management R

Am Econ R 30:399 Je '40 30w

Management R 29:119 Mr '40 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:8 Ja '40

ALIOSHIN, DMITRI. Asian odyssey. 322p il map $3 Holt

B or 92 Asia—Description and travel 40-14286

Description of the author's experiences during the fighting in Siberia and Mongolia after the Russian revolution. Alioshin was a White Russian artillery officer who served under General Kolchak and Baron von Ungern-Sternberg, and later joined the American Expeditionary force and served as interpreter under General Graves. Index.

"This book is the record of a real Odyssey. And as its substance is exciting adventure, so its theme is confusion. It is, be it said at once, a very interesting and quite unusual personal narrative." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p11 My 19 '40 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ap 25 '40 140w

Reviewed by C. W. Furlong

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 1250w

"Weird and wild adventure marks nearly every page of this almost incredible narrative, and if it were not generally realized that most Russians lead fantastic existences, Asian Odyssey might be put down as fiction of the most hair-raising sort. Perhaps there is some exaggeration in the story, but it rings fairly true throughout."

+ Living Age 358:587 Ag '40 600w

"Fantastic as this extraordinary record reads, it has the authentic ring, that of an eyewitness who has seen, felt and experienced it all and survived to tell the tale of man's inexplicable inhumanity to man, and of man's power to endure. At the same time it is a historical record as well as a human document, written with a commendable detachment in a direct narrative prose that pleases and persuades." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p9 My 19 '40 850w

"Crackajack adventure story, naïvely told."

+ New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 40w

"The book presents a bloody tale, relieved at points by well-written descriptive passages. One fastens on concluding pages as kind relief from a chamber of horrors. Yet the experience could have been worse, for Mr. Alioshin has played little with adjectives and has generally used restraint in dealing with sadistic incident."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '40 900w

"While many a book has been written about the Russian Red and White armies, and at least two biographies about the fantastically sadistic Ungern-Sternberg, none has more simply or vividly described the incredible hardships and cruelties of a fight which will long rank with the more shuddering chapters of Russian history."

+ Time 35:94 My 20 '40 70w

ALLAN, DENNIS. Brandon is missing. 255p $2 Mill

40-8380

Detective story.

"A little on the goofy side, this may serve to entertain the less fussy customers with its speed and surprises." Will Cuppy

Books p19 Ap 14 '40 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 60w

"The story is skillfully told and the mystery remains a mystery until a logical solution is produced at the very end." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 24 '40 200w

"Dénouement of tale not quite up to opening for suspense, but skulduggery in rare-book circles is interesting. Average."

Sat R of Lit 21:32 Ap 6 '40 30w

ALLEN, FLORENCE ELLINWOOD. This Constitution of ours. 198p $2 Putnam

342.73 U.S. Constitution (W) 40-27254

Study and interpretation of the Constitution of the United States for mature readers. It emphasizes the importance of the Constitution as a guarantee of individual liberty. The author is judge of the United States circuit court of appeals. The book contains an index to the Constitution, a bibliography, and a general index.

Booklist 36:300 Ap 1 '40

Bookmark p14 N '40

"The book as a whole is inspirational in design and execution. Judge Allen is something other than an arid legalist." T. R. Powell

+ Books p14 Mr 3 '40 210w

Reviewed by R. A. Sawyer

Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 90w

"In barely one hundred small pages of her text, 'America's foremost woman jurist' interprets the Constitution 'in terms of vital significance today.' The result is indeed as William Allen White declares 'a splendid piece of work, illuminating, scholarly, at times eloquent, always interesting' and written 'from a new, fresh viewpoint.'" John Corbin

+ N Y Times p3 F 18 '40 850w

New Yorker 16:80 F 24 '40 30w

School & Society 51:768 Je 22 '40 10w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers

Survey G 29:300 My '40 300w

ALLEN, FREDERICK LEWIS. Since yesterday. 362p il $3 Harper

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 40-27130

Rapid retrospect of the decade from September 3, 1929, when the great bull market reached its peak, to September 3, 1939, when England declared war on Germany. Since the years covered are those of the Great depression, the chronicle contains more politics and economics and less of manners and customs and the arts than the author's previous volume, Only Yesterday (Book Review Digest, 1931), but the human and lighter side is not slighted. Index.

"The only merit of man's collective lunacies is that they are almost always vastly entertaining; and the spectacle reproduced on Mr. Allen's panorama has an entertainment value which one is fain to believe will never be surpassed."

+ Atlantic Ap '40 550w

Booklist 36:261 Mr 1 '40

Bookmark p8 My '40

"It is informal, sometimes even chatty, and it tries to include everything which engaged the attention of the American people in the period considered. It might be called the amiable obituary of a decade. This method, which is really a new form of history, makes good reading, though in its very nature it is sometimes confusing. . . Mr. Allen preserves his urbane manner, and he retains his quick eye for the revealing foibles of our great personalities, the amusing flashes of incongruous daffiness which on dark days illumine the lives of the American people." Stanley Walker

+ Books p7 F 11 '40 1100w

"Mr. Allen attempts to recall to us the quirks and problems and tragedies of the thirties. But . . . the troubles of the past decade are still with us; we can't look back on it with the same nostalgia and amusement that we readily granted the twenties. To that extent this book may well be appearing several years too early to repeat the success of its predecessor. Though the Russo-German pact probably marked the end of an era, we are not yet far enough into the new to regard the old as a museum piece." John Lydenberg

Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 350w

Reviewed by Marguerite Wyke

Canadian Forum 20:27 Ap '40 300w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 154:20 Ag '40 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

Foreign Affairs 18:753 Jl '40 20w

"Because Mr. Allen is able to criticize without bitterness, examine and interpret without invective, he has produced a remarkably impartial history. It is difficult to imagine a more impartial story of the 'thirties that would yet contain as much of the essence and substance of those troubled days." W. J. Gold

+ Forum 103:201 Ap '40 340w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 150:255 F 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 102:315 Mr 4 '40 1600w

"This is American journalism of the highest class; it is neither racy nor vulgar, but swift, compelling, accurate and judicious. The pile burns very brightly; but the materials which the thirties provide are rather too heavy and severe to rival the brilliant bonfire which he constructed of America in the twenties. He records; he infers; and wisely does not fare further." Noel Annan

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:626 My 11 '40 750w

"Mr. Allen's shining service is to recall the things that have blurred equally with those that have stuck in memory. No one else does this sort of thing so well. . . One would predict for this book a sound success and long survival. Its basic merits are honesty, good nature, detachment without indifference, a keen eye for survival in news values. Somehow it conveys the impression of the American people telling their own story in autobiographical form." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 F 11 '40 1700w

"This is neither real history nor a mere clip-and-paste job, but something acceptably in between. It's quite uninterpretive—Mr. Allen goes to nearly eccentric extremes in his endeavor to be middle-of-the-road—but never unintelligent or unfair." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 15:77 F 10 '40 550w

"This is a painful—often harrowing—book to read, although the fault is not Mr. Allen's but that of the raw material of contemporary history with which he deals. Vividly and with great skill he marshals the men, the mountebanks, the measures, and the events of ten years of American life and causes them to march before us in orderly panathenaic procession." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 21:3 F 17 '40 3500w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 164:490 Ap 5 '40 750w

"Mr. Allen takes up his task with such energy and sober enthusiasm that his book may be enjoyed in a mood of constructive recollection. . . It is possible that his book would have been more interesting if it had contained less of the governmental and journalistic record and had gone more extensively into the strains and moods of American society and the cultural manifestations of the era."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 1100w

Time 35:76 F 12 '40 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Je 1 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:46 Mr '40

Reviewed by Sherman Kent

Yale R ns 29:604 spring '40 1050w

ALLEN, GARDNER WELD, ed. See Long, J. D. Papers, 1897-1904

ALLEN, GEORGE CYRIL. Japanese industry; its recent development and present condition. 124p $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

330.952 Japan—Industries and resources. Japan—Economic conditions 39-33996

"Professor Allen presents a well-balanced analysis of Japan's industrial structure and of the distortions that have resulted from the Sino-Japanese war." (Pacific Affairs) Contents: Industrial tendencies, 1929-1936; Economic policy, 1929-1936; The technical efficiency of Japanese industry; The Sino-Japanese war and industrial development; War-time control of industry; Financial policy; Prospects.

Reviewed by A. W. Griswold

Am Econ R 30:374 Je '40 110w

Reviewed by H. M. Vinacke

Am Pol Sci R 34:584 Je '40 180w

Reviewed by J. E. Orchard

Pacific Affairs 13:88 Mr '40 400w

Reviewed by Ben Dorfman

Pol Sci Q 55:610 D '40 420w

"Japanese Industry is well arranged, adequately supplied, but not overloaded, with statistics, and presents to the lay reader a clear picture of its complicated subject matter. It is objective and free from wishful thinking, as befits a publication of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and provides a valuable contribution to the understanding of a problem of which the outbreak of our own war, whatever its effect on relative news values, has done nothing to diminish the importance." Honor Croome

+ Spec 164:84 Ja 19 '40 850w

ALLEN, GRACIE (MRS GEORGE BURNS). How to become president; prepared by the Gracie Allen self-delusion institute; and il. by Charles Lofgren. 96p $1 Duell

817 40-32186

On the basis of her own successful campaign Gracie Allen gives advice to other aspirants to the presidency—a job that ensures big money, vacations with pay, and a chance to fish free from a battleship.

Books p13 Jl 21 '40 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 350w

ALLEN, GRACIE—Continued

"Gracie's book is a good half-hour's fun of the same silly sort as her radio program, but pointed enough to turn the ears red on any sensitive politician, if there is such a thing." Carlton Brown

+ New Repub 102:866 Je 24 '40 170w

ALLEN, HENRY JUSTIN. Venezuela: a democracy. 289p il map $3.50 Doubleday

987 Venezuela (W) 40-34399

A study, made from the point of view of a visiting North American, of Venezuela's progress along the road laid out for her when the death of the dictator, Gómez, brought Lopez Contreras into power. Early in his administration, President Contreras proclaimed as objectives, progress in sanitation, education, and transportation and development of raw materials, and Mr Allen in this book is enthusiastic over his success so far in achieving these aims. Index.

Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

"Mr. Allen is unquestionably sincere, as far as he goes. But neither he nor his facts get out of bounds for a moment. This is a perfect picture of a paper Venezuela, a dream of a Venezuela-to-come, Venezuela presented by the advertising department on slick paper. But to one who knows something of Venezuela, who has tried to understand her complicated social and political situation, and who has a great admiration for her splendid tradition (founded in her adoration of Bolivar) and a great respect for her people—outside as well as inside the government—this book seems to leave Venezuela and the Venezuelans for the most part out of the picture." Erna Fergusson

— + Books p20 N 17 '40 800w

Cath World 152:503 Ja '41 550w

"A successful mixture of economics and travelogue. It is seasoned reporting, clear and simple in style, and interesting. . . Such slight bias and conservatism as are to be noted occasionally are directed mainly at the Mexican policy of expropriation of foreign oil holdings. This book will appeal to two types of readers: those who would enjoy or have enjoyed Harry Franck's narratives of travel and readers of Fortune Magazine." M. E. Clark

+ — Library J 65:590 Jl '40 150w

Reviewed by N. M. Oliver

Living Age 359:390 D '40 120w

N Y Times p12 Ja 26 '41 480w

"This book presents a story of much authentic progress, but paints too rosy a picture of present-day Venezuela. It would have gained in reference value had it given broader representation of conditions. The book is well illustrated."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 N 20 '40 430w

ALLEN, HERVEY. It was like this; two stories of the Great war; with drawings by Lyle Justis. 153p $1.50 Farrar

(W) 40-27197

Two stark, realistic stories of the Great war: Report to Major Roberts, the story of a young American lieutenant, whose only hold on reality during days and nights of horror, was the fact that he had been told to "report to Major Roberts"; and Blood Lust, story of the transformation of a simple youth into a hard-boiled soldier.

Atlantic Je '40 70w

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books p4 Mr 3 '40 700w

"Both stories are readable, but neither accomplishes its purpose. That sleepless men with jangled nerves reveal hitherto unsuspected aspects of their characters is not news. The imaginative will learn from the stories nothing about war that they have not already surmised, and the realism is not intense enough, not visceral enough, to stir the unimaginative to a just sense of what they are in for if war comes. In fact, some may suspect that the realism of the book is only superficial, the covering of a deep-going and unconscious romanticism." Charles Donahue

— + Commonweal 31:496 Mr 29 '40 450w

"Timely. Realistic. An excellent plea for peace." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 80w

New Repub 102:450 Ap 1 '40 60w

"For those who ask the question, 'What's war like?' Hervey Allen has given in both tales descriptions in graphic detail of battle as it is experienced within small units. A final word should be said for an interesting and provocative brief introduction." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 3 '40 550w

New Yorker 16:61 Mr 2 '40 70w

"The longer, 'Report to Major Roberts,' is graphic, romantic, even Frank-Merriwellish, but even the most wretched of wars does not lack those qualities. The shorter, 'Blood Lust,' is a grim little character study. The two together do not make very much of a book, in size or in importance." J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 2 '40 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:112 Je '40

ALLEN, JOHN EDWARD. The modern newspaper. 234p il $3 Harper

655.25 Printing, Practical. Type and type founding. Printing—Specimens. Newspapers (W) 40-8337

"Attempts to point out significant changes for the better that have been made, typographically and in methods of news presentation, by newspapers in recent years." (Pref) Index.

"Mr. Allen's study is a valuable contribution to any understanding of the press of today, but that mythical wonderful Newspaper of Tomorrow has not yet been reduced either to blueprints or to actual production. The evolutionary process has a lot of work ahead of it." Stanley Walker

+ Books p14 D 22 '40 280w

"As a whole, 'The Modern Newspaper' should be on every newspaperman's shelf. There is a host of helpful ideas in it, valuable suggestions for improving the newspaper, as to both content and appearance. Mr. Allen has made a splendid contribution. He is awakening newspapers to the need for better typography and improved methods of news presentation." C. A. L.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 7 '40 400w

"Mr. Allen has assembled a casebook from his own experience and that of newspapers which have put modern ideas into practice. It is up to date, and it gives the best that has been done, without suggesting that any of them constitute the final answer." A. T. Robb

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 28 '40 700w

Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

ALLEN, LUCY GRACE. Table service. new ed rev 203p il $1.75 Little

642 Table (W) 40-11234

"The first edition of Table Service was published in 1915 and a revised edition was issued in 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1933]. The present edition, which represents a thorough revision of the work, is intended, as its predecessors were, to present the appointments the modern housekeeper and the modern hostess are using on their table and to show how they are using them." Pref.

"There are a few changes in the text and some new illustrations, but the revision is too slight to make replacement necessary for libraries owning the [1933] edition."

Booklist 37:71 O 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:564 O '40 70w

ALLEN, ROY MORRIS. The microscope. 286p il $3 Van Nostrand

578 Microscope and microscopy 40-5605

Discussion, for the layman, of microscopy, the various types of instruments used, and the accessories used in microscopy. Contents: Historical introduction; Optical principles of the microscope; Modern instruments; Illumination; Testing of microscope objectives; Getting the most out of the microscope; Preparation of material for microscopical examination. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"This is not a book for the specialist, but will best serve as an introduction to the use and understanding of the microscope for beginners. It does not have the authority or the record of experience found in Gage, but does contain much that is new regarding recent developments in microscope construction. The inclusion of a general account of varied technical processes in such a book would seem of doubtful value, since it necessitates taking space that might well be devoted to fuller consideration of the main topics in the book. The style is readable and clear and the book work good, with perhaps the exception of the use of a heavily coated paper." C. E. McClung

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:168 F 25 '40 170w

"One cannot but admire the excellent sketches and photographs that Mr. Allen uses for illustration and clarification. Students in High School and College and people in industry, whose task it is to test products by means of a microscope, will welcome this clearly written little book." E. Henning

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:202 Mr '40 240w

"This is a very readable book with something to say about almost every point of concern to the user of a microscope. For a student wishing to learn the technique of the microscope it should be a useful book. For a scientist who wishes to use a microscope as a tool but is not familiar with its operation the book should also be useful. The expert trained in uses of the microscope will not find much that he does not know." W. H. Brattain

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:323 O '40 360w

ALLERS, RUDOLF. The successful error. 266p $3 Sheed

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Freud, Sigmund 40-11657

A study and adverse criticism of Freudian psychoanalysis. The author, now professor of psychology at the Catholic university of America, was formerly reader in psychiatry at the medical schools of the Universities of Munich and Vienna. Index.

Cath World 151:761 S '40 400w

"This volume may be taken as an excellent brief against Freud's system." J. J. Walsh

+ Commonweal 32:315 Ag 2 '40 330w

"That one such volume should destroy psychoanalysis is most improbable. That laymen should feel qualified either to swallow or spit out its arguments is only too possible. But that such a volume may aid in the reduction-to-scale of a science too liable to theological elephantiasis is most devoutly to be hoped."

Time 35:96 Je 24 '40 120w

ALLERTON, MARY. The shadow and the web. 352p $2 Bobbs

40-33358

The chief characters of this horror story are three sisters, the eldest of whom is head mistress of a girls' school. The germ of the story lies in a real life case, the Snead-Wardlaw murder case of the first decade of the 1900s, but, the author explains, she has taken only her initial ideas from that case and does not pretend to solve its still unexplained mystery.

" 'The Shadow and the Web' is a story of evil and horror which needs very great skill in its treatment; some skill is here, but not enough. Dreadfully impressive as it is, the novel does not rise above the artistic level of the mystery thriller, nor rank with the excellent best in that genre." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p28 N 17 '40 550w

"There is little mystery but lots of crime. The period is late McKinley. Based on the Snead-Wardlaw case, described in Alvin Harlow's 'Murder Not Quite Solved,' and as frightening as a bad dream."

+ New Yorker 16:96 N 9 '40 50w

"Red-hot chiller."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 30 '40 40w

ALLEY, JOHN. City beginnings in Oklahoma territory. 127p il map $1.50 Univ. of Okla. press

976.6 Cities and towns—Oklahoma. Oklahoma—History 40-853

"When the United States government threw open Oklahoma Territory for white settlement in 1889, it acted with singular lack of foresight in not setting up any sort of governmental or administrative machinery to take care of the suddenly assembled aggregates of population. . . . John Alley, who went to Oklahoma in 1890 and who is now Professor of Government at the University of Oklahoma, gives an account of the confused conditions which prevailed for a year or more until political organization became effective." (Social Forces) The towns thus formed and described in this work include Guthrie, Oklahoma City, Kingfisher, Norman, El Reno, and Stillwater.

"The book is an important item in local history, but it is also an eloquent side light on the capacity and willingness of Anglo-Americans to govern themselves. And it is replete with amusing, picturesque and dramatic incident." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 19 '40 550w

"City Beginnings in Oklahoma Territory, as a study of municipal origins under very special circumstances, should be of interest to the urban sociologist. Although the treatment, as might be expected, has a political rather than a sociological bias, the sociological implications are considerable." H. T.

Social Forces 18:609 My '40 300w

ALLING, KENNETH SLADE. Core of fire. 40p $1.50 League to support poetry, 350 W. 18th st, N.Y.

811 40-7388

"This book, by the comparative veteran Kenneth Slade Alling, was chosen in a general competition, and the choice is proof of the old adage, 'competition is the life of trade.' Alling is a maker of Yankee cameos in a concentrated philosophy which has its fatherhood in Emerson." Living Age

"Mr. Alling's chief fault is a too facile lyricism, and one misses the acid of the anti-poetic, but as a whole the book records a sensitive apprehension of enduring things." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books p22 Ap 14 '40 470w

Reviewed by Alfred Kreymborg

Living Age 358:296 My '40 120w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY. Black plumes. 270p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-27746

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:92 N 1 '40

"This is a natural for the matinee trade and a challenge to puzzlers of all degrees." Will Cuppy

+ Books p19 O 13 '40 180w

ALLINGHAM, MARGERY—Continued

"The intricate puzzle is handled with clarity and suspense, but 'Black Plumes' is a novel as well as a thriller; and its story is told with a skillful novelist's sophistication and restraint. This . . . is one of the best books by a mystery novelist whose work is always of the first rank." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p22 O 13 '40 280w

"Excels in characterizations, background and generally glossy professional finish. Solution not exactly startling, but 'head nark' Bridie deduces bonnily."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 50w

"The plot of Black Plumes, which centres upon the death of an eminent art-dealer, is plausible enough and enables the author to move in an environment with which she is obviously familiar: but the detection lacks the attack and precision of her best work; Inspector Bridie is, pardonably, a little bemused by the eccentricities of his suspects—I fancy Mr. Campion should have been called in to help him." Nicholas Blake
Spec 166:44 Ja 10 '41 100w

Time 36:84 N 4 '40 40w

"With delicate sense of atmosphere and character Miss Allingham has a charm to compensate for any shortcoming. 'Black Plumes' can still be read with pleasure even when its power to mystify is doubted."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p605 N 30 '40 250w

ALSOP, GULIELMA FELL, and MCBRIDE, MARY FRANCES. She's off to college; a girl's guide to college life. 278p $2.50 Vanguard

376.6 Education of women. Young women. Students (W) 40-10359

Common sense advice on many facets of college life—choosing a college, arriving at school, selecting courses, dressing for classes and for parties, planning schedules, making dates, making friends, etc. Dr Alsop is college physician at Barnard college; Miss McBride is director of business and professional girls department, Brooklyn Y.W.C.A. Short bibliography.

Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40

"This is the best book I have seen for a girl who means to go to college and emerge a credit to the human race and the American educational system." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Jl 28 '40 280w

N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '40 450w

"Any girl looking forward to college or already there will find light for her feet in this book. . . A discerning reading discloses the heart of college life as it operates in a man's college as well as in one for girls, or for both sexes together. In fact, the operations are those of life anywhere—human beings getting along together in the world." J. P. Gavit
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 27 '40 170w

"Parents will find the advice offered an invaluable aid in understanding their collegiate daughters and in assisting them to prepare for a well-rounded adult life." Mary Hitchings
+ Survey 76:310 O '40 120w

ALSOP, JOSEPH WRIGHT, and KINTNER, ROBERT. American white paper; the story of American diplomacy and the second world war. 109p pa $1 Simon & Schuster

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. European war, 1939—U.S. European war, 1939—Diplomatic history (W) 40-7727

"A short, intimate record of America's semi-secret foreign policy since September, 1938, and the steps which have been taken to carry it out. The authors also do some prognosticating." New Yorker

Atlantic S '40 230w

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

"This paper-covered, outsize pamphlet is an interesting document; I am inclined to think that it is also an important one. . . As a contribution to diplomatic history it seems bizarre. But can one disregard it on that account? . . . There is no indication of the authors' sources or the accuracy of their information. But it sounds accurate; and their book will be read." Walter Millis
Books p5 My 5 '40 1450w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '40 110w

Cath World 151:499 Jl '40 380w

" 'American White Paper' is assertively journalistic and written by one of Washington's most facile and able reportorial teams. In this work, the style and mood of the writers are not at their most attractive, and the purpose and content is unusually serious." Philip Burnham
+ Commonweal 32:104 My 24 '40 1100w

Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 30w

"It is a good selling title that either the publishers or Alsop and Kintner have given their magazine-like pamphlet, but the 'American White Paper' is really nothing like the vari-colored books and pamphlets officially issued by the belligerent governments. While it reprints a few of the more important speeches and messages that have marked American foreign policy since Munich, it contains no documents that had not previously been made public. For the rest, it supplies fictional details for a running narrative in the best style of the gossip columnist. . . Their picture of this policy is probably accurate so far as it goes. . . The most significant aspect of this little book is what it leaves out, probably because the authors' attention was directed elsewhere." George Soule
New Repub 102:646 My 13 '40 1300w

"Two young and enterprising Washington correspondents have produced a sort of literary newsreel showing an interesting though perhaps pathetic picture of a great democracy's leaders striving vainly to evolve a sane foreign policy despite the short-sightedness, lack of interest and malevolence of their electorate. This, of course, was not the intention of Messrs. Alsop and Kintner in compiling their play-by-play account of the Administration's moves in the foreign field since the Agreement of Munich. Their work is obviously a sympathetic account. . . The title is somewhat misleading, but the contents make good reading and the book, with its large type and handy format, should have a wide appeal to those who have been unable to follow in detail the few actual developments which are recounted." H. B. Hinton
N Y Times p12 My 12 '40 1550w

"Enlightening stuff, not official but fairly convincing."
New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 40w

"Too much attention should not be paid to the title of this book. Although its authors print a useful collection of formal statements of American policy, the main interest of their tract does not lie in the documentation but in the interpretation. That interpretation, of course, is personal. But not only are the authors among the best-informed Washington 'columnists,' they are in complete sympathy with the Roosevelt foreign policy." D. W. Brogan
+ Spec 165:64 Jl 19 '40 500w

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 12 '40 200w

Reviewed by Quincy Wright
Survey G 29:443 Ag '40 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p334 Jl 13 '40 600w

ALTROCCHI, JULIA (COOLEY) (MRS RUDOLPH ALTROCCHI). Wolves against the moon. 572p $2.75 Macmillan

(W)40-27372

Joseph Bailly, heir to great wealth in the Quebec of 1794, felt the call of the open spaces of Canada. Against his family's wishes he became a fur trader, his chain of trading stations ultimately extending from Mackinac island to New Orleans. He married the French-Indian girl Marie, and together they built up a family and a fortune. In the mid-nineteenth century Joseph transferred his activities to the safer realms of Detroit real estate and lake transportation.

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40

"Aside from its value as a record of pioneering 'Wolves Against the Moon' affords interesting glimpses into the tribal customs of the Ottawas." George Conrad

Books p12 Ap 21 '40 600w

"In 'Wolves Against the Moon,' Mrs. Altrocchi revitalizes one of the most important periods of American history. Her book is a valuable contribution to historical romance."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 190w

Cath World 152:121 O '40 170w

Christian Century 57:641 My 15 '40 260w

New Repub 102:834 Je 17 '40 50w

"One of the wildest and strangest novels ever written about the Middle Western frontier. . . For all its ambitious scope and careful planning, 'Wolves Against the Moon' is a first novel and not entirely free from amateurish faults. It is crowded in structure, sometimes perilously close to incoherence. Scenes of cruelty and violence . . . are imposed upon primitive orgies and heathenish plots until the reader's imagination flags. A moment's inattention and there is danger that the thread may be lost altogether. Luckily Mrs. Altrocchi's material is of a sort to permit few moments of inattention." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '40 800w

"This is an exciting and colorful narrative, half history and half fiction. . . The novel is filled with bloodshed and suspense, but in these particulars the author but follows history. Maybe the thrillers were closer to history than we ever believed, or else the author felt that this bloody and thrilling history of the settling of Canada did not have sufficient interest of its own to stand without dressing up." H. B.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ap 27 '40 370w

ALVAREZ DEL VAYO, JULIO. Freedom's battle; tr. from the Spanish by Eileen E. Brooke. 389p map $3 Knopf

946.08 Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 (W) 40-27503

An account of the Spanish civil war, and particularly the part played by the makers of foreign policy in Rome, Berlin, Paris, and London in the defeat of the Loyalist forces. The author was Foreign minister of the Loyalist government. Index.

Booklist 36:396 Je 15 '40

"It is true that del Vayo tends to minimize the whole Russian side of the matter. It is true that this, though a dispassionate, is by no means an unbiased book—how could it be?—and probably paints the Francoists in blacker colors and the Loyalists in nobler ones than will be used by the cool historians of the future. But against the overwhelming confirmation of the main argument now being supplied by each day's headlines, do such things matter?" Walter Millis

+ Books p3 Je 2 '40 1450w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Je 6 '40 850w

Reviewed by S. M. Waxman

Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 550w

"The book ignores evidence and repeats discredited lies. It may be dismissed as impudent and untrustworthy. It is an attempt to cash in on the present war."

— Cath World 151:510 Jl '40 190w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '40 350w

"The record of Señor Del Vayo's official activities is the most interesting part of his wholly absorbing chronicle. It is the first behind-the-scenes record we have had—a generous, impassioned, yet on the whole well-considered estimate of events and men." Mary Elting

+ Current Hist & Forum 51:6 Jl '40 380w

Foreign Affairs 19:259 O '40 50w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton

Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 110w

Reviewed by W. H. Carter

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 20 '40 600w

"The most important single book on the Spanish War which has yet appeared." Mildred Adams

+ Nation 150:711 Je 8 '40 700w

"The Spanish people's resistance to fascism, is recounted in this lucid book in all its aspects. 'Freedom's Battle' is an honest yet sophisticated statement of intelligent views passionately held and firmly defended. The language is controlled and temperate, but that is how a theme of profound nobility should be expressed." Ralph Bates

+ New Repub 102:830 Je 17 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 20:215 Ag 31 '40 1100w

"Señor Del Vayo writes with vigor and clarity. In his pages one hears the ring of the voice of authority and inside knowledge. There is restraint as well. Unsparing though he is of Franco and all that the victorious rebel chief stands for in Loyalist eyes, Señor Del Vayo refrains from unbridled vituperation." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p9 Je 2 '40 1050w

New Yorker 16:79 Je 8 '40 80w

"Spain's great Foreign Minister has done a job that is cool, detached, and candid yet of awful timeliness." Jay Allen

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 Je 15 '40 1500w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 4 '40 850w

"A truly fascinating book. . . The author is, of course, a partisan, but the history is told with an astonishing objectivity, clear-sightedness, and lack of bitterness." Hans Kohn

+ Survey G 30:42 Ja '41 140w

Time 35:88 Je 17 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 17 '40 650w

AMBLER, ERIC. Journey into fear. 275p $2 Knopf [8s 3d Hodder]

40-31514

A combination story of international intrigue, and a study of fear changing into a desperate kind of courage. The hero is an English engineer returning from Turkey after the outbreak of the war, followed by German agents intent on his death.

"An admirable tale of its kind, with ever-mounting suspense, and—in spite of the melodrama—a curiously convincing one."

+ Atlantic Ja '41 150w

Booklist 37:176 Ja 1 '41

Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"A recommended item by a writer who leaped to the top of his field a season or two ago and is staying right there." Will Cuppy

+ Books p19 O 13 '40 180w

Commonweal 32:534 O 18 '40 90w

"The tension on the boat as the threatened man gradually discovers the presence of his enemies is well described, and there is an exciting climax." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '40 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 N 24 '40 200w

"One of the best stories of international intrigue you'll find even if you do read the papers."

+ New Yorker 16:112 O 19 '40 70w

Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w

AMBLER, ERIC—Continued

"Well up to its author's reputation as the foremost thriller-writer of the day." Rupert Hart-Davis

+ Spec 165:70 Jl 19 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 300w

Time 36:84 D 2 '40 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 5 '40 80w

AMERICAN Catholic who's who, 1940-1941. (v 4) 496p $6.50; to libs $5.85 c1939 Walter Romig & co, 14 Nat. bank bldg, Detroit

920 Roman Catholics in the U.S. (11-10944)

"The American Catholic Who's Who was first issued in the present form in 1935 and since that time has appeared biennially. . . As the work is now published it is a companion to the English Catholic Who's Who in purpose, as was originally planned, and follows its condensed form. This fourth edition has also been compiled from information newly assembled. . . This edition includes not only prominent Catholics, both Roman and Greek, living in the United States, but also those holding posts abroad, i.e., in the diplomatic and consular service. A few foreigners are included, but in each case the person has in some way been associated with America, i.e., by education, travel, etc. This edition is composed of three parts, the first of which is the alphabetical list; the second is the geographical; and the third is a necrology of persons appearing in the previous editions." Subscription Bks Bul

"The American Catholic Who's Who will be of use in Catholic communities and in large libraries where questions about the religious affiliations of prominent people are often asked. This title is recommended where needed."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:25 Jl '40 450w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. American junior colleges, 1940; ed. by Walter Crosby Eells. 585p maps $3.50 The council

378 Junior colleges (W) 40-33685

"Prepared by the council in cooperation with the American Association of Junior Colleges, this work contains descriptions of 494 junior colleges and interpretative material regarding this important educational development." (School & Society) Indexes.

Booklist 37:132 D 1 '40

J Home Econ 33:44 Ja '41 60w

School & Society 52:344 O 12 '40 30w

AMERICAN CRYPTOGRAM ASSOCIATION. Elementary cryptanalysis. See Gaines, H. F.

AMERICAN DIETETIC ASSOCIATION. Quantity food service recipes; comp. by Administration section, under the direction of Adeline Wood, chairman; cartoons by Jean McConnell. 436p $4 Lippincott

641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. 40-5538

Collection of over a thousand quantity recipes, most of them netting from fifty to one hundred servings. The recipes were contributed by members of the American dietetic association, and by some hotels and institutions. No index.

"Filled with 'pet' recipes, this book is one that any person, who is responsible for food in quantity, whether for an institution of 50 or 500, will find an inspiration and help in making menus even though it is not a book of menus." M. A. Davis

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1248 O '40 270w

Booklist 36:339 My 1 '40

J Home Econ 32:396 Je '40 80w

Pratt p12 autumn '40

AMERICAN GAS ASSOCIATION. Technical section. Chemical committee. Fuel flue gases; the application and interpretation of gas analyses and tests [ed. by C. George Segeler]. 198p il $5 The association

662.6 Gas as fuel. Gases—Analysis 40-6995

"Prepared under the supervision of a Subcommittee of the Chemical Committee, Technical Section, American Gas Association, this book covers a large number of diverse topics. It proves clearly that chemical work can be practically and usefully applied to the everyday problems of the gas industry, and should serve as a tool to that industry. The subject matter includes fuel gas analyses and tests, a discussion of each of the constituents as determined by the analyses, and material on furnace atmospheres, sewer gas, soil gas, etc. Bibliographical references are scattered throughout the text, and an excellent index is appended." N Y New Tech Bks

"To the specialist acquainted with the source material, the presentation has many of the aspects of a valuable scrapbook containing excerpts that would attract the attention of a chemical director for a large gas utility. . . Present-day overloading of technologic personnel is reflected in certain shortcomings. Thus the apportioning of space allotted to the various topics frequently appears to be governed by the amount of material conveniently available to the editor rather than by the fundamental or permanent value of the information." W. J. Huff

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:673 Ag 10 '40 500w

Chem & Met Eng 47:270 Ap '40 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:22 Ap '40

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Committee on archives and libraries. Archives and libraries; ed. by A. F. Kuhlman; papers presented at the 1939 conference of the Association representing the joint program of the Committee, the Pacific coast members of the Society of Am. archivists and the Hist. records survey. 108p pa $1.75 A.L.A.

025.171 Archives 39-29430

" 'Papers presented at the 1939 Conference of the American library association, representing the joint program of the Committee on archives and libraries of the A.L.A., the Pacific coast members of the Society of American archivists and the Historical records survey.' (Subtitle) Included are discussions of the next steps in archival and historical manuscript work, of manuscript collections, and of the use of microphotography, with suggestions for a cataloging code." Booklist

Booklist 36:167 Ja 1 '40

Reviewed by R. B. Downs

Library Q 10:285 Ap '40 650w

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Committee on public documents. Manual on the use of state publications. See Wilcox, J. K., ed.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION. The vitamins; a symposium arranged under the auspices of the Council on pharmacy and chemistry and the Council on foods of the Association, 1939. 637p il $1.50 The association

612.39 Vitamins. Nutrition. Food 39-24086

"Taken together, the 31 papers here assembled present current scientific knowledge of the nature, sources, functions, and nutritive values of vitamins and include certain aspects of their therapeutic uses." J Home Econ

"No individual or library interested in keeping abreast of the advances being made in vitamin research can afford to be without a copy of this book." I. A. Manville

+ Am J Pub Health 30:700 Je '40 420w

J Home Econ 32:41 Ja '40 80w
Reviewed by H. H. Darby
Nation 150:344 Mr 9 '40 500w

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION. Council on foods. Accepted foods and their nutritional significance. 492p $2 The association

641.1 Food. Nutrition 40-27055

Lists of food products accepted by the Council on foods of the American medical association up to September 1, 1939. Contains descriptions of foods, an alphabetical list of manufacturers and distributors, and an index.

"While the book is intended largely to prevent frauds in food products and false advertisement, it is almost a textbook on nutrition, which can be recommended to all interested in this great subject." M. P. Ravenel
+ Am J Pub Health 30:445 Ap '40 240w
Booklist 36:232 F 15 '40
J Home Econ 32:181 Mr '40 50w

AMERICAN PAPER AND PULP ASSOCIATION. The dictionary of paper; including pulps, boards, paper properties and related papermaking terms. 365p $5 The association, 122 E. 42d st, N.Y.

676.03 Paper—Dictionaries 40-6326

"As stated in the preface, the purpose of this dictionary is 'to revise and extend previous efforts along this line in order to give the industry a thoroughly modern and more complete dictionary of the names, terms, and expressions which it uses.' . . Following a discussion of the philosophy of definitions, the second chapter gives a classification and definitions of pulps. The third contains a classification of waste materials used in the paper and board industries, after which the fourth chapter, beginning at page 35, gives definitions of papers, boards, and paper-making terms which extend through page 363. This is followed by a bibliography." Chem & Chem Eng N

"The dictionary has been compiled from the viewpoint of the layman, which should make it welcome and acceptable to a very wide circle of readers. . . Dictionaries must be judged largely by the capabilities of those who have compiled them and those who have assisted in their preparation. On this basis there can be little question as to this dictionary's completeness, authority, and arrangement to make quickly available the extensive information it contains. It is not difficult to see extensive use for so valuable a compilation."
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:315 Ap 10 '40 300w

"Definitions are clear and as brief as accuracy will permit; there are many cross references."
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:579 Ag '40 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:38 Jl '40

AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR TESTING MATERIALS. Symposium on lime, Columbus regional meeting, Mar. 8, 1939 [technical program sponsored by Com. C-7 on lime]. 118p il $1.50; pa $1.25 The society

666.9 Lime 40-4234

"This symposium comprises eleven technical papers prepared by outstanding authors and deals with problems in the practical application of lime in its various forms, a number of fundamental aspects, and various research and technical angles." Chem & Chem Eng N

Chem & Chem Eng N 18:263 Mr 20 '40 130w
Chem & Met Eng 47:273 Ap '40 50w

AMERICAN women; the standard biographical dictionary of notable women, 1939-40; Durward Howes, editor; Mary L. Braun, Rose Garvey, associate editors. (v 3) 1083p $10; to libraries $7.50 1939 Am. publications, inc, 527 W. 7th st, Los Angeles

920 Woman—Biography. U.S.—Biography (35-9037)

"Unique in its field, this publication, like the two earlier editions [Book Review Digest, 1935, 1937] includes concise biographies of living women from all sections of the country and from all professions. Inclusion in the publication is based entirely on personal merit and involves no financial obligation on the part of the 10,222 women whose biographies were chosen by the editors from some 33,000 proposed entries. The total number of biographies has increased with each new edition, and omissions of nationally prominent women are less evident in this volume than in volumes I and II. On the whole, older information has been revised, and 3,000 new entries have been added. Names for which the information was not verified for this edition are starred, and in the B section alone approximately 12 per cent were so marked." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"American Women, volume III, has the good features of a well-planned and well-organized biographical dictionary. Libraries will find the special features continued in this edition very useful. The Statistical Summary includes statistics under the headings: Birthplace and present home, Marriage, Education, Church, Political party, Age distribution, etc. There is a Necrology list. The Geographical index, Occupational index and the List of organizations contain additional reference data that cannot be easily located elsewhere. . . American Women is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:19 Ap '40 290w

AMERINGER, OSCAR. If you don't weaken; autobiography; with a foreword by Carl Sandburg. 476p il $2.75 Holt

B or 92 (W) 40-27504

Autobiography of a German-born American radical, at present editor of the American Guardian, the only Oklahoma newspaper with a national circulation. The first section of the book describes the author's life in Germany. Other sections relate his experiences as socialist agitator and labor sympathizer, and newspaper editor. Index.

Atlantic Jl '40 600w
Booklist 36:397 Je 15 '40

"Mr. Ameringer is not an intellectual. Neither is he a remarkably brilliant wit. His story, rather, glows with that genial, expansive, anecdotal humor which can make the most distressing and tragic experience he undergoes seem somehow part of a large human adventure, that he enjoys, despite its every heartbreak. He is the hero of his own picaresque career, and he never loses sight of that dramatic vantage point." William Soskin
+ Books p4 My 19 '40 1300w

"'When the going is good,' says Carl Sandburg, 'he is equal to the best of Artemus Ward and Petroleum Vesuvius Nasby. . . As an entertainer he has the skill and the quizzical humility of Will Rogers or Mark Twain.' That may be high praise for Oscar Ameringer, who calls his autobiography 'If You Don't Weaken' but it suggests the personality of the wittiest and, next to Eugene Debs, most loveable of the oldtime American Socialists. Oscar likes beer, strikes and cornets, and handles all three well. He is a sound musician, a pretty good painter and a natural-born story teller." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 My 21 '40 1250w
Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 300w

AMERINGER, OSCAR—Continued
"It is a true American story and to me a precious one." O. G. Villard
+ Nation 150:784 Je 29 '40 700w

"Ameringer has been anything but a mover and shaker, and certainly not a theorist in any accepted sense, but his story has its own importance as history and is as readable and richly humorous as any of the writings that have made him famous." R. H. Rovere
+ New Repub 103:61 Jl 8 '40 300w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p5 My 26 '40 1550w

"[The book is] funny and touching and noble—noble because Mr. Ameringer is a noble fellow who has been told so often and pays no attention to the fact." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:90 My 25 '40 550w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain
Sat R of Lit 22:5 Je 1 '40 800w

"No matter how little or how much one agrees with the political theories advanced by Mr Ameringer, his book is a source of great enjoyment because of his ability as a story-teller and of some disturbance because of the political and economic inequalities he describes."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 2 '40 700w
Time 35:79 Je 3 '40 490w
Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

AMERY, LEOPOLD CHARLES MAURICE STENNETT. The German colonial claim. 199p maps $2.50 Longmans [7s 6d Chambers]
325.343 Germany—Colonies [39-25028]

Analysis of the question prepared by a former Secretary of State for the Colonies, and written before the outbreak of war in September, 1939. The preface is dated April, 1939. "In the introductory chapter [the author has] attempted to define, free from confusing detailed controversy, the crucial issue which underlies the German Colonial Claim. The subsequent chapters deal with the historical background of the subject and with the arguments, juridical, moral and economic, which have been advanced for the retrocession of the former German Colonies, and with the reasons both of Imperial responsibility and of Imperial security which militate against any consideration of the German demand." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by M. E. Townsend
Am Hist R 45:964 Jl '40 60w

Reviewed by H. W. Stoke
Am Pol Sci R 34:821 Ag '40 260w

"Mr. Amery has written ably and vigorously against the return to Germany of her former colonies. He is very fair in his treatment of German misrule and the native uprisings which it provoked, and ascribes it to the lack of experienced colonial officials and the absence of interest and effective control by the members of the Reichstag." L. A. Mills
+ Ann Am Acad 212:241 N '40 320w
Foreign Affairs 18:577 Ap '40 20w

"To the demand of a Nazi Germany for reversal of the colonial clauses of the Treaty of Versailles there can be, according to Mr. Amery, 'only one reply consistent with our safety and with our honour, a courteous but absolutely unequivocal refusal to admit that the question is open to discussion.' Probably the majority of us will sympathise with this conclusion: which makes it a pity that the case as here stated is personal where it might have been made more representative and truly national, and rather narrowly national where it might have stated the case for civilization as a whole." W. M. Macmillan
New Statesman & Nation 18:62 Jl 8 '39 700w

"Mr. Amery summarises the now generally accepted case against Germany's Colonial claims. Few in this country will dispute his arguments, but even the converted will be glad to have this concise and authoritative justification of their faith." J. K.
+ Spec 162:1007 Je 9 '39 750w
Times [London] Lit Sup p274 My 13 '39 600w

AMIDON, BEULAH ELIZABETH (MRS PAUL RATLIFF), ed. Democracy's challenge to education. 263p il map $1.50 Farrar
370.973 Education—U.S. Democracy 40-27131

Symposium on the major issues and purposes of education. Partial contents: The goal of American education, by E. C. Lindeman; Our jobless youth: a warning, by John Chamberlain; "Subjects" or children? by M. M. Stearns; After school and college, by Alvin Johnson; Education can't be better than the teachers, by W. A. Neilson; Administration and freedom, by Ordway Tead; Schools for today—and tomorrow, by W. C. Ryan; The beginnings and the ends, by J. P. Gavit.

Booklist 36:257 Mr 1 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

Reviewed by I. L. Kandel
Social Educ 4:368 My '40 400w
Social Studies 31:144 Mr '40 20w

AMOSS, ALICE M., comp. Where to find the new trade names; a bibliography. 32p pa 75c The compiler, Technical lib, Edgewood Arsenal, Md.
016.65 Business names—Bibliography 40-5086

"A bibliography which gives sources of trade names, listed alphabetically by subjects, with brief summary of what is available under each listing." Chem & Chem Eng N

Chem & Chem Eng N 18:263 Mr 20 '40 50w
Chem & Met Eng 47:205 Mr '40 100w

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN. The old man is always right; adapted; il. by Rojankovsky. 28p 75c Harper
(W) 40-34279

An adaptation of the Andersen story about the old man who made a bad bargain at the fair, which, however, turned into good fortune for both the old man and his wife.

"It is the illustrations by Fedor Rojankovsky that make this a real addition to picture book stories for children of six to eight. The pictures, both in color and in black and white, enrich perfectly the droll humor of the tale." M. F. Potter
+ Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:169 D '40

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN. Tumblebug, and other tales; tr. from the Danish by Paul Leyssac; il. by Hertha List. 166p $2 Harcourt
(W)

A new translation of eight of the less familiar fairy tales of Hans Christian Andersen. Contents: The tumble-bug; The snow man; The traveling companion; The old man's always right; Little Ida's flowers; The bell; Five peas from one pod; Twelve by mail coach. "Dissatisfied with earlier renderings, this translator, a Danish actor and story-teller, has retold these tales with ease and sprightliness. Strikingly illustrated with silhouettes, skilfully accented with a vivid green. For larger collections." (Booklist)

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

"Taken directly from their own language—Mr. Leyssac's mother tongue without the re-translation that stiffened the version on which I was brought up—the vocal quality is so maintained that the stories insist on being read aloud. . . The pictures are scissors-cuts of so precise and delicate a beauty they make preceding Andersen illustrations—all save the eighteenth-century effects of Rex Whistler—look heavy by contrast. Some of the prettiest introduce a second color, a clear and lively green. The page is large and so is the type; it is a book to keep a long time." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 22 '40 180w

"Eight stories of one of the greatest of fairy tale writers in a new translation by Paul Leyssac, himself a Dane, whose knowledge of both Danish and English idiom makes his work most successful."
+ Churchman 154:5 D 1 '40 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:436 N '40 50w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 30w

"Attractive large-print volume containing eight of Andersen's fairy tales written in a vivid style which seems to preserve more of the native wit and humor than most earlier translations." Alice Martin
+ Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 140w

"Attractive but uneven." Raymond Holden
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 140w

ANDERSEN, HOMER PAUL. Your career in agriculture. 285p il $2 Dutton

630 Agriculture. Occupations (W) 40-27298

Vocational textbook on agriculture for high school students. The book is general in scope; the main divisions are: taking measure of agriculture and yourself; your career as a farmer; your career as an agricultural scientist. Contains a list of agricultural colleges. Index.

Booklist 36:320 Ap 15 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

" 'Your Career in Agriculture' is well organized and one would have to go to many different publications and sources to find the information that has been compiled in its pages. . . A good selection of photographs has been made by Mr Andersen, but the reproduction could be improved."
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 8 '40 310w

Wis Lib Bul 36:96 My '40

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Deep through the heart; profiles of twenty valiant horses [lithographs by the author]. [52p] $2.50 Macmillan

636.1 Horses—Pictures, illustrations, etc. (W) 40-27827

Lithographs and short character sketches of twenty famous horses. Partial contents: Putnam; Golden Meadow; Finance; Justin Morgan; War Plumage; Brown Jack; Discovery; Domino; Kinscem; Bimelech; Seabiscuit and Red.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

"All the stories are affecting. . . One sees how much men can learn from horses as well as teach them." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 D 15 '40 210w

"Horse lovers of all ages will be enthusiastic about this book. Boys and girls will reach out to stroke the velvety noses which look so real on paper. This is a companion volume to Black, Bay, and Chestnut [Book Review Digest, 1939] and should prove just as popular in collections for young people." Marguerite Nahigian
+ Library J 66:84 Ja 15 '41 140w

"United by the common quality of greatness, these horses, as Mr. Anderson tells of them, still have their own distinguishing traits of personality, amusing quirks to stir the heart of any one who knows horses, just as do the spirited full-page pictures. And if any one wants to point out the superiority of horse to man he might take to heart his observation that 'with horses their virtues are more often transmitted than their vices.' " E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 F 2 '41 280w

" 'Deep Through the Heart' is one of those rare books that combine an appeal to the sportsman, the artist and the humanitarian. For, although the book is a collection of 'profiles' of 20 valiant horses, the sterling qualities for which they were famous, as well as for their achievements on the track and in the ring, are among the very qualities that ennoble human kind—courage, stamina, gameness, individuality."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 20 '40 360w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Salute; pictures by [the author]. 64p $1.50 Macmillan

(W) 40-7106

Horse story for small boys. Peter, a farm boy, loved horses from the time he was only a baby, and wore out his A B C book at the letter H. When he had a chance to care for a broken down race horse, Peter succeeded so well that his reward was a grandson of Man o' War.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

"If the reader is not a little overcome, he is no horse lover. These lithographs of horses are noble, and there is at least one on every page." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 My 5 '40 320w

"Children who like to draw animals will find good models to copy in these pages besides enjoying the story for its own sake." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:169 My '40 70w

Reviewed by Marian Herr
Library J 65:454 My 15 '40 90w

"To my mind, the best horse story C. W. Anderson has written for the younger children." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 40w

"Mr. Anderson's beautiful drawings are irresistible to any lover of horses, whether he is old or young. 'Salute' can be read by somewhat older children than those who have taken to their hearts Mr. Anderson's stories of Billy and his pony Blaze, but the younger boys and girls also will enjoy 'Salute' when it is read aloud to them. . . A thoroughly satisfying horse story." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Je 2 '40 310w

"The lithographs of race horses are very fine." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 50w

"This book is written in an easy and understandable manner. The author's lithographs are lifelike and lend interest to the story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '40 150w

Wis Lib Bul 36:144 O '40

ANDERSON, DWIGHT WILSON. What it means to be a doctor. 87p $1; pa 25c Medical soc. of the state of N.Y, Public relations bur, 2 E. 103d st, N.Y.

610.69 Physicians 39-15305

The greater part of this little book is concerned with the modern doctor, following one specific doctor thru his college and medical school training, hospital internship, and practice. The final chapter gives a brief statement that medical practice is a personal service, and cannot be treated in economic terms, like a commodity.

"This booklet is obviously meant primarily as a piece of propaganda on the part of 'organized medicine' in its battle against 'socialized medicine.' It is interesting to the sociologist mainly in two respects: as an example of propaganda technique and for the sentiments relative to medical practice to which it directs its appeal. It is, in medical parlance, a 'sugar-coated pill.' " Talcott Parsons
Am J Soc 45:821 Mr '40 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 24 '39 440w

ANDERSON, D. W.—Continued

"It can fairly be said that the case stories deal with better than average candidates for the medical profession. One could wish that all doctors were like those in the book. However, it can be said with real conviction that the little book does not exaggerate the idealistic aims and performance of the leaders in the profession." E. C. Potter, M.D.

Survey 75:388 D '39 550w

ANDERSON, EUGENE NEWTON. Nationalism and the cultural crisis in Prussia, 1806-1815. 303p $2.50 Farrar

943.1 Prussia—Nationality. Nationalism and nationality 40-648

A study of the growth and influence of the idea of nationalism in Germany in the early nineteenth century. After an introductory chapter the author presents his findings in the form of studies of seven individuals—four who reached and practiced "a common cultural ideal of nationalism": Fichte, Arndt, Kleist and Gneisenau; a "liberal"—Nathusius, and two exponents of the ancien régime—Frederick William III and Marwitz.

"In the reviewer's opinion, the value of the study would have been enhanced by the addition of a brief concluding chapter synthesizing the outstanding materials presented in the separate biographical sketches." V. A. O'Rourke

Am Pol Sci R 34:386 Ap '40 230w

"A welcome addition to a very important subject." R. H.

+ Social Studies 31:140 Mr '40 180w

ANDERSON, MRS EVA GREENSLIT. Dog-team doctor; the story of Dr Romig. 299p il maps $2.75 Caxton printers

B or 92 Romig, Joseph Herman. Alaska—Social life and customs 40-8827

Dr Romig, subject of this biography, went to Alaska in 1896 and there he has spent the greater part of his years since then as a medical missionary, superintendent of schools, physician for southwestern Alaska, United States commissioner, mayor of Anchorage, railroad surgeon and chief of the railroad hospital staff.

"Legend and myth, native medical practices and customs generously fill the book's pages. Mrs. Anderson's method of presenting this wealth of authentic and dramatic material is not all that could be desired, but much of genuine interest is to be gathered in these chapters that run the gamut from Eskimo child-births to white blizzards and the hardships of the frozen North."

+ — Books p17 My 12 '40 210w

"[The author] presents this chronicle in a series of vignettes. She cannot handle conversation, and this deficiency is the principal weakness of an otherwise absorbing book."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 80w

N Y Times p12 My 5 '40 550w

ANDERSON, GEORGE KUMLER, and WALTON, EDA LOU, eds. This generation [prepared under the general direction of Lindsay Todd Damon]. 975p $4 Simon & Schuster; to schools and colleges $3 Scott

820.8 English literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 39-23789

"A selection of British and American literature from 1914 to the present with historical and critical essays." (Subtitle) General index. Index of first lines.

Booklist 36:341 My 1 '40

"The careful historical introduction shows a tendency to correlate literature with everything that went on in the world from the Marne to the current murder trial. The general reader is likely to leave this to the last. We are still so near the period that only a near-sighted squint could get a general outline quite clear. The comments of these editors, whose vision is normal, leave that general outline not much less hazy than they found it, but no more so. Their contribution to our literature and our time—it is not too much to call it unique—is their presentation to future commentators of a body of evidence gathered surprisingly soon after the event." M. L. Becker

Books p19 F 25 '40 550w

"A large, informative and well-printed anthology. . . Varied enough to indicate the multiplicity of the generation in question, sensible enough to include excerpts from Vincent Sheean as well as Galsworthy."

+ Time 35:88 Mr 11 '40 80w

ANDERSON, LARZ. Letters and journals of a diplomat; ed. by Isabel Anderson; with foreword by Charles Francis Adams. 672p il $5 Revell

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs 40-12412

Excerpts from letters and journals and other autobiographical materials portraying the life and career of Larz Anderson, former United States minister to Belgium, and ambassador to Japan during Taft's administration. "It presents a continuous pageant of brilliant functions: formal dinner parties in Boston and Washington, where the Andersons kept houses; the Cup Races at Newport and the Harvard-Yale Races at New London; Exeter and Harvard reunions; receptions and balls of the 'haute monde' in London, Paris, Rome, Brussels, and Tokyo. It describes travels that carried the Andersons into every quarter of the globe, including the United States." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"The book is a fascinating one, well written and holding the reader's attention from beginning to end, but apart from its interest it is of permanent value for at least two reasons, first as an antidote to stories of the 'Gone with the Wind' type in which the Yankees who fought the Civil War are held out as the scum of the earth, whereas the fathers of both Larz Anderson and his wife fought bravely on the Union side and yet were aristocrats to the core; and secondly as giving an intimate personal story of a manner of living fast disappearing under the stress of war, depression and taxes, which no one now alive may ever see return." Philip Nichols

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 950w

"The Larz Anderson who emerges from these pages is scarcely an impressive figure. . . One lays down the volume with a sense of disappointment and grave doubts as to whether history will remember Larz Anderson." R. W. Leopold

— + New Eng Q 13:731 D '40 500w

"Isabel Perkins Anderson with conjugal piety, has herself arranged the selections in readable order and skillfully bridged the gaps where documents were unavailable. The result is more than a memorial to her husband. It is a kaleidoscopic, almost encyclopedic, survey of the American 'upper crust' from 1888 to 1937. With unassuming naturalness it records all the minutiae of a way of life that was flawless in its conventional elegance, generous in its benefactions, extensive in its personal relationships, but somehow very remote from the actuality of the world." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 31 '40 600w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Eleven verse plays, 1929-1939. 11 v in 1 $3.75 Harcourt

812 (W) 40-27679

Contents: Elizabeth the Queen; Night Over Taos; Mary of Scotland; Valley Forge; Winterset; The Wingless Victory; High Tor; The Masque of Kings; The Feast of Ortolans; Second Overture; Key Largo.

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"In spite of some failures, theatrically speaking, this is an impressive body of work from a single author writing in a medium at variance with the accepted medium of his generation. . . All students of modern drama will want this collection." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p31 D 8 '40 250w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 S 23 '40 50w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
Theatre Arts 24:909 D '40 1000w

ANDERSON, NELS. Men on the move. 357p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

331.137 Migration of workers. Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Unemployment 41-451

A study of the problem of the migratory worker, analysis of the causes, and a survey of some attempts to solve or alleviate it. The author is director, Section on labor relations, Work projects administration, Washington, D.C. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:3 Ja '41

"In his introduction to the present book Mr. Anderson modestly says there is nothing new or original in his volume, that his materials have been drawn from other works. This does not in the least detract from the value of the book, which lies in its clearness and condensation; the author has read widely and selected well. Into a comparatively small compass he would seem to have put just about everything needed to give an understanding of the changes in the life of migratory labor during the last two decades." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p12 D 29 '40 750w

"These chapters should be read by those who think the Joads were an exception. The final chapter deals with the federal program of 'work and welfare for migrants.' The impression is that of poulticing a cancer."
Christian Century 57:1314 O 23 '40 80w

"There is nothing 'dry' about this volume, despite valuable statistical and historical data. It is the best book yet published to induce a true, and sympathetic, understanding of the position of our two million migrants." Tim O'Brien
+ Commonweal 33:130 N 22 '40 220w

Living Age 359:393 D '40 240w

ANDERSON, SHERWOOD. Home town. (Face of America) 147p il $2.50 Alliance bk.

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. City and town life (W) 40-35310

In picture and text this book tells the story of small-town America. "[The author] reduces America outside the big cities to a Middletown with four seasons, one service club, one church, one weekly paper, one girl in trouble, one cultural leader, one school, one railroad, one sheriff and one gasoline station." (Books) The photographs were taken by Farm Security photographers.

Atlantic D '40 120w

"Mellowed since the days of 'The Little Review,' Sherwood Anderson reveals himself in 'Home Town' as a cheerful Chekov, with an appealing faith in America's whistle stops. He has traveled much and been everywhere in our small towns and knows like Ed Howe of Potato Hill and Bill White of Emporia, that the essence of America is in Main Street. . . In the real sense, not the photographic misnomer, these pictures are documentary. They have no class angle approach. They do not make the camera a liar for a cause. Where there is suspicion and meanness in the small town they have told it. Where there is social injustice they depict it. Where there is beauty, peace and serenity, as in Marion Post's Vermont winter pictures, they have not hesitated to include them. Where there is laughter and good fellowship it is recorded." R. F. Crandell
+ Books p5 O 27 '40 700w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by Kenneth McDougall
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 260w

Reviewed by J. C. Cort
Commonweal 33:233 D 20 '40 300w

"This is not all of America. This is not the big parade. But the parade wouldn't mean much if it weren't for what we see here. It is sometimes somber, sometimes not lovely, but surely something is going on, something surviving, something being born." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p1 O 27 '40 1400w

New Yorker 16:87 N 2 '40 60w

"This unpretentious book is really excellent. Its text, by Sherwood Anderson, is a free and easy (but more penetrating than you would guess) account of life in an American town. . . If we wished to show a foreigner what an American small town was most generally like, we would certainly give him this book." H. S. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 11 '41 180w

Reviewed by F. L. Kellogg
Survey G 29:635 D '40 280w

Time 36:60 O 28 '40 420w

ANDERSON, WALTER WADSLEY. Kill 1, kill 2. 284p $2 Morrow 40-14182

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 S 22 '40 110w

"In spite of red-herrings there is not much doubt or surprise after the first 100 pages or so." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 60w

"The story has an ingenious plot, but its telling is more ambitious than expert." Kay Irvin
+ — N Y Times p19 S 15 '40 140w

"Rather loosely knit but effective story of multi-millionaire whose wealth roused demon of covetousness. Solution hinges on odd atmospheric fact. Average."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 28 '40 50w

ANDERSON, WILLIAM ROBERT. Music as a career. 271p $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

780.071 Music as a profession 40-11590

A book of English origin. "The aim is to give as much information as possible to those who wish to hear how many different openings for a career the profession of music and its allied business interests offer, and to advise those others who are already convinced that no other career than that of a musician will ever content them." (Pref) Partial contents: The musician's changing world; What branch to take up? Getting a start; Books and magazines that help; On the platform; The influence of broadcasting; Lecturing; Musical criticism; The musician in business; New tendencies and opportunities. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

"Mr. Anderson's advice is generally capped by a definite reference to a book, a society, whose address is given, an authenticated case, or a quotation from a recognized specialist. The advice itself is given in a very readable, if perhaps inevitably a somewhat avuncular, style, but it is all animated by a consistent appreciation of the high claims of art, the value of common sense and the dignity of the profession."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p79 F 10 '40 190w

ANDREWS, CHARLES FREER. The inner life. 123p $1 Harper [pa 1s Hodder]

B or 92 Spiritual life

"Thirty-five years ago, when he was thirty-four years of age Andrews went to India to become a teacher in St. Stephen's College.

ANDREWS, C. F.—Continued
This decision to go to India, the experiences which befell him there and the resultant inner life form the basis of the present volume. . . In India he became acquainted with Susil Kumar Rudra, principal of St. Stephen's College, Sadhu Sundar Singh, Rabindranath Tagore and Mahatma Gandhi, among others. These men deepened his interest in introspection and passivity. . . The result is the C. F. Andrews whose self-portrait is drawn in this book. Andrews, according to this self-portrait, spent his life in pursuit of one ideal, the achievement of Christlikeness in the inner life." Christian Century

"This man, like another Paul, was journeying all his days, to all quarters of the globe, to protect the weak and save the lost. But within lay the sources of his strength, and the answer to mankind's distress. We are fortunate in having this last testament of one who was a saintly mystic of the rarest order." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p10 Jl 28 '40 390w

"This is not a great book, but it is a revealing document." W. H. Bernhardt

+ — Christian Century 57:736 Je 5 '40 700w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 15 '40 750w

Churchman 154:35 Jl 1 '40 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p620 O 28 '39 550w

ANDREWS, ROY CHAPMAN. This amazing planet. 231p $2 Putnam

574 Natural history. Zoology (W) 40-34045

"A series of short articles about strange or little-known facts in the realm of nature. From time to time these have appeared in This Week under the title 'This Amazing Planet.'" (Pref) The author is director of the American Museum of Natural History.

Booklist 37:148 D 15 '40

"Recommended casual reading for all ages."
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:4 D 10 '40 120w

N Y Times p21 O 20 '40 440w

ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE DE. See De Angeli, M.

ANGELL, E. L., and WILCOX, GEORGE BARTON. In a democracy. 399p il $1.32; teachers' handbook gratis Steck

300 U.S.—Politics and government. Citizenship 40-34809

"In fourteen concise chapters this book treats such topics as the American way, population, communication, natural resources, education, Latin America, safety, spending, crime, social security, taxation and government. Some attention is paid to the historical background of national development. Although briefly presented, each topic is written clearly and lucidly from the viewpoint of the young pupil." Social Studies

"The narrative style, simple sentences, and careful paragraphing, coupled with the interesting chapter headings and 'by lines,' make it a readable book for those of the lower reading levels in grades seven to nine. The subject matter is so well organized and meaningful, however, that pupils who are rapid readers will be stimulated and interested. The chief criticism of the book is the use of almost one-fourth of its space for discussion of transportation and communication." H. T. Cox

+ — Social Educ 5:76 Ja '41 900w

Social Studies 31:332 N '40 160w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. America's dilemma: alone or allied? 226p $1.75 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Neutrality (W) 40-36034

"The author restates the American isolationist position and suggests that it is untenable in the face of Nazi expansion. By entering the war, he says, America can make peace in an exhausted Europe and become the senior partner in a British-American union. This last idea approximates Mr. Carr's view of postwar developments." New Yorker

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Books p5 D 15 '40 500w

"Mr. Angell has written a mature book on America's foreign policy in the present situation. With the restraint of experienced age he restates a creed often stated before and proved true by the course of events." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 151:610 D 14 '40 350w

New Yorker 16:123 D 7 '40 90w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. For what do we fight? 327p $2.50 Harper [6s Hamilton, H]

940.53 European war, 1939—Causes. Europe —Politics. International cooperation (W) 40-27256

The author of The Great Illusion here discusses the causes of the present war—what France and Britain are avowedly fighting for and against—and what should be the underlying principles of a new peace—collective security and international cooperation of some sort.

Reviewed by W. H. C. Laves
Am Pol Sci R 34:1022 O '40 550w

"Angell's thesis is more than weak. In fact, it is but another presentation of England's present case based on another variation of universality of the kind that Hitler gave us by informing us until recently that Germany was fighting not only for her own existence but to preserve the world from bolshevism." J. S. Roucek

— Ann Am Acad 209:208 My '40 700w

Booklist 36:303 Ap 1 '40

Bookmark p22 N '40

Reviewed by R. L. Buell
Books p19 Mr 31 '40 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p11 Ap 4 '40 150w

"Sir Norman always writes well and frankly, this latest study is often illuminating, essential to anyone who wishes to clarify his mind and prepare himself to help with the building; but he is at times too impatient to fully understand his opponents before he knocks them down." G. M. A. Grube

+ — Canadian Forum 20:58 My '40 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

Foreign Affairs 18:750 Jl '40 30w

"This new volume by the Nobel Prize winner (1933) in the field of peace will irritate many English men and women, who since the appearance of The Great Illusion, however, have had thirty years to become hardened to his unendearing quality of being right too much of the time. Yet pleasant or unpleasant reading, it crystallizes a question that is in the minds of all men who can see that the issue is not the 'destruction of Hitlerism,' as Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Halifax have said, but a more equitable distribution among all peoples of the tangible and intangible wealth of the world. . . Obviously compulsory reading, especially if some of the circumlocutory pronouncements of Messrs. Chamberlain, Halifax and Churchill have you on the ropes." Lamar Middleton

+ Living Age 358:191 Ap '40 1000w

New Repub 102:737 My 27 '40 70w

ANGELL (ăn'jĕl)

Reviewed by Tom Paine
New Statesman & Nation 19:17 Ja 6 '40 170w

"Sir Norman Angell's new book is, in effect, a summary of what he has been saying about war and the terms of peace for over two decades. At many points he directly quotes from books of his published as far back as 1918; and where he doesn't quote, he summarizes texts not entirely unfamiliar to his readers. Nevertheless, the impact of the book is impressive and it should be read by those who have attended to his words these many years, as well as by those who haven't, for the coming of a new war has sharpened his tone and given him confidence that without the application of his remedies the 'jig' is indeed up." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p1 Mr 3 '40 1200w

New Yorker 16:64 Mr 2 '40 30w

"Unfortunately, this latest product of Sir Norman Angell is rather disappointing. It might have made a good pamphlet, but little more. Much of it is a familiar story, already told too often by Eden, Churchill, Duff Cooper, as well as a host of journalists, publicists and minor writers. . . Despite this major fault, the book has positive merits." J. C. DeWilde
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 Mr 16 '40 550w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns
Spec 163:870 D 15 '39 360w

"Sir Norman Angell enters the war aims debate with a contribution of first-class importance. That he revives and refurbishes some old and familiar arguments makes no matter. Whatever he writes arrests attention. And on the grave issue of peace and war he has profound words to offer to a puzzled public looking for the light."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p710 D 9 '39 850w

Wis Lib Bul 36:97 My '40

ANGELO, VALENTI. Paradise valley; il. with lithographs by the author. 230p $2 Viking
(W) 40-32147

Pedro, a twelve-year-old Mexican boy, lived with his family in a railroad caboose in a little Nevada town. One summer he spent his vacation helping trap coyotes on his uncle's ranch, and adopted a baby coyote for a pet. The high point of the story is the lamb barbecue which was to celebrate a new plan of living.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

"The tone is quiet, happy and above all, contented. These people 'have a yearning for peace, and are willing to run away from almost anything to get it. They almost succeed in running away from the twentieth century; at least, it has not yet caught up with them.'' M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 D 29 '40 220w

Cath World 152:375 D '40 50w

"From this story of the Nevada desert comes a strong feeling of the wonder of open-air life in the great sweep and silence of the far West. And from these humble Mexicans in our own land American children may derive respect for another race. Always, too, in Valenti Angelo's books, the relation between young and old is a particularly friendly one." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:442 N '40 80w

"The story of a Mexican boy in southern California, gives a realistic picture of Mexican-Americans written with directness and simplicity and a great deal of charm." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 30w

"It is beautifully told. Its characters are alive and sympathetically drawn and will furnish the readers with many a chuckle. The book has charming illustrations and should be read by all boys and girls ten to twelve. Highly recommended." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 70w

"No one who has observed the American boy and girl of today can fail to note that they tend to adopt for their own reading many of the current books meant for their elders. When a 13-year-old asks for a story 'written in a strong way, like Grapes of Wrath' it is obvious that boys and girls can no longer be shielded from the knowledge that far too often the world is all awry. Thus a book like Valenti Angelo's beautifully written 'Paradise Valley,' which shows life and people truthfully, but without brutality or emphasis on sordid details, is heartily welcome." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 D 15 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:129 D 7 '40 100w

ANSHEN, RUTH NANDA, ed. Freedom: its meaning; by Benedetto Croce [and others]. 686p $4 Harcourt
323.44 Liberty 40-33228

A collection of essays written by such modern writers as Croce, Whitehead, Thomas Mann, Millikan, James Truslow Adams, Bertrand Russell, Brandeis, Dewey, Haldane and others. The essays are grouped under the heads: Freedom invades history; Freedom for the mind; Freedom in the body politic; Cultural patterns for freedom; The essence of freedom. Index.

"Perhaps the attraction and value of the volume are contained in the rich variety of points of view and definitions offered. It is impossible within the compass of a brief review to do justice to forty-one contributions, many of them brilliant, most of them substantial. I wish to single out one, not so much for its intrinsic value as for its lasting testimony. Croce is not only one of the greatest living philosophers, he is also a historian and a political scientist of great distinction. . . His words, the sum of much thought and much experience, are note-worthy throughout." Hans Kohn
+ Ann Am Acad 213:201 Ja '41 600w

"This huge book is a cornucopia that sometimes seems to turn into a kaleidoscope. But there is a pattern in its themes, and one that enormously concerns men who are or who wish to be free. Those of us who, as Professor Schneider says in closing, still enjoy any two liberties, should be thankful and careful. This book will help us to understand what we cherish, and to cherish it more effectively through understanding." Irwin Edman
+ Books p2 D 29 '40 1200w

Reviewed by S. B. Barnes
Christian Century 57:1377 N 6 '40 1200w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 154:19 N 15 '40 190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
Nation 151:661 D 28 '40 950w

"The structure of the book is admirable. First we have the historical approach—ten chapters. This is followed by an analysis of different types of freedom—for the mind, in the body politic, in cultural patterns. Then we have eleven chapters on 'The Essence of Freedom,' followed by Professor Schneider's heroic attempt to pull the whole thing together. And it may be said that for those who venture for the first time in these deep waters the Schneider Epilogue is the best introduction." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 19 '41 1300w

"Lots of hard thinking about the keystone of democracy, and what it means to us, in a symposium comprising forty-three generally admirable essays."
+ New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 90w

"If we are late in reporting on this book it is because we have been holding it for editorial discussion. It is a work of stature and, we hope, enduring importance. It is a convention of ideas, as its title indicates, on the meaning of freedom. While it suffers to some extent from a small degree of duplication and confliction—apparently inevitable in most joint efforts—it nevertheless manages to present, orderly and intelligently, in a single volume, a wide and stimulating range of viewpoints and evaluations by leading thinkers." N. C.

ANSHEN, R. N., ed.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 Ja 25 '41 900w

ANSON, LINDSAY. I don't like cats. 273p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins] 40-13622

Detective story.

"Mr. Anson's is the best example of the ditheringly amusing mystery imported in quite some time. If you like this rare and perilous genre, here it is. One hastens to add that Mr. Anson includes plenty of downright sobering events, too, and there's some sound sleuthing by Archie Wiston, an ex-Superintendent of Scotland Yard." Will Cuppy
+ — Books p8 Jl 14 '40 230w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 90w

"If the story appears a bit crazy in spots, that is only because so many of the people in it have one-track minds." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p18 Jl 14 '40 210w

"Easy to read, and frightening in spots."
New Yorker 16:68 Jl 13 '40 50w

"More of a study in psychoses than a mystery, but has its moments of excitement. Unusual."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 13 '40 30w
Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 40w

"The crucial clue is not offered to the reader until right at the end, and the solution breaks one of the best established rules of detective fiction. Otherwise this is a highly lucid piece of entertainment."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p233 My 11 '40 170w

ANTHONY, WILDER. Deep valley. 214p $2 Dorrance
40-8381

A tale of mystery and horror.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p15 Je 2 '40 170w

"Thrilling enough to satisfy the most hardened mystery addict."
Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 120w

ANTONY, ARDEN G. The seeds of time. 240p $2 Dorrance
40-14673

"A family chronicle of the plains—Nebraska and Dakota. . . Martha Ann Sutton mothered her younger brothers and sisters after their mother died; she worked for a while in a small-town hotel and there met the farmer she married. Despite drought that ruined crops and flood that drowned livestock, they managed to be happy and to contribute a sturdy son and daughter to the growth of the community." Books

"A friendly and down-to-earth narrative, reflecting the valor of simple folk so intent upon wresting a living from the soil and caring for their children that they have no time to be introspective or self-pitying." Lisle Bell
+ Books p11 Ag 4 '40 120w
Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 40w

APPEL, BENJAMIN. The people talk. 502p $3 Dutton

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions. Public opinion—U.S.
(W) 40-27538

In 1939 Mr Appel traveled by automobile from New York and New England westward across the northern tier of states, then south to Los Angeles and eastward across the southern states. Everywhere he went he asked questions of the people he met—farmers, workers, housewives, small business men and many others—and the talk he heard from these people composes the substance of his book.

Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40

"Confronted by such a trouble-streaked picture some may be tempted to ask whether it is distorted. Statistics, social analyses, and a swiftly increasing body of novels of the stature of 'The Grapes of Wrath' say no; optimists say yes. But whether or not one concedes that all the comments caught between the covers of this book are entirely representative of life in these states today, no one, I think, will deny that 'The People Talk' is American stuff, rich with authentic if bitter flavors, a document straight out of our time and place, quite simply from the people and by the people." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p5 Je 2 '40 1100w

"Mr. Appel writes well, and he conscientiously refrains from interpretation and preaching. But the limitations of his focus give his book a total effect of monotony." Lewis Gannett
+ — Boston Transcript p11 Je 4 '40 700w

" 'The People Talk' is the story of the underprivileged third of the nation told in the language of the people themselves; the story of a bewildered and often resentful people who just can't solve their problems. There can be no denial of its truth, but one does wonder why Mr. Appel found so few of the other two-thirds of the American people who have won some degree of success and happiness." Kenneth McDougall
Boston Transcript p1 Je 22 '40 550w

Reviewed by H. P. Bolman
Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 360w
Nation 151:158 Ag 24 '40 160w

"What Mr. Appel tries to do, centrally, is serve as a sounding-off board for the people, and when he gets to it, I think he does it, though one needs more time to judge to how much end. Maybe there should have been an interpreter along, but still one can't be sure the job hasn't been done most effectively in just the way it is." Murray Godwin
+ — New Repub 103:253 Ag 19 '40 550w

"Mr. Appel draws no conclusions. Such conclusions as there are must be sought for in the selection of material. No doubt the author could have covered an exactly similar route and brought back an idyllic picture of workaday America. The element of comparison, with other lives in other countries is lacking. But it does appear that Mr. Appel actually records what he has heard, and somehow, in the stories of defeat, hardship and disillusionment, there is a courage and a dry humor that make one proud of these not too lucky Americans." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p2 Je 2 '40 1450w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p14 Je 16 '40 950w

"A big, readable book."
+ New Yorker 16:79 Je 8 '40 90w

"There is no editorializing; the people speak for themselves. They are not paper characters shaped to expound a theme, but living people trying to understand and solve their problems. Here and there 'The People Talk' has some of the qualities of good poetry. The richness and spirit are there." Louis Adamic
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 Je 8 '40 550w

"This book is not frightening, for the people whom Mr. Appel pictures here are a loyal and hopeful people, with a sense of humor, a willingness to be patient for a while, and a readiness to recognize their advantages as well as disadvantages. 'The People Talk' is personal in tone and clear in text; it has benefited materially from the willingness of the author to join in the labors of those whom he has interviewed in order that he might not only win their confidence more fully, but might share something of their experience."

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 1050w

Time 36:71 Jl 8 '40 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

APPLIED electricity. 17th ed rev 10v il $29.80 c1939 Am. tech. soc.

621.3 Electric engineering. Electricity 39-32846

"A general reference work on electrical principles, wiring, storage batteries, meters, switchboards, electromagnets and coils, direct- and alternating-current machinery, starters, controllers, armature winding, household appliances, electric refrigeration, industrial electronics, radio, public address systems, television, transformers, transmission systems, distribution, hydroelectric machinery, Diesel electric plants, welding. Over one thousand illustrations. . . An earlier edition of Applied Electricity was reviewed in the January 1934 issue of the Subscription Books Bulletin [Book Review Digest, 1934]." Subscription Bks Bul

"The set would be useful as circulating material in libraries which have home and trade school students among their readers if it were not for the fact that other, and in many cases better, material is available for this purpose. Most of the information has appeared in previous editions and few libraries will want to duplicate material already on their shelves. The set will be of value to individuals who desire a ready-made course on theoretical and practical electricity but for libraries which can obtain more recent and better information in other recent books, this edition is not recommended."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 11:48 O '40 950w

ARCHBOLD, RICHARD, and RAND, AUSTIN LOOMER. New Guinea expedition; Fly river area, 1936-1937. 206p il maps $3.50 McBride

919.5 Fly river. Papua, Territory of 40-7800

Description of the second American Museum of natural history—Archbold expedition. The explorers penetrated to the headwaters of the Fly river in central New Guinea. When their amphibian plane left at the mouth of the Fly river was wrecked, the exploring party was forced to return to their base camp and confine their explorations to territory reached by supply boats. Index.

"The book is unpretentiously and agreeably written and illustrated with many photographs."

+ Books p20 Ap 28 '40 180w

"The simple recital of the journey gives a clear picture of the difficulties of travel, the nature of the country with its swamps and savannas in the lowlands, its vast tropical forest, and somewhat of its native animals. The many illustrations run perhaps too much to groups of the curiously gnome-faced natives and seem over-inked as if accentuating their blackness but at least give some idea of their appearance and curiosity." G. M. Allen

+ — Boston Transcript p13 Mr 4 '40 450w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 28 '40 500w

New Repub 102:417 Mr 25 '40 50w

"The book's writing, most of which was done by Mr. Rand, is clear and unadorned, with the interesting quality of straightaway record. Some of the photographs are interesting, too; but others are too much retouched to be lifelike. The book is well supplied with sketch maps."

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 3 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:63 Mr 2 '40 30w

"As a record of exploration in a formerly unknown field, this narrative is unique, and numerous illustrations add greatly to the interest of the book. While the notes have not been digested to make popular fare for the lay reader, the book holds the lure for armchair travelers that all authentic tales of all primitive lands possess, and it is well to have such a record of New Guinea before the search for oil and gold changes the way of life there."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 850w

ARLISS, GEORGE. My ten years in the studios [Eng title: George Arliss, by himself]. 349p il $3.50 Little [15s Murray, J]

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Moving pictures (W) 40-27471

The greater part of this second volume of reminiscences by a notable English actor deals with his experiences in the moving picture world both in England and in Hollywood. The tale is told with a good deal of quiet humor, amusing anecdote, personal asides, but also with a certain degree of seriousness about the business of being a motion picture star.

"Mr. Arliss's book is thin, its style is plantigrade, and its humor is the desolating kind of thing that Mark Twain used to call 'manufactured humor.' Nevertheless Mr. Arliss's gifts are so excellent and satisfying when exercised in their proper sphere that millions of people are devoted to him and are conscious—happily conscious—of being greatly in his debt; and not one of them will look askance at his indifferent success when he appears before them in the unfamiliar character of an author."

+ — Atlantic Jl '40 110w

Booklist 36:381 Je 1 '40

Bookmark 2:9 Ja '41

"The volume is on the rambling side, in both style and structure, but its very unpretentiousness makes it extremely instructive as well as engaging. . . Essentially, it is the sincere effort of a fine actor to understand a new medium. As such it makes fascinating reading." Howard Barnes

+ Books p5 My 26 '40 800w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose

Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 270w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 8 '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"Anyone who expects revelations about the mysteries of Hollywood will be disappointed. Most of what Mr. Arliss has to say deals with routine incidental to the production of pictures or to his own personal life, coupled with what seem like sound observations upon stage and screen. But he writes with a certain vigor which sometimes is more than that." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 32:84 My 17 '40 380w

Reviewed by J. S. Cleavinger

Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 90w

"Mr. Arliss compares, instructively, the kinds of acting needed by the stage, the silent film, and the talkie. He tells a good story . . . and he can write. His account of his solicitor's first reception of a film contract is a robust piece of Dickensian reporting that well deserves its long chapter to itself." C. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 10 '40 350w

Reviewed by Christopher St John

New Statesman & Nation 20:94 Jl 27 '40 200w

"George Arliss has enjoyed his ten years 'in pictures,' which no doubt has something to do with the enjoyment which this second section of his memoirs hands down to his readers. But the chief cause of this book's rich delight lies, of course, in the charm of the author's own mind—his keen and urbane wit, his humor that is both original and allusive, his shrewd thought and suave selective discursiveness." K. W.

+ N Y Times p19 My 19 '40 800w

New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 30w

ARLISS, GEORGE—Continued
Reviewed by Charles Surface
Spec 164:816 Je 14 '40 180w

Theatre Arts 24:764 O '40 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Je 8 '40 360w

ARMITAGE, ANGUS. Copernicus, the founder of modern astronomy. (History of science lib) 183p il $3 Norton [10s Allen, G.]

B or 92 Copernicus, Nicolaus. Astronomy—History [39-9166]

"Against a background of ancient and mediaeval astronomy, together with a biography of Copernicus, the author—who is associated with the Department of History and Philosophy in University College, London—analyzes Copernicus's celebrated work De Revolutionibus in such a way as to interest both the scientist and the layman." (N Y New Tech Bks) Select bibliography. Index.

"The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the preliminary chapter on pre-Copernican systems, which provides a background for the life and work of the great astronomer. Mr. Armitage is to be congratulated on having accomplished a fine piece of work and on having made a valuable addition to the library of scientific biography." H. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 25 '38 250w

Reviewed by H. C. Plummer
Nature 143:577 Ap 8 '39 600w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:51 O '38

"This is a study of obvious interest for astronomers and for those concerned with the development of scientific thought."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p791 D 10 '38 100w

ARMITAGE, MERLE. Fit for a king. See Fit for a king

ARMITAGE, MERLE. U.S. navy; foreword by Leland P. Lovette. 283p il $5 Longmans; Ritchie, W.

359 U.S.—Navy (W) 40-27655

Facts about the organization and composition of the United States navy: personnel; material; guns; engines; submarines; and aircraft; as well as naval policies and administration. No index.

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40

"The book makes interesting reading and will be useful for reference. The Navy Department collaborated in its preparation." J. P. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 24 '40 50w

"This is in many ways an interesting, and in some ways a most valuable, book, but its high price, discursive nature and strange make-up handicap many of its good qualities and make it almost useless (it is without an index) as a popular handbook or an important naval reference work. Nevertheless, the author deserves gratitude for making available some interesting facts that are not easily found elsewhere." H. W. Baldwin
— + N Y Times p4 N 3 '40 550w

New Yorker 16:82 S 21 '40 50w

ARMOUR, RICHARD WILLARD, and HOWES, RAYMOND FLOYD, eds. Coleridge the talker. 480p $4 Cornell univ. press [24s Oxford]

B or 92 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 40-4957

"Coleridge in full disarray as reported by the famous persons who trooped to hear him. The editors think that talk, not writing, was his genius." New Yorker

"It is a little hard to see quite where this book comes in. Its purpose is to bolster the tradition that Coleridge was a great talker. . . The notes help somewhat, and in one way and another one gets a fairly clear idea of what sort of being Coleridge was, but no clearer than the idea one gets from sources already long available."
Atlantic Ap '40 130w

"The editors of 'Coleridge the Talker' are to be congratulated upon a valuable and entertaining addendum to Coleridgean research. . . Their labors cannot do for Coleridge what Boswell did for Johnson; but at least every effort has been made to present, as his contemporaries saw and heard him, one whom Lamb once fittingly called 'an archangel, a little damaged.' " E. L. Griggs
+ Boston Transcript p13 Ja 26 '40 550w

"This book is no juiceless research project but a vital piece of scholarship with the human interest of a fine biography." J. J. R.
+ Cath World 151:118 Ap '40 800w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 23 '40 700w

"A fascinating book."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 27 '40 30w

"This is an admirable volume, combining extensive research and luminous editorial method with good writing and firm critical judgment. So well have the authors managed to sink the idiosyncrasies of their style, that it is hard to believe, it began as two independent investigations." F. A. Pottle
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 11 '40 490w

Reviewed by Herbert Read
Spec 164:840 Je 21 '40 950w

Reviewed by E. L. Griggs
Yale R n s 29:837 summer '40 170w

ARMSTRONG, MRS BARBARA (NACHTRIEB). The health insurance doctor. 265p $3 Princeton univ. press [14s Oxford]

331.25442 Insurance, Health. Physicians 39-27959

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by C. A. Kulp
Am Econ R 30:652 S '40 310w

Reviewed by I. V. Hiscock
Am J Pub Health 30:295 Mr '40 230w

Reviewed by Joseph Hirsh
Am Soc R 5:148 F '40 180w

"The author is known as one of the ablest and best-informed Americans who have written on social insurance, on account of her excellent book Insuring the Essentials, published in 1932 [Book Review Digest, 1933]. The new book is an outstanding study. . . It will without doubt elicit the admiration of the readers, even of experts who are familiar with the subject."
+ Ann Am Acad 208:233 Mr '40 440w

"An interestingly written and comprehensive study."
+ Current Hist 51:8 Mr '40 20w

Management R 29:195 My '40 90w

New Repub 102:649 My 13 '40 50w

"Mrs. Armstrong's book will give strong support to those who are attempting to give American students of the subject a clear and dispassionate picture of European experiences with health insurance. It is instructive too in giving the reader a developmental point of view. . . For all its clarity, Mrs. Armstrong's book has disadvantages for the general reader. These health insurance schemes are so complex that the author's passion for detail may prove confusing to the beginner." D. W. Orr, M.D.
+ — Survey G 29:196 Mr '40 480w

ARMSTRONG, HAMILTON FISH. Chronology of failure; the last days of the French republic. 202p maps $1.50 Macmillan

940.54 European war, 1939—France. France—Politics and government 40-33738

In this book the editor of Foreign Affairs has attempted "to piece together a day-by-day account of the 'thirty days' war' which followed the German attack on the Low Countries on May 10, and of the chief political events during that time and in the ensuing period of the French collapse. Related events in other countries, including the United States, are also indicated. . . The story is based partly on press accounts, partly on conversations and observations during the short time that [the author] was in France just before the fall of Paris, and partly on information supplied from various private sources." (Foreword) Index of persons.

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Swing
Books p5 N 24 '40 1100w

Christian Century 57:1555 D 11 '40 70w

"A sober and useful companion piece to such eyewitness narratives of the French defeat as those of André Maurois and René de Chambrun. . . Perhaps for lack of space the author has omitted mention of several factors which, I think, played an important part in the French defeat. One of these was the stationary birth rate, which placed France at an ever-increasing disadvantage as regards both military reserves and labor power. Another was the unfavorable diplomatic position, by comparison with that of 1914, in which France declared war. In 1914 Russia was an ally and Italy was a benevolent neutral." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 N 16 '40 550w

Reviewed by Pertinax
Living Age 359:385 D '40 1000w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery
Nation 151:510 N 23 '40 650w

Reviewed by P. J. Philip
N Y Times p9 N 10 '40 370w

"I have checked, with what I knew myself of the painful ordeal of France, Mr. Armstrong's story. I find practically no errors, with the exception of one: he says Arras was taken by the Germans on May 21st, and then retaken by the British. This was announced in the papers, but never took place in reality. . . All this is said very quietly and briefly, but there is more eloquence and power in Mr. Armstrong's wise restraint than in the most violent and unbalanced indictments." André Maurois

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 N 16 '40 750w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 O 26 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Survey G 29:624 D '40 240w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy
Yale R n s 30:403 winter '41 240w

ARMSTRONG, MARGARET NEILSON. Trelawny; a man's life. 379p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Trelawny, Edward John
(W) 40-32675

Biography of the nineteenth-century Cornish adventurer, friend of Byron and Shelley. During his long life—he died in 1881 at the age of eighty-nine—he sailed the Indian ocean under the French flag, captured a private town, married the daughter of an Arab sheik, officiated at the burning of Shelley's body, fought in Greece with Byron, visited America, where he purchased a slave in order to set him free, attempted to swim the Niagara river, and finally retired to a peaceful old age in England. Index.

Atlantic O '40 220w

Booklist 37:88 N 1 '40

"Margaret Armstrong has told his life as fact, not fiction. She bases her narrative on his published writings and on his letters, and she makes use of the mass of information which scholarship has gathered about him and his poet-friends. By putting all the pieces together in consecutive order, she has rendered a service to the general reader and even to specialists. . . Those who already know something of Trelawny will value the skill and integrity of this book. Those who are not yet acquainted with his fabulous life, have something in store for them in the reading of it." John Erskine

+ Books p3 O 6 '40 1000w

"It is a gorgeous but hardly a civilized story. Miss Armstrong tells it with color and with a feminine intelligence and appreciation not always quite in key with her subject." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 O 1 '40 800w

Reviewed by G. B. Gulick
Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 700w

"If not absolutely first-rate—for there are occasional lapses into faulty understanding, or vulgarism, or somewhat bad writing—it is almost first-rate, and is certainly far superior to most biographies. Only when one has closed the book and thinks about it quietly does it begin to dawn on one that Miss Armstrong has, after all, not shown us Trelawny as clearly as she might." T. M.

+ — Cath World 152:368 D '40 390w

Christian Century 58:191 F 5 '41 320w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 9 '40 550w

"Trelawny's life is the very stuff of romance, and Miss Armstrong has written a biography that reads like a novel. . . She has contributed an outstanding biography to the literature of the English Romantic Poets." H. P. Tunmore

+ Commonweal 32:532 O 18 '40 490w

"Miss Armstrong writes with excellent historical perspective. Her backdrops for the scenery of the period enhance the figures but never crowd them out. Trelawny, she shows, had his modern counterpart in Lawrence of Arabia." E. V. A.

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:30 N 7 '40 500w

"Miss Armstrong is an artist, a portraitist who took up writing as a secondary interest. Her ability to recreate picturesque figures of the romantic revival period testifies to the painter's eye for form and color. Her stage settings for her amazing characters are lit up by glowing descriptive passages, and the humanizing of her hero and his fairy tale adventures raise this book far above run-of-the-mill biographies." Eleanor Van Alen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:3 F 13 '41 180w

"The book can not be considered a well-balanced account of the man since the more prosaic years and the incidents of everyday life receive scant treatment. Eminently readable, the book will appeal especially to men." H. A. Carpenter

+ — Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 150w

"Miss Armstrong's portrait is the first wholly sympathetic study of this enigmatic corsair who in literary history hovers around the remains of both Shelley and Byron. For the readers of 'Fanny Kemble' it is needless to mention the talent which Miss Armstrong brings to a perhaps formidable task. And the opening sections of her biography are really splendid. . . To these scenes Miss Armstrong carries a fine fusion of scholarship and dramatic creation. . . Saying this, we must admit also that in its final impact Miss Armstrong's new work is disappointing. Whereas a Fanny Kemble in her maturity was more indignant and perceptive than ever, Trelawny dwindles." Maxwell Geismar

+ — Nation 151:307 O 5 '40 480w

"Miss Armstrong's romantic biography is reliable in its facts and vivid in dramatic detail, but it shares some of the deficiencies of the romantic approach. The East Indian scenes are lush with exotic brushwork: green valleys, iridescent water, coral sands, tropical birds, odors of musk and jasmine, scarlet silken cushions. In later sections, Trelawny is sometimes abandoned for pages of digression on the Shelleys, Jane and Edward Williams, Byron, Clare Clairmont, and the wily Mavrocordato. The more than half a century by which Trelawny survived Byron's death receives such hasty summary as to suggest that Miss Armstrong grew bored at that point and wanted to shuffle off the rest as rapidly as possible. But for all these weaknesses the book gives a glowing portrait of the fervent younger Trelawny." Edgar Johnson

ARMSTRONG, M. N.—Continued

+ — New Repub 103:876 D 23 '40 800w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar
N Y Times p3 O 13 '40 1000w

"Miss Armstrong recounts his extraordinary career with care and fidelity, although her prose suffers somewhat in comparison with Trelawny's."

New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 80w

"As is proper, Miss Armstrong takes her hero at his own valuation, and his story loses nothing in her retelling. Unluckily, she has felt it necessary to take sides with Trelawny against Byron, and her portrait of the greater man is a little absurd and quite unfair. It is a little absurd to contrast Byron's 'dilatoriness' and 'hesitation' in Greece unfavorably with Trelawny's eagerness to be up and fighting." Richard Aldington

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:5 O 5 '40 1250w

"Miss Armstrong has a painter's eye for form and color, and the work abounds with effective description. Her style is clear, nervous and vivid. Trelawny himself would have scoffed at the idea of a woman's undertaking to paint his portrait, but it seems unlikely that any writer of either sex will be able to improve upon this perspicacious presentation of one who was the quintessence of masculinity." R. J. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 6 '40 1150w

Time 36:98 O 21 '40 700w

"Miss Armstrong was compelled, in the main, to take Trelawny's point of view, and her biography profits because she does so. Yet one must say that she carries her partisanship too far, and allows her judgment to be swayed by Trelawny's prejudices in cases where his judgment might have been verified or discounted by available evidence. Trelawny had a prejudice against Byron which made him unjust to the poet, and Miss Armstrong adopts these prejudices as her own. . . In her treatment of Byron and Shelley, it is not so much that Miss Armstrong misuses her evidence as that she does not seem to have weighed all the evidence we have. It is a pity that these flaws of partisanship should mar so pleasant and readable a book. It is a good story, but it is not the whole story." W. C. DeVane

+ — Yale R n s 30:408 winter '41 800w

ARNOLD, ADELAIDE WILSON. A son of the first people; il. by Loren Barton. 248p $2 Macmillan

40-32629

An eight-year-old Indian boy, sent to a government school to learn the white man's ways, returns to his people with a very valuable asset—a love for drawing.

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

"The story moves in a leisurely manner with no great plot or excitement to mar the quiet of a sheepherder's life. Boys of eleven and twelve years who like a thoughtful story will choose this. It is not a blood-thirsty Indian tale. I like this author's capability of understanding both the red and the white man." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 150w

"Rather inconclusive." F. G. Wells
Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 110w

ARNOLD, EDWARD. Lorenzo goes to Hollywood [his] autobiography; in collaboration with Frances Fisher Dubuc. 283p il $3 Liveright

B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-4124

Autobiography of the stage and screen actor known as Edward Arnold. Among other incidents of his life on the stage the author describes his association with two other obscure young actors: Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable.

Books p13 F 18 '40 140w

Reviewed by Richard Francis
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 210w

ARNOLD, FRANK ATKINSON. Do you want to get into radio? introd. by Levering Tyson. 140p $1.50 Stokes

791.4 Radio broadcasting. Occupations (W) 40-27307

Vocational guidebook for young people who want to enter radio work. Partial contents: What is radio broadcasting? Organization set-up; Building programs; Selling time; Selecting talent; Radio announcing; Opportunities for women; The field of television; Radio of tomorrow. Contains a list of colleges in the United States offering radio courses; a list of important broadcasting stations; a condensed bibliography of radio and television.

Booklist 36:327 Ap 15 '40

"The book has some excellent practical advice for young careerists."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

"A more superficial treatment of its subject than is found in other titles in Choosing Your Career series." Dorotha Dawson

Library J 65:355 Ap 15 '40 90w

ARNOLD, JOSEPH IRVIN. Challenges to American youth. 696p il $1.80 Row

300 Social sciences. U.S.—Social conditions 40-14431

A textbook for senior high school courses in the economic and social problems, of the past, present and future, in America. The author is head of the department of sociology and economics, State Teachers College, Bridgewater, Massachusetts. Index.

"The discussion of the various topics is clear and able. . . It might logically be expected that, in a book organized on the basis of problems or challenges, the problems or challenges would be stated as questions or as significant propositions. The present author, like many another, has failed to develop the materials in this way, with the result that the book, although it presents an interesting method of organization, does not carry out what is stated specifically as its central purpose. The teacher who follows the author's lead and stresses the challenge approach must go beyond the material presented here and formulate the challenges himself. The general format of the book is excellent." C. O. Houle

+ — School R 49:75 Ja '41 600w

Reviewed by William Van Til
Social Educ 4:593 D '40 550w

ARNOLD, OREN, and HALE, JOHN PRENTISS. Hot irons; heraldry of the range. 242p il $2.50 Macmillan

636.20812 Cattle brands 40-27472

Explanation of the branding of cattle on the Western plains, with illustrations of some famous brands and their histories. The authors are a collector of branding irons and a writer of Western stories.

Booklist 36:377 Je 1 '40

"Arnold and Hale don't throw dust. Their meaning is never obscure. A neat job—chatty, friendly and absolutely authentic both in content and feeling." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 My 12 '40 1300w

Christian Century 57:609 My 8 '40 230w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 151:75 Jl 27 '40 150w

New Repub 102:618 My 6 '40 40w

"If you are looking for lively Americana you will find this a grand book."

+ N Y Times p3 My 19 '40 400w

" 'Hot Irons' is not only authoritative but it is highly entertaining throughout. Its story of the more romantic aspects of the cattle industry is an integral part of the history of the American Southwest. It deserves a place on the reference shelf of every student and lover of the Southwest and Americana." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 1200w

ARNOLD, THURMAN WESLEY. The bottlenecks of business. 335p il $2.50 Reynal

338.8 Monopolies. Trusts, Industrial. Sherman antitrust law, 1890 (W) 40-27632

An indictment of the evasions of the Sherman anti-trust act which have recently come before the author's Anti-trust division of the Department of Justice. It is written from the consumer's viewpoint. It is the assistant attorney general's thesis that the Sherman act is the best instrument with which to counteract "the private seizure of industrial power." Index.

Booklist 37:29 O 1 '40

"This is an important book. Every business man should read it with prayer, meditation and bicarbonate of soda. If he really wants free enterprise to survive in these United States, here is the way, and I expect the only way, to do it." Stuart Chase

+ Books p1 S 8 '40 2750w

"Those who read Thurman Arnold's previous diverting books may be disappointed that Mr. Arnold has become so serious-minded; there is only one limerick in all 'The Bottlenecks of Business,' and hardly a dozen of the quips which, in Mr. Arnold's professorial days, made the Yale Law School famous. The argument doesn't suffer." Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 S 6 '40 750w

"Most laymen—engineers included—find it difficult to fathom the legal mind. Usually it is so effectively hidden behind complicated and confusing verbiage that it's difficult to find what it's all about. But here's a lawyer that writes differently. 'Bottlenecks' is as clear and understandable as so much fairly intelligent conversation. And, like so much conversation, it has its faults as well as its virtues. There are many inaccuracies—some of inexcusably careless origin and others perhaps deliberately indefinite. There are unsupported generalities that the engineer is likely to question and sometimes resent, especially when used by the author as arguments for some of his pet theories of government and industry." S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ — Chem & Met Eng 47:882 D '40 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

Reviewed by M. I. Hart

Commonweal 32:451 S 20 '40 550w

J Home Econ 33:42 Ja '41 220w

"The serious reader will study the book with great interest and will glean much information of considerable value toward answering his own questions. From there he must proceed by discussion with other consumers. The business man will find directing way-marks toward the goal of better economic conditions largely through co-operation between producer, distributor, and consumer." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 440w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone

Nation 151:220 S 14 '40 950w

"Arnold as traditionalist may seem a new Arnold to the many readers of his two earlier books, 'The Symbols of Government' and 'The Folklore of Capitalism.' . . In 'The Bottlenecks of Business' you will not find the witty, suggestive and irresponsible play of thought which had by turns shocked and delighted his readers. The present Arnold is first and foremost a hard-working government official—one of the best of the group of legal and economic technicians in Washington who are making administrative history. His new book is clear, direct and forceful, with an earthy tang to it." Max Lerner

+ — New Repub 103:389 S 16 '40 2350w

"A stimulating and revealing analysis is this Arnold book. It tells a lot. It provokes a lot. And the wonder never ends that, under the New Deal, policy-makers like Thurman Arnold can, almost for the first time since the Civil War, write clear, direct and forceful English prose." Francis Brown

+ N Y Times p3 S 15 '40 1200w

New Yorker 16:71 S 7 '40 100w

"The writer of this volume is hardly the same man whose laughter once rocked the boat. The wit and charm and gay exploration of 'The Folklore of Capitalism' gives way to the earnestness of social reform, and only the hardheaded honesty and humane sentiment of the earlier personality remain in the new. . . Mr. Arnold's defense of his use of the Sherman Act against labor unions is not as complete as might be wished. Perhaps his real defense is the great amount of dirty linen coming into his office which he does not wish to wash in public. . . Yet he is undoubtedly sincere in asserting that his main concern is that public reaction against abuses in the labor movement shall not hurt the labor movement itself. . . There are plenty of economists even in the field of 'imperfect competition' who would have saved Mr. Arnold from some of his economic and social half-truths. Mr. Arnold's ever-present honesty and good nature will perhaps permit the suggestion that this is no time for pouring new wine down old bottlenecks." A. M. Bingham

— + Sat R of Lit 22:5 S 7 '40 1000w

"Some chapters of Mr Arnold's book would be more valuable if they were more informative, for his generalizations are sometimes overdrawn (as, in one place, he has the grace to admit). The book, however, has interest as a combination of data and the personal opinions of the man now chiefly intrusted with enforcement of the antitrust laws."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 900w

Reviewed by K. N. Llewellyn

Survey G 29:623 D '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:166 D '40

ARTHUR, PAUL. Lecture demonstrations in general chemistry. 455p $4 (26s) McGraw

540.72 Chemistry—Experiments. Chemistry—Study and teaching 40-1826

"Aims to be a 'complete laboratory manual for the lecture demonstrator.' It includes instructions for more than one thousand experiments, arranged under one hundred seventy-five topical headings. Complete instructions are given as to quantities of reagents, size and type of apparatus and methods of handling the experiments in class in order to make it easily visible to large groups of students." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The inclusion of so much modern material justifies the recommendation of the purchase of this volume by either the experienced demonstrator or the untutored novice." H. S. Lukens

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:1632 Je '40 220w

"Detailed instructions for performing more than one thousand demonstration experiments will probably make this volume a welcome and valuable addition to the chemistry teacher's equipment. While the book is not intended for use with any single textbook, it has been designed so that users of any standard text can easily find desired information. Directions for experiments are clear, each is accompanied by a brief statement of principles involved and original literature references are given."

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:136 F '40 90w

"The author claims six major features for his book: wide scope, references to literature, accessibility, the selection of easily visible experiments which may be completed in a lecture period, suggestions as to the principles

ARTHUR, PAUL—Continued
illustrated by each experiment, and adaptability to standard textbooks. These claims are justified, and everyone who has to perform lecture experiments in chemistry will find the book useful and helpful."

+ Nature 146:666 N 23 '40 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

ASBURY, HERBERT. Gem of the prairie. 396p il maps $3.50 Knopf

917.731 Chicago—Moral conditions. Crime and criminals—Chicago 40-34174

An informal history of Chicago's underworld from about 1830 to 1930, by the author of The Barbary Coast and The French Quarter (Book Review Digest, 1933, 1936) and similar in matter and manner to those records of San Francisco and New Orleans. Bibliography. Index.

" 'Gem of the Prairie' is a gaudy, bawdy, uproarious, sad shocking job. . . It's a perfect book for a present to a worldly friend." Joel Sayre

Books p21 N 17 '40 900w

"In the year 1940 a writer of Asbury's standing ought to be doing one of two things. He ought to be clarifying our confusion or diverting us from it. This book does neither. . . Even if you care for this sort of thing, even if you enjoyed the story of the Everleigh sisters or Al Capone the first time you heard it, you will find that four hundred unrelieved pages of it gets you down." M. S. Mayer

— Nation 151:398 O 26 '40 700w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p18 Ja 12 '41 1100w

New Yorker 16:104 O 12 '40 60w

Time 36:124 O 14 '40 650w

ASHBROOK, HARRIETTE. Murder comes back. 269p $2 Coward-McCann

40-32551

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p18 N 3 '40 200w

"Spike Tracy, playboy detective and brother of the District Attorney, is with us again after a too long absence. He is still as unconventional as ever and as amusing." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 200w

"Commonplace."

Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 150w

ASHTON, HELEN. See Jordan, H. R.

ASWELL, JAMES R., ed. See Writers' program, Tennessee. God bless the devil!

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). The house of Lee. 302p $2.50 Appleton-Century

40-30878

Present-day San Francisco is the scene of this story of the effect of the depression upon the women of the well-bred Lee family. Three generations are represented in that household: grandmother Edington, still beautiful at sixty; her daughter Lucy Lee; and Lucy's very modern daughter of twenty-two. The efforts of these three to live on in their large imposing ancestral home on a much reduced income makes the story.

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

" 'The House of Lee' sums up as good entertainment and common sense, if not profound, comment upon the current scene, from what Mrs. Atherton's leftist intellectuals would call the Tory point of view. It shows her still master of her old cunning with story materials. And it demonstrates again her knack at choosing a theme which is in the public mind. Indeed, 'The House of Lee' may very well become a best-seller purely on the strength of its apt picture of the new-poor." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p10 S 22 '40 750w

"Mrs. Atherton puts all [the story] into the mouths of her charming characters, amusing herself and her readers by reversing the old method of repairing the family fortunes. This novel also presents a side of our modern catastrophe which has been overlooked or ignored, and one which points the way to a still greater calamity which no one, up to now, has seen fit to elucidate for us." R. G. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 320w

"A light and entertaining novel. . . Recommended for library purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 60w

"Written in its author's customary style, with many vivid pen-pictures of San Francisco and not a few amusing comments, 'The House of Lee' is an entertaining novel." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p24 S 22 '40 700w

"Miss Atherton's thirty-third novel is as brisk, stubborn, and high-spirited as her first must have been. Certainly the most remarkable feature of 'The House of Lee' is the verve of its writer. The story itself, regarded closely, is built on nothing else." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 22:19 O 5 '40 280w

Time 36:92 S 16 '40 490w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

ATKINS, GAIUS GLENN, ed. Master sermons of the nineteenth century. 243p $2 Willett

252 Sermons (W) 40-10855

Contents: The expulsive power of a new affection, by Thomas Chalmers; Spiritual freedom, by W. E. Channing; The invisible world, by J. H. Newman; The reversal of human judgment, by J. B. Mozley; The gentleness of God, by H. W. Beecher; The three crosses on Calvary, by F. W. Robertson; The witness of God with our spirit, by James Martineau; The power of an endless life, by Horace Bushnell; The victory of faith, by Matthew Simpson; Corporate immortality, by John Caird; The pillar in God's temple, by Phillips Brooks; Everybody's sermon, by C. H. Spurgeon; Good news, by D. L. Moody.

"Here a master preacher—one of the most beautiful minds of the modern church—makes an anthology of great sermons of the last century. Each sermon is prefaced by a brief sketch of the preacher, written with insight and little illuminating touches. Some of the sermons are slightly edited, repetitions deleted, and each set before us in the frame of its time the better to show how the preacher spoke to his age and for it. The result is a symphony of great preaching." J. F. Newton

+ Christian Century 57:1377 N 6 '40 450w

"A notable contribution both to literature and religion." S. L. Riddle

+ Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 230w

ATKINSON, AGNES AKIN (MRS S. R. ATKINSON). Crooktail, a young raccoon; pictures of animals taken in their natural habitat by Spencer R. Atkinson. 104p $1.50 Harper

Raccoons—Juvenile literature 40-32214

A little wounded raccoon which had been nearly stung to death by bees was rescued by Dr Atkinson and his wife and nursed back to health. After it had returned to its wild life the raccoon evidently remembered its human friends, and appeared one night at the Atkinsons' feeding rock bringing her babies. The book is for readers from nine to twelve.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

ASBURY (ăz'bĕr-ĭ)

"The amazing photographic device installed by the Atkinsons has produced the superb pictures illustrating the book. For children nine to twelve." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 130w

"Good nature." Z. C. Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 20w

ATKINSON, JUSTIN BROOKS. Cleo for short [il. by Fritz Kredel]. 31p $1 Howell, Soskin

636.78 Dogs—Legends and stories 40-35409

Cleo was a German shepherd dog, who for a time graced the author's home, and who, when she died, left the family lonesome. This is a short sketch of Cleo's charming characteristics.

"You wish, putting the book down, that it was much longer. But brevity is its only fault. Mr. Atkinson's tone and his comments are precisely right." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p3 D 15 '40 440w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 180w

ATLEE, PHILIP. The inheritors. 305p $2.50 Dial press

40-34593

"The story of a worthless group of young people in Fort Worth, Tex., in the Nineteen Thirties, who have been born and brought up to money without responsibility or purpose or even security. . . George Bellamy Jimble 3d tells the story, which begins as he has wrecked his automobile in the drunken pursuit of a girl." Books

"This tale of soiled and tawdry youth is told with the frankness one would expect, and with its own kind of skill. The author is twenty-five years old and, the book's jacket states, was himself a member of the set he describes, until he renounced soft living to go to work in the oil fields, and eventually into journalism. A kind of desperate disgust speaks through his story. But why, after all, must one's inheritance—even the inheritance of the worthless rich—be blamed for everything? How about a little personal reflection, a little get-up-and-git? These creatures had practically none. Here, clever and ugly, is their story." John Patton
Books p12 N 17 '40 400w

"Atlee writes of the younger Country Club set around Fort Worth with the freshness and ease of a natural talent on the loose, and if he gets a touch sentimental trying to find cosmic meaning in their good time—after all, Fitzgerald got away with it, and there's nothing like trying. . . Young Atlee's ebullient style makes arson and rape and alcoholism seem like the sunniest bits of mischief, and no somber philosophizing on what's-the-world-coming-to can get him out of it." Dawn Powell
— New Repub 103:875 D 23 '40 300w

"There are some hilariously funny scenes; the characterizations are well done and the story moves along with the driving force of a virile style; but the cumulative effect on the reader of this highly sensational variety of social criticism is of having spent an evening in most uncongenial company. It is to be hoped that in his next book Mr. Atlee will use his gifts of humor and narrative skill to portray a more normal and saner circle than that of Messrs. Jimble and Jarvis." Drake de Kay
N Y Times p28 N 10 '40 700w

"It's a bit like watching a dog scratch fleas for three hundred pages." L. J. H., Jr.
— Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 11 '41 200w

ATTWATER, DONALD, tr. See Body and spirit

ATWATER, CLAIRE NELSON. Manoel; pictures by Theresa Kalab. 68p map $2 Longmans

Children in Portugal 40-13524

Picture-story book of modern Portugal. Manoel lives in a little fishing village, but is taken to Lisbon to stay with his aunt while his father goes with a fishing fleet to the Newfoundland Banks. Most of Manoel's adventures come thru his mischievous small dog, Gama. The landing of the American clipper ship provides one episode.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40
Cath World 152:376 D '40 60w

"A good deal of information can be painlessly acquired from such a book. Story and pictures are excellent."
+ Christian Century 57:1084 S 4 '40 40w

"Educational, atmospheric."
+ Churchman 154:5 D 1 '40 20w

"Children of six to eight will enjoy it." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 140w

"Unlike too many small heroes of stories of foreign lands, Manoel is real and boyish, almost as engaging, indeed, as Gama. His story is an easy and human introduction to his country for smaller children." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p46 N 10 '40 80w
Social Studies 31:334 N '40 10w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 110w

ATWATER, MONTGOMERY MEIGS. Government hunter; with pictures by Fred C. Rodewald. 158p $1.50 Macmillan

40-4228

Douglas, a young multimillionaire, with his parents, is hiding on a Montana ranch to avoid gangsters. There he meets a government hunter, a biological survey man, whose business it is to track down rogue animals. After an adventurous season together the two succeed in capturing some dangerous criminals, and Douglas becomes a government hunter in his own right. For older boys.

"The young reader gets from [the story] a consciousness of roads still open that he may have thought were closed, but the fun is in the story. This is told as it happens, one thing after another; the language, though sufficiently lively, will not get a small boy into trouble with his mother should he copy it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 F 18 '40 450w

"The book is designed for 10 to 14-year-olds and the author shows his understanding of boy psychology in choosing an older boy hero who has adventures more thrilling than the normal experience of a 17-year-old rancher, dude or otherwise." M. A. H.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 200w

"Much of the book is fine and reminds one of Rutherford Montgomery's animal stories, but the gangster element rather cheapens the book." Sonja Wennerblad
+ — Library J 65:260 Mr 15 '40 160w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 40w

"Boys will find here not only an absorbing yarn about adventure with a spicy tang of the outdoors but honest values in courage and judgment." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 17 '40 420w

ATWATER, PIERCE. Problems of administration in social work [introd. by Wayne McMillen]. 319p $3.50 Univ. of Minn. [16s Oxford]

361.8 Social work 40-5003

"The author [has just been] elected to head up the challenging task of directing Chicago's federated financing agency, and [was] for several years the successful director of the Community Chest in St. Paul. . . Starting with descriptions of tasks and qualities of persons necessary to perform them, the book proceeds to minute descriptions of functions and processes and ends in a burst of vivid writing descriptive of the methodology of a community fund campaign that bears all the marks of being the work of an enthusiastic leader in the art so clearly described." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

ATWATER, PIERCE—Continued

"The book, while it has all the concreteness and practical quality one would expect of an executive in contrast with a theorist, does have some inherent limitations. As the author confesses, time did not permit better integration of material. But in addition, the hand of the executive rather than of the scholar is seen in the almost pontifical manner in which it lays down commands instead of balancing contrasting considerations. . . Its historical considerations could have been more carefully, as well as more tellingly, worked out. . . But any teacher can supply these deficiencies; only one who has gone through the grueling experiences of administering public and private social work with his eyes wide open and his imagination undimmed by its oppressive demands could have written the book." F. J. Bruno
+ — Ann Am Acad 210:181 Jl '40 410w

"This is a rich volume and can not be skimmed hastily or lightly. Except where occasional cases are used as illustrative material, paragraphs are compact with pointed statements of fact, piled one upon another, with a minimum of elaboration. In short, the book is concise, yet clear and simple in its presentation of fundamental principles of administration in social work, and leaves elaboration and application to the administrator or teacher." Katharine Jocher
+ Social Forces 19:144 O '40 650w

Reviewed by Arch Mandel
+ Survey 76:213 Je '40 370w

ATWOOD, WALLACE WALTER. Physiographic provinces of North America. 536p il maps $4.80 Ginn

551 Geology—North America 40-33578

"This sizable work on the evolution and description of land forms in the [ten] physiographic areas of North America is from the pen of the Professor of Physiography and Regional Geography in Clark University. There are 286 illustrations including half-tones, diagrams, and colored maps showing rainfall, climate, agricultural regions, and the physiographic provinces. There is also a large folded map depicting physiographic features in detail. Accompanying each chapter are selected references and a list of government topographic maps." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Dr. Atwood's volume is likely to arouse interest among Canadian historians for two reasons. There is a good deal of attention given to Southern Canada; and most chapters devote a few pages at the end to what the author calls 'An approach to the human drama.' Dr. Atwood is well fitted to write such a book; for he is an accomplished geologist, with a number of authoritative studies of American geology to his credit. . . The reviewer has only one or two criticisms to make. For instance, he would have liked to see some of Dr. Atwood's own well-known sketches reproduced. . . In later editions one would like to see a much larger part of the book devoted to the discussion of topographic control of human settlement. Dr. Atwood could here give us data which have so far only been scantily treated in current literature." Griffith Taylor
+ — Canadian Hist R 21:321 S '40 1200w

"If the text is intended primarily for students of geography, the emphasis on geographical factors and the inclusion of detailed explanations of such elementary geological concepts as cuestas, piracy, and the stream cycle are understandable. Yet the use of such terms as 'crystallization,' 'metamorphism,' and 'glacial plucking' without explanation assumes that the reader has some geological training. In the reviewer's opinion, a regional physiography must assume a knowledge of elementary geology unless it is to include detailed descriptions of all the essential physiographic processes. The suggestions to research workers, which have been inserted at several places, are valuable, but nevertheless they seem inappropriate in an elementary text. The reviewer also questions the advisability of including unsupported opinions on current problems. . . The selection of material is satisfactory with a few exceptions. . . In spite of some of the above comments, the volume is a decided step forward in the evolution of a simple and concise text for a one-term undergraduate course in regional physiography. The clarity of the language and the excellent supporting illustrations are strong recommendations." A. D. Howard
+ — Geog R 30:518 Jl '40 1050w

Reviewed by L. B. Freeman
J Geol 48:1023 N '40 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:10 Ja '40

AUBREY, EDWIN EWART. Man's search for himself. 222p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

137 Personality. Man. Sociology, Christian 40-13839

This book contains the Cole lectures delivered at Vanderbilt university in 1939, by the professor of Christian theology and ethics at the University of Chicago. Contents: Starting points; The solitariness of man; The person in community; The search for integration; The search for freedom; Conclusions from the search. Index.

"The incisive style for which the author is noted adds grace and clarity to the book's substantial content. It moves from keen and discerning analyses to well founded conclusions which provide an understanding of man from the Christian point of view which is both lucid and convincing. The brevity of this book will tantalize many to speculate upon the wider implications of this interpretation of the self in society. The author has suggested vastly more than his brief outline may at first indicate. The book will invite and reward a second reading." I. E. Lunger
+ Christian Century 57:1209 O 2 '40 1000w

"Dr. Aubrey certainly gave the university the worth of its money in obtuseness, padding with freak words and involved language. There are traces of good ideas in the book of one's personality, if the reader cares to pan a lot of gravel to get the somewhat precious metal." A. L. B-C.
— + Churchman 154:35 S 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by J. L. Foreman
Crozer Q 17:303 O '40 180w

"It is refreshing to find in this book what seems to be a balance between what the author calls 'the solitariness of man' and the social nature of the self. . . The lack of thoroughness that one feels in reading this book is a concession that authors often make to the demand that series of lectures be published soon after delivery. If the author had combined his constructive thinking with a fuller analysis of the positions with which his is contrasted, he might have given a sharpness to the outline of his own thought which it now lacks. The lack of thoroughness seems to this reader to lead to a strange obscurity in the connections between ideas, although each paragraph is admirably clear. It may be that Aubrey's preoccupation with the problem created by the contrast between his own earlier emphasis upon social psychology and his growing appreciation of the depths of individual experience has limited the area of his discussion, but I wish that he would bring his clear mind to the analysis of the nature of sin and guilt, to a study of the degree to which evil is peculiarly stubborn in society, to the problem of how much man can have hope for himself and for society." J. C. Bennett

+ — J Religion 21:85 Ja '41 750w

AUBRY, OCTAVE. Second empire; tr. by Arthur Livingston. 638p il $5 Lippincott

B or 92 Napoléon III, emperor of the French. France—History—Second empire, 1852-1870 40-33451

A character study of Napoleon III and a history of France from 1848 to 1871, by a French novelist and historian, author of books on Napoleon I, the King of Rome, and Eugenie. Bibliography. Index.

"As in previous studies, M. Aubry relies chiefly on material already in print and does not offer his volume as a contribution to original scholarship or a refutation of established authorities. But the synthesis and the verve are his own, the portraits have been skillfully chosen and admirably reproduced; the format is attractive, the style captivating. This is a book on a lively chapter of history, written and vividly translated for the benefit of the reading public, which the reading public will not willingly let lie." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p2 D 1 '40 750w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 58:153 Ja 29 '41 750w

"The Second Empire is a most authoritative study of a fascinating epoch. The author draws a glittering picture of the court over which the beautiful Spaniard, Eugenie, presided." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 154:19 N 15 '40 250w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch

Living Age 359:288 N '40 80w

"The present struggle had not broken out when this book was written; but had M. Aubry set out with the collapse of France in mind to draw a deadly historical parallel he could not have produced a more timely work. Solid, detailed, documented, detached, clear, and very readable, it will undoubtedly be an important book for some time to come." James Orrick

+ Nation 152:50 Ja 11 '41 650w

"M. Aubry has painted a full-length portrait of Napoleon III and done it so reasonably that the very man seems familiar to us as we follow his career. . . We cannot call him stupid and neither can we call him brilliant. But there is something to him, and that something M. Aubry brings out with clarity and absolutely no verbal fireworks." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 O 27 '40 1650w

New Yorker 16:111 O 19 '40 60w

"M. Aubry's book is perhaps the best account of these twenty years of French history available in a single volume. It is not as witty as Mr. Guedalla's 'Second Empire,' but it is much meatier, more restrained, and it is much less allusive. Indeed, M. Aubry has unobtrusively solved one of the great problems confronting a historian thoroughly, directly, almost intuitively familiar with the minute details of his period: he has so sifted and arranged his material that the reader is never confused, never halted by cross-references and cross-currents. His book will not puzzle even an American relatively ignorant of French history." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 22:27 O 19 '40 750w

AUDAX, pseud. Men in our time. 217p il $2.50 McBride

923.2 Statesmen, British. European war, 1939- 40-5177

Character studies of nine British statesmen, vitally connected with the present war. Contents: Britain at war; Neville Chamberlain, the man with the umbrella; Winston Churchill, the admirable Crichton; Lord Halifax, stern, saintly, and sly; Sir John Simon, searchlight on Westminster; Anthony Eden, "Dear Anthony"; Leslie Hore-Belisha, bombs and Belisha beacons; Duff Cooper, Baldwin's young man; Sir Kingsley Wood, the man on the flying trapeze; Sir Samuel Hoare, John Bull in office.

"Of the nine sketches those on Chamberlain and Lord Halifax, 'Stern, Saintly and Sly,' are the most fruitful reading. The 'Dear Anthony' Eden chapter also is valuable, especially since it does not spare Eden for his failure to take a strong stand for his own principles. The chapter on Sir Kingsley Wood, the roly-poly little cupidon who is Air Minister, is disappointingly slight. . . He happens to be one of the most able administrators in the country, but Audax dismisses him in a decidedly off-hand manner." J. P. Phillips

+ — Books p15 Mr 10 '40 490w

"'Men in Our Time' will not give all the answers about British foreign policy that are promised on its jacket, but it does supply some useful and generally entertaining information about men who are now, or recently have been, making that policy." R. H. Phelps

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 450w

"This book appears to be intended for American consumption. American readers are fairly well primed with information on these British statesmen and scarcely need quite so much familiar material as the author feels it necessary to include—certainly not the familiar anecdotes, some of which are far beyond the age to be called up for active service." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 20 '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:760 Jl '40 10w

New Repub 102:417 Mr 25 '40 40w

New Yorker 16:83 F 17 '40 30w

"The most interesting chapters deal with the men who are less known on this side of the Atlantic—Lord Halifax, Duff Cooper, Leslie Hore-Belisha, and Sir Kingsley Wood" J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 24 '40 360w

"It is effective portraiture, as skillfully done when the subject is being made the object of ridicule as when he is being depicted as a pure and efficient patriot. Since another man might, with equally virile pen, have portrayed Simon as a level-headed leader and Churchill as an egotistic blunderer, the book must be accepted with full reservations as to political bias. At no point, however, does its text cease to be engaging, and its presentation of incidents serves to illumine the background of English events both before and since the declaration of war against Germany."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 800w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH. Another time; poems. 114p $2 Random house

821 (W) 40-27257

The first book of this English poet's work since he came to live in the United States. "Of special interest as analytical tributes are the memorial poems to Sigmund Freud and William Butler Yeats. . . The 'lighter' poems also are mostly about people. Auden's wit brings the warmth, the direct appeal of colloquial speech, the genuine writer-to-reader contact his formal work seldom has." (Books) Index of first lines.

Booklist 36:303 Ap 1 '40

"It may be said that Auden's writing has become simpler, his intentions clearer, his symbols more intelligible and broadly based. He wants, and deserves, a larger audience. But it is difficult to write for that larger public in terms that will retain the admiration of a small private following. Perhaps the difficulty may be overcome by compromise; perhaps by the making of a choice—a choice which Auden may be neither prepared nor willing to make." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books p21 Mr 3 '40 1000w

AUDEN, W. H.—Continued

"These poems maintain Auden's reputation at its high level. There is scarcely a bad line in the book. There are many of the most exciting kind, as there are several entire poems of the same." Richard Eberhart
+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 27 '40 800w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 103:195 Ap '40 700w

"Auden's new book, Another Time, has the drive and energy, the running rhythm, the robust attack on civilized sham, and the instinct for lightness and the music halls that marked his earlier volumes. . . And [the book] reveals a new note of tenderness, a mature appraisal of love in an otherwise crumbling world." Alfred Kreymborg
+ Living Age 358:195 Ap '40 330w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 30 '40 450w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 150:452 Ap 6 '40 1150w

"Another Time is certainly rather a miscellaneous collection, less sustained and brilliant than his section of the China book. The best, most of which have been published before in journals in this country, are very good indeed. But Auden is, and always will be, a very uneven poet." T. C. Worsley
+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:92 Jl 27 '40 1450w

" 'Another Time' might be called 'marking time,' in which many of the faults and few of the virtues of the author are seen. In particular there is a startling restriction of the imagination. . . The imagery is humdrum. One of the best lines of the book—'Promising to the sharp sword all the glittering prizes' is practically a quotation from the late Lord Birkenhead's speech. Another, 'The skies are lit up like a Christmas tree' is from the ballad of Cocaine Lil. Other bits here and there are from Mr. Auden's acquaintance with American popular ballads. They are better done in the original and Mr. Auden is giving up too much of his strenuous heritage to indulge in these easy-going lilts." P. M. Jack
— N Y Times p2 F 18 '40 450w

"This poet is not yet all of a piece; the development, naturally, is still going on. Auden is weakest in a statement of direct personal intensity. His love poems tend to become metaphysical. And his 'light' verse, as opposed to Eliot's (which can be magnificent), often turns out to be both childish and cruel." Louise Bogan
+ — New Yorker 16:76 F 24 '40 450w

Reviewed by David Daiches
Poetry 56:40 Ap '40 1000w

Reviewed by Michael Roberts
Spec 165:100 Jl 26 '40 500w

Time 35:72 Mr 4 '40 400w

"Mr. Auden is still a surprisingly unequal poet, too much at the mercy of his susceptibility to all kinds of experience, from the trifling to the tragic. But these verses as a whole spring from a deeper centre without any loss of that closeness to the tumbled texture of modern life in which he has always excelled."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p328 Jl 6 '40 310w

AUDUBON, JOHN JAMES. Audubon's America; narratives and experiences; ed. by Donald Culross Peattie. 329p il map $6 Houghton

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Zoology. Birds (W) 40-32960

Selections from Audubon's narratives on the conditions of American men, manners, and scenes of his day, and of the birds and animals which he observed and painted. There is a biographical sketch, and each section of the work has an introduction by the editor. The book is illustrated with two-page spreads of reproductions of Audubon's own colored paintings. Index.

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

Bookmark 2:4 Ja '41

"Beautiful, rugged, vivid, like the young nation it portrays, 'Audubon's America' will be loved wherever it is read. Through it new concepts will take form, new friendships be made, new enthusiasms be engendered." G. M. Sutton
+ Books p1 O 13 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 8 '40 650w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 9 '40 700w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:147 N 29 '40 200w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 33:233 D 20 '40 420w

"This beautifully illustrated book brings together the scattered writings of this most appreciative American. It should have a wide appeal as biography and travel, as natural history, and as a broad picture of the America of his day as only Audubon could have written it for us." D. F. Lucas
+ Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 190w

"The selections from the 'Birds' tend toward the highly dramatic and probably were chosen for their illustrative value in relation to the text. The somber little self-portrait, so delicately yet realistically painted, is a welcome addition, as is the landscape view of Natchez by Audubon. The prize, for this reader, is a small unfinished drawing, reproduced here in its exact original dimensions, of a hen turkey and her chicks, which shows the minute, exquisite touch and the fluent instinct for design which were among Audubon's primary gifts. . . The charge as to Mason's work is an empty one, and I am sorry that Mr. Peattie has so uncritically given it currency. . . To have carelessly argued that the magnificent achievement of the flower paintings did not belong to Audubon is to leave him, in this volume, shorn indeed." Constance Rourke
+ — Nation 151:565 D 7 '40 1300w

"The main narrative is Audubon's own, made up of selections from all his work, with particular attention to that portion of it which has hitherto been neglected or not easily accessible. While Mr. Peattie gives Audubon the benefit of every doubt, he lets nothing dubious get by without comment. What he wants is that we should see the whole man in all his wide range and accomplishment. And in 'Audubon's America' we do see him, in action and in his natural habitat, which was the American wilderness of the heroic age." J. P. Bishop
+ New Repub 103:668 N 11 '40 1400w

"This is a fine book to own and handle and have in the house, a lovely souvenir both of Audubon and the America he loved. Eight of the plates from 'The Birds' and seven from 'The Quadrupeds' have been superbly reproduced on a scale large enough to display the careful detail of foliage and background, the dramatic energy of pose and position which mark Audubon's plates. . . The readers of this book will agree, I'm sure, that both Audubon and his America are well worth meeting." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p1 O 13 '40 1000w

"Mr. Peattie culls from Audubon's numerous and hard-to-get-at journals the freshest and liveliest of his impressions, whether of grackles or Daniel Boone. These he edits with lively insight." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:101 O 12 '40 160w

"This book is as welcome as it is beautiful. . . Audubon himself, as Mr. Peattie says, was not a professional writer like Thoreau, he was not, indeed, a man-of-letters at all, and his writing outside his journals has that air of conformity to current modes which is the earmark of the amateur, or of the edited manuscript. But he is adequate, and the charm and interest of his subject matter gives him a place in American literary history which this book will help to confirm." H. S. Canby
+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 O 12 '40 800w

"Those who know the writings of Donald Peattie, realize that no other could select, edit, and comment upon the work, both literary and scientific, of his great naturalist predecessor more aptly than he. The first pages of this truly beautiful book amply bear out such testimony, for he has the 'feel' of America in its multiple scope, even as Audubon had it."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 O '40 400w

"Mr. Peattie, distinguished naturalist-writer in his own right, has evidently labored long and diligently to get to the heart of Audubon's journals, and with fine editorial discernment has brought to light some of the best narratives of the early naturalist—narratives which do not always come up to strict literary standards but which, on the other hand, prove a reliable mirror of Audubon himself and his America." C. B. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 2450w
Time 36:83 N 4 '40 360w

Reviewed by F. F. Van de Water
Yale R n s 30:392 winter '41 700w

AUERBACH, JOSEPH SMITH. The bar of other days. 364p $3.50 Harper
923.4 Lawyers 40-7933

Reminiscences of a veteran lawyer, a member of the New York bar, who has gathered these anecdotes and appreciations during sixty years of active practice. Many of the subjects of these sketches were New York lawyers. Such men as Joseph H. Choate, David Dudley Field, Charles O'Conor, Martin W. Littleton, and Elihu Root are among those included. Index.

"It is a book full of interest for lawyers in general and New York lawyers in particular, and its wit and humor, its fund of reminiscence and anecdote will repay the time of any reader, whether lawyer or layman." J. W. Davis
+ Books p8 My 19 '40 900w

"The book is one of personalities into which the author gently and humorously insinuates his prejudices and philosophy as he reminisces of his friends. For the lawyer who has a natural curiosity, as to the qualities of mind and character which have made other men successful in legal practice and a regard for the traditions of the profession, the book is of real value. But anyone who is interested in people and enjoys reading will, I believe, find that Mr. Auerbach has won his case for 'The Bar of Other Days.'" F. M. Forbes, Jr.
Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

"The book contains many anecdotes worthy of a permanent place in the archives of memory. Most of them will be found 'new,' although associated with subjects respecting which much may heretofore have been written. It will be observed that the author possesses a keen and subtle sense of humor, and not only appreciates a good story, but is adept at telling one." A. R. Watson
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 21 '40 1050w

"Mr. Auerbach is little concerned with the economic attitudes of his subjects, or even with the temper of the times. The lawyers he writes about were all his friends. He is interested only in their virtues. He confesses that the book is a tribute; the tales he tells are in the nature of uncritical 'appreciations.' Punctuating the plaudits, however, are a large number of anecdotes and memorabilia that make the book worthwhile, at least as a record." Charles Abrams
Sat R of Lit 22:26 My 25 '40 700w

AUERNHEIMER, RAOUL. Prince Metternich, statesman and lover [tr. by James A. Galston]. 365p $3.50 Alliance bk.
B or 92 Metternich-Winneburg, Clemens Lothar Wenzel, fürst von. Europe—Politics 40-34533

A full-length, popular biography of the Austrian statesman who was, in the author's opinion, the main instrument in the downfall of Napoleon. Biographical table. Index.

AUERBACH (ou'ûr-bäkh)

"An extremely uneven book, in no sense a great one, but far from indifferent." Albert Guerard
+ — Books p28 N 17 '40 1050w

"This is an extremely interesting book, but it has faults of both execution and conception."
+ — Nation 151:540 N 30 '40 230w

"Written in simple and often beautiful language, the book seems, on the one hand, to be penetrating, interesting—even charming—and it possesses sincerity and enthusiasm. It boasts brilliant passages that display independent thought and fine analysis. . . On the other hand, the book is limited largely to two aspects of its subject's career: his influence upon the Napoleonic era, and his influence upon all women. Its historical generalizations are frequently unsound; many statements are flat contradictions of the evidence, and excessive efforts to build up 'human interest' and 'drama' spoil to some extent an otherwise superlative literary biography. Even so, the book is by far the most readable, and in some respects the most intellectually exciting, biography of Metternich that has thus far appeared in English." L. W. Eshleman
+ — N Y Times p5 D 8 '40 1200w

"Mr. Auernheimer, an exiled Austrian writer, has produced a light and agreeable sketch of Metternich's career. He adds nothing to what we know about Metternich, a task which the careful work of Srbik has made extremely difficult. . . On Prince Metternich the statesman he writes intelligently and in accord with the recent tendencies toward revision of opinion on the men who made the peace of Vienna. On Prince Metternich the lover he writes in a tone rather unconvincingly Viennese." Crane Brinton
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ja 25 '41 280w

AUGUST, JOHN. Rain before seven. 280p $2.50 Little 40-13623

Two former members of the Spanish Loyalist army, Caleb Thatcher, a Harvard graduate, and Bert, a C.I.O. organizer, meet again in Wallisport, a small Massachusetts manufacturing town. The two are bound together with a strong bond, which makes for complications when one of the town's factories is burned and the blame put on Bert. Hope Shaler, a courageous young person engaged to the head of Wallisport's first family, but still loyal to her childhood friend, Caleb, plays an important role in this story of espionage. The time is 1940.

"A crisp, articulate and sure-footed narrative of considerable ingenuity and unsuppressed vigor." George Conrad
+ Books p11 Ag 25 '40 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Cook
Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 350w

"Mr. August handles his material with fine discipline. His characters are very much alive and their actions, with the exception of John Gabriel's, convincing." Rose Feld
+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 25 '40 650w

"For a genuine thriller with the most modern political content, this fills the requirements." N. L. R.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 24 '40 160w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Animals everywhere; first picture book for youngest children [color crayon lithographs on stone by the authors]. $1.25 Doubleday
(W) 40-31347

"In a panorama of soft, pleasing colors the animals of the world stream across these large pages as if they were coming out of Noah's Ark. The unusual feature is the reverse side which shows the backs of the animals, so little children can get a rounded effect." Horn Bk M

AULAIRE (ō'lăr')

AULAIRE, I. D', and E. P. D'.—Continued
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p12 N 10 '40 130w

Cath World 152:374 D '40 90w

"A rare book for very young children. . . The pages unfold and when fully opened form a double frieze. Its gay colors and wide variety of animals make this most desirable as a book or decoration for the nursery." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 180w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 16:340 S '40 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:433 N '40 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:845 O 15 '40 70w

"Although the folds turn like pages, their being unfastened does, of course, condition the book for library purposes. Its excellent coloring and fascinating variety make it perfect nursery property for children two to three years old. It should be useful also to pre-school teachers. Public libraries will want it for parents' collections and for other special uses in the children's rooms." Irene Smith
+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 10w

"The title-page tells us that the book was made for the artists' little son, Per Ola, and the joy and fun that has gone into the making is very apparent. Most adults will feel an irresistible urge to give 'Animals Everywhere' to some child and then to enjoy it with him. Children will take delight in spreading out this panorama on the floor and it will make a most effective decoration for a children's library or a nursery." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 N 3 '40 240w

New Yorker 16:125 D 7 '40 50w

AUSTIN, MARGOT. Moxie and Hanty and Bunty; with il. by the author. [44p] $1 (3s 6d) Scribner

39-30547

"A simple story of two sisters and their brother who lived in Oregon. . . The author has illustrated her tale attractively with many black and white and red drawings." Booklist

Booklist 36:216 F '40

"These naïve drawings and simple, tender little scenes of farm life in Oregon are straight out of a child's world." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 O 8 '39 180w

AUSTIN, MARGOT. Once upon a springtime; with il. by the author. [43p] $1 Scribner

40-6899

"[The story of] Moxie and Hanty and Bunty came as a pleasant surprise. The same children are in this picture book, which is full of the spring. It starts with Easter eggs and Easter pets, but the main part of the book is devoted to Nanny, the goat, and her two kids." Library J

"Writing for four-year-olds, this author can give an older person a strange sense of having still, somewhere inside his present self, a four-year-old heart." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 16 '40 230w

"This book, which children up to eight or nine will enjoy, has a good deal of value for its cost." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:399 My 1 '40 140w

AUSTIN, MARGOT. Tumble Bear [il. by the author.] [44p] $1.50 Scribner

40-30719

Picture story book for the very young, describing the adventures of an ingratiating little bear who spent a day at the seashore with two little children for playmates.

"A happy little story about a baby bear—cousin to those in the toy shops, but alive and extremely lively—and two four-year-old children, trots along beside irresistible full-page pictures and makes a book that can be read even [to] the littlest. It sounds like one of those tales made up as they go along, with hints from the audience." M. L. Becker
+ Books p11 N 10 '40 120w

"Good as a picture-book."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 D 14 '40 30w

AVELINE, CLAUDE. The double death of Frédéric Belot; tr. by A. K. Shields. 258p $2 Holt

40-32609

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p40 N 10 '40 90w

"The bare outline makes it appear utterly fantastic, but the author's consummate narrative skill makes it altogether credible and intensely interesting in a way that not many mystery writers achieve." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 O 27 '40 200w

"Typically Gallic job, both in treatment and in explanation given for fatal collapse of sleuth's brilliant idea for hoodwinking criminal classes. Fair."
Sat R of Lit 23:17 N 9 '40 40w

"'The Double Death of Frederick Belot' belongs in the category of crime novels that can be read for literary pleasure as well as for excitement."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 170w

AVERILL, LAWRENCE AUGUSTUS. Mental hygiene for the classroom teacher. 217p $2 Pitman

371.11 Mental hygiene. Teachers 39-24949

"An elementary introduction to the principles of mental hygiene as they relate to the problems of teaching." (Foreword) The author attempts to aid the teacher in achieving mental health for herself and for her students. Index.

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

"It is a solid, competent book on a subject that might very easily become ambiguous in unskilled hands."
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 50w
Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

AYDELOTTE, DORA. Run of the stars. 340p $2 Appleton-Century

40-5841

When young Sela Burchard went out to Dinwiddie in northwestern Texas (later Oklahoma) in 1889, the strife between "rancher" and "nester" was at its height. Sela is given her choice between the son of the wealthiest ranchman in the district and a "nester," and tho the years bring hardship and poverty, she knows in the end that she chose wisely.

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Mr 17 '40 410w
Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 140w

"The story is full of the atmosphere of pioneer days—hard drinking, hard riding, cattle rustling and the milder but still strenuous diversions of parties and dances. . . The general pioneer scene is better handled than individual characterizations. But even puppet figures living in those stirring times are sufficient to hold the interest." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 31 '40 380w

"The real drama of the novel derives from the feuds between the cattle men, farmers, and nesters, and the relentless rampaging of the rivers. Because Miss Aydelotte is a better historian than novelist, or creator of characters, the meat of the book is in its backgrounds." R. L.

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 17 '40 160w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 140w
Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

AYRES, QUINCY CLAUDE, and SCOATES, DANIELS. Land drainage and reclamation. 2d ed 496p il maps $4 (26s) McGraw

631.6 Drainage. Reclamation of land 39-30805

"The material of the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1929] has been changed only in minor details, except that on erosion, which has been expanded to three chapters." (Booklist) References at end of some of the chapters.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39
Nature 145:815 My 25 '40 170w

B

BAARSLAG, KARL. Islands of adventure; il. with phot. and charts. 338p maps $3 Farrar

910.4 Islands. Voyages and travels (W) 40-9820

Account of conditions on some of the lesser known islands of the world as they appeared to the author, who was radio operator on the Mellon yacht, Vagabondia. On their trips they visited Cocos, Mangareva, the Falklands, Easter Island, Fort Jefferson, Moorea, Tierra del Fuego, Tristan da Cunha, and many others. Index.

Booklist 36:410 Jl 1 '40

"Baarslag's book has all the qualities of a perfect guide; it is authentic, copious, objective. Yet this volume, meant to be a chronicle of islands, is packed with human madness. Set into the frame of accurate description are scenic pictures of weird beauty, and stories of people, unforgettable, and strikingly told." Marianne Hauser

+ Books p6 My 19 '40 600w

"This unusual odyssey is worthy of a more personal and colorful climax. Perhaps the necessity of the meticulous character of the author's work as a radio operator and his conscientiousness of report, has developed a veneer of self-repression over a deep appreciation and ardent love of nature which are obviously his, and would have been enhanced had he devoted more space to the expression of his own impressions and philosophy." C. W. Furlong

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 1200w

"A good book to read between radio bulletins is 'Islands of Adventure.' . . It is prime escape material, and that's what we all need these days." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 1 '40 1100w
New Repub 103:254 Ag 19 '40 50w

"To all the islands Karl Baarslag gives body and individuality in his reader's mind as he sets down details of their past and present in direct prose which achieves vividness without any straining for 'romantic' effect. . . His excellent book is given the final factor of excellence in being well illustrated, well charted and indexed."

+ N Y Times p8 My 19 '40 650w
New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 30w

"Karl Baarslag has been conscientious enough in this book, but he is uninspired both as traveler and student. Though his story is in part one of first-person adventure one can learn little of him or of his companions other than that he has been a ship's radio operator on a yacht which pretty well covered the warmer seas. . . The stories he tells of lost islands, treasure islands, islands which have been appearing and disappearing for centuries, make tolerable reading too. But Mr. Baarslag's impressions of men and places are rarely memorable, and his writing is careless indeed." H. D.

— + Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 22 '40 350w
Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

BABBITT, IRVING. Spanish character, and other essays; with a bibliography of his publications and an index to his collected works; ed. by Frederick Manchester, Rachel Giese [and] William F. Giese. 361p $2.50 Houghton

814 40-32716

Contents: Lights and shades of Spanish character; Are the English critical? Matthew Arnold; Croce and the philosophy of the flux; Pascal; Racine and the anti-romantic reaction; The bicentenary of Diderot; George Sand and Flaubert; A century of Indian epigrams; Interpreting India to the West; The problem of style in a democracy; Humanist and specialist; President Eliot and American education; What I believe: Rousseau and religion; Bibliography of the publications of Irving Babbitt; Index to the collected works of Irving Babbitt.

"Babbitt was not a man of taste, or a man of ideas either, but a man with a position. In these essays, as in his books and lectures, his critical method is to make a few sweeping generalizations and embellish them with anecdote and allusion. There is, as usual, a contrast between the high seriousness of his main argument and the discursive humor of his many citations. But Babbitt was never a pedant; he only seems so, because he was one of the few academic figures of his generation who even tried to apply his learning to the broader problems of modern life. The result was often quixotic, but—seven years after his death—it seems less old-fashioned than it did in the heyday of New Humanism." Harry Levin

New Repub 103:670 N 11 '40 320w

"The fourteen essays by the late Irving Babbitt that make up this volume, which completes his collected works, are delightfully characteristic of our perhaps most famous humanist, and in several of them he is to be seen at his best. They are meaty, compact, informative, critical, yet light in mood for all that. The spirit of Ariel moves gently above the heaviness of matter and permeates the most austere of thoughts with a blitheness that charms and a wit that entertains. These essays are pre-eminently readable." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 D 1 '40 550w

"Probably Babbitt would not have republished these pieces while he lived, though probably he would have repeated their substance, as in some instances indeed he had done. Nevertheless, except as prose, they represent him almost as adequately as any of his six volumes previously published." Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 22:24 O 19 '40 600w

BABSON, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Modern wilderness; with a foreword by Frank M. Chapman; il. with two paintings by Clifford R. Babson and photographs taken by Carl H. Lester, jr, and others. 261p $3 Doubleday

598.2 Birds—New Jersey 40-34647

Essays and sketches about the wild life found in the swamps of northern New Jersey along the Whippany river, not far from the town of Hanover, and within earshot of four main traveled highways. Partial contents: The owl's nest; Gallant hawks; Barn owls at home; We meet Mephitis; Notes on the buzzard, robin and wood thrush.

Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 40w

"For adults and youth who are seriously interested in nature." Maude Adams

Library J 66:85 Ja 15 '41 90w

BABSON, W. A.—Continued

"Mr. Babson writes with keen observation, with insight, humor and imagination, not only from his lifelong knowledge of these wild creatures but of the world in which they live. . . His book should awaken the reader's interest in the world which exists unseen under his eyes and in helping to preserve it from destruction." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 5 '41 600w

"Something of the timeless peace and serenity which [the author] has found in it comes to the reader through the pages of his book." L. J. H., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 D 14 '40 270w

BACMEISTER, MRS RHODA (WARNER). Stories to begin on. 134p il $1.50 Dutton

40-12417

Realistic stories and poems to be read to children from the ages of two or three, to six and seven. A vocabulary suited to young children is used in each case. Illustrated with photographs of young children. Index.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 40w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 65:596 Jl '40 70w

"Some delightful verses and stories by an author who really knows children. Just the kind of book for that cosy, intimate period before bedtime." E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 100w

BACON, MRS JOSEPHINE DODGE (DASKAM). The door in the closet. 246p $2 Viking

40-14194

The three Straynge children lived in an old white house "two miles from anywhere" and had happy ordinary lives in the main. But when the little door far back in the closet swung open they entered a world of imagination.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 S 15 '40 230w

"Younger girls with a real love of fairy tales will not want to miss this book of rare magic." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 29 '40 310w

"This lovely imaginative story, full of wild wonder, is for those who have the gift of seeing beyond the factual. It is the best work Mrs. Bacon has ever done for children." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:342 S '40 100w

"A few girls of ten and eleven—dreamy, imaginative ones—may enjoy this mixture of the real and the fanciful. . . A Mary Poppins might have made something of it all but there is no Mary Poppins here." Miriam Snow

Library J 65:712 S 1 '40 110w

"Written with wit and humor and knowledge of human nature, this is a book for adults as well as children to enjoy. All lovers of fairy stories, young and old, will take delight in it, and to girls who in their hearts will never cease to love fairy tales even when the fairy-tale age is past, it will be particularly dear." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 S 8 '40 700w

"Matter-of-fact enchantment." Katharine Scherman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 30w

BACON, LEONARD. Sunderland capture, and other poems. 61p $2 Harper

811 40-14603

Collection of lyrics, many of them previously published in periodicals. The Reefs of Molokai was delivered at the annual meeting of the Brown University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in March, 1939.

"The title poem of this book and the long poem called 'The Obscure Wood,' which brings it to a close, offer interesting evidence that the author is a man who has dared to meet himself face to face. . . Both of these poems, though unhappily verbose, exhibit some nice insights into the subtler reaches of the mind. Both are worth reading for the spiritual courage they show." Babette Deutsch

+ Books p20 N 24 '40 330w

"Leonard Bacon is prolific, vigorous, tender, satirical, sometimes even savage, but in spite of some good work he has done in the ballad (which takes energy) he is really one of the best satirists of our time. In his new book a few sonnets remind us of the many excellently satirical ones he has written in the past. The title-poem, like some others, is concerned with fishing for sport, and they are all good; the longest poem, 'The Obscure Wood,' is a most unusual searching of the soul." John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p11 S 9 '40 430w

"Slight lyrics by an author better known for his satirical verse. There are signs, however, of an examination of conscience, an attempted reordering of values that may lead to a more solid accomplishment. Already it is responsible for such a fine poem as 'William James and Autumn.' "

New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 50w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell

New Repub 103:797 D 9 '40 480w

BACON, MARION, ed. Life at Vassar. 125p $2.50 Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

378 Vassar college 40-10797

Picture pageant of the activities, customs, and costumes of Vassar college girls from its founding in 1865 to 1940. Each picture has a brief descriptive paragraph. The book has been published in celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the college. Index of photographs.

"A lively and entertaining record. . . It is a compendium of hilarity for all who are titillated by changes in costume. To be sure, the 140 photographs cover a variety of college activities, but the outstanding interest certainly for the layman, is in the different clothes and costumes shown in the social and sport functions." Harriet Anderson

+ Books p5 My 26 '40 330w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p3 My 25 '40 500w

"Here are early dramatic efforts, with their verisimilitude hampered by the long skirts. . . Here are revolutionary changes in sports and sociabilities. Here is college history, in short; and it is delightful."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 23 '40 80w

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. The corpse wore a wig. 272p $2 Doubleday

40-30176

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ag 25 '40 130w

"The author has a flair for the details of local atmosphere, street by street and house by house, and he knows how to blend romance, too, with mystery. The fitting together of the story's events is as much a puzzle as the murderer's identity." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 S 1 '40 180w

"Moves smoothly and swiftly through sequence of puzzling, amusing, and exciting situations to convincing solution. Best Schmidt yarn to date. Good stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 7 '40 40w

BAGSHAWE, THOMAS WYATT. Two men in the Antarctic; an expedition to Graham land, 1920-1922; with a foreword by Frank Debenham. 292p il maps $3.75 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

919.9 Antarctic regions. Graham land 40-8809

"Relates the adventures and work of Mr. T. W. Bagshawe and Mr. M. C. Lester, who in 1920 and 1921 found themselves, by the withdrawal of the other two members of their expedition, faced with the choice of going home or of defying all canons of Antarctic travel and wintering in a makeshift hut, with limited stores, on the west coast of Graham Land. . . Both men were young and both were new to polar work, but they enjoyed themselves hugely, took some valuable records of climate and animal life, and were in fine condition when a whaler fetched them the following summer." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"From every point of view, this is an admirable volume of young adventure."
+ Books p5 Je 23 '40 490w

"Bagshawe's unassuming report makes absorbing reading. It is marked by a quiet, though very British humor, and the science is never obtrusive, tables and records being confined to the appendix. As the account was worked up from his carefully kept diary, it has an immediacy that memory alone might not have provided." E. B. Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 420w

"This report is marked by a gaiety and a humor that set it apart in polar records. It is amazing that two men who had to cook, tend their dogs, and keep their hut whole, could find time for compiling a natural history log, a meteorological log, an ice log, and even a tidal log on their tiny refuge—and come out of it laughing."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 3 '40 500w

"Good illustrations and maps add to the interest of a charming book." R. N. R. Brown
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '39 180w
Nature 146:282 Ag 31 '40 300w

"Rather dry, factual reading for anyone not keenly interested in polar exploration undertaken in the cause of science." Christopher St John
New Statesman & Nation 18:848 D 9 '39 120w

"This is one of the most astonishing adventures in polar history. It is the tale of two young men who in 1920 went down to Graham Land in the Antarctic, made a house of a boat they found on shore and some packing cases, and calmly spent the Winter. They have only now, twenty years later, bothered to tell about it, and the lack of heroics, their dismissal of discomfort, their cheery acceptance of whatever happened, make the reader chuckle admiringly." Russell Owen
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 28 '40 1150w

"A most original and readable volume. . . The photos reproduced in the work are excellent and add much to the authenticity and atmosphere."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 1100w

"A book fit to go on a shelf reserved for very hard jobs of work, most stoutly done."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 6 '40 600w

BAILEY, MRS BERNADINE FREEMAN. Little Lauri of Finland. 160p il map 50c Grosset

Children in Finland 40-6806

The story of a Finnish boy whose greatest ambition was to become a great athlete. Disappointed in his efforts to get into a summer training camp because of his size, he becomes guide to a group of American boys visiting Helsinki. Later he goes on a trip to Petsamo and on his return finds that his dream has come true.

"While not a word of war is spoken—the story apparently takes place just before anybody spoke one—the solid, healthy peacefulness of the scene carries its own reproach to the invader." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Mr 31 '40 250w

"The chief interest of the book is its information. If it lacks picturesqueness in its method of presentation, there is just a judicious amount of it, not too much to confuse or bore 8 to 12 year olds, and it gives a fine portrayal of the sturdy independence and progressiveness of a people whom all the world is watching." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 31 '40 350w
Wis Lib Bul 36:70 Ap '40

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Mr Fortune here. 279p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Gollancz]

(W) 40-12261

Nine short detective stories, featuring Reggie Fortune.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 Jl 28 '40 230w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 50w

"Mr. Bailey is probably the most successful of living writers of the short detective tale. All of these new stories show his accustomed ingenuity and sense of drama and narrative." E. R. Punshon
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 29 '40 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 19:568 Ap 27 '40 50w

"'Mr. Fortune Here' makes a good bedside book for the person who appreciates a nice crime story to take his mind off the problems of the day." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '40 120w

"Compactly villainous collection of novelettes containing all ingredients that have made Reginald justly famous. Satisfyin'."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 27 '40 30w

"It must be confessed that Mr. Bailey for all his brilliance is inclined to spoof us when it comes to the puzzle side of his stories. His plots have an immense and admirable ingenuity, but the manner in which Fortune, the omniscient doctor, is allowed to solve them often leaves a good deal to be desired. . . Nevertheless, as always, a collection of Mr. Bailey's stories once picked up will not be put down until it is finished."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Ap 20 '40 350w

BAILEY, HILEA, pseud. See Marting, R. L.

BAILEY, MARGERY. Whistle for good fortune; il. by Alice B. Preston. 237p $2 Little 398.2 Fairy tales 40-3669

Six fairy tales, based on folk tales. They are supposedly told by a group of travelers to a small boy who did not like arithmetic, but who was an expert at riddle guessing.

Booklist 36:308 Ap 1 '40

"These light-hearted stories, gathered from sources so old they seem quite new, carry the sense with the sound and linger sweetly in the ear. So sweetly indeed, that they at once suggest their use by story-tellers—and by parents who read aloud and like to have definite places at which to pause." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 F 11 '40 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

BAILEY, MARGERY—Continued
Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 65:260 Mr 15 '40 90w

"Like Miss Bailey's other books, 'Seven Peas in a Pod' and 'The Little Man With One Shoe,' this latest volume has gayety and humor, and the high hearted adventure that belongs by rights to children at the age when folk and fairy tale and legend make their strongest appeal. The illustrations are lively and charming in the spirit of the text. This is a book for schools and libraries, one for the child's own library, and one that will be invaluable to story tellers." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 F 25 '40 270w

New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 40w

BAILEY, PHILIP A. Golden mirages. 353p il maps $3 Macmillan

917.8 Southwest. Legends—Southwest. Mines and mineral resources—Southwest 40-32288

A book on the "lost mines" of the Southwest, the Mother Lode, Pegleg Smith's mine, and others, combining history, tradition and legend. Some true episodes are disguised under fictional names, others are frankly mythical. Index.

"This is a romantic book, eerie in spots, illustrated with many excellent photographs and maps. . . For many years Mr. Bailey has known that country, and he has done a workmanlike job of putting together the material which he has learned at first hand as well as what he was able to dredge up from old records. His book may be compared to the works of J. Frank Dobie on the same subject, although for the most part Mr. Bailey's locale is farther west than Dobie's. He concerns himself mostly with California, western Arizona and southwestern Colorado." Stanley Walker
+ Books p31 O 6 '40 500w

"Mr. Bailey writes from long years of acquaintance with the desert and its denizens. The book, done con amore, is a delightful footnote to the history of mining in the West." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 18 '40 500w

Commonweal 32:534 O 18 '40 90w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 25 '40 700w

BAILEY, THOMAS ANDREW. Diplomatic history of the American people. 806p il maps $6 Crofts

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations 40-27132

Textbook on American diplomatic history from the founding of Jamestown to the present day. Bibliographical notes at ends of chapters. Index.

"Professor Bailey has achieved the difficult task of developing the background of human dynamics and interweaving it with a lively chronicle of diplomatic events. By skilful use of a wealth of contemporary materials . . . he has injected a vivid, robust quality into these pages, and has thereby revived for our times the atmosphere of public opinion and activity within which statesmen controlling foreign affairs have thought and worked." W. P. Maddox
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:368 Ap '40 450w

Reviewed by B. W. Maxwell
Ann Am Acad 210:162 Jl '40 650w

Booklist 36:257 Mr 1 '40

Bookmark p9 N '40

"In this book Professor Bailey, of Stanford University, has written the best single-volume diplomatic history of the United States that so far has appeared. Written in a clear style and illustrated with cartoons, it emphasizes the role which public opinion has played in the formation of foreign policy since the earliest days of the Republic."
+ Books p18 Ap 14 '40 170w

"Since its appearance a few months ago this very valuable and interesting volume has been generally hailed by students of United States history as the best book in its field. It deserves an equally warm welcome from those who study Canadian affairs, for it has the special virtue of presenting a more complete and more accurate picture of Canadian-American relations than any of its predecessors. . . Mr. Bailey's book can be recommended with the greatest confidence, not only to such scholars, but to all citizens who may desire to acquaint themselves with the background of the American policies which are of such tremendous importance in the world today." C. P. Stacey
+ Canadian Hist R 21:207 Je '40 600w

"Here is a piece of scholarship that commands not merely admiration but intense respect. Because this is true the book will hold a very special place in our historical literature." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 31:368 F 16 '40 410w

Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 50w

"The best textbook on the history of American diplomacy now available to the college student. . . Unless there are basic faults not obvious on first reading, this book may well displace most, if not all, other histories of American diplomacy." E. M. Earle
+ New Repub 102:414 Mr 25 '40 360w

"His book is rich not in international treaties and agreements but in excerpts from contemporary newspapers, magazines, speeches, diaries and letters. . . The diplomatic synthesis in American history is unusually well knit together by the author with a lively literary style, illuminating episodes and well-selected cartoons. The work is a masterful introduction to the history of American diplomacy." J. H. Landman
+ N Y Times p23 My 5 '40 1150w

"Professor Thomas A. Bailey has produced a study of American diplomacy that is probably unequalled in literary style and in substantive excellence. He has ably and interestingly presented the facts and principles of the foreign policy of the United States." G. D. Harmon
+ Social Studies 31:233 My '40 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 11 '40 340w

Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

BAIN, JAMES STODDART. A bookseller looks back; the story of the Bains; with a foreword by Hugh Walpole. 304p il $4.50 (15s) Macmillan

655.4421 Bain, James, limited. Bain family. Bain, James Stoddart [40-10185]

"In 1816 James Bain the First set up a bookselling business in a street (now demolished) near Trafalgar Square. In 1828 the shop was moved to No. 1, Haymarket. There it remained until 1906, when a further move was made to 14, Charles Street. At the end of 1937 James Bain the Third retired from the same bookselling business, now situated in William IV Street, Strand. It should be a consolation to habitués of Bain's Bookshop, who have for two years missed the genial presence of the senior partner, to realize that he has been spending his time in writing the history of his family and his firm, and now greets them again in the pages of this book." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Bain has written a book which will be read with delight by all who love to browse and buy in bookshops. Here is a readable, anecdotal account of a great bookshop's history: and now that it is hard for Americans to visit London, what better substitute for a bibliophile's pilgrimage could there be than this voyage with three generations of Bains?" R. E. Roberts
+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 Jl 27 '40 600w

Reviewed by Charles Surface
Spec 164:294 Mr 1 '40 130w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 10 '40 850w

BAIRD, ALBERT CRAIG, ed. Representative American speeches: 1938-1939. (Reference shelf) 265p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

815 Speeches, addresses, etc. (W)

Collection of 28 speeches designed for students of speech in secondary schools and colleges and for students of history and contemporary American civilization. The speeches are arranged under the following topics: American foreign policy; Democracy and propaganda; Economic and social policies; Government and administration of justice; Science; Education; Religion. Biographical notes. Index.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"Excellent for the purpose intended."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 50w
Wis Lib Bul 36:14 Ja '40

BAITSELL, GEORGE ALFRED, ed. Science in progress; by L. J. Stadler [and others] second series. 317p il $4 Yale univ. press

504 Science—Addresses, essays, lectures (39-14778)

Collection of the National Sigma XI lectures for the years 1939 and 1940. Contents: The experimental alteration of heredity, by L. J. Stadler; The regulation of plant growth, by F. W. Went; Experimental studies on the functions of the frontal lobes in monkeys, chimpanzees, and man, by J. F. Fulton; Mysterious craters of the Carolina coast. A study in methods of research, by Douglas Johnson; How the earth shows its age, by A. C. Lane; The expanding universe, by H. P. Robertson; Cosmic rays and new elementary particles of matter, by C. D. Anderson; The motions of ions and proteins in electric fields, by D. A. MacInnes; The ultracentrifuge, by J. W. Beams; Recent advances in aeronautics, by J. C. Hunsaker. Index.

"The lecturers were chosen for specialized scholarship rather than for literary ability. Consequently the book is at its best in informing scientists of progress in subjects other than their own, and it will attract the layman chiefly because one or more of the topics happen to be of special interest to him. It should certainly interest the growing public that reads 'The Scientific Monthly.' " Gerald Wendt
+ Books p8 Ja 5 '41 440w
Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1163 D 25 '40 130w

"It is apparent that many fields of science have been covered in this important book, and that many colleges and universities are represented by the authors. It demonstrates anew 'the attainable unity that lies behind science.' " A. H. Compton & others
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 D '40 1550w

BAKELESS, KATHERINE LITTLE. Story-lives of great composers. 264p il $2.50 Stokes

927.8 Musicians (W) 40-27589

Biographical sketches of nineteen composers selected to supplement Harriette Brower's Story-Lives of Master Musicians (Book Review Digest, 1922). Contents: Sergei Rachmaninoff; Richard Strauss; Jean Sibelius; Igor Stravinsky; Giacomo Puccini; Sir Edward Elgar; Engelbert Humperdinck; Sir Arthur Sullivan; Georges Bizet; Jules Massenet; Nicholas Rimsky-Korsakoff; Modeste Moussorgsky; Alexander Borodin; Frederick Smetana; Antonín Dvořák; Charles Gounod; Gioacchino Rossini; Henry Purcell; Alessandro Scarlatti. For grades six to eight.

"Informal anecdotes rather than critical evaluations are given; the writing is uninspired and there is a tendency to talk down, but the book is useful."
Booklist 37:17 S '40

"The arrangement is unusual. Beginning with living masters, Mrs. Bakeless works backward through the years from Rachmaninoff to Scarlatti. The result is a stimulating and enlightening series of studies of the influences of great musicians upon each other. Supplemented by a valuable list of records, this is a book to arouse musical interest and appreciation in young and old." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:344 S '40 110w

"Material rich in anecdote; good background for any age beginner in music appreciation. There is no index but this does not seem necessary. A list of representative records is appended. Format satisfactory." Maude Adams
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 150w
Wis Lib Bul 36:150 N '40

BAKER, ALOHA. Call to adventure! 276p il map $2 McBride

910.4 Voyages and travel. Adventure and adventurers 39-33108

Travel adventures of a young girl who at sixteen left her boarding-school in Nice to become a member of an expedition making its way around the world to take motion pictures. By luck and bravado she managed to get inside the walls of Mecca while the expedition, with no permit to enter, had to wait outside. She drove thru the Khyber pass, piloted a car alone from Bombay to Calcutta and made her way thru many other seemingly impassable parts of the world.

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 100w

"The reader is assured of thrills, and the seasoned traveler will marvel at the tenacity and endurance shown in the undertaking."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 26 '40 750w

BAKER, ARCHIBALD GILLIES, ed. A short history of Christianity; written in collaboration by [the editor] and others. 279p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

270 Church history 40-34185

"The authors have prepared a digest of church history. The book is planned for the use of the serious reader who has only a limited time at his disposal. It is also designed as a textbook for study classes. The material has been cast into the structural form of thirty-two sections, which may be arranged in a series of lessons according to the convenience of the study group. While there has been consultation between the various authors in order to give structural unity to the story of the church, each writer is responsible only for his own contribution." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"Unlike some other general surveys of history that one might mention, this book has two outstanding virtues. First, it is equally dependable in all of its parts; its several authors are mature and reliable scholars in each of the areas they discuss. And, in the second place, there is due regard for proportion in the several parts and a comprehensive grasp of content often lacking in many larger books on the subject."
+ Books p32 N 17 '40 200w

"A Short History of Christianity is popularly written and presented, with workmanship and arrangement and style and print and paper enhancing the interest of the reader. It is non-controversial and constructive throughout with a minimum of dates to delay its appreciation. A specialist in a particular area deals with that special story, and yet one does not experience any considerable jar in passing from, for example, 'Christianity and the Fall of Rome' to 'Christianity in Medieval Europe.' The authors wrote with one eye on the contemporary situation and the other upon their special audience—the average American who is wondering about the value of Christianity to contemporary culture." C. H. Moehlman
+ Christian Century 57:1344 O 30 '40 650w

"These six writers, each handling the era best known to him, have done an excellent piece of work. Any parson who thinks his

BAKER, A. G., ed.—Continued
laymen ought to know something about the history of their religion would do well to recommend this volume. It can be done with the assurance that even a layman will not be bored." James van Zant
+ Churchman 154:17 D 1 '40 220w

"A timely, readable, and reliable history of the Christian movement from its rise to the present day." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 18:78 Ja '41 190w

"There are several excellent general church histories that one may read, but a number of these are so crowded with detail that a reader approaching them without some background is in danger of missing his way, even though he has the time and the will to persevere. The Short History avoids this danger by concentrating upon the really significant men and movements. If the ability to achieve clarity in brevity is one of the severest tests of learning, Professor Baker and his associates have passed with distinction. Simplicity is not purchased at any sacrifice of scholarship and accuracy. The fairness of the book is conspicuous, which can hardly be said of some of the little church histories parsons are wont to have on their shelves. To be sure, there are a few slips of a kind almost unavoidable under such rigid economy of space." P. V. Norwood
+ J Religion 21:94 Ja '41 400w

BAKER, CHARLES HENRY. The gentleman's companion. ltd ed 2v 242;235p il $15 Derrydale

641 Cookery. Beverages 40-254

"As the name implies [this] is no lady's cookery book. Its author is a man of stanch likes and fervent aversions. . . The first volume is given over to food, and the recipes from Asia, Africa, Hawaii, the West Indies, the Philippines, the three Americas, and the British and Dutch East Indies—to give but a sampling of the 'furrin parts'—are restricted to those whose ingredients, either fresh or in cans, may be procured in any large city. . . The second volume contains the formulas for some two hundred and sixty-seven liquid alleviators of man's mundane martyrdom—from Charleston's St. Cecelia Punch to Sloppy Joe's Mojito." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by H. N. Gardner
Boston Transcript p2 F 3 '40 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p27 Ag 25 '40 900w

BAKER, HAROLD ATHERTON. Principles of retail merchandising. 462p $4 (26s) McGraw

658.87 Retail trade 40-616

"The purpose of this book is to give the student of retailing a general survey of those principles which govern successful store management. The first two chapters give a very brief historical background and an outline of present-day types of retail institutions. After this introduction the book discusses the various phases of retailing in the order in which they might arise in the average store." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The book is well written and should be satisfactory either as a text or a reference book on merchandising. At the end of each chapter are found lists of questions, references to published cases and problems, and a bibliography. For many instructors the teaching qualities of the book would be improved if more attention were given to the priniciples involved in the use of the techniques and procedures which are considered in detail." E. H. Gault
+ — Am Econ R 30:620 S '40 220w
Management R 28:456 D '39 50w

BAKER, MARGARET. Lady Arabella's birthday party; pictures by Mary Baker. unp $1.75 Dodd [4s Blackwell]

40-31116

On the little Lady Arabella's first birthday everybody was so busy that no one had time to take care of the baby. In the herdsman's cottage the one-year-old Betsy was having the same trouble. They were both passed along from one person to another until they finally met. And then things became more complicated than ever.

"This humorous repetitive tale is cleverly illustrated with Mary Baker's dainty silhouettes. It will be enjoyed by girls seven to nine." Jean Stewart
+ Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 150w

"A story full of the gayety and kindly humor we expect from Margaret and Mary Baker. The spirited, light-hearted silhouettes as always, tell the story almost without the need for words. A childlike and delightful book for boys and girls from 7 to 9." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p34 N 10 '40 130w

"Amiable." Z. C. Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 20w

BAKER, RUSSELL RAY. So that's chemistry! photographic il. by E. N. Stanger. 128p $1 Reilly & Lee

540 Chemistry—Juvenile literature 40-8901

"Information on such things as salt in the earth, neon signs, electric ice boxes, etc. is presented in understandable language, and in an entertaining manner. These 'scientific adventures' of Bobby and the Old Professor have appeared as syndicated material in newspapers. Grades 4-6." Wis Lib Bul

---

"Bobby asks about things that interest every boy or girl of grade school or high school age, and the 'old professor's' answers not only give accurate information, but they make even the most complicated things easy to understand and entertaining. While not particularly designed for parents and adults in general, 'So That's Chemistry!' should prove instructive to those who have never studied the subject or have lost touch with the essentials of it."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 10 '40 180w
Wis Lib Bul 36:71 Ap '40

BAKKEN, HENRY HARRISON. Cooperation to the Finnish; il. by B. C. Jorns. 220p il $2.50 Mimir, box 2002, Madison, Wis.

334 Cooperation. Finland—Economic conditions 40-27057

"Although Henry H. Bakken, of the University of Wisconsin, prefaces [this book] with a brief historical outline, his volume is a technical study of the development and present conditions of coöperatives in Finland. He gives the background, tradition, and history of coöperative organizations in industry, timber, fish, insurance—going into especial detail regarding the cost of manufacturing and marketing evaporated milk." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by T. V. Kalijarvi
Ann Am Acad 209:216 My '40 280w
Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

Reviewed by Agnes Rothery
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 2 '40 90w
Wis Lib Bul 36:44 Mr '40

BALCH, DAVID ARNOLD. Elbert Hubbard, genius of Roycroft; a biography. 320p il $2.50 Stokes

B or 92 Hubbard, Elbert (W) 40-27198

Biography of the author of A Message to Garcia, the one-time soap salesman, who became founder of the colony at East Aurora, New York, from which emanated thousands of limp-leather bound books in the '90s, and the early 1900s.

"The book presents him fairly and fully, and, though it has no merit of style, it is so well organized that it is easily read."
+ Atlantic Ap '40 120w

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

"David Arnold Balch has written a 'straight' biography of a man who would make a marvelous subject for a more 'modern' treatment. His story is worth reading; the writing is clear, though undistinguished and unduly afflicted with exclamation marks. And it is hard to forgive Mr. Balch for continually referring to Elbert's mother as—you've guessed it—Mother Hubbard." Lorine Pruette
+ — Books p12 F 25 '40 500w

"It would be hard to write a dull book about this man, and Mr. Balch has written a lively and entertaining one. It is unfortunate that he was not better acquainted with the times in which Hubbard lived. For no other times in no other country could have produced such a man. As it stands, the book lacks perspective." E. S. Morgan
+ — Boston Transcript p11 F 23 '40 370w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 27 '40 500w

"Mr. Balch's undocumented narrative in slangy, commonplace prose somehow does justice to its shoddy subject without in the least depicting the times that made the incredible Fra of East Aurora famous." H. A. Larrabee
New Eng Q 13:352 Je '40 450w

"Mr. Balch tells the curious story of his life, with no great discernment, but with a slangy informality that is still better suited to the subject."
New Repub 102:353 Mr 11 '40 70w

"A readable, interesting and well-balanced biography, a little on the sentimental side, but one longs for the touch of—say—Gamaliel Bradford." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p4 F 25 '40 1450w

Discussion by Benjamin DeCasseres
N Y Times p18 My 5 '40 190w

"I do not feel that Mr. Balch quite solves the Hubbard puzzle. He puts the pieces on the table before us, as it were, without joining them in a coherent pattern. But at least he brings them into clear view. If he is perhaps over-kind to his subject, at least he is straightforward in his praise and attentive to fact. He usefully opens the way for those who may want to try their hand at the puzzle and would otherwise be baffled by the shakiness of much of the evidence hitherto available." F. L. Allen
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 F 24 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 850w

Time 35:89 F 26 '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:47 Mr '40

BALCH, GLENN. Hide-Rack kidnapped; il. by George F. Mason. 302p $2 Crowell

Dogs—Legends and stories 39-25709

"Hide-Rack was the best sheep herder in the Salmon River country of Idaho. He was a great golden collie dog, the pride and joy of his owner, young Chet Foster, who lived with his father, Ace, in the Idaho back-country. Two dishonest men hit upon a plan to kidnap Hide-Rack and hold him for ransom. Their plan miscarried, but Hide-Rack, imprisoned in a big packing box, was started on the most exciting journey any dog ever had." Publisher's note

"Here is a rough, tough dog-story so tough indeed that the opening chapters almost made me turn it over to the adult department. But as it kept me reading on, I realized that boys need, even more than men, to be shown that loyalty can win against treachery and character outlast cruelty. . . Mr. Balch is sound in his attitude to limitations as well as powers of dog-nature. One of the limitations of Hide-Rack's nature is that he is not able to forget a friend." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ja 28 '40 250w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow
Library J 65:124 F 1 '40 150w

BALCH, MARSTON, ed. Modern short biographies and autobiographies. 589p $2; text ed $1.40 Harcourt

920 Biography (as a literary form) (W) 40-27133

"The selections now number 26 instead of the 18 in the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1935]. Several have been omitted in favor of new ones and autobiographies are now represented." Booklist

Booklist 36:287 Mr 15 '40

"Though the anthology is intended chiefly for the college student as illustration of various techniques in these two forms, there is plenty of reason for it to appeal to a wider audience."
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 60w

"An interesting collection, well representative of more capable recent American writing." + Commonweal 31:436 Mr 8 '40 90w

"Virtually a new book, and an enjoyable one."
+ New Repub 102:513 Ap 15 '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:67 Ap '40

BALDWIN, ALFRED GRAHAM. The drama of our religion. 253p $2.50; text ed $1.80 Oxford

220.95 Bible. Whole—History of Biblical events 39-34012

"A study of early Hebrew history and the beginning of Christianity, with special reference to the development of the religious consciousness of children through a right understanding of the Bible both as history and as revelation. The book may be used as a textbook or as a supplementary reading book. . . Each chapter is preceded by a short list of passages from the Bible and other sources. The author is a member of the faculty of Phillips academy, Andover." Living Church

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 50w

"This volume is both more and less than a text. Let us call it a downright good little volume for its purpose, well written and at most points far more adequate than much of the material designed for this particular age group." C. S. Knopf
+ Christian Century 57:315 Mr 6 '40 550w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 20 '40 1150w

"This book is written particularly for secondary school ages, and it should be a most excellent text book for them." H. J. Simpson
+ Churchman 154:21 Ja 15 '40 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

Reviewed by W. C. Bower
J Religion 20:408 O '40 90w

"Boys and girls of high school age should have it." Elizabeth McCracken + Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 70w

BALDWIN, ARTHUR H. Junior skipper's handbook. 102p il $1 Random house

797.1 Sailing. Boats and boating 40-13950

"A guide to sailing for boys and girls." (Subtitle) Partial contents: General approach to sailing; How to obtain a boat; How does a sailboat sail? Ground tackle and mooring gear; How to care for your boat; Your nautical dictionary.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 70w

BALDWIN, A. H.—Continued
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 150w

"Occasionally a book gets published that cries for individual ownership. Every boy and girl who sails a boat, or hopes to, needs a copy of this simple little handbook for his or her own. . . Arthur Baldwin is well known for his 'Sou'wester' books." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 140w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

"It was a happy thought for Arthur Baldwin . . . to write out of his experience as veteran sailor this concise little guide for the beginner. . . There are twenty-four excellent drawings and diagrams and a Nautical Dictionary consisting of a sixteen-page glossary of sailing terms. The book is light and compact and will fit easily into a pocket." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 S 8 '40 240w

BALDWIN, CHARLES SEARS. Renaissance literary theory and practice; ed. with introd. by Donald Lemen Clark. 251p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [14s Oxford]

808 Rhetoric. Literature—History and criticism 40-1515

This study of "classicism in the rhetoric and poetic of Italy, France, and England, 1400-1600" (Subtitle) traces the influences of literary theory on literary practice during that period. It proceeds thru a study of prose and poetic forms to romance, drama, narrative and the essay, giving attention to individual writers in each field. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 17:150 Ap '40 240w

"In spite of the absence of bibliographic aid and of any but the most cursory references in footnotes, the book offers a rapid and clear review of a number of works which by precept or example represent the attitudes of important Renaissance writers toward their craft. It is not a student's handbook, except for the student who wishes an expert to summarize and comment for him; but it is the work of a keen mind trained by predisposing interest and by long apprenticeship to analysis of the means whereby human beings express their thoughts in the written word." R. V. Merrill
+ Library Q 10:301 Ap '40 700w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Letty and the law. 248p $2 Farrar 40-12356

When young David Alcott was given a position in Richard Talbot's law office he was also assigned the task of managing Letty McDonald's estate. Letty was pretty, wealthy, and a handful, but David, tho he found it a tough assignment, succeeded in the end in taming her.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p17 S 8 '40 290w

"In spite of the serious side of the story, which receives Miss Baldwin's usual sympathetic treatment, it is on the whole a gay little tale, with graphically described houses and clothes to make feminine readers envious, and lots of amusing conversation." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p18 S 1 '40 280w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Medical center. 370p il $2.50 Farrar 40-33359

A half dozen love stories running concurrently in the same setting, a huge hospital in New York.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p22 N 24 '40 280w

"Faith Baldwin writes, as always, with a good deal of warmth and conviction, and she is expert enough at plotting to get most of her characters plausibly out of their emotional entanglements. From start to finish 'Medical Center' is a very smooth and well tailored piece of story telling." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 N 24 '40 550w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Rehearsal for love. 301p $2 Farrar 40-6297

Story of New York life today, and of four intertwined lives. The climax comes during the great hurricane, 1938.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p23 Mr 3 '40 250w

"Despite its sophisticated background and the glamorous cosmopolitan set around which it revolves, 'Rehearsal for Love' is a decided letdown from the previous novel." M. P. Johnson
— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 110w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '40 160w
Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 2 '40 130w

BALDWIN, FAITH (MRS HUGH HAMLIN CUTHRELL). Something special. 293p $2 Farrar 40-9006

Marriage and divorce among the wealthier class of New Yorkers is the problem of this novel. The Merediths had been happily married for fourteen years, when a small cloud appeared on the horizon. The cloud led to divorce. But the marriage proved to be the permanent kind, after all.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Je 2 '40 260w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 180w

"The novel, as a matter of fact, isn't 'Something Special' but rather the standard Faith Baldwin brand, readable and amusing as always." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p15 Je 2 '40 390w

"This latest novel by Faith Baldwin . . . has the same easy, witty, and fast moving style; it has the same beautiful girls and well groomed men for characters; and it has a plot that carries the story and its men and women from one gay glamour spot to another." G. G.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 24 '40 250w

BALDWIN, MARSHALL WHITHED. The medieval papacy in action. (Christendom ser) 113p $1 Macmillan

262.13 Papacy. Church history—Middle ages 40-31208

A survey of the activities of the papacy in the field of ecclesiastical administration during the period from the accession of St Leo IX in 1049 to the death of Innocent IV in 1254. The author is assistant professor of history at New York University.

"Solid and enlightening, although not precisely the type of book that serves the purpose of a beginner, it provides a point of view and sound arguments which will be welcomed by many who have been confused or misinformed about the character of the medieval papacy at the height of its power."
+ Cath World 152:507 Ja '41 170w

"Roman Catholic propaganda history, expertly written."
Christian Century 57:1180 S 25 '40 30w

"Dr. Baldwin has written an excellent little book, and has appended a bibliographical note and abstract for study and review that add to its appeal to students." F. D. Cohalan

+ Commonweal 33:106 N 15 '40 650w

Reviewed by Allen Cabaniss

J Religion 21:95 Ja '41 260w

BALL, MAX WAITE. This fascinating oil business; il. by Jack Housez; maps by Sven W. Reims and C. G. Mundy. 444p maps $3 Bobbs

665.5 Petroleum industry and trade (W) 40-27422

An explanation of oil geology, the technique of drilling, transportation, and refining. Partial contents: What is oil? Picking the place to drill—the theory; Acquiring the right to drill; Drilling the well; Producing the oil—the principles of it; Transporting the oil; Refining the oil—the chemistry of it; Disposing of the products; New worlds to conquer; Oil in the old world; Oil in the new world; Oil and the war. Statistical tables. Index.

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:24 Ap '40

"This is not a war book; it is very definitely an oil book. It gives in a remarkably readable form an ample presentation of the production, transportation, refining and distribution of the commodity that is so nobly adapted to the uses of civilization and frequently misused. There is also enough history to lend an added interest, and a concise description of the world's oil fields. . . A very full index adds to the high reference value of the book." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p8 Je 9 '40 490w

Pratt p13 autumn '40

"We groaned when we read the title of this book and wondered why an author must choose such a shop-worn adjective as 'fascinating.' Now that we have finished our reading, we feel more humble and announce that this is a fascinating book on a fascinating subject. Its distinguished author has produced literally a masterpiece, for he has made his subject with all its complex and variable ramifications an intensely human document."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 Ap '40 450w

BALLOU, EARLE HOIT. Dangerous opportunity. 211p map $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

266 Missions—China 40-14097

An account of Christian missions in China and the position of the Chinese church in the present conflict. The author is an American who has spent nearly twenty-five years in missionary work in China. Reading list. Index.

Booklist 37:5 S '40

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 40w

Christian Century 57:798 Je 19 '40 90w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson

Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 220w

BALLOU, JENNY. Period piece: Ella Wheeler Wilcox and her times. 287p il $3 Houghton

B or 92 Wilcox, Mrs Ella (Wheeler) (W) 40-27058

Study of the life and times of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, whose "poems of passion" were read and enjoyed by thousands during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

"Its point of view has merit, but it is overwritten into many pages of sheer gossip—which, however, is decent and readable."

+ — Atlantic Mr '40 30w

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40

"Combining the often incompatible qualities of wit, sympathetic imagination and criticism, Miss Ballou has delightfully recreated an epoch and a personality." A. B. Parsons

+ Books p3 F 4 '40 1650w

"Miss Ballou revives a whole sub-literary world in her 'Period Piece.' Perhaps she works a little too hard at it, but I found it amusing. It cannot be said that Mrs. Wilcox's life requires profound treatment, but Miss Ballou wrings everything out of it that she can. She makes the valuable suggestion that a study of sub-literary literature in These States would illumine the national mind, and I think she is right." H. M. J.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"As Stephen Vincent Benét has already pointed out, there is a real story to be told of Ella Wheeler Wilcox and her times, but Jenny Ballou has not told it. She gives us the sense of presenting gossip and other people's opinions on Ella Wheeler Wilcox rather than writing her own book. But 'the mixture of jejune rhetoric and uncritical literary criticism,' to which Stephen Vincent Benét also refers, is undoubtedly her own; and it is with this that I propose to deal. . . Jenny Ballou's literary criticism represents a solid grade of assured Philistinism of the kind most calculated to exasperate people who take literature—and especially poetry—seriously." M. M. Colum

— Forum 103:194 Ap '40 1400w

Living Age 358:195 Ap '40 80w

"Miss Ballou's brilliantly entertaining book flings a fiery challenge to a generation that is no longer naïve." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 F 4 '40 1300w

"The authoress of 'Poems of Passion' was a funny and pathetic figure. Miss Ballou, though, stresses not her ridiculousness or even the pathos of her foolishly grandiose life but rather her value as a culture symbol." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 15:68 F 3 '40 190w

"While Miss Ballou knows the words, she doesn't know the tune. There is a real story to be told of the barefoot Wisconsin girl who became the Poetess of Passion and the Sibyl of Short Beach—there is a real story to be told of her times. Unfortunately Miss Ballou has chosen to tell it in the most exasperating manner possible. She skips back and forth in time, she starts hares that she never runs down, she comments upon Theodore Roosevelt and the Chicago World's Fair, upon anything and everything that might conceivably bear upon her subject—and yet, in the end, presents neither the clear and vivid portrait of a woman nor the picture of a time." S. V. Benét

— + Sat R of Lit 21:10 F 3 '40 480w

"Miss Ballou pictures lightly the background of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's life. We run across popular theories that helped to make the atmosphere of those times. All this yields much entertainment, much humor and a great deal of derision. Now and again Miss Ballou becomes thoughtful and states her own views of trends and theories with much seriousness. It is a book that will delight those who lived through the days of the Ella Wheeler Wilcox cult."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 4 '40 1500w

Time 35:64 F 5 '40 650w

Wis Lib Bul 36:47 Mr '40

"Amusing and provocative book." G. S Haight

+ Yale R n s 29:631 spring '40 550w

BAMFORD, FRANK. Poisons: their isolation and identification; with foreword by Sydney Smith. 344p il $4 Blakiston [18s Churchill]

543.5 Poisons

"Covers a wide field between the introductory chapter, devoted to the question of organization and equipment of a modern laboratory, and the concluding chapter, which deals with the drugs of addiction and includes opium, its

BAMFORD, FRANK—Continued
alkaloids, cocaine, nutmeg, the atropine group, gelsemine, chloroform, ether, petrol, chloral, the barbiturates, fly-agaric, the anhalonium drugs and also hashish, which receives a generous contribution. Early in the book, a classification of poisons is provided and thereafter each group is dealt with." Nature

"Very few writers on the subject of poisons have had as great a wealth of practical experience to draw from as did the author of this book. There are few laboratories in the world that compare with the Medico-Legal Institute in Cairo in the annual number of cases of criminal poisonings investigated. Although all subjects are not uniformly well-treated, and although the bibliography is incomplete and in places inaccurate, the book constitutes a valuable contribution to the field of toxicology and is highly recommended." A. R. Moritz
+ Am Chem Soc J 62:2571 S '40 250w

"The book can be recommended for the chemist who has had some experience in toxicological analysis and who wants a concise description of the more important features in that field." H. E. French
+ Am J Pub Health 30:1479 D '40 400w

"It is a matter of widespread regret that the death of the author of this excellent handbook precluded him from seeing the finished product of the subject-matter on which he had lavished so much care and patience. His son, H. F. Bamford, and Dr. G. D. Elsdon are to be congratulated on their final preparation of the book for the press. The publishers have maintained their usual high standard in the production of this volume which is well indexed." J. Glaister
+ Nature 146:414 S 28 '40 550w

BANNERMAN, MRS HELEN. The story of the teasing monkey [il. by the author]. unp 75c Stokes

"Here's a case where a reprint is spot news. The author of 'Little Black Sambo' made this charming book thirty years ago; it has a lion that deserves a place by the side of the tiger in that earlier masterpiece. The monkey is caught by this lion—he looks rather like the one on the coat of arms, only woollier—and meant for a feast, but so dire an aim is frustrated, and the monkey is last seen in a tree shaking down cocoanuts on his pursuer's head." Books

Booklist 37:76 O 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Books p9 S 29 '40 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:433 N '40 50w

"The illustrations have humor and storytelling quality and a wide appeal but little skill in drawing. Children from six to eight will enjoy reading it to themselves and still younger ones will like to have it read aloud." E. W. Turpin
Library J 65:660 Ag '40 90w

BANNING, KENDALL. The fleet today. 346p il map $2.50 Funk
359 U.S.—Navy (W) 40-27796

Follows the life of United States sailors from the day of enlistment, thru their training, to their service on battleship, destroyer, submarine, or in the naval air force. Contains a list, with data, of the United States battleships, destroyers, submarines, auxiliary vessels, and a directory of training schools. Index.

Booklist 37:147 D 15 '40

"This compact and thorough study of the American Fleet is interesting and valuable. It should be read by a large number of young men who are considering volunteering for enlistment in the Navy or the Army." W. C. Rivers
+ Books p25 N 17 '40 600w

"The book has the approval of the Chief of Naval Operations. Mr. Banning has done an exceptionally fine job of presenting a detailed, informative picture of the U.S. Navy, statistics and all, in a manner that is always interesting and which at times is breath-takingly exciting or hilariously amusing." H. L. H.
+ Special Libraries 31:444 D '40

"'The Fleet Today' is not too technical for the layman and will provide much valuable information for the prospective recruit."
Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 17 '41 310w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN). Enough to live on. 271p $2 Harper
40-13548

Two young people, eager to marry, figure it all out that forty dollars a week, carefully managed, will be enough to live on. This story, of a first year of married love, tells of their failures and hard times and of a happiness almost but not quite wrecked.

Booklist 37:69 O 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p11 Ag 4 '40 180w

"The story winds up happily but it doesn't tell how to beat the budget without more money. It is a readable and moderately entertaining book but not exactly escape fiction for most people." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p18 Ag 4 '40 330w
Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN). Out in society. 291p $2.50 Harper
40-6738

Dunster City's loveliest and wealthiest debutante was the Ferratin girl, Barbara. Barbara was engaged to the town's most promising young lawyer, Judge Slade's son; then into these two well-planned lives came two others, another young lawyer who lacked Wedge Slade's background and a girl just graduated from business college. How and why the affairs of all are shuffled about, forms the central theme of this story of society and politics in a city not too far from New York.

"An excellent novel, terse and timely and certainly not flattering in its appraisal of the manner in which heiresses are polished off to take their place in society." Lisle Bell
+ Books p15 Mr 24 '40 300w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 180w

"Though this is a light novel there is no single spark of humor in it. Cafe society is represented, but not one wisecrack. The language is that of commonplace people who frequently lecture when they talk but never make a sparkling remark, or an original remark, or a comment that goes beneath the surface." Robert Van Gelder
— N Y Times p21 Mr 24 '40 480w
Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 30 '40 140w
Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

BARBER, EDITH MICHAEL, comp. Edith Barber's cook book. 524p il $2.50 Putnam
641.5 Cookery 40-27373

"The author of this cookbook is . . . editor of the food column in the New York Sun. The introductory chapters deal with food selection, hospitality, and general cooking suggestions. Then come recipes tested in Miss Barber's own kitchen and assembled under 20-odd headings from appetizers and beverages to soups and vegetables." J Home Econ

Booklist 36:339 My 1 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40
J Home Econ 32:396 Je '40 80w
Pratt p12 autumn '40

BARBER, EDITH MICHAEL. Speaking of servants; il. by Chichi Lasley. (Whittlesey house publication) 256p $2 McGraw

647.25 Servants. Home economics (W) 40-35547

"How to hire, train, and manage household employees." (Subtitle) Contents: What's the matter with household employment? Housekeeping as a career; Engaging an employee; Those important first days; The general houseworker; The part-time worker; The two-employee problem; Schedule breakers; General house care; The kitchen; The laundry question; Table service; Parties; Past, present, and future standards of household employment. Index.

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

"The rather catchy title hardly does justice to the care with which Miss Barber has assembled the information for this thoughtful discussion of present problems of household employment. . . Let us hope that the pleasant style and the good, practical suggestions on housekeeping and hospitality will 'sell' the rest of it to indifferent 'mistresses.'"

+ J Home Econ 33:45 Ja '41 100w

BARBER, WILLETTA ANN, and SCHABELITZ, RUDOLPH FREDERICK. Murder draws a line. 333p il $2 Doubleday 40-31451

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 11 '40 250w

"The drawings—there are forty of them, according to the jacket—play an important part in the solving of the case. In fact, if you look at the pictures first you will know by page 160 who did the killings. Without sketches this would be a fine series of murders—with them it is excellent." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 80w

"The story has many good points, but there is too much theorizing, too much recapitulation of the evidence or lack of evidence and too much 'little did we know then that,' etc., all of which slows the narrative down more than most readers will like." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 18 '40 240w

"Plot excellent, characters vivid, numerous illustrations enlightening—but superabundance of had-I-but-knowning annoys cranky judge."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 10 '40 40w

BARBOUR, RALPH HENRY. Death in the Virgins. 340p $2 Appleton-Century 40-3355

Mystery story, the scene of which is the island of St Thomas.

"Replete with gentle sentiment, parties, trips and local color, and not so innocuous as it sounds. You'll hardly be white to the lips while reading this number, but it isn't that sort of thing." Will Cuppy

Books p17 F 11 '40 90w

"The author so well sets the sleepy setting at the opening, that the book somehow never fully wakes up." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 30w

"The story is a bit sentimental, especially at the end, but there are good reasons for that, and few readers will quarrel with the author because of it since it does not interfere in the least with the plot. Mr. Barbour usually writes stories for boys, but this book shows that he has another string to his bow and knows how to use it." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 F 11 '40 140w

"Lots of color, and murder looks as beautiful as anything against the blue of the Caribbean."

New Yorker 15:72 F 3 '40 40w

BARCLAY, WADE CRAWFORD. The church and a Christian society; a discussion of aims, content, and method of adult Christian education. 428p $3.50 Abingdon

268 Religious education 40-4928

"Dr. Barclay, who has held responsible positions in the Methodist Church, attempts, by a discussion of the aims, content and method of adult Christian education to develop an outline of a society worthy to be called Christian. He finds his norm in Jesus, whose ideal must be applied in the social relations of men as well as in personal life, today as in the first Christian century. The author sets forth in outline the terms of what he considers a Christian society." Boston Transcript

"There is nothing in this book which would give us a clue to the reason for the emergence of dictators, the rise of tyranny, the spread of racial bigotry, etc. The simple fact is that history is somewhat more tragic than the presuppositions of liberal religion or liberal secularism allow us to envisage. But, granted these presuppositions, one could not ask for a more thorough and enlightened charting of the church's educational and social task than this book unfolds." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Books p21 My 12 '40 700w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '40 200w

"Much might be said by way of pointing out shortcomings in the book. It is repetitious at points. Statements concerning the present world scene are not always as carefully documented as they might be. Too much stress is placed upon worship as a way of getting power for living by having it handed over in some mysterious fashion. . . All this is more or less incidental to the main thesis of the book, however, and as such should not be allowed to detract from the significance of the volume. Every religious worker should read it for it has implications that are wider than the religious education of adults." M. T. Hopper

+ — Christian Century 57:578 My 1 '40 1000w

"Few books of this type are so intensely practical and at the same time (dread word)—inspirational. It is refreshingly of today and deals candidly with the great problems of social living that the church must be brought to face. Its 400 pages are both a pleasure to read and a challenge." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 154:17 Mr 1 '40 210w

"Dr. Barclay has given the public in this volume the most exhaustive and competent treatment that has thus far appeared on adult education in the church. The discussion is detailed, well grounded in the supporting disciplines of history, philosophy, and psychology, and is well documented. While not 'written down' to a 'lay' audience, it is thoroughly readable. As the title-page indicates, it is a comprehensive discussion of the aims, content, and method of Christian adult education." W. C. Bower

+ J Religion 20:314 Jl '40 390w

BARDWELL, DENVER, pseud. See Sayers, J. D.

BARKER, ROLAND. Jonah's ark. 286p il $2.50 Carlyle 40-11445

Just before the Lurlei, last of the square-riggers to fly the American flag, sails from New York, the captain signs on a young Jew. His act is resented by his mate, and among the crew Adam Abelstein is immediately nominated the Jonah of the passage. How the captain sticks to his guns and how Adam learns the ways of sail on the long trip to Honolulu make up the story.

"The cards are too heavily stacked for the game to hold much interest. Mr. Barker knows ships and the sea, and some of his descriptions bring gusts of life to the pages.

BARKER, ROLAND—Continued
But such passages occur with not enough frequency to pull the narrative out of the doldrums." J. S. Mabon
+ — Books p8 Je 23 '40 460w

"Mr. Barker ends on a light and wholly unexpected note. The novel is not tops in its genre, but it is a story which should be well liked by those who enjoy full-blooded tales of the sea." Percy Hutchison
+ — N Y Times p7 Je 9 '40 430w

"Possibly the author had an allegory in mind; if so, it is not plain to the reader. What does appear is a rather aimless, farfetched record of day to day happenings on a sailing ship rounded by no conclusion. Some of the descriptions are excellent, but the characters do not seem real."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 150w

BARKER, ROLAND. Windjammer boy; il. by Charles Rosner. 180p $2 J. F. Winters, room 1415, 205 E. 42d st, N.Y.

910.4 Seafaring life. Voyages and travels
39-32806

Story of an exciting voyage around Cape Horn in a grain ship. Glossary.

Booklist 36:290 Mr 15 '40

"Not a great deal of the hardships of a sailor's life is evident in this pleasant reminiscence, but neither does it ooze with the excessive sentiment often characterizing the yarns of the last deep water sailors." E. B. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 160w

"The book is replete with exciting incidents, sea-lore with salt water terms galore, so the glossary will be of great value to the reader. However, Mr. Barker does not seem to enter wholly into the dialect of his seamen. His cultured English is too frequently placed in the mouths of the weather-beaten salties. If this were intended as a book for boys, he should have used simpler words throughout. The book will most likely appeal to older boys and adults who enjoy sea stories." Sonja Wennerblad
+ — Library J 65:172 F 15 '40 70w

"Authentic sea stuff."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:34 D 2 '39 20w

BARLOW, IMA CHRISTINA. The Agadir crisis. 422p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

964 Morocco. France—Foreign relations—Morocco. Germany—Foreign relations—Morocco. Europe—Politics. Agadir, Morocco 40-10877

Discussion and analysis of the Agadir crisis of 1911, which brought Europe to the verge of war. The author describes how France gained a protectorate over the greater part of Morocco, and ceded Germany a part of the French Congo in recompense, thereby pleasing no one and paving the way for the first World war Bibliography. Index.

"Even more praiseworthy than her industry is the author's fairness in dealing with controversial questions. . . Where the evidence seems sufficiently convincing there is no hesitation in differing with accepted interpretations. . . The author condemns Kiderlen for the Panther's spring at Agadir, Grey for his failure to give Germany time to reply to his request for information on June 21, and Lloyd George for his Mansion House speech, but her disapproval of British statesmen is expressed more vividly—a practice that is not without precedent. While a refreshing relief from the colorless narrative of many monographs, these value-judgments are dangerous." E. M. Carroll
+ — Am Hist R 46:406 Ja '41 550w

"An interesting, careful, intensive study. . . The analysis is clear and straightforward even when the narration goes into minute details. The judgments of the book are sound; its conclusions grow logically out of the facts of the situation. . . The book is a veritable manual in European diplomacy. It is written for those who already know the setting and who can place the Moroccan crisis in perspective with contemporaneous happenings. The narrative, however, often loses force by a predominantly mental approach." O. G. Darlington
+ — Ann Am Acad 211:199 S '40 500w

"Professor Barlow has done the historians a favor by sorting out the ravelled threads of this unhappy tangle. Her patience and scholarship are commendable and her monograph is a useful addition to the shelves of diplomatic history." Geoffrey Bruun
+ Books p16 S 8 '40 370w
New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 40w

BARNABAS, BROTHER, pseud. The wicked book. 413p $2.75 Smith, Richard R.

320.158 Patriotism
40-8404

"A tract in defense of the New Deal and a militant policy against the aggressor nations, disguised as the whimsical story of a man who takes refuge in a poorhouse to meditate on ways of teaching patriotism to his countrymen." New Repub

"The scenes in the poor house and the delineations of the paupers are done with a genuine humor and liking for eccentrics. The short description of the Negro putting himself to sleep is a real gem. But the alternating chapters in which schemes for training good Americans is set forth are very hard going. They have bite, but they are unconvincing."
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 29 '40 80w

"At a time when Rabelaisian has come to mean dirty, this book is Rabelaisian because it imitates the style of François Rabelais. François is still better."
New Repub 103:702 N 18 '40 60w

"Fantastic but deserving of attention. . . In this strange admixture of fictional tales and the fantasy of dreams are revealed deep-thinking sincerity and patriotism. Brother Barnabas has positive opinions, but he has expressed them well."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 600w

BARNARD, INMAN. Cities and men; ed. with an introd. by Sisley Huddleston. 256p il $3 Dutton [12s 6d Bles]

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
40-31447

Autobiography of "an American journalist who has lived for some forty years in France . . . [and] who now at the age of ninety years searches in a memory which takes him back to a meeting with Mr. Lincoln and a kiss from Rachel. . . He has known men in most countries and of every kind—principally his chief, James Gordon Bennett. . . Mr. Barnard, whom Rachel greeted in his native Boston in 1856, acquired, perhaps at that age, an interest in the theatre; he was a friend of Sarah Bernhardt, of Sardou and of Antoine, the founder of the Théatre Libre, who produced Zola's plays and Ibsen's. In his later years he was intimate with Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador at the Elysée during the last war." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by Wilbur Forrest
Books p18 S 29 '40 700w

"The book is a rather rambling potpourri of reminiscences without any effort at integration. But the author has seen enough interesting things to justify this method of writing; and one is constantly stumbling on odd, curious, and interesting bits of information."
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 12 '40 600w
Commonweal 32:515 O 11 '40 110w
New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 30w
N Y Times p51 D 1 '40 440w

"As is natural in a book by so old an author, the early recollections are sharper and more brightly told than the later. Mr. Huddleston has helped his friend, and written a good introduction. He might, however, have done a little more towards correcting obvious errors—for instance, Tennyson's house was not near Windsor, nor is Windsor on the Isle of Wight where the poet lived. Perhaps, however, minor errors of this kind serve to arouse the reader's interest as he retraces the long-vanished past of an almost fabulous world in Mr. Barnard's genial, tolerant company." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:12 S 28 '40 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 1150w

"Mr. Sisley Huddleston's admirable introduction to Mr. Inman Barnard's 'Cities and Men' at once arouses an interest which quickens with every turn of the page until the book is at last regretfully laid down. 'Memoirs' accurately describes Mr. Barnard's work, for the self-importance of autobiography is entirely absent, and the author, mingling with many—indeed, with most—of the greatest figures of his day, never superimposes himself upon his subjects, playing his own no mean part with an agreeable modesty as refreshing as it is unexpected."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Ap 27 '40 500w

BARNES, CHARLES CICERO, and DAIL, JOHN B. American life and problems. 626p il maps $1.76 Longmans

300 Social sciences. Social problems. U.S. —Politics and government. Citizenship 40-6963

"A text for senior-high-school pupils. The authors are both directors of social studies in Detroit high schools. Part I, Foundations of American Life, is in effect a simple sociological survey. Part II, Problems of American Life, describes and analyzes the varied problems—situations now confronting the American people —except that of 'national defense.'" School & Society

---

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 52:594 D 7 '40 110w

Reviewed by Harold Gluck
Social Studies 32:44 Ja '41 390w

BARNES, DONALD GROVE. George III and William Pitt, 1783-1806; a new interpretation based upon a study of their unpublished correspondence. 512p $5 Stanford univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

942.073 Great Britain—Politics and government. George III, king of Great Britain. Pitt, William 39-6780

A study of English politics during the last decades of the eighteenth century in which the author shows that "the commonly accepted thesis of the loss of power by the King and of the rise of Pitt to the position of a modern prime minister and the headship of the Tory Party was in accord neither with the facts nor with the opinions then held by the ruler and his Minister." (Pref) The work is based on a study of unpublished correspondence. An appendix contains quotations from other writers giving the conventional interpretation here refuted. Index.

"The present reviewer believes that the main conclusions of this volume are correct and that the book presents an exhaustive marshaling of whatever evidence on these questions is presented in the letters exchanged between Pitt and the king. These letters are not large in number, however, and those which are preserved at Windsor are the only source not hitherto well explored of which Professor Barnes has made use. The result is that he devotes much space to treading familiar ground in a familiar way and that the book is disappointing." G. R. Crosby

— + Am Hist R 45:872 Jl '40 900w

Reviewed by L. B. Namier
Manchester Guardian p5 S 1 '39 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p98 F 24 '40 1250w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER; BECKER, HOWARD, and BECKER, MRS FRANCES (BENNETT), eds. Contemporary social theory. 947p $5 Appleton-Century

308.22 Sociology. Social sciences. Sociology—Bibliography 40-33642

"This summary of current social theory encompasses the history, theory, and growth of the social sciences, as well as the cultural, biological, and mental influences upon that growth. It is composed of twenty-three papers, each of which is written by an expert in the field of its topic. Special emphasis has been placed on the interrelationships of the various social sciences and their mutual contributions." (Publisher's note) Bibliographical appendix. Indexes.

"Although both the editors and the contributors, with one or two exceptions, have maintained a reasonable limitation of details, the volume will be of value only to advanced students in social science and to those who turn to individual chapters for an overview of specific areas." F. J. Brown

+ Ann Am Acad 213:207 Ja '41 320w

"An important volume. . . For advanced students it should be an invaluable textbook. The scholarly apparatus in the way of references, bibliographies and indexes is elaborate."

+ Christian Century 57:1419 N 13 '40 60w

J Philos 37:644 N 7 '40 240w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 40w

BARNETT, ALBERT EDWARD. Understanding the parables of Our Lord. 223p $2 Cokesbury press

226.8 Parables 40-27300

A consideration of each of the forty-three parables of Our Lord, presented in the order in which they appear in the Gospels. They are studied as to the interpretation of their imagery and concepts, their meaning as set forth by the Gospel writers, and their probable teaching points. The author is professor of literature and history of the Bible at Scarritt college for Christian workers.

Booklist 36:318 Ap 15 '40

"The contents of the book are well matched with its title. It will be found an exceptionally useful aid in understanding the parables."

+ Christian Century 57:417 Mr 27 '40 270w

"The whole book is built upon and fortified by careful scholarship and incisive thinking." W. R. Bowie

+ Churchman 154:16 My 15 '40 210w

"This volume is not one to be carelessly read and then thrown aside. It is worthy of a permanent place on the bookshelf of the thoughtful student of the teachings of Jesus, where it may be read and reread as occasion demands." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 17:230 Jl '40 200w

"The volume is not written primarily for New Testament scholars but for the general religious public. It does not add to the general body of critical principles for New Testament study, but in its own field it is well done. It is well informed, avoids technical terms, distinguishes between that which may be confidently asserted and that which is only probable or conjectural, and avoids both new hypotheses and dogmatic interpretations. Especially to be commended is the emphasis throughout on the significance of the parables in the early church—an emphasis which goes far to remove the impression of negativeness which books on Jesus tend to leave with the nonexpert reader. The volume should be a useful tool to many ministers and teachers of the biblical text." Harvie Branscomb

+ J Religion 21:95 Ja '41 260w

BARNOUW, ADRIAAN JACOB. The Dutch; a portrait study of the people of Holland. 297p map $3 Columbia univ. press

914.92 Netherlands—Civilization. National characteristics, Dutch 40-5860

An interpretation of the Dutch people, their life, character, and customs. The author, who was born in Holland, has been Queen Wilhelmina professor of the history, language, and literature of the Netherlands at Columbia University for twenty years. References for further reading. Index.

"Barnouw called his delightful work very adequately a 'portrait' study of the Dutch: it does remind the reader of a Dutch painting with its love for detail and accuracy and yet remaining on the high level which other more photographic schools of painting have never been able to attain." Bartholomew Landheer

+ Am Soc R 5:978 D '40 360w

Reviewed by Max Gideonse

Ann Am Acad 210:154 Jl '40 260w

"The best recommendation of Mr. Barnouw's work is that it makes the reader eager to go farther and learn more; for this is preëminently what a book of its kind should do."

+ Atlantic My '40 800w

Booklist 36:322 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark p9 My '40

Reviewed by D. C. De Jong

Books p12 S 15 '40 550w

"Dr. Barnouw does give intimate glimpses of gardens, cities, schools, the press; excellent sketches of the development of Dutch language and literature and painting. Except for an excessive use of elaborate metaphor the book is well written. Dr. Barnouw's work can be heartily recommended." Taylor Starck

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 230w

"What a chapter devoted to Santa Claus has to contribute this reviewer is at a loss to know. And most of the attempts at humor are labored. At least one thing has been accomplished: the professor has cleared his desk of newspaper clippings which have cluttered it for the past ten years, and these provide him with the excuse for a few little homilies of his own. Typographically the book is a masterpiece." Johan Tekije

— Canadian Forum 20:31 Ap '40 60w

"Neither a history nor a guidebook, this penetrating and sympathetic 'portrait of the people' gives a high estimate of the Low Countries and should have the effect of sending many a reader in quest of histories to explain how these industrious, substantial and liberty-loving people attained their distinctive characteristics and their unique position in Europe. . . The people of Holland well deserve the favorable portrait that is here painted. Still, it does seem that something more might have been said about the Dutch colonial empire and the methods of its administration."

+ — Christian Century 57:514 Ap 17 '40 150w

Reviewed by Cecil Robinson

Crozer Q 17:318 O '40 80w

Foreign Affairs 18:755 Jl '40 10w

"Distinctly non-academic and written especially for American readers, it is both lively and enlightening, but it is conspicuously silent on economic questions as such."

+ Nation 150:401 Mr 23 '40 80w

"Professor Barnouw has written with so much charm and wit that his 'portrait study' makes delightful reading. There is nothing academic in the whole book, and the fact is that the author, in his desire not to be conventional, sometimes goes too far. At least one reader would have liked to see a more detailed analysis of Holland's position in world affairs and of her economic structure." F. E. Hirsch

+ — New Repub 102:680 My 20 '40 440w

"This book will fill a gap in the knowledge of ninety-nine out of a hundred Americans, and of many Europeans who are closer to Holland than we are. And it is written with such charm that a trip through its pages is almost as satisfying as a stroll along a quiet canal in Delft or Leyden. . . The Barnouw book is modest, good-natured, unpretentious. At a time when the Dutch people are no longer to be envied as they were, they are at least blessed with a gifted interpreter in Adriaan Barnouw." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 17 '40 2000w

Pratt p20 autumn '40

"A careful, intelligent summing-up of the case of Holland vs. the final judgment of posterity. And by and large, I think that we can anticipate a verdict of which none of us will have cause to feel ashamed." Hendrick Van Loon

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 9 '40 500w

BARON, JOSEPH LOUIS, ed. Candles in the night; with a pref. by Carl Van Doren. 391p $2.50 Farrar 40-12260

Twenty-three "Jewish tales by Gentile authors." Contents: A tale of three rings, by Giovanni Boccaccio; My little boy, by Carl Ewald; How I became a friend of the Jews, by Maurus Jokai; Rothschild's fiddle, by Anton Chekhov; The little boy, by Maxim Gorky; The Jew's grave, by Ricarda Huch; An anti-Semite in the country, by Anatole France; The Jew and the Christian, by T. N. Page; Peter the hermit, by J. A. Strindberg; Arsareth, by Per Hallström; The torture of hope, by Villiers de Isle Adam; The Easter torch, by I. L. Cargiale; The Jew of S, by Karl Klostermann; Srul—from Lubartów, by Adam Szymanski; The saluting doll, by Hamlen Hunt; "Give me a flower!" by Eliza Orzeszko; Galeb Jekarim, by Leopold von Sacher-Masoch; Seskinš, by Ernests Birznieks-Upīts; Jacob and the Indians, by S. V. Benét; Morris and the honorable Tim, by Myra Kelly; Sheener, by B. A. Williams; The life and death of a god, by Sinclair Lewis; The unknown soldier, by Coningsby Dawson.

Books p13 S 1 '40 350w

"As Carl Van Doren says, in a short 'Preface,' 'The best non-Jews have not been unjust or inhumane toward Jews.' The purpose of the present volume is to show how this has always been true in literature, which, after all, is valuable only insofar as it is the representation of the best elements in man. 'Jewish Tales by Gentile Authors' are pinpoints of light in the darkness of age-old indifference, intolerance, oppression—'Candles in the Night' of anti-Semitism." J. C. Moynihan

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 250w

New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 60w

"The stories are of unequal merit and naturally gain nothing in value either from being all 'Jewish tales' or all 'by Gentile authors.' "

New Yorker 16:67 Jl 27 '40 50w

"The collection casts in totality a comforting and illusory light: comforting in its accumulated evidence of a common humanity, illusory because these twenty-three candles are indeed plucked out of a vast night of centuries which they never even faintly illumined. They are infinitely finer and truer, as Mr. Carl Van Doren points out in a powerful, short preface, than the 'false and evil nonsense . . . of anti-Semitic literature.' " N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 3 '40 240w

BARRETT, EDWARD JOHN BOYD. The great O'Neill. 443p il maps $2.50 Hale

B or 92 Tyrone, Shane O'Neill, 2d earl of 39-31317

Biography of the Irish chieftain and statesman who unified Ireland to such an extent that even Queen Elizabeth acknowledged him her equal. The work is based upon manuscripts and other documents which the author discovered while living in one of O'Neill's favorite castles, Benburb. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Barrett originally wrote this book in a heavily annotated form but felt the more scholarly version would limit its audience and so rewrote it in a popular form, desiring that more people should become acquainted with the life of Shane O'Neill. I am in sympathy with the objective but the pendulum, in swinging from scholarship to popularity, has, in my opinion, gone somewhat too far and has created an atmosphere that misrepresents the subject. . . Though Dr. Barrett has, I think, failed to create the right atmosphere in this book, I hope he will continue to mine the rich ore of Elizabethan Ireland." Diarmuid Russell

Books p12 F 4 '40 750w

"In 'The Great O'Neill' Dr. Barrett has made the Lord of the Red Hand live again. He is no inanimate figure fabricated from documentary information. He is a vital man of flesh and blood and warm impulses created out of the racial sympathy and imagination of the author." Regina Madden

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 24 '40 140w

"The clarity and charm of the narrated sections, however, accentuates the lack of suitable quality in the dialogue. So inept is this that one has the impression of shuttling rapidly from the sixteenth century Ireland, still a medieval country, to the environs of Times Square, and back again to medieval Ireland, as one passes from the mood engendered by the biographical narrative to that which is inspired by the current and marked colloquialisms in the dialogue as well as the form in which it is cast." Barry Byrne

+ — Commonweal 31:515 Ap 5 '40 400w

BARRETT, HELEN M. Boethius; some aspects of his times and work. 179p $1.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Boethius

"This little study, as the author states, is 'an attempt to rescue Boethius from being generally forgotten.' No new materials are brought to this task, but the available sources, hitherto scattered among specialized scholarly writings, are utilized in conjunction with Boethius's extant writings for the purpose of giving a well-rounded picture of the man who labored as scholar, statesman, and philosopher, in times as troubled as our own." J Philos

"Miss Barrett's book is a welcome addition to our very inadequate library of modern works on the 'first of the Scholastics.' " E. A. M.

+ J Philos 37:719 D 19 '40 320w

New Statesman & Nation 20:244 S 7 '40 220w

"The whole story of the composition of this shapeless yet beautiful little work, 'Consolation of Philosophy' and of its subsequent history, is full of contradictions. It is to be hoped that Miss Barrett's book will find many readers among those who like to combine detection with philosophy and ancient history with the perennial problems of mankind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p468 S 14 '40 190w

BARRETT, JAMES WYMAN. How to overcome your 7 deadly enemies; a road map to life. 162p $1.50 Vanguard

170 Conduct of life. Success 40-1074

The seven deadly enemies are: fear, regret, greed, laziness, ambition, self-pity, and death. The author does not claim to have discovered any magic formula; he merely gives his advice for a useful life, and it follows that the enemies will diminish in importance.

"Mr. Barrett's program is sanely and concisely presented, and he writes with vigor even when he is stating the obvious."

+ Books p17 F 25 '40 160w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40

BARRETTO, LARRY. Journey through time. 312p $2.50 Farrar

40-30879

Jane and Bruce Randolph had met in France during the first World war. Now in the spring of 1939 they were returning to visit old scenes and to give their nineteen-year-old son a chance to recuperate after an automobile accident. The story relates the unimportant events of their trip, the casual friendships formed, the more enduring impressions, and finally the growing horror of imminent war—and the flight back to the safety of America.

"There are in fact so many elements of bright fiction in this book that it seems less like a journey through time than like one through a rather crowded Hollywood production. Mr. Barretto has provided good entertainment, but he spreads it just a little too thick—unless you happen to like it that way. His story stands up beside most of its kind, however, and is distinguished for its extremely good characterization of the Claverings in particular; its wit and its real understanding of the gulf between the generation which fought the last war and the one which seems doomed to fight this one." G. G. Stevens

+ — Books p10 S 29 '40 550w

Nation 151:373 O 19 '40 150w

New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 50w

"It is an effective story, so effective and suggestive that one is not quite satisfied with its development of the possibilities or its measure of distinction. Mr. Barretto's best novel (of those I have read) is also his most demanding one. It augurs well for his future." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 S 22 '40 1000w

New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 60w

"The exact theme of the novel is not clear, and the writing is without much distinction—in fact it has often a naïveté one does not expect in a book by this competent novelist. But it is readable, the background of Europe on the eve of catastrophe is exciting in itself, and Barretto's accurate knowledge of France and its people—of every day French life as well as the lurid exhibitionism of the Riviera —gives authority to his picture." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:36 D 7 '40 430w

BARRINGTON, MARGARET (MRS LIAM O'FLAHERTY). Turn ever northward [Eng title: My cousin Justin]. 297p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cape, J]

39-31054

A story of two cousins, descendants of a French Huguenot family long settled in North Ireland. The time covered is from the early 1900s when the two were children living in their grandfather's house, thru the years of the Great War and the Irish troubles, to the time when, each having known love and heartache elsewhere, they are united again in the old home.

"Unusual distinction marks this first novel, set in the Ireland of recent years. Seldom are landscape, atmosphere, characters made so clear with such untroubled ease—the words flow as easily on the pages as water." Iris Barry

+ Books p10 Ja 14 '40 500w

"One cannot be sure from this novel just what Margaret Barrington's talents are, but talent she certainly has, and it may be great." Mark Schorer

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 6 '40 240w

"This is a fine novel, sensitive, sincere, and convincing in its atmosphere."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 22 '39 400w

"In the middle of the book, when Miss Barrington shifts her characters from North Ireland to Dublin, the novel descends from the unusual to the ordinary. The colorful, bitter hero vanishes, a proxy takes his place—a rather nondescript proxy who fails to hold the reader's interest. The heroine's transition from a little country girl to a successful journalist is too sudden, too unbelievable. The characters no longer have the life and warmth of the earlier chapters, instead they become the ordinary individuals found in average novels." Gloria Amoury

BARRINGTON, MARGARET—Continued

+ — Commonweal 31:247 Ja 5 '40 360w

"Whether the story may be said to end well or ill will depend upon the ethical principles of the reader, but it has fire and movement, going from essential to essential with an effect of naturalness that disguises the art of selection. We ought to hear more from Miss Barrington presently." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p9 Je 9 '39 190w

"A nicely handled novel, though a little sketchy toward the end."

+ — New Repub 102:62 Ja 8 '40 50w

"In her handling of difficult relationships, Margaret Barrington shows no little skill. The reason for her success, although it lies below the surface of the actual narrative, and so does not intrude itself on the reader's eye, is that Miss Barrington has little interest in episode solely as episode, fertile though she is in creating situations and crises. Her interest goes far deeper. And to call it psychological is not quite enough. She seems to sense passionate intellectual forces compelling these persons into strange paths. In Justin, Loulie and Egan O'Dougherty she has three divergent types, clashing, merging, clashing again, each of which rivets attention." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 7 '40 600w

"Miss Barrington writes rather unconvincingly about the difficulties of her characters and quite impressively about Ireland, its wild coast, and its stormy weather."

+ — New Yorker 15:62 Ja 6 '40 40w

"Miss Barrington, a new writer with distinctive narrative gifts, is most successful when she is describing Loulie's and Justin's childhood in this land of 'Ossianic grandeur.' . . It is only when the young pair go out into the world that the treatment becomes thin." J. S. Mahon

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:10 Ja 6 '40 550w

"The book's main trouble is that the two chief men are preposterous and unreal bores. But many of the minor characters are well drawn, the heroine is pleasant and modest, and the background of childhood and tradition is tenderly drawn." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 162:1062 Je 16 '39 330w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 170w

Time 35:68 Ja 15 '40 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Je 10 '39 360w

BARRIS, MRS ANNA ANDREWS. Red tassels for Huki in Peru; pictured by Iris Beatty Johnson. 63p $1.50 Whitman, A.

39-29731

Huki was a young Peruvian llama with a dread of becoming a pack animal. After he had run away and had a lively adventure with a mountain lion, Huki was glad to come back to a life of burden bearing.

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 20w

"Rather slight and not so very adept in its telling, Mrs. Barris's story is, however, amusing and informative and includes a picture of present-day life in Peru." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 18 '40 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 10 '39 80w

BARROWS, NATHANIEL A. Blow all ballast! the story of the Squalus [with a foreword by Cyrus W. Cole; il. from photographs]. 298p $2.75 Dodd

359 Squalus (submarine). Diving, Submarine. Salvage (W) 40-27428

An account of the disastrous trip of the United States submarine Squalus off Portsmouth, New Hampshire, on May 23, 1939: the sinking; the rescue of part of the officers and crew; and the salvage of the hull. The author, a member of the staff of the Boston Globe, interviewed the survivors, stood by during the rescue period, and the eventual raising of the wreck, and so has based his story on first hand material.

Booklist 36:375 Je 1 '40

"The story of the Squalus has appeared disjointedly in the press. Here in 'Blow All Ballast!' is the connected story, well worth reading, and a story that will be widely read. Without melodramatic embellishment, without technical verbiage, Barrows sets it out for the reader to whom fortitude and heroism need no interpretation, and to whom the problems of longitudinal and transverse stability of pontoons and of half-flooded submarine mean nothing and are consequently omitted." Edward Ellsberg

+ Books p6 Ap 28 '40 950w

"Necessarily, the book is factual—in reality a day-by-day log of what transpired, yet it has been cleverly handled to remove it from the category of a routine account of the work. Its author had the advantage of the Navy's own records and, in addition, as he was assigned to the salvage ship, he had daily contact with officers, divers and others so that not even a detail of their conversation need be lacking. His own notebooks comprised a diary that covered the entire proceeding and doubtless his greatest task was to sort out of the maze of material that which could be discarded. It was the sort of story that required careful trimming to keep it from becoming topheavy; the result is, in reality, a reference work." F. C. Green

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 8 '40 500w

"The author's stirring saga of the Squalus rescue and subsequent salvage job is a grand piece of descriptive writing, vivid, tense, at times terrifying in its presentment of the sailors' plight." H. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 24 '40 400w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 102:616 My 6 '40 550w

"Here is a book that moves and carries the reader along in its swift stream of action; moreover, it is, or will be, a source book of remarkable accuracy and considerable value to all those interested in submarine operations. There are not many pertinent things about the Squalus tragedy that are omitted." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p9 My 5 '40 1300w

"Fine action story, told with lots of neatly handled technical detail."

New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 40w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 22:16 My 4 '40 500w

"The author makes the most of the drama of the sinking and rescue, without stooping to grewsome sensationalism. All those who followed the day-to-day accounts of the disaster will find his narrative a gripping reminder not only of a great naval tragedy but of how those involved met the challenge to their ingenuity and daring."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 9 '40 1100w

BARRY, PHILIP. The Philadelphia story; a comedy in three acts. 206p $2 Coward-McCann

812 40-11146

Dramatization of twenty-four hours in the life of a Philadelphia belle, during which time she learns to know herself rather well, and discards an about-to-be second husband in order to remarry her divorced first husband. The play was first presented by The Theatre Guild during the 1939-1940 season.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p7 Je 23 '40 120w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 149:216 My '39 550w

"There are moments when Mr. Barry violates the canons of good taste. . . But on the whole Mr. Barry has written an interesting play, with shrewd touches of character, and much humor." Grenville Vernon

+ — Commonweal 29:692 Ap 14 '39 600w
(Dramatic criticism)

Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 148:410 Ap 8 '39 800w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p40 N 10 '40 200w

"The play is sprinkled with laughter and has some passages of excellent Barry." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts M 23:324 My '39 600w
(Dramatic criticism)

BARTLETT, ARTHUR CHARLES. Find your own frontier. 211p $1.50 Wilde

174 Success. Occupations. U.S.—Biography
40-34855

A book of inspiration and guidance for young people in which the author tells how American men and women have developed opportunities for advancement in their fields of endeavor. The chapters contain many case histories or brief biographical sketches illustrative of the author's points. Contents: Discovery; Human frontiers; Business frontiers; Scientific frontiers; Frontiers of the soil; Frontiers of beauty; Look around you.

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 120w

"Mr Bartlett has not chosen only famous men and women, but also individuals unknown to the average reader. It is this note of simplicity, unostentation, that specially recommends his reporting as a record of incentives to others."

Springf'd Republican p12 N 28 '40 700w

BARTLETT, ROBERT MERRILL. They did something about it. 146p $1.25 Assn. press

920 (W) 40-27059

"These are biographical 'success stories'—with success conceived of as achievement for the common good rather than acquisition for personal enrichment." (Christian Century) Those included are: Charles F. Kettering, Richard E. Byrd, Edouard Beneš, Jawaharlal Nehru, Louis Brandeis, Mary Bethune, Thomas Mann, Madame Chiang Kai-shek, Chevalier Jackson, and Margaret Sanger.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40

Christian Century 57:51 Ja 10 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 31 '40 850w

BARTO, EMILY NEWTON, il. Crooked man. See Mother Goose

BARTON, ARTHUR WILLOUGHBY. A text book on light; with halftone plates and diagrams in the text. 426p $3 (8s) Longmans

535 Light [40-3221]

"This text contains a discussion of the three main topics to be expected in an intermediate treatment of light, viz., geometrical optics, interference and diffraction, and polarization. But though the 17 chapter headings sound conventional, the approach is distinctly unusual. The developmental-chronological plan followed results in no pigeon-holed arrangement of mere information, but in a well articulated whole, presented in such a way that 'the reader is treated as if he were at the frontiers of knowledge; he is made to exercise his critical faculty in deciding which of two theories is the more satisfactory.' . . The author, who has also published a Text Book on Heat, is now Headmaster of King Edward VII School, Sheffield. The book 'has been written for students with an elementary knowledge of Light, who are reading for University Scholarships . . . and Intermediate Examinations.' " R of Scientific Instruments

"The book is well produced, has a large number of illustrative queries appended to each chapter, and the photographs of aberrations, interference, and diffraction effects are most striking. It should be assured of success." Alland Ferguson

+ J Phys Chem 44:138 Ja '40 270w

Nature 145:141 Ja 27 '40 80w

"A text which makes such frequent reference to 'chain of evidence,' 'fact,' and 'reason' cannot fail to interest those teachers who particularly enjoy guiding their pupils through a stimulating and logical argument, the purpose of which is to make these students not mere memorizers but thinkers conscious of the method and purpose of scientific theory." Harley Howe

+ R of Scientific Instruments 10:274 O '39 330w

BARTON, FREDERICK BUSHNELL. It's fun to keep fit; a guide to games and sports; with il. by Don Wootton. 160p $2 Harper

796 Exercise. Sports. Games (W) 40-11875

Descriptions of games, sports, and relaxing amusements for adults. Two of the chapters are: When the doctor orders "no exercise"; and To keep young, start a new interest each year. Index.

Booklist 37:7 S '40

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 17 '40 50w

Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

BARTUSEK, LIBUSHKA. Happy times in Czechoslovakia; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt [drawings by Yarka Burés]. 62p $2 Knopf

Children in Czechoslovakia 40-27590

"A picture of the peaceful, happy life of a small village. With the Horak family, the reader joins in the fun and excitement of Winter, Easter, Harvest, and Christmas celebrations and shares with them the solemn ceremonies that play so important a part in the family life." Publisher's note

Booklist 37:17 S '40

"One look at these colored pictures, and one who knows about the Czechs, their life and their art, is transported into the heart of the nation. Its individuality is here. The bright, soft colors are right; so is the loving elaboration of detail; so is the warm kindness of these faces. The story, which will be read after the pictures have all been examined, has the same characteristics. It is true to life, remembering old times." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 N 10 '40 270w

"Madame Bartusek has not only given us a good story of family and national life but also a record, valuable because it preserves the spirit and customs of these brave people for children. Yarka Burés' very lovely illustrations, in rich color and characteristic design, portray Czech peasant decoration and costume, add interest, homeliness and charm." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 140w

"Pictures of distinction, and the whole is interwoven with religion."

+ Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:350 S '40 90w

"A charming story illustrated in the rich color and design that mean Czechoslovakia to us." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Jean Stewart
Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 70w

BARTUSEK, LIBUSHKA—Continued

"At a time when homelands vanish overnight, we may well treasure such a book as this, in which Madame Bartusek recalls the happy peaceful days of a brave, industrious people, and with the help of the brightly colored, decorative illustrations, gives an authentic feeling of Czecho-Slovak life." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 O 6 '40 230w

New Yorker 16:127 D 7 '40 40w

Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER). Parents and children go to school; adventuring in nursery school and kindergarten. 504p il $3 Scott

372.2412 Nursery schools. Child study. Parent and child 39-31293

An account of the work of the preschool in training the very small child and in educating the parent in child care. The author is director of preschool and parent education department, and professor of education, Broadoaks school of education, Whittier college. Bibliography. Index.

"Teachers will find in it a clear, detailed, objective picture of a fine nursery school set-up. Parents will hail it for its healthy view of parent education, eg., that 'parents aside from being parents, are people in their own rights,' and therefore are entitled to any help which will give them a greater measure of security in bringing up their children." Ethel Gordon

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1251 O '40 280w

Booklist 36:168 Ja 1 '40

"Because of the excellent summaries of several chapters, one wishes that the author, who is very skilful when she wishes to bring order out of chaos, had prepared similar summaries for all chapters. Statistical and normative data are strikingly absent. On the other hand, there is frequent quotation of authority, often in the form of obvious platitudes, that might well have been replaced by more concrete material and data. . . This book should find many uses. The general reader will find it more appealing than the conventional textbook. Parents, parent educators, and experienced teachers will gain new insight and practical help from it. Students and teachers in training will find it a good textbook and a stimulating reference book." J. E. Anderson

+ — El School J 40:788 Je '40 850w

Reviewed by E. F. Barnard

Survey 76:372 D '40 350w

BARUCH, MRS DOROTHY (WALTER), and MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Sally does it; il. by Robb Beebe. 73p $1.50 Appleton-Century

40-9248

Simple stories of the everyday life of three-year-old Nancy, who thought up such helpful things to do—things which seldom proved helpful, but were always delightful.

Booklist 36:414 Jl 1 '40

"In brief funny episodes, in easy words and large type for a child just reading for himself, the tenderness and comprehension of such a child for one much littler comes to the aid of a young reader. It is not a book to be read aloud to three-year-olds who have enough ideas in their heads already. But the child who can just read, and knows himself old and wise, feels a protecting affection for Sally and understands why everybody in the book is so gentle and so amused." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 9 '40 230w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 70w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 20w

"Sally, bouncing with energy and the spirit of experimentation, should win many friends among 5, 6 and 7 year olds, if only because she will remind them, in their superior wisdom, how much they have grown up in the past two or three years. . . The sentences are short and direct, with a gratifying, ear-tickling representation of the splashing, whizzing, banging sounds of everyday life which children love, and Sally's pictures, drawn by Robb Beebe, are full of characteristic action." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 7 '40 230w

BASIL, GEORGE CHESTER, and LEWIS, MRS ELIZABETH (FOREMAN). Test tubes and dragon scales [il. by Raymond Creekmore]. 316p $2.50 Winston

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Missions, Medical. China—Social life and customs (W) 40-27523

Describes the Chinese experiences of an American doctor, a former superintendent of the Syracuse-in-China hospital at Chungking. Not only the hospital life of China, but the customs of the people of this section of China are amusingly revealed in the book. Dr Basil returned to this country in 1932.

Bookmark 2:9 Ja '41

"The book is not at all technical but is entertaining as well as informing."

+ Christian Century 57:1084 S 4 '40 80w

Reviewed by H. J. Simpson

Churchman 154:17 O 1 '40 70w

"This is an exceedingly readable and entertaining account. . . Recommended as an inspiring story of the humanitarian work of an American doctor in China." S. E. Sherman

+ Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 180w

"In a series of amusing and frequently exciting incidents, the doctor highlights his medical career deep in the interior of China. The book's distinction is in the fact that his account of the difficulties confronting him serve primarily to give the reader an insight into the way of life of Chungking and its people." A. L. Seeling

+ N Y Times p3 S 8 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:71 S 7 '40 40w

"Dr. Basil has emphasized his personal relations with the Chungkingese rather than the details of his medical practice, and packed his book with anecdote. It is lively, informative, well-written." H. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 S 14 '40 380w

"The numerous personal anecdotes of patients and hospital routine are so delightfully told that it is only upon reflection that one realizes how many scientific truths have been learned. The old Chinese proverbs that often serve as chapter headings lend an added charm to the book."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 S '40 420w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. An ocean heritage. 277p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-9439

Story of Belleport, a Cape Cod town, and of the reclamation of a native son, who returns from a ten-years' absence in California and marries a Belleport beauty.

Booklist 36:430 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p14 Je 16 '40 100w

"The Belleport stories of Sara Ware Bassett are as refreshing as a vacation to weary folk longing for the blue water and the peace of Cape Cod. In her latest love story and comedy of village life there is no hint of the war and the only troubles are those that the perversities of New England human nature bring on itself. . . It is good to read again a simple, happy story with some fun in it." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 300w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p12 Je 16 '40 200w

BATCHELOR, BRONSON, ed. The new outlook in business [foreword by Virgil Jordan]. 323p $3 Harper

330.973 Business. Industry and state—U.S. U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 40-5480

Symposium in which twenty-one big-business men examine the present situation in American industry. The chapters are grouped under four headings: America in transition; Industry's new environment; Business and government; Challenges of the future. Index.

Am Econ R 30:399 Je '40 20w

"The articles purport to be an expression of new, forward-looking attitudes on the part of business. On the surface this is so—they all have a high ethical tone, state a recognition of industry's obligation to the public, to labor, etc. Yet despite its superficially progressive approach, the cumulative impression that this book leaves, is rather the opposite. In fact most of the contributions have an underlying quality of unreality, almost sophistry, which tends to vitiate the effectiveness of the point of view expressed."

Books p14 Ap 21 '40 180w

"The book gets off to a slow start as a number of abstract economic propositions are discussed by men who are manifestly not at home in handling statistics. As the subjects become more concrete the treatment grows in readability and in interest. There is real power in the appeals of well-known men that the principle of economic freedom shall not be determined by default." H. M. Rees

+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 18 '40 750w

Management R 29:230 Je '40 180w

New Repub 102:553 Ap 22 '40 40w

"Most of the statements deserve the attention of business men and students of economics. But as a whole the book will succeed only mildly in stirring the reader not initially favorable to the theme. There is too judicious avoidance of anything which might reflect on the other fellow's methods, product, or business, too close an esprit de corps to give variety to the material." Herman Feldman

— + Survey G 29:356 Je '40 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

BATEMAN, DONALD. Berkeley Moynihan, surgeon; pref. by Lord Moynihan. 354p il $4 (12s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Moynihan, Berkeley George Andrew Moynihan, 1st baron

"A biography of the first Baron Moynihan of Leeds, accounted one of the leading figures in British surgery during the first thirty years of the present century—a brilliant and forceful personality as well as a skillful surgeon." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:1084 S 4 '40 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Keyes
Commonweal 32:432 S 13 '40 600w

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 28 '40 90w

"It may be that Dr. Bateman's very honesty has tended to over-emphasise the less lovable characteristics of Moynihan; and the style that he has adopted, sprinkled on almost every page with such more than hack phrases as 'gentle and retiring disposition,' 'drab pall of smoke,' 'gargantuan proportions,' and truisms such as 'true self-sacrifice does not envisage personal rewards,' has created, whether designedly or not, a sort of second-rateness of surrounding atmosphere from which his subject never seems to step quite free. Nevertheless, by any standard, Moynihan had a remarkable career." H. H. Bashford

Spec 164:842 Je 21 '40 650w

"This biography is a fine piece of work on the part of Dr. Bateman, for it is successful to an unusual degree in depicting a remarkable man, not as a hero or an idol, but as a human being of high ideals, striking force of character and exceptional charm of manner and mind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Je 8 '40 800w

BATES, ERNEST SUTHERLAND. American faith; its religious, political, and economic foundations. 479p $3.75 Norton

277.3 U.S.—Religion. Democracy. U.S.—History. U.S.—Church history (W) 40-27258

An interpretation of the religious, political, and economic background of the American nation. The book begins with the Protestant reformation in Europe and ends with the American Civil war. That war, according to the author, determined that "liberalism and democracy, the two ideal values for which America had stood . . . should be preserved, maimed indeed, but still living, to be transmitted to the future as the main articles of American faith." Index.

Booklist 36:299 Ap 1 '40

"Ernest Sutherland Bates's recent death removed from the army of sometimes undisciplined and frequently disingenuous excursionists into the American past and interpreters of the American ethos one of the soundest and purest, most genuinely liberal, in all that word stands for in relation to cultural values, of them all. This is his last book, and it is not only his best book, it is one of the very best books in its crowded field, a big book in every way." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 Mr 17 '40 1000w

"Like Parrington [Mr Bates] praised his heroes—the radical sects, Penn, Williams and Jefferson, to mention a few, and excoriated his villains—Catholic potentates, Calvin, the Massachusetts Bay oligarchy. Bias lends vigor to his book. And yet 'American Faith' suffers from the author's inadequate information and his tendency to over-simplify complex problems such as the causes of the Revolutionary and Civil wars." Daniel Aaron

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 30 '40 300w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 57:575 My 1 '40 400w

"The weakness of the book is that it does not make a strong case for its main theory. The strength of the book is that Dr. Bates describes and interprets men and movements with a picturesque and entertaining pen." A. L. Murray

+ — Churchman 154:20 Ap 15 '40 380w

"American Faith is easily one of the most notable books of the year. It bears the evidence, as do Bates' earlier works, of immense research and extraordinary synthesis. One might call it a profound book, except that such a description might make it seem specialized and uninteresting, which, of course, it is not." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 51:4 Ap '40 390w

"In spite of the many unfortunate slips and omissions the intelligent reader will find this book illuminating and highly rewarding." W. W. Sweet

+ — J Religion 20:402 O '40 500w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 160w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 358:288 My '40 360w

"The late Ernest Sutherland Bates was an astute observer and student of religious life and of its relation to social and political affairs. When therefore his publishers issue a posthumous book, completed just before his untimely death, dealing with the religious foundations of American life, one opens such a work with keen anticipation. But it must be admitted that the book does not fulfill one's hopes. . . There are some historical inaccuracies, though the book generally maintains a high standard of scholarship." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Nation 150:484 Ap 13 '40 800w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 102:448 Ap 1 '40 800w

"Mr. Bates has written a stimulating, informing and continuously readable if very uneven volume. While planned for the general reader and not the scholar, and at various points certain to leave scholars dissatisfied, it nevertheless shows careful study. It also reveals the honesty of thought and liberalism of spirit so characteristic of the author, and it is sad to think that we shall have no more books from this pen." Allan Nevins

BATES, E. S.—Continued

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 24 '40 1600w

"A significant book."

+ New Yorker 16:87 Mr 23 '40 50w

Pratt p4 autumn '40

"It is good to know that Ernest Sutherland Bates was able to complete this book just before his recent death. It was entirely finished, ready for the publisher, and has not had to undergo completion and editing at another's hands, always an ungrateful process. It is a skillful piece of popularizing, not vulgarizing, fully up to the level of his earlier works." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 30 '40 800w

"As a whole, Mr Bates's book is spiritedly written and has interest for the general reader; in scholarly substance and interpretative significance it is uneven, despite the author's clarity and grasp of ideas."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Lathrop
Survey G 29:307 My '40 370w

Time 35:88 My 6 '40 400w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Yale R n s 29:838 summer '40 290w

BATES, RALPH. The fields of paradise. 382p $2.50 Dutton

40-31175

"San Lorenzo, a Mexican country town, is completely under the heel of the brutal petty dictator and grafter, Acosta, who operates with the support of the wealthy Rosas family and seems to be aided and abetted by a mysterious, strong-minded Spaniard. Into the village comes Felipe, itinerant fireworks vender, happy-go-lucky, quick witted, versatile, with good reasons in his past for hating tyranny. He is the spark that sets off more than his own fireworks and the result is a successful revolt and the end of the oppressive regime." Library J

"This is a book one can recommend without hesitation as perhaps Mr. Bates's best work up to date. And that is high praise."

+ Atlantic D '40 110w

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

"This novel is worthy to stand beside the richer 'The Olive Field' and the more brilliant 'Rainbow Fish' [Book Review Digest, 1936, 1937]. It is compounded of the same earthy vigor and spiritual grace in indissoluble union. In addition, it has a character of its own." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 O 20 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p9 N 5 '40 60w

"A well-written and at times thrilling story that holds the reader's interest and furnishes an insight into the traditions, the superstitions, and the temperament of the Mexican people. Librarians may be warned that there are passages which will be objectionable to readers who like 'a nice clean story.'" G. W. Hill

+ Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 160w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 151:450 N 9 '40 550w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
New Repub 104:58 Ja 13 '41 1200w

"'The Fields of Paradise' is a vast tapestry of life, a novel where stirring beauty and cruel, naked reality are fused with deep and almost calm wisdom." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 O 30 '40 750w

New Yorker 16:86 N 2 '40 60w

"Bates's story is not so much the record of the Mexican revolution as of 'The Revolution' intellectualized. It is incidental that the setting happens to be Mexico, and though it will seem alien indeed to most Americans, at few points did I have any feeling that it was an authentic picture of Mexico or Mexicans, or even an authentic picture of peasants. None of these comments should leave the impression that this is not a superior novel. It is full of wisdom and haunting beauty; it is very gripping; and its style is subtle and unique. It is written by a man who has seen and experienced much and has pondered the meaning of human conflicts deeply." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 22:26 O 19 '40 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '40 240w

BATES, SYLVIA CHATFIELD. The floor of heaven. 255p $2.50 Harcourt

(W) 40-5954

At twenty-five Johanna Fair married and her husband took her to live on Speedwell, a lonely island seven miles off the New England coast. There was a mystery about Ben Fair, and the peculiarities of his nature became more and more manifest as three years went by. Then Johanna is given an opportunity to escape but pity rises to prevent her doing so and her release comes from Ben's own act and not hers.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

"Given the elements of the story another writer might have made of them a mere mystery tale. Miss Bates is concerned with the mysteries instinct in human beings, not those in situations; with the beauty and terror in living, not in a clever solution. Her book has the quality of an idyl. It is a book one is not likely to lay down until the last page, both because of its suspense and the vividness and warmth of the characters." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 Mr 17 '40 750w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 900w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham
Library J 65:166 F 15 '40 120w

"There is a murder offstage, a suicide, a hurricane, but on the whole this is a story with more atmosphere than action, more mood than plot. Vivid and sustained."

+ New Repub 102:386 Mr 18 '40 50w

"If one is not in the mood for the kind of spell which Miss Bates so skillfully binds, this novel may seem fey, implausible. I feel, however, that her particular kind of magic is legitimate—that there is room for a novel such as this with its air of naive, unworldly freshness." E. H. Walton

N Y Times p6 Mr 17 '40 800w

Reviewed by G. H. Carroll
Sat R of Lit 21:12 Ap 13 '40 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 400w

"This is a carefully wrought story in which scene and atmosphere, though very well conveyed in some respects, tend to be blurred by a pervading lyricism that is a shade too conventional in character."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Ag 24 '40 310w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

BATES, WILLIAM NICKERSON. Sophocles, poet and dramatist. 291p il $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press

882.2 Sophocles 40-10622

"A scholarly introduction to the extant works, with a concise biography, excerpts in original translation and an extended section on the lost plays." (Theatre Arts) Index.

"Professor Bates is a scholar, conscience knows; but he is neither pedant at the one extreme nor verbal charmer at the other. He must surely inspire readers, even the not-too-serious kind, with classic zeal and make them feel at home in high academic company. He has an especial knack for picking the right passage of dialogue, soliloquy, or messenger's narrative in a piece to translate. Now and then he selects a quite extended episode; yet he keeps interest sustained until he is ready to put the scene and the characters aside, in order to make comment on them." W. P. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 20 '40 460w

Theatre Arts 24:764 O '40 30w

BATSFORD, HARRY, and FRY, CHARLES. The greater English church of the middle ages. (English countryside ser) 136p il col pl $3 Scribner [7s 6d Batsford]

726 Church architecture. Cathedrals [40-14213]

"Prepared for armchair travelers and combining photographs and text in a substitute for actual sightseeing, this book tells more and shows more about the English cathedral and its place in life, art and history than any other of its size. . . The greater churches are not taken one by one in guide-book fashion; there is a section on how the cathedral was built in England, with architectural and building details pleasantly presented to the layman; then one on how it was used at the time when it was a community center as well as a religious one; then how it was planned, designed and furnished." Books

"Whatever is mentioned is promptly and beautifully illustrated; the photographs are little less than magnificent, and there are several large plates in color. Emphasis throughout is on the place of these buildings in the lives of men; they are shown as they were built, altered, developed, and as they met liturgical purposes; as they suffered under the iconoclasts, as they suffered decay and as they came back into active life of service, and through restoration of their fabric, to beauty. A library will use this happily written work for many different reference purposes, and the general reader will be grateful for the simplicity of its language in explaining architectural details and design."
+ Books p14 S 8 '40 240w

Reviewed by John Piper
Spec 164:691 My 17 '40 600w

"There is almost too much information in the closely packed pages of this new book—a remarkable production at the price, considering the number of illustrations—by the authors of 'Cathedrals of England,' now in its fourth edition; but careful reference to the index will enable readers to find their way about."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p228 My 11 '40 310w

BAUER, JOHN. National welfare and business stability; the permanent functions of public spending. 182p $2 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Economic conditions. Finance—U.S. U.S.—Public works 40-8676

"An argument for huge government spending on public works, land reclamation and resettlement, social, health and cultural services, etc., as a means of eradicating depressions, solving unemployment and generally stabilizing our economic unbalance." (New Repub) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Bauer is to be commended highly for the effective manner in which he has dispelled some of the fogs and mists of the economics of reaction. His discussion of taxes as nothing more than a form of price not only is interesting but also is in line with the best economic thought, and the entire book is a sober, clear, and stimulating presentation of a subject which produces violent emotional clashes." R. J. Harris
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1231 D '40 220w

Booklist 36:375 Je 1 '40

Bookmark p22 N '40

New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 40w

Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

BAUMANN, GUSTAVE. Frijoles canyon pictographs; recorded in woodcuts and hand printed; with foreword by Alfred Vincent Kidder. [43p] $6 Writers' editions

970.6 Picture writing, Indian. New Mexico —Antiquities 40-2538

"Interested visitors have almost rubbed or scratched away the famous 'pictographs' in Frijoles Canyon, near Santa Fe. There, through the centuries, forgotten artists and casual scribblers drew turkeys, deer hunts, fragments for pottery design, rain clouds and Indian girls' heads on the adobe walls. Gustav Baumann years ago (he is very vague about dates) crawled into the abandoned caves and excitedly made drawings of them. His woodcuts of some of these, exquisitely printed in two colors, are now published in [this] small book." Boston Transcript

"A small book of rare distinction and charm." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 My 3 '40 120w

"Baumann has produced a very original regional art book, handmade and spicy throughout—recognizably a Baumann, too, though not to hang on your wall." E. S. Sergeant
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 17 '40 550w

BAUMER, FRANKLIN LE VAN. The early Tudor theory of kingship. 259p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

354.42 Great Britain—Kings and rulers. Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Constitutional history 40-4600

"This study of political theory, mostly under Henry VII, covers ground that has been much less thoroughly studied than either the constitutionalism of Sir John Fortescue's generation or the divine right doctrine of the early Stuarts. Dr. Baumer derives from the voluminous pamphlet literature of the time a remarkably clear conception of the various schools of thought concerning the nature of royal authority which were contending in the ferment of the Reformation controversies." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The bibliography of early Tudor literature on political theory . . . with the added notes on original and secondary material, is exceedingly valuable, and the whole study is a welcome and attractive introduction to any advanced work in the Tudor and Stuart periods." A. B. White
+ Am Hist R 46:118 O '40 650w

"An affirmative description of Tudor kingship is still wanting. But this careful study of the pamphlet literature, and the valuable bibliographies appended, bring that description appreciably nearer." F. D. Wormuth
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:395 Ap '40 340w

"This American essay is a valuable contribution to the history of English political thought."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p436 S 7 '40 220w

BAUMER, WILLIAM H. How to be an army officer; with an introd. by Jay L. Benedict. 238p il $1.75 McBride

355.07 U.S.—Army—Officers. Military education. U.S.—Military academy, West Point (W)

Describes in factual manner how a candidate becomes an officer—West Point, Randolph Field, Thomason officer or in the R.O.T.C. Appendixes give educational requirements, corps areas, and subjects of examination for appointment. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:132 D 1 '40

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p25 D 15 '40 360w

BAXTER, ARTHUR BEVERLEY. Men, martyrs and mountebanks. 286p 8s 6d Hutchinson [English publication]

940.53 European war, 1939-. World politics [40-6870]

"Inner story of personalities and events behind the war" (Subtitle), written by an English journalist. Some of his essays are on the British Parliament at the outbreak of the war; the response of the Dominions to the call to war; speeches by Mr Chamberlain, whom the author admires; the first days of the blackout; and anecdotes of pre-war days in Germany.

"Except through flying visits to Vienna (just after its collapse into Germany's bosom) and Rumania, Mr. Beverley Baxter is not an authority on Europe. When he is batting on the home wicket, on the other hand, he is first-rate. . . The book, if slight and containing evidence of haste, is better than the catchpenny title would suggest." W. H. C.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '40 180w

"Mr. Baxter, as befits an experienced journalist, writes pleasantly of the contemporary scene. Undeterred by his publisher's claim that he would be a popular successor to Mr. Churchill in the role of contemporary historian, he has kept within his own compass of political chit-chat and light propaganda. . . But he could hardly claim that Men, Martyrs and Mountebanks provides either a profound analysis of the outbreak of war or the sensational disclosures which the title suggests."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:254 F 24 '40 100w

"This book is much better than its facile title or its sub-title may suggest. Mr. Baxter is an excellent journalist, of a type more common in America than in this country: he has widespread and fertile contacts and a faculty for being in places at interesting moments, he is a collector of excellent stories, he writes briskly, his judgement is shrewd, and he is quite without the devastating irresponsibility of many of his American counterparts."

+ Spec 164:154 F 2 '40 160w

"This volume is better than it may sound. Though it has the fluent and popular qualities of Mr. Beverley Baxter's journalism, he is too much in earnest to overdo the 'human interest' of the war and too conscientious to dabble in sensationalism. . . Necessarily there is from time to time not a little simplification of complex matters, but on the other hand Mr. Baxter also exhibits a shrewd hard sense and a plainness of judgment that in combination are worth rather more than polemical subtlety."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 20 '40 320w

BAYLES, WILLIAM DAVID. Caesars in goose step. 262p il $3 Harper

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Biography (W) 40-32402

"Sketches of the masters of Germany portrayed against the background of their own development and the environment that served as a vehicle to elevate them to power." (Foreword) They include Adolph Hitler, Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Rudolf Hess, Doktor Goebbels, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Heinrich Himmler, Robert Ley, Alfred Rosenberg, Erich Raeder, Wilhelm Keitel, Heinrich Alfred Hermann Walther von Brauchitsch, Franz Halder, Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, Fedor von Bock, Walther von Reichenau, Heinz Guderian, Siegmund Wilhelm Walther List, Johannes Blaskowitz, Gunther von Kluge and Erhard Milch. The author is an American journalist who taught English for two years at the University of Munich, and who lived in Berlin as a correspondent for Time and Life magazines from 1934 to February, 1940.

Reviewed by M. W. Fodor
Books p7 O 6 '40 950w

"It is to be desired that Mr. Bayles' book be very widely read, and that above all the first chapter of the book should belong to that material which should be required reading for everybody in these times, when each one of us has to make at any moment decisions upon which the whole course of the future may depend." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 250w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Nation 151:428 N 2 '40 220w

"Mr. Bayles paints a lively portrait of these men and then shoots poison arrows into each canvas. Enough of his stories and interpretations are fresh to compel the reader to stay with him deep into the night. . . Hand in hand with Otto Tolischus's 'They Wanted War,' Mr. Bayles's story is valuable in showing us the type of men with whom we must deal. But alone it is only part of the story of the modern Caesars." Shepard Stone

+ — N Y Times p20 O 20 '40 1550w

"Fresh data on the German generals, but you've seen much of the other material. However, it's well handled."

New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 60w

"Surfeited though it be with books and articles on Nazism and the war, the American public can well afford to add 'Caesars in Goose Step' to its library shelves. . . Mr. Bayles is a discerning journalist with a talent for phrase-making." D. H. Popper

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 N 16 '40 280w

Time 36:80 S 30 '40 450w

BAYS, MRS ALICE (ANDERSON). Worship programs in the fine arts for young people. 256p il $2 Cokesbury press

268.7 Worship. Art and religion. Hymns 40-30131

This book contains thirty-five complete worship services centering in works of art—paintings, sculpture, hymns—specially planned to fit the interests and needs of young people.

Christian Century 57:977 Ag 7 '40 50w

"The preacher who may not wish to use the services will find much original illustrative material, especially among the poems quoted, and the book should be in the library of every clergyman who is looking for new forms of worship." W. L. C.

+ Churchman 154:34 S 1 '40 120w

BEALS, CARLETON. Great circle; further adventures in free-lancing. 358p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27682

A continuation of the author's record of his experiences as a free lance journalist, begun in Glass Houses (Book Review Digest, 1938). Partial contents: Black goats in Spain; Africa; Tragedy in Istanbul; Mussolini invades Odessa; Oil in Baku; Germany on the eve; Oaxaca; Stravinsky in San Sebastián. Index.

Booklist 37:67 O 15 '40

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Books p17 O 13 '40 700w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 19 '40 650w

Churchman 154:35 N 1 '40 40w

Reviewed by Mary McCarthy
New Repub 103:633 N 4 '40 370w

"[When he goes to Mexico] suddenly he has something to say, and says it naturally and directly. From shallow observation, half-baked and self-satisfied generalization, hectic confusion of hard-forced phrase, he passes to knowledge, concreteness, simplicity. That is not to say that the Mexican chapters are really well written; but they are reasonably unaffected and readable."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 12 '41 500w

"A richly readable continuation of 'Glass Houses.'. . The author is one of those who prefer travel the hard way, rubbing shoulders with native life in its lowest form. Nevertheless you can find escape in 'The Great Circle.' "

+ Sat R of Lit 22:14 O 12 '40 320w

BEALS, CARLETON. Pan America. 545p maps $3 Houghton

330.973 Pan Americanism. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Commercial policy. Commercial products 40-27828

"Criticizing both interventionists and isolationists as nineteenth-century thinkers, the author argues that our strategy, like the strategy of other major nations, must be oriented in relation to the sources of essential raw materials in which we are deficient. Many if not all of these, he says, can be secured in Latin America and would provide the base for a sound reciprocal economy and hemisphere defense." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 37:167 Ja 1 '41

"Beals's indictment of Great Britain is overwhelming. It runs all through the book. . . One reads in amazement [some of these] statements from an old-time friend of democracy and the under dog. . . It is too much to expect any author to be accurate on all his facts about twenty countries. But Mr. Beals would be well advised to revise some of his sources of information. He was given a particularly bad steer about the recent sensational activities of the Nazis in Uruguay." S. G. Inman
Books p6 D 8 '40 1450w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
Library J 65:1041 D 1 '40 500w

"A stimulating book, thoroughly documented."
New Yorker 16:122 D 7 '40 120w

"Mr. Beals has few peers and no superiors when he describes Latin America, its people, its economy, its problems. And he has an enviable knowledge of modern technology, of the flow of raw materials over the world's trade routes, and of the complex structure of modern trade. In the present book, however, Mr. Beals has not confined himself to factual reporting and description, but has presented us with a comprehensive and sweeping political thesis. . . There is a real need for a consistent and clear analysis of United States policy on the basis of a genuine and well thought-out realism—something like the job E. H. Carr's 'Twenty Years Crisis' did for England two years ago. But Mr. Beals has not succeeded in writing it; he has not even tried." P. F. Drucker
Sat R of Lit 23:14 D 21 '40 950w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 1250w

BEAN, WILLIAM JACKSON. Wall shrubs and hardy climbers. 182p il $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Putnam]

635.976 Shrubs. Climbing plants [40-27473]

This work, by an English authority, is in two parts. Part one, a rather lengthy introduction, deals with cultivation, methods of support, and pruning, and, in a final section, discusses the various types of climbers and wall shrubs and their possible locations and uses. Part two is an encyclopedic list, arranged alphabetically by genera, of those climbers and wall shrubs which can be grown outdoors in average English climate. Index.

"Another importation from England which fits perfectly into what has become almost a standard description of these foreign gardening volumes: splendid in the country for which they were written, but too misleading under American conditions to be of much practical usefulness here. . . So, when plant after plant described in an avowedly practical book cannot be obtained here, and would fail to grow if it could be secured, it is this reviewer's contention that said volume falls far short of the ideal, to put it mildly." R. S. Lemmon
— Books p13 Je 16 '40 120w

Reviewed by R. G. E. Willison
New Statesman & Nation 18:257 Ag 12 '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 170w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. A foreign policy for America. 161p $1.50 Knopf

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy (W) 40-27474

Rejecting the appellation: isolationist, Professor Beard argues for a foreign policy for the United States that would keep us from meddling in European and Asiatic conflicts but would involve our defense of all in the western hemisphere—a policy of Continentalism. Index

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

Bookmark p10 N '40

Reviewed by Walter Millis
Books p3 My 19 '40 750w

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey
Commonweal 32:194 Je 21 '40 650w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:1 Je '40 1000w

Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 70w

"A timely book, especially in view of the present altered European war situation. . . In this book Professor Beard has rendered a public service indeed." L. N. Feipel
+ Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 220w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 150:656 My 25 '40 700w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 102:765 Je 3 '40 1250w

"The book has some good history in it; but it also has a great deal of very bad and misleading history." Allan Nevins
— + N Y Times p20 My 26 '40 750w

"Readable and ironic, in the author's best vein."
+ New Yorker 16:93 My 25 '40 80w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
Sat R of Lit 22:5 My 18 '40 1000w

Springf'd Republican p14 My 24 '40 600w

Reviewed by Quincy Wright
Survey G 29:443 Ag '40 600w

Time 35:90 My 20 '40 750w

Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, and SMITH, GEORGE HOWARD EDWARD. The old deal and the new. 294p $2 Macmillan

330.973 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 40-35444

An analysis "of the roots and progress of the New Deal. 'The organizational growth and tendency toward centralization of government were well established long before the New Deal.' The growing strength of corporate control had contributed largely to the dislocation of any stable balance which could be recovered by 'natural' restoration. . . Decidedly friendly and, on the whole, commendatory to the Roosevelt administration, the authors endeavor to maintain a reportorial detachment in their analysis of the successive stages of its domestic and foreign policies. Credit is given for progress toward a solution of the domestic problems." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 300w

"Here, once more, is the kind of incisive historical analysis these authors have led us to expect. They offer the simple thesis that the New Deal is not an isolated phenomenon, but a prolongation of history. Hence they offer us a distillation of the facts, ideas and interests that formed the texture of the Old Deal. Thus the first two chapters are not only brilliant summaries of the economics of the Old Deal but also of the cultural context." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 33:404 F 7 '41 450w

"A masterly analysis." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 300w

"Plays no favorites. A bang-up job."
+ New Yorker 16:91 N 30 '40 80w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 30w

BEARD, C. A., and SMITH, G. H. E.—Cont.

"Prof Beard and his collaborator have contributed a dispassionate analysis that should promote an intelligent understanding of current history."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 16 '41 800w

BEARD, JAMES. Hors d'oeuvre and canapés; with a key to the cocktail party. 189p il $1.75 Barrows

641.8 Cookery (hors d'œuvres). Beverages, Alcoholic 40-33569

The author defines hors d'œuvre and canapés, gives a section on how to give a cocktail party as well as other uses of hors d'œuvre, and includes recipes for a vast variety arranged under various classifications. Index.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"This volume will be bought eagerly by the many distraught hostesses who have run out of ideas for the all-important canapé. . . I hope people will realize this book has a wider use than its title implies. Most of the recipes will taste equally good enlarged into entrées, and many could be adapted to an entire buffet supper." H. T. Hilles

+ Books p13 Ja 19 '41 120w

BEATTIE, KIM. Brother, here's a man! the saga of Klondike Boyle; with a foreword by Queen Marie of Rumania. 309p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Boyle, Joseph W. Adventure and adventurers (W) 40-14288

"Biography of a hard-boiled he-man, one Klondike Joe Boyle, Yukon gold-rusher in 1898, prizefight manager, sailor, Canadian Army officer, British agent in Russia, 'uncrowned King of Rumania,' oil magnate and a few other things as well." Boston Transcript

"Kim Beattie has succeeded admirably in presenting the broad outlines of a man of great physical power, burning energy, quick mind, blunt tongue, and integrity of character, and of his astounding career. The author has not been so successful with his details, which are vague and confusing, and sometimes obviously incorrect." R. B. Harris

+ — Books p13 Je 23 '40 1300w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 50w

"One of the most remarkable true stories of adventure ever written is this record of the incredible exploits of Joe Boyle. As fiction it would lack plausibility, but it all seems to have happened just as Mr. Beattie tells it."

+ Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 350w

"One of the most exciting adventure yarns that I have read for many a day and should be popular, particularly with men. A few passages might restrict it to adults only." H. A. Carpenter

Library J 65:396 My 1 '40 150w

"The style has an old-fashioned gush that is not very helpful and that definitely impedes the flow of the narrative." Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p2 Je 2 '40 750w

New Yorker 16:84 Je 1 '40 50w

"Highly recommended reading for those who find seemingly incredible fact more enjoyable than fiction." L. W.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 320w

BEATTY, EDWARD CORBYN OBERT. William Penn as social philosopher; with a foreword by Marcus W. Jernegan. 338p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 Penn, William 40-4678

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"This is a valuable contribution to the social history of Europe and America. . . The volume is well documented, contains a satisfactory index and an excellent bibliography, and is written in a pleasing, readable style." A. E. Martin

+ Am Hist R 45:723 Ap '40 300w

Reviewed by J. M. Mecklin

Am J Soc 46:108 Jl '40 220w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Am Soc R 5:816 O '40 60w

"For an adequate study of William Penn this book is essential." E. W. Powell

+ Crozer Q 17:136 Ap '40 60w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat

Crozer Q 17:241 Jl '40 20w

"The book is in no sense popular in tone; indeed, the manner in which its material is organized makes it difficult to read; but for the good of the land it should have a wide public, for the knowledge it gives of Penn will make every reader aware of the full stature of the man." D. A. Roberts

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 10 '40 550w

BEATTY, JEROME. Americans all over. 424p il map $3 Day

920 U.S.—Biography. Voyages around the world (W) 40-27301

"This engaging book is for the most part a collection of the articles which Jerome Beatty, the magazine writer, produced on his fifteen months' safari into far, strange places, in search of Americans who were doing interesting things. The idea for this assignment—surely one of the most attractive ever given to a reporter—was hatched by Mr. DeWitt Wallace, the ingenious proprietor of Reader's Digest, and backed by him." Books

Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

"This is a discursive, friendly—perhaps too friendly—book, informative without ever being stuffy." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Mr 17 '40 1100w

"His findings are a pleasing blend of round-the-world travel and biographical vignettes." A. G. Higgins

+ Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 100w

New Repub 102:618 My 6 '40 60w

"[Mr Beatty] writes about his experiences with gayety and zest and humor. The reader, whirling breathlessly in his wake, is constantly pleased and amused and thrilled." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 24 '40 1350w

"Although 'Americans All Over' contains many critical comments about the peoples and customs of all lands covered, Beatty never loses his sense of humor. He reveals himself as a keen observer and an adaptable traveller, who through experience has learned to comprehend the fundamental differences in the social points of view of many nationalities. But this has served only to accentuate his Americanism." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 21:14 Mr 16 '40 850w

BEATY, JOHN OWEN. Image of life. 214p $2 Nelson

801 Criticism. English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism 40-32717

The author, professor of English in Southern Methodist University, here points out some of the evils which he finds in modern life and literature—decadent sentimentalism, obscenity, the influence of a left-wing minority opposed to Anglo-Saxon morality, etc. Contents: Decadent sentimentalism in twentieth century literature; Propaganda in the terminology of literary criticism; The revolt against the didactic; The tottering block house of culture; "The iron of English"—new types of literature; Censorship, gangs, and the tyranny of minorities; The "institutions of teachers"; "Proud women . . . the ladies of the future"; Action in the hour before dawn.

"This is a very fine book. There is more sound common sense about literature and criticism between its covers than I have been privileged to come upon in many a day. . . 'Image of Life' is a deceptive book. Foolish people will think it superficial because it insists upon and illuminates what should be obvious. . . This book hits heads, some of them reverend heads, and hits them hard, yet never without good reason. It is rare and refreshing, in these days, to find a critic such as this, who doesn't seem to be worried that someone might shake gory locks at him and cry 'Illiberal.' " J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 33:187 D 6 '40 310w

"This highly controversial thesis, developed in an interesting and forthright fashion, provides the general reader with a great deal of stimulating material for thought and discussion. Study clubs and reading groups should find that the book lends itself particularly well to their purposes, for which it is probably intended." R. B. Nye

+ J Religion 21:96 Ja '41 100w

School & Society 52:504 N 16 '40 20w

BEAUCHAMP, WILBUR LEE; MAYFIELD, JOHN CUNLIFFE, and WEST, JOE YOUNG. Everyday problems in science. 3d ed 752p il $1.72 Scott

500 Science 40-12009

General science text for the beginning high school student, which can be used by the general reader. The work is divided into twenty units, each with self-testing exercises. Glossary of science words. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 25:39 Jl '40

School & Society 51:768 Je 22 '40 40w

BEAVEN, ALBERT WILLIAM. Remaking life; a challenge to the Christian church. 237p $2 Cokesbury press

261 Church work 40-4798

"This book comprises the 1939 Cole lectures at Vanderbilt University. . . Doctor Beaven speaks upon the building of strong churches in a stormy world; upon the church's power to remake life; upon the commanding place of the pulpit in the proclamation of the church's message; upon the permanent worth of fellowship within and among the churches; and finally upon the cause in general, and the demand for great living." Crozer Q

Christian Century 57:417 Mr 27 '40 90w

"This is a work of great worth to preachers, and to all who would know the trend of the times, and the reaction within the churches. It offers valuable reading for earnest people everywhere." A. H. C. Morse

+ Crozer Q 17:237 Jl '40 320w

BECHDOLT, FREDERICK RITCHIE. Bold raiders of the West. 269p $2 Doubleday

40-9440

A story of Civil war days in New Mexico.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"Vigorous period piece." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 9 '40 90w

"Intrigue, violence, hard fighting are skillfully handled. The atmosphere of the time and place is evoked convincingly. The characters become real to the reader. Frederick Bechdolt has never written better. But he has chosen a poor title that does not fit the story." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p15 Je 23 '40 260w

BECHDOLT, FREDERICK RITCHIE. Danger on the border. 280p $2 Doubleday

40-5182

Western story.

Booklist 36:307 Ap 1 '40

"This is your dish if you're looking for a superior Western, active as they come, yet lacking all those goofy elements that disfigure so many tales of the open." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 F 4 '40 110w

"A swift and tense tale of adventure, intrigue and romance, packed with excitement and suspense, expertly managed and very well written."

+ N Y Times p7 F 4 '40 230w

Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON). Introducing Charles Dickens; il by Oscar Ogg. 250p $2.50 Dodd

B or 92 Dickens, Charles (W) 40-27798

"The only excuse for one more [biography of Dickens] is that as each generation discovers Dickens for itself, there are . . . young Americans who have not yet discovered Dickens. . . It draws more freely upon his own letters than upon any other source. It depends otherwise upon people who saw him, listened to him, laughed with him, and wrote down how he looked and acted and spoke." Foreword

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

"May Lamberton Becker brings Charles Dickens to life in our own time, and she does it without violating the confidence of the young explorer of books bent on making his or her own choice. For a confirmed Dickens lover this is a rare achievement. . . Mrs. Becker has not written down. She has given to readers of any age a poignant and a constructive reminder that Charles Dickens is a power to be invoked in the need of the twentieth century no less than in the nineteenth. It is not merely a book for the young. It is a book for every one who feels any concern for the future." A. C. Moore

+ Books p10 N 10 '40 900w

"A more sympathetic introduction to Dickens for boys and girls has never been written. It will also serve to revive the interest of adults in one of the greatest of the English novelists, whose true stature is more and more appreciated as the years go by." M. E. Prim

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 320w

"We can think of no happier way of Introducing Charles Dickens than that in which May Lamberton Becker presents him in a book that would make this year's lists important even if there were no other. It is written with the surety and skill with which only a lover and lifelong student of Dickens could write." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:382 D '40 130w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 180w

"The prize catch of the year. Mrs. Becker on Dickens turns out to be one of those happiest of conjunctions, and I will venture a guess that so long as Dickens is liked by children, this book will be a vade mecum. It fits any age old enough to like any of Boz—which will differ very widely indeed. If you know a child who has such a taste, here is the book. And it breathes the England no man can conceive destroyed, any more than Saint Jerome could conceive the fall of Rome."

+ Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 80w

"Many Dickens lovers have become fogbound, but Mrs. Becker is clear-sighted and secure in her foothold. Her book seems to me one of the most important of books published in 1940." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 16:430 N '40 70w

"Not brilliant or profound or scholarly, but a warm, sincere uncritical appreciation of a great writer. I think boys and girls will read it and will go from it to David Copperfield, Oliver Twist, and Tale of Two Cities with new zest." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 65:856 O 15 '40 50w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:456 N 9 '40 10w

New Yorker 16:130 D 7 '40 50w

"If the children don't mind, I think I'll keep this book. Oh, I'll let them borrow it. Perhaps I'll read them some of it. But May Lamberton Becker is speaking not only to young persons unacquainted with Dickens but also to older people who, like herself, have enjoyed Dickens for years. Indeed I am inclined to think that she is speaking through the older people to the younger generation. And probably that is the most practical approach to the subject." Alexander Cowie

BECKER, MAY—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 23:24 N 16 '40 480w

BECKMAN, R. O. How to train supervisors; manual and outlines for determinate discussion. 305p il $3 Harper

658.31243 Foremen. Efficiency, Industrial. Employment management 40-27201

A manual for use in training supervisors, "persons of either sex who represent the connecting link between the management and workers"—foremen, overseers, section chiefs, etc. The book is in two parts: part one, Manual of procedure; part two, Outlines for discussion. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:276 Mr 15 '40
Reviewed by M. S. Firth
Management R 29:115 Mr '40 500w

BECKWITH, MARTHA WARREN. Hawaiian mythology; pub. for the Folklore foundation of Vassar college. 575p $5 Yale univ. press

299.92 Mythology, Hawaiian. Folklore—Hawaiian Islands. Legends—Hawaiian Islands 40-8309

The author, who is a research associate of the Bishop museum in Honolulu, traces the development of Polynesian mythology. The subject is divided into stories of gods and ghosts; of ancestors; and of fiction in the form of legend and romance. Index.

Reviewed by E. S. C. Handy
Am Soc R 5:984 D '40 430w
Reviewed by Ralph Linton
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 110w
Christian Century 57:418 Mr 27 '40 50w

"Martha Warren Beckwith is not only an investigator in the field of Hawaiian mythology; she is a historian of Hawaiian culture and her interests are in romance and poetry as well as mythology. More than any other scholar I know of she is fascinated by the soul of the remarkable Kanaka-Maori people. . . She writes clearly and freshly, and always with a sense of the imaginative elements in this lore. And as a scholar she knows the work of other scholars in the history and anthropology of the Polynesian people. There is no better guide than Martha Warren Beckwith in this domain." Padraic Colum
+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 13 '40 750w

BEDELL, CLYDE. How to write advertising that sells. 524p il $4 McGraw

659.1 Advertising (W) 40-7172

This manual for the advertising copy writer was designed in the first instance for a night class course in writing retail advertising. The author discusses in detail the tools with which the writer works, the elements of selling strategy, and the application of methods to advertising, ending with an exposition on how to make a check on effective and non-effective advertisements. Index.

Booklist 36:377 Je 1 '40
Management R 29:195 My '40 70w

BEEBE, CATHERINE (MRS ROBB BEEBE). The calendar; pictures by Robb Beebe. 63p $1.25 Oxford

(W) 40-31798

The Dorset children decided at the end of a summer holiday that they would make a calendar, check their good times on it, and at the end of the year make their own calendar of good times. But by the end of the year, in which each month was full of pleasure, they decided to keep the regular calendar, so they could have fun in each month.

"This simple little story about real children is the kind that beginning readers like best. The make-up of the book itself is extremely attractive, with drawings on almost every other page by Robb Beebe. Good print and easy vocabulary make this an ideal read-to-yourself book for second to third grades." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 130w

"Robb Beebe's attractive drawings make this simple little story about real children a very likeable one for beginning readers."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:171 D '40

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). England was an island once. 324p $3 Harcourt

914.2 England—Social life and customs. European war, 1939—Great Britain. Europe —Politics—Crisis, 1938 40-27742

A mingling of personal impressions and English history, written during the summers of 1938 and 1939, when the author was in England. "Critical periods in English history, the dependableness of the English character, the charm and beauty of the country and the cathedrals, and the English innate love of peace are fondly dwelt upon together with her own reactions to English life among her friends and acquaintances." (Library J) Index.

"This is more than a personal reaction to England in crisis. It is England in crisis, calling up reserves of memory and of character." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 O 27 '40 500w

"It seems an outrageous contradiction of terms to speak of a delightfully written account of the beginning of a horrible war. But the book does describe the beginning of the war, and it is a delightful book because so much of it tells of the days when England was an island and because it depicts without melodrama the heroic response of a people to a great crisis. Incidentally perhaps it is British propaganda, but a competent and intimate introduction to England could scarcely avoid being that."
+ Christian Century 57:1215 O 2 '40 280w

"Hers is in some ways a strange book, yet unquestioningly a moving one. Had she, had her publishers, wished to choose the most poignant moment for bringing it out, they could not have decided more expertly. . . To lovers of England, especially, this original book which shows the true England, her glorious achievement and integrity of purpose shining through her ordeal by fire, will constitute both a reassurance and an inspiration." M. W.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 26 '40 500w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson
Churchman 154:20 O 15 '40 130w

"The discursive style will, doubtless, be tantalizing to some readers, and although the author advises those who do not like it not to read further, those who continue will be well rewarded, as the narrative gains in interest as the purpose of the discursions become increasingly evident." A. M. Colt
+ Library J 65:708 S 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Marjorie McFarland
Living Age 359:292 N '40 170w

"There are pages in gushing guide-book style about Winchester and Gloucester and other quiet cathedral towns; there are other irrelevant passages romanticizing the Boer War, which seems to Miss Thane to have been such a nice, gallant affair compared to the sordidness of the present day. Still, the faults of the book are forgivable, for it contains many nuggets of first-rate reporting. . . It is all the more valuable as a document because it pictures an England which will be changed, perhaps beyond all recognition, when the war is over." Ferdinand Kuhn
+ — N Y Times p4 N 24 '40 650w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS. Highliners; a railroad album [phot. by the author]. 104p $5 Appleton-Century

385 Railroads—Trains—Pictorial works. Locomotives 40-6073

A volume of photographs, with brief explanatory text, showing railroad trains in various parts of America and with various kinds of locomotives—steam, Diesel, and electric, streamlined and not so streamlined.

"There are 103 photographs in this volume, excellent in various ways; some for their drama, some for sheer beauty of mechanical composition. But occasionally Mr. Beebe has seen through a ground glass darkly, and the result is a slight fuzziness in the background of some of his prints." R. E. M. Whitaker

+ — Books p4 Ap 7 '40 500w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 30 '40 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:27 Ap '40

"Many excellent photographs nearly all by the author, who also contributes the text and a rather exalted foreword."

+ New Yorker 16:76 Mr 30 '40 30w

BEEDING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. The secret weapon [Eng title: Not a bad show]. 299p $2 Harper [8s 3d Hodder]

40-13260

Spy story in which a British secret service agent engages in dangerous activities in Germany and, after a terrific struggle, lives to tell the tale.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

"Roger Marples is one whale of a Beeding hero. . . You're sure of it when he swims from a torpedoed ship to the submarine after the papers, and he never lets you down during his melodramatic stunts in Germany. . . Unsinkable, unshootable, and fairly incredible, Roger proves himself a somewhat juvenile wonder." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ag 4 '40 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:143 Ag 10 '40 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 Jl 28 '40 290w

Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 30w

"With all the suspense of 'to be continued in our next' and none of the exasperation of having to wait a week or month for the sequel, the reader will find the mere turning of a page a hindrance when Mr. Beeding accelerates at air speed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p341 Jl 13 '40 290w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

BEER, MAX. An inquiry into physiocracy. 196p $2 Macmillan [6s Allen, G]

330.152 Physiocrats [40-14136]

A study of the pre-revolutionary school of economists in France who have been known since 1767 as the Physiocrats, the opponents of the Mercantile school and the followers and disciples of François Quesnay. This book forms a complementary volume to the author's Early British Economics (Book Review Digest, 1938). Index.

"The work is done with the lightness of touch and absence of parade of erudition which is the mark of learning and characteristic of the brilliant group of elder economic historians to which Mr Beer belongs. It is firmly based on massive scholarship; and it points clearly to the liberal moral that, underlying Physiocracy and all other systems for curing economic ills, is that desire for the adjustment of emotion to intellect which is at once their stimulus and the yardstick of their failure."

+ Economist 138:469 Mr 16 '40 650w

"Though the volume is small, it provides the best introduction known to me about a complex theme; and though its brevity necessarily prevents Mr. Beer from dealing with the fascinating by-ways of his subject, he has remarkably succeeded, in a very small space, in setting the proper perspective for its understanding." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:78 Ja 20 '40 500w

"A brilliant, discriminating and sympathetic piece of work." H. M. C.

+ Spec 164:189 F 9 '40 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p713 D 9 '39 700w

BEESLEY, PATRICIA. Revival of the humanities in American education [ed. by Lennox Grey]. 201p $2 Columbia univ. press [13s 6d Oxford]

378 Education, Higher. Education—U.S. Humanities 40-31097

"This volume is intended (a) to give an account of what colleges are doing in the field of the humanities; (b) to show what are the common and the variant elements in courses bearing the humanities label; (c) to sketch the background of these courses in terms of the long-time controversies over the place of the humanities in a program of higher education and of the factors that have contributed to the current revival of interest in the humanities; and (d) to provide a basic bibliography on the subject." (Library Q) Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Caldwell

Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 550w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser

Crozer Q 17:307 O '40 430w

"As a ready source of condensed information regarding humanities courses, this volume fills a real need. It is well written, well documented, and the Bibliography contains valuable references for those who are interested in reading more widely in this field. College presidents, deans, instructors in humanities courses, and professors of education—especially those interested in problems of the curriculum—should read [this book]." A. J. Brumbaugh

+ Library Q 10:601 O '40 750w

Social Studies 31:286 O '40 30w

BEIM, LORRAINE, and BEIM, JERROLD. Lucky Pierre; pictures by Howard Simon. unp $1.50 Harcourt

40-32630

Story of a lovable small Breton who was always looking for things to the exasperation of his five brothers and sisters. On a day when the children went sardine fishing and a storm came up they all changed their minds. If it hadn't been for some of Pierre's finds they would probably have drowned.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

"The laughing repetition of the 'finds,' the good sense of their use on this occasion, and the kindness of the children make the story easy, pleasant reading, and the large type helps a beginner. There is a large picture for every two or three sentences, in sepia and bright sea-green, showing a Breton seaport and its children at work and play, very pretty." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 29 '40 180w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 90w

"A warm little story of a fisherman's humble home." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:433 N '40 80w

"Ages five to eight." D. L. Wood

Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 100w

BEIM, L. and J.—Continued

"It is an engaging little tale, briefly and happily told, unburdened with details of Breton life which can be seen for themselves—sabots, caps, sails and nets—and will therefore probably be remembered much longer, in Howard Simon's widespread pictures of blue and sepia. These are drawn with freer, more mobile touch than he has yet used and are the most pleasing this illustrator has given us."

+ N Y Times p10 O 13 '40 210w

BELBENOIT, RENE. Hell on trial; tr. from the original French manuscript by Preston Rambo. 317p $3 Dutton

365 Devil's island. Penal colonies. French Guiana—Exiles (W) 40-3532

Further revelations concerning France's penal colonies in South America, by the author of Dry Guillotine (Book Review Digest, 1938).

"However sympathetic one may be with Belbenoit and his fight for the abolishment of his penal colony, 'Hell On Trial' has an anticlimactic character. The previous volume was so powerful in its attack that the aftermath bogs down in repetition and occasional contradiction of statements previously expressed by the author. He told his story forcefully and amazingly well in 'Dry Guillotine' and in the present addition has used much apparently cut from the first. This is proved by the constant reference to the original book by use of footnotes the reader may well find irritating. It seems obvious that the reader should not find it necessary to read the first book to be rewarded by the second." R. S. Benjamin

+ — Books p6 Ja 14 '40 850w

"'Hell on Trial,' like its predecessor, holds one breathless until the last page. There is even material for those with taste for the sordid—perverts who dress and act like women, life among the forgotten lepers, and the white slavery traffic handled in South American cities by escaped convicts." S. F. Parkyn

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 320w

"Informed and serious-minded citizens of the United States must of course be the first to sympathize both with the earnestness of French efforts at reform and the slowness and difficulty of their progress. Meanwhile the sensation-seeker will find thrills, shocks and horrors aplenty in the Belbenoit books, though readers of the first will probably be disappointed in the second."

— + N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '40 700w

New Yorker 15:62 Ja 6 '40 50w

"As a straightforward narration of experience, the book bears the mark of integrity. There are gaps, and a sense of too much haste, which must tantalize readers not acquainted with 'Dry Guillotine.' All in all, 'Hell on Trial' is best regarded as a supplement to its predecessor." Harold Courlander

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 Ja 13 '40 750w

"'Hell On Trial' is obviously not free from sensationalism, and the amount of exaggeration that may have crept into the author's narration is for the reader to determine."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 17 '40 400w

Time 35:76 Ja 29 '40 150w

Wis Lib Bul 36:25 F '40

BELL, BERNARD IDDINGS. Religion for living; a book for postmodernists. 187p $2 Harper [10s 6d Gifford]

248 Christianity 40-6597

"One of the most marked characteristics of modern religious writing has been its striking reaction from what has come to be known as the Liberalism of the past, an attitude of mind that reached its greatest influence in the early years of the present century. . . Canon Bell sets out to develop what he calls the 'postmodernist' attitude to religion. He sees that the Liberal doctrine of man was gravely defective. . . His 'postmodernist' is, as he says, 'intellectually humble and spiritually hungry,' a man who is conscious that what his spiritual life demands 'is something more than a series of propositions about which to debate' if his life is to be 'something else than insurmountable tragedy.' He claims that Christianity, and in the main traditional Christianity, meets exactly that case." Times [London] Lit Sup

"All liberals, however defined, and all pre- or post-modernists who cherish humanistic illusions about the sufficiency of science may advantageously follow this cogent argument for the need not only of religion but of Christianity. But as to the nature of religion and of Christianity, these and other readers should at least seek collateral advice."

Christian Century 57:418 Mr 27 '40 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

Reviewed by Richard Flower

Commonweal 32:413 S 6 '40 260w

"Even on first opening this book the reader is struck by its clarity and vigor both of thought and expression. Soon one comes to feel its beauty, along with its wisdom and its faith. And in a comparatively slender volume Dr. Bell has far more to say to perplexed and troubled man than can be even touched upon in a brief review."

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 25 '40 430w

"It is a challenging position, and Canon Bell states it in most downright fashion. His phrases are often pungent, but they are never merely clever; and the statement of the Christian position gains in force because it is shown to be itself a criticism of much that is still taken more or less for granted in modern thinking."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 13 '40 380w

BELL, ERIC TEMPLE (JOHN TAINE, pseud). The development of mathematics. 583p $4.50 McGraw

510.9 Mathematics—History 40-33265

"In this important book the author presents a broad account of the part played by mathematics in the evolution of civilization, describing clearly the main principles, methods, and theories of mathematics that have survived, from about 4000 B.C. to 1940. Besides outlining the development of the leading ideas, the book gives the student a well-rounded understanding of the story by explaining the mathematics involved. Throughout, details of antiquarian interest are subordinated to a much fuller exposition of things still alive in mathematics than is customary in histories of the traditional kind." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"Intended primarily for serious students of mathematics, this very readable volume proves to be a narrative of the decisive epochs in the development of that science rather than a history of the traditional kind. Those who intend to continue their intellectual activity in mathematics or science or technology will find assistance in such a survey of the main directions along which living mathematics has developed, as they seek to decide in what particular field of mathematics, if any, they might find a lasting satisfaction."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 N '40 190w

BELL, HOWARD MITCHELL. Matching youth and jobs; a study of occupational adjustment; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 277p il map $2 Am. council on educ.

371.425 Occupations. Profession, Choice of 40-27829

"This report is the result of a cooperative project carried out by the American youth commission and the Federal employment service division. Selecting four metropolitan areas and four adjoining suburban and rural counties, they studied the problems of occupational adjustment, and demonstrated how the problems could be met. The program suggested is based on community responsibility; it is evident that the task is not for schools alone." Booklist

---

Booklist 37:167 Ja 1 '41

"Despite the heavy going it should be read by all who have a special interest in the problem, which is a very real problem and will remain one even after we have found jobs for the 4,000,000 young people who are unemployed today." J. C. Cort

Commonweal 33:356 Ja 24 '41 260w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 20w

BELL, J. H. B.; BOZMAN, ERNEST FRANKLIN, and BLAKEBOROUGH, JOHN FAIRFAX. British hills and mountains. (British Heritage ser) 128p 93il $3 Scribner [8s 6d Batsford]

914.2 England—Description and travel. Scotland—Description and travel. Mountaineering

"The photographs will all be examined before the text is read. They come in two wide sections: first mountains and hills of Scotland, then those of England and Wales, the first having nine regional chapters, the second six. Its amazing diversity of scene is perhaps the most surprising feature of the book to one who knows English highlands only from the Lake District, and Scotland's Glencoe and Lochaber. The text is pleasantly concerned with climbing experiences and technique, and some of the more breath-taking cliffsides have climbing parties on their way up, adding human interest to the inhuman beauty of the rocks." Books

---

Books p16 S 15 '40 160w

"The guidebooks that can be enjoyed as literature are few and far between, and I would not include 'British Hills and Mountains' among them. I mention this, because the book eschews the businesslike form of Baedeker and his fellows, and, while in reality as much a catalogue, makes pretensions to being a readable book. The result is only to render the information in it less quickly accessible, which is a pity, because the information appears to be very full and complete. The photographs are excellent." Eric Forbes-Boyd

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 3 '40 90w

"Taken as a whole, the amount of information packed into these 115 pages is prodigious, and the authors must be congratulated upon the skill which has prevented the concise marshalling of facts from deteriorating into an uninteresting catalogue. Special mention must be made of the very fine collection of photographs that illustrate the volume. Every one possesses distinction; and, taken in conjunction with the text, they supply a perspective that must of necessity be lacking in written description, however skilfully it be done."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p355 Jl 20 '40 300w

BELL, NEIL, pseud. See Southwold, S.

BELL, SPURGEON. Productivity, wages, and national income. 344p $3 Brookings [15s Faber]

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. Wages—U.S. U.S.—Industries and resources. Income 40-9504

Study of the fundamental issues involved in technological and economic progress. The author analyzes productivity, wages, hours and output trends in manufacturing, railroad, mining, and electric power industries during the last twenty years, and shows how gains from increased productivity are distributed. The index for the volume is furnished by the titles to the charts and tables given in the book.

Reviewed by R. J. Harris

Am Pol Sci R 34:1230 D '40 300w

"Counting appendixes, many more than half the pages are devoted to methodology. Perhaps the usefulness of this useful book would have been increased if many of these pages had been employed, instead, in discussing the relation of some of the data to such matters as inflexible prices, profits inflation, the marginal productivity of labor, technological unemployment, and the nature of the technological changes and frictions which characterized the period under review." B. W. Knight

+ — Ann Am Acad 211:226 S '40 490w

"As the sixth number in the comprehensive series of volumes from The Brookings Institution, this book will be welcomed by every engineer and executive of process industry who is responsible for studying the fundamental trends of his company or his industry. The book is a very creditable addition to the series and will be fully as valuable as any of its predecessors." R. S. McBride

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:509 Jl '40 400w

Foreign Affairs 19:256 O '40 10w

Management R 29:160 Ap '40 80w

"A valuable study. . . The analysis is too involved for most laymen to take in stride, but the author's interpretive conclusions are clear and striking enough for anyone to grasp."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 16 '40 450w

BELLAH, JAMES WARNER. The bones of Napoleon. 266p $2 Appleton-Century 40-12030

A mystery-romance, involving a New York newspaperman, discovered to be the owner of a historical plantation in Maryland; a charming girl traveling under an assumed name; an Irish lord; and several predatory characters searching for the bones of Napoleon.

"Mr. Bellah has a high old time with his varied material, whipping it into an amusing summer tale." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Je 30 '40 260w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 90w

"Mystery and romance team up to make James Warner Bellah's new novel exciting and entertaining. His fast, casual style makes smooth going, with no slowing down for the bumps of improbable happenings. And there is considerable variety of incident besides the business of rattling the bones of Napoleon." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p14 Je 30 '40 320w

"Pleasantly exhilarating mixture of murder, romance, and attempted robbery with dash of apocryphal Napoleonana and attractive scenery. Time-passer."

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 29 '40 40w

BELLAMANN, HENRY. Kings Row. 674p $2.75 Simon & Schuster (W) 40-7412

A long, full, many-charactered novel in which the life of a small Midwestern town is depicted during two decades before and after the turn of the century. The town and its people, good and bad, sinned against and sinning, are shown chiefly as they impinge upon the life of Parris Mitchell, an outsider in childhood and youth, a keen observer of human nature after he becomes a doctor and psychiatrist.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

"A big moving, passionate novel." F. T Marsh

+ Books p1 Ap 14 '40 1200w

"In the telling of this tale most of the skeletons in the cupboards of the town are brought to light, and not a few unattractive figures appear. . . To offset these, there are, it is true, other more normal figures, but the total effect is of the piling on of horrors. Though Mr. Bellamann writes fluently, his writing has little of the compelling power that distinguishes Faulkner's." Dorothy Greenwald

BELLAMANN, HENRY—Continued
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 350w

"In my judgment the novel will be read for its excitement, frequently melodramatic, rather than for its philosophy, which hardly rises above the banal at any point. In short, it appears that the author's reach considerably exceeded his grasp." Herschel Brickell
— Commonweal 32:106 My 24 '40 290w

New Repub 102:554 Ap 22 '40 50w

"This book won't inspire sermons in churches or bills in Congress. It's just a grand yarn, full of the sap of life, and if one will hardly remember it a year from now, one can enjoy it freely in the meanwhile." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 14 '40 1200w

"The 'Dracula' elements in 'Kings Row' are at times subordinated to a less sensational picture of the life of the town. In the person of Parris Mitchell, who has idealism and integrity, Mr. Bellamann projects his indictment of small-town vulgarity, meanness, and plain criminality. We've had the situation before . . . but Mr. Bellamann gives new life to a familiar thesis by a heightening of incident and an operatic conception of character. I don't think his novel a sound one, but it's interesting enough as melodrama. And you can't laugh off some of the shivers, as you can so easily in the case of Faulkner." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:97 Ap 13 '40 360w

"American fiction has recognized the convention of the Caldwell-Faulkner South, the incestuous Kentucky mountains, and off-side desire under the New England elms. But until recently the Middlewest has been less interested in sex. Mr. Bellamann, however, introduces into his story three fathers who fall in love with their daughters, a surgeon whose only form of infidelity is practised with the scalpel, a hangman who goes about lusting for new throats to throttle . . . and a rich assortment of frustrated daughters, wives, and mothers. . . Critical readers may ask how this picture of mid-Western life squares with Frederick J. Turner's theory that the mid-Western frontier was the liberal force which shaped American democracy. Both Turner and Bellamann have hit upon essential truths." Sterling North
Sat R of Lit 21:6 Ap 20 '40 650w
Time 35:102 Ap 15 '40 400w

BELLER, ELMER ADOLPH. Propaganda in Germany during the Thirty years war. 49p il $10 Princeton univ. press [45s Oxford]

943.041 Thirty years' war, 1618-1648 Propaganda, German 40-10402

Reproductions of twenty-four broadsides and pamphlets used as propaganda during the Thirty Years' War in Germany. Includes translations of text and explanations for each plate, and an introductory chapter by the author.

Reviewed by C. J. Friedrich
Am Hist R 46:471 Ja '41 320w

"If it is to be regarded as a comprehensive sketch of propaganda in Germany during the Thirty Years War, his introduction leaves much to be desired, since it consists only of a summary of the historical background, a brief statement of methods and media of propaganda and a more detailed survey of the plates which follow. There are some general observations on propaganda in wartime to-day, which are not quite happy; they were evidently written under the influence of the feeling, not uncommon in America, that all modern war propaganda is necessarily untrustworthy. . . The weakness of Mr. Beller's introduction is fully compensated by the excellence of his selected reproductions, with his admirable explanatory notes and translations."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p548 O 26 '40 440w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Charles II, the last rally [Eng. title: Last rally; a study of Charles II]. 280p il $3.50 Harper [12s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Charles II, king of England (W) 39-31525

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"After more than forty years and some forty volumes, we still enjoy Belloc: he is alive, and history is alive to him. But this is not Belloc at his most ebullient; the book was written under tragic and perplexing circumstances. . . Much of the old zest is gone. Belloc the burly can still keep three balls up in the air almost as dexterously as Chesterton and Shaw, but not with the same childlike smile as a few years ago." Albert Guerard
+ — Books p17 Mr 31 '40 1250w

"Again, the artist draws largely upon his well-stored imagination, does not hesitate to insert purely conjectural features, is sometimes careless, and frequently obscure. But he never abandons that fast-moving, stimulating style which has done so much to popularize new views of English history—nearer both to scholarship and to justice than many Whig tales, and, if not incontestably accurate, yet often corrective of ancient, widespread, deep-rooted lies." J. McS.
+ — Cath World 151:117 Ap '40 440w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Manchester Guardian p3 F 6 '40 140w

"Let Mr. Belloc write as many verses as he pleases: but let him write no more such historical biographies!" A. L. Rowse
— New Statesman & Nation 19:566 Ap 27 '40 900w

"There is always a regimental quality in the style of Mr. Belloc (faintly redolent of Johnsonese), which represents, I suppose, the correct attitude of the royalist. Whatever it may be, it is the result of a severe and indurated conviction. Nobody who reads Mr. Belloc can have any doubt at all of his formidable sincerity. What we may doubt occasionally, perhaps, is Mr. Belloc's ability to realise the complete structure of a given historical situation, or to examine with objective acuity the sources of conduct. Writing history is, of course, a splendid opportunity for self-indulgence, but the best histories are those in which we are not reminded too frequently of the historian." C. E. Vulliamy
— + Spec 164:290 Mr 1 '40 470w
Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Ja 27 '40 1050w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. The silence of the sea, and other essays. 253p $2.50 Sheed

824 (W) 40-35123

Essays reprinted from several English periodicals. Partial contents: Permanence; Walter Scott; William Tyndale; Bunyan; John Hawkins; On diarists; Boswell; Jane Austen; The gap; The test of time; On portraits in history; On euphemism; On boasting; On books; On fountains; On hats; On statistics; About volcanoes; On Latin.

"This is a very civilized though quite ruthless book. An essay like 'The Silence of the Sea' is as spare and well proportioned as the prose of old Ben Jonson himself. And I wish there were an American who could write 'On Skulls.' But no doubt the best papers have to do with books and their creation. . . I should fancy almost any one might learn the art of writing from this book. But he will have wisdom, too, for his companion, and in these days that is no small boon." G. N. Shuster
+ Books p5 Ja 19 '41 490w

"Not at all brilliant or startling, but excellent reading for a quiet afternoon." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:18 D 15 '40 50w

"The essays on literary subjects are all excellent; each contains its grain of critical insight, its point well taken and illuminating, its testimony of reading and thought. Excellent also

BELLOC, HILAIRE (hĭl'ary bĕl'ŭk)

are the essays on things seen. It is when he plays with abstract notions and labors with trivial fancies that even Mr. Belloc's style falters and fails." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ — Commonweal 33:308 Ja 10 '41 210w

Reviewed by Alexander Cowie

Sat R of Lit 23:14 F 1 '41 490w

BELMONT, PERRY. An American Democrat. 705p il map $3.75 Columbia univ. press [18s 6d Oxford]

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government 40-9341

"Although Mr Belmont regards his book as 'a contribution to the political history of our country' rather than as 'an autobiography in the accepted sense of the term,' the chapters of family and personal data have an interest fully equal to that of the chapters dealing with Mr Belmont's services as a congressman, a publicist and a leader of the Democratic party. . . Mr Belmont's social, sporting and artistic interests enter briefly into the narrative of his later years, but there is enough about them to diversify his chronicle of political events and opinions." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"The book is attractive, interesting, scholarly, and has a charm all its own." P. M. Cuncannon

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1052 O '40 200w

Commonweal 32:494 O 4 '40 130w

"The book is written with clarity and precision (though a few dates are omitted), and parts of it illuminate 19th-century issues that were as important in their day as many of the issues that agitate Congress and the country today. At all times the volume is the record of an active mind."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 2 '40 1700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 N 9 '40 200w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Fifi; il. by the author. [46p] $2 Simon & Schuster 40-29878

Rugged rhymes and large drawings describe an episode in the life of Fifi, a poodle who lived in Africa and had a tendency to chase cats. Once in the desert she made a bad mistake, and was rescued just in the nick of time.

"These Nashian rhymes pace lively pictures. Lady Fample has so much personality you could write a novel about her. The green alligators are grand. As usual, older people will give this to each other as well as to children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 10 '40 160w

Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 30w

"Parents, as well as children of all ages, will welcome the nonsensical pictures which illustrate the jungle adventures of Lady Fample and her Fifi."

+ New Yorker 16:125 D 7 '40 50w

"Amusing leaning toward sophistication." Z. C. Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 110w

BENCHLEY, MRS BELLE (JENNINGS). My life in a man-made jungle. 294p il $3 Little 591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of. San Diego. Zoological gardens (W) 40-30729

Fifteen years ago Mrs Benchley, without any special training, was given the position of bookkeeper in the San Diego zoo. Due to circumstances and her own interest in the work, she was later raised to the position of Director. This book, which is not, she says, "a scientific work," consists mainly of stories of the animals in her care.

Booklist 37:64 O 15 '40

Bookmark 2:4 Ja '41

"Although Mrs. Benchley devotes her longest chapter to her two magnificent gorillas, it is not nearly enough. . . It was not Mrs. Benchley's intention to write a book about gorillas alone. Besides the numerous anecdotes and vital statistics she includes a considerable amount of material on the operation of a large zoo; the feeding of the animals, the zoo hospital, collecting specimens and other aspects of exhibiting wild animals. This is interesting enough in itself, but one can't help but feel that having raised the two finest of the great, manlike apes in captivity she should tell more about them. I, for one, could read a whole book about Mbongo and Ngagi." John O'Reilley

+ Books p9 S 1 '40 750w

"These animals are, quite simply, her friends. She doesn't 'humanize' them; but the charm of her book, I think, is that to her these gorillas, chimpanzees, elephants, bears, giraffes and the rest are not examples of odd species; they are individuals. They are Jiggs, Sheik, Marie, Woody, Lady, Mbongo—persons if not humans." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 24 '40 230w

"Mrs. Benchley sets down clearly—and most, most entertainingly—by way of anecdote and close sympathetic observation—proof after proof that each and every wild-animal friend in her charge is just as much a person as is our next door neighbor. . . Furthermore they are persons in their own right as animals." S. E. White

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 750w

Reviewed by G. E. Brown

Library J 65:651 Ag '40 150w

"An excellent addition to the home library: full of information and entertainment, and innocent of any pedantry."

+ N Y Times p9 S 8 '40 550w

"Mrs. Benchley loves her work and her animal companions and tells her stories about them simply and well, if perhaps sentimentally. Fine for the youngsters, too."

+ New Yorker 16:72 S 7 '40 40w

"This is simply a rambling anecdotal account of life in a big zoo, and though its inmates occupy the foreground of the picture, it is also full of interesting and entertaining stories concerning the operation of such a zoo, the purchase and preparation of strange food-stuffs in quantity, the housing of animals according to their specific needs and the requirements of exhibition, the excitement of collection from all over the earth, and all the problems and emergencies, large and small, that are the daily concern of a zoo-director. It combines entertainment and solid worth in one package." L. J. H., Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 25 '41 360w

BENEDICT, MRS RUTH (FULTON). Race: science and politics. 280p $2.50 Modern age

572 Race. Race problems 40-27719

"Divided into two major parts, both the science of race and the history of racism are reviewed. At the conclusion of most of the chapters typical examples of the ideas of both scientists and racists are given under the caption, 'What They Say About It.' These range in time from the writings of Cicero to those of Franz Boaz and the maunderings of the Third Reich propagandists. Race is studied historically, biologically, and anthropometrically but without the expectation that it will account for all human achievement. Dr. Benedict considers the material on which any classification of human races must be based and the categories that are in use." Scientific Bk Club R

"The book is apparently intended to inform and indoctrinate the layman rather than to present material for the student. At any rate it contains little or no theoretical matter that has not been commonplace among social scholars for a full generation. It should be judged, therefore, in terms of its educational effective-

BENEDICT, RUTH—Continued
ness and in terms of its success in popularizing scientific findings and points of view. It may appear gratuitously ungracious to take note of minor deficiencies in a popular volume that is, in many respects, sound and scientifically reputable. But if a book that purports to bring a scholarly position or a body of scientific knowledge to the attention of the lay public is to be genuinely valuable, it must measure up to certain simple but definite standards. . . In some of these respects the present volume is only partially successful." E. B. Reuter
+ — Am J Soc 46:619 Ja '41 1050w
Booklist 37:84 N 1 '40
Bookmark 2:3 Ja '41
Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Books p22 O 6 '40 1000w
Christian Century 57:1345 O 30 '40 300w

"Side by side in clear, attractive and compelling sentences, we have in this most useful book a true picture of race." J. F. Davidson
+ Churchman 154:16 O 1 '40 170w

Reviewed by T. M. Avery, Jr.
+ Commonweal 32:432 S 13 '40 420w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
Nation 151:372 O 19 '40 600w

"A tract for the times, and a genuine contribution to sound popular knowledge."
+ New Repub 104:62 Ja 13 '41 100w

"An admirable book."
+ New Yorker 16:79 S 28 '40 40w

"A book for the general reader."
School & Society 52:240 S 21 '40 50w

Reviewed by H. H. Shoen
School & Society 53:88 Ja 18 '41 1100w
Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 S '40 430w
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 30w

BENET, LAURA. Roxana rampant; il. by Helen Sawyer. 221p $2 Dodd 40-33628

"Roxana Moore, a hope-to-be writer, gets a position as assistant to a literary editor and manages to find time for all sorts of extra curricular activity, and romance, while carrying on her job and finishing her book." (Sat R of Lit) For older girls.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p20 N 10 '40 280w

"Completely disappointing." E. V. W.
— Cath World 152:379 D '40 20w

"Good story and good fun." Gladys Graham
+ Sat R of Lit 23:25 N 16 '40 30w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. Nightmare at noon. 8p 50c Farrar
811 European war, 1939—Poetry 40-14766

A six-page poem in which the author warns America that Norway and Holland thought there was time to prepare, that Spain and Finland resisted, but bombs have killed children in the capitals of Europe and blotted out the ideals we hold sacred: liberty, equality, justice.

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
Books p6 S 8 '40 70w

"Grim and deeply felt poem." John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 26 '40 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40
Reviewed by Eugene Jolas
— Living Age 359:192 O '40 60w
New Yorker 16:68 Ag 24 '40 30w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT, and others. See Zero hour

BENET (bĕn'ā')

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE. With wings as eagles; poems and ballads of the air. 148p $2 Dodd
811 Aeronautics—Poetry (W) 40-32467

Twenty-four ballads and long poems celebrating flyers and flying from the days of the Wright brothers at Kittyhawk to the present with its sky writers.

Atlantic F '41 190w
Booklist 37:87 N 1 '40

"Mr. Benet's mastery of the ballad finds admirable use in these narratives. His metrical forms are skillfully varied. The ballads have a homely, colloquial, often humorously naive folk quality; the idiom is modern, conversational, slangy if need be. And Mr. Benet is amazingly expert in making good rhymes of difficult aeronautical terms. . . Once in a while humor gets the upper hand—but no one minds this when it produces such a masterpiece as 'Ten Miles High.'" Ruth Lechlitner
+ Books p23 O 13 '40 280w

"The poems are pitched low, in what must be the poet's conception of folk-poetry; nothing else would account for some of the lines and stanzas. But the stories are there, and all of them are exciting stories; the whole thing becomes a real saga of the air." John Holmes
+ — Boston Transcript p11 S 23 '40 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40
Reviewed by Marion Strobel
Poetry 57:220 D '40 380w

"The diction is appropriately colloquial, the versification rough. Various stanzas are employed, the most successful being the one most proper to the way the author feels his theme—the rhymed ballad-quatrain. At its best, the manner is artlessly impressive—alive, tough, driving; at its worst, something close to doggerel. But even the best of these pieces are a kind of treason against their author." Dudley Fitts
— + Sat R of Lit 23:16 O 26 '40 320w

BENFIELD, ERIC. Purbeck shop; a stoneworker's story of stone; with an introd. by A. E. Richardson. 172p il $2.75 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge]
622.22 Quarries and quarrying. Stone cutting

"Mr. Benfield [writes a] short but sound history of Purbeck Isle, its marble, and the men who quarried it. Purbeck stone, less famous than Portland but, with subtle differences, very closely resembling it, is no longer quarried on a large scale; the Victorians for some reason regarded it with prejudice, and what Professor A. E. Richardson calls in his introduction 'architects (who) can produce new fashions like conjurers out of a bag' appear to have little use for it. Westminster Abbey, however, contains Purbeck; Salisbury, Exeter, Chichester and Winchester all contain 'examples of its delicate workings.'" Spec

"This is no trade-book packed with technicality and dried-up statistics. It is definitely and vividly a 'human document,' written to be understood and enjoyed, concerning itself with man's ingenuity and skill, with his courage and patience, with his science and at last with his art and the creation of enduring beauty. Men's character is in the marble before his tools have touched it. A vastly gratifying awakening will come to the reader of this book—a new and stimulating appreciation of things he has known blindly all his life."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 110w
Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 40w

"There is much that is curious and delightful in Purbeck Shop. After reading it you will observe your window-ledge or the marble of your church pillars or the street-curbing or even your neighbour's bird-bath with a renewed interest. The mysteries of any craft are perennially fascinating." T. C. Worsley
+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:292 S 21 '40 900w

"An excellent little book." H. E. Bates
+ Spec 165:322 S 27 '40 380w

"With its racy anecdotes of Purbeck quarrymen, technical descriptions and clear photographs of work in progress this book is a joy from end to end."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p496 S 28 '40 450w

BENJAMIN, EDLA. Murder without make-up. 278p $2 Random house 40-14183

Detective story.

"Miss Benjamin has a talent for bright, but really bright, dialogue and her narrative manner as a whole is fresh and readable throughout." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Ag 11 '40 360w

"One of the best theatrical mysteries yet. Even the wrapper is distinctive. . . The plot has enough twists to keep even the most jaded reader interested. And the conclusion packs a real wallop." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 60w

"Much of the charm of this book lies in the sympathetic portrayal of the several characters, most of them men and women of the theatre. They are not exaggerated types. They are men and women who live in a world of their own and have their own problems, and yet are swayed by the same emotions as the rest of us. Edla Benjamin is to be congratulated upon an excellent performance." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 11 '40 210w

"Story slightly naive at times and climax is quite eye-lifting. Adequate."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 28 '40 40w
Theatre Arts 24:764 O '40 10w

BENJAMIN, ROBERT SPIERS, ed. See Overseas press club of America. The inside story

BENJAMIN, ROBERT SPIERS. The vacation guide. (Whittlesey house publication) 329p $2.50 McGraw

917.3 Vacations. U.S.—Description and travel. Travel (W) 40-27475

With the exception of outlines for motor trips to Mexico and the Gaspé Peninsula, and mention of some Caribbean cruises, all of the holidays here outlined are within the borders of the United States. Contents: Vacations for everyone; Automobile trips; National parks; Dude ranches; Riding trips; Sports vacations: golf, tennis, and resorts; Fishing; Hunting; Youth hosteling; Hiking; Mountain climbing; Canoe trips; Winter sports: fun in the cold; Cruises; Cultural: summer music, schools, and theaters; Eating around America; Gardens on parade; American miscellany; American calendar; Free travel literature. Index.

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

"One wonders if it is really possible to compass the entire United States in one vacation guidebook; but Mr. Benjamin has done well by his readers."
Books p9 My 26 '40 150w

"The best part of the book is the author's awareness of budgetary matters in our uncertain times. He has everything figured out to the penny, and his sums seem pretty reasonable."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 90w

"Here is stimulation for the holiday spirit, indeed, and aid for its hopes."
+ N Y Times p25 My 19 '40 300w

BENMOSCHE, MOSES. A surgeon explains to the layman; with diagrams by Bhola D. Panth. 317p il $3 Simon & Schuster

617 Surgery (W) 40-35790

A New York surgeon discusses for the layman modern techniques in operations ranging from the removal of tonsils and adenoids, to cancer and brain tumors. Partial contents: The tools of surgery; Operative diseases of the female generative organs; Operations on the gall bladder; Operations on the stomach and the intestines; Hernia; Operations on the kidneys, bladder, and prostate gland; Plastic surgery. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"On the whole, his discussion is well balanced, though it is not as clear as it ought to be that the removal of [some] organs has been vastly overdone. One could wish also that he had made somewhat more clear the fact that the tissue of tonsils and adenoids has a considerably more important and possibly even different function in children than in adults. . . By all means the best chapter in the book is that on 'New Growths.' Here is drawn a satisfactory—though necessarily brief —picture of benign and malignant growths, together with the present theories underlying their treatment. Taken as a whole, we may say that there has been made here a valiant attempt to present an enormously difficult subject." Hugh Cabot, M.D.
+ — Books p17 N 3 '40 1100w

"Good for the tough-minded and for those who prefer a little correct knowledge to many morbid fears."
+ New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 80w

"A sound book—well organized, reassuring, and very vivid. . . No technical terms and no silly oversimplification, either."
+ New Yorker 16:86 N 2 '40 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '40 290w

BENNETT, DOROTHY AGNES. Sold to the ladies! 259p il $2.50 G. W. Stewart, 67 W. 44th st, N.Y.

797.14 House boats (W) 40-27539

Several years ago three young women attended an auction over in Brooklyn and before they were quite aware of what was happening a sixty-foot, forty-ton welding barge was "sold to the ladies" for $160.00. There followed months of fun and hard labor, scraping, painting, carpentry and shopping and then, the following summer, a tow to Manhasset Bay. This book is the record of the first year in detail with the highlights of subsequent years, including the hurricane.

Booklist 36:410 Jl 1 '40
Bookmark 2:7 Ja '41

Reviewed by W. G. Martin
Books p2 Je 23 '40 550w

"Dorothy Bennett writes with an infectious gaiety that is likely to start you heading pell-mell for Gowanus Canal. But she doesn't report whether there are more tugboats on sale there, with good knees." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 1400w

"The whole extraordinary undertaking, in all its details, is amazing, amusing and completely engaging. Told with unadorned directness, this tale of reckless exploit on New York's unfamiliar waterways makes one of the most interesting books of 'travel and adventure' which this reviewer has ever read."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 9 '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

BENNETT, HUGH HAMMOND. Soil conservation. 993p il maps $6 McGraw

631.45 Erosion. Soils 40-1134

Comprehensive study of the science and practice of soil conservation. The emphasis is on the effects of soil erosion upon the prosperity of the country. The author is chief of the soil conservation service. United States Department of Agriculture. Index.

Booklist 36:209 F '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '40

BENNETT, H. H.—Continued

"In some of the beginning chapters the terminology might have been improved by reference to the principal works on physiography and physical geology. For example, the generally accepted opposite of 'aggradation' is 'degradation,' not 'abrasion'; and 'abrasion of consolidated rocks' probably refers to what is usually called 'corrasion.' In the chapter on 'Erosion and Runoff' numerous examples are given of soil losses from different types of farmland; but there is no critical discussion of the methods by which, and the conditions under which, the figures were obtained. However, these are only minor criticisms. The book represents an immense amount of work and is based on years of experience. It is the most nearly complete repertory available of the various types of soil erosion and methods of conservation in this country. The chapters on these methods, especially, are a mine of information for both the practical farmer and the student." William Van Royen

+ — Geog R 30:517 Jl '40 700w

Reviewed by L. B. Freeman

J Geol 48:560 Jl '40 220w

"Although the book is entirely about the United States, much of its matter has universal validity. It is excellently planned, and more than 350 vivid illustrations complete the most comprehensive and authoritative treatise yet published on this urgent problem of the present day." G. V. Jacks

+ Nature 146:415 S 28 '40 650w

"Properly, for most people, this is a reference book. But so clear and interesting, that if you care about land and farmers and ancient history and wild ducks and floods and dust storms and the wide sweep of America, you are liable to get caught up and carried off." D. C. Coyle

+ Survey G 29:410 Jl '40 320w

BENNETT, RICHARD. Mister Ole [il. by the author]. 61p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-33276

Two Irish boys and their family, recent settlers in the state of Washington, acquire as neighbor Mr Ole, an old sailor and Jack-of-all-trades, who arrives in their clearing driving a circus wagon and accompanied by two small monkeys. The story describes the steps by which Mr Ole makes himself welcome in the little settlement.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

"It is a real boy-story, the best Mr. Bennett has told, with decorative line drawings, some of them colored." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 F 2 '41 280w

"Mr. Bennett's text and pictures are both full of individuality and character." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:376 D '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:30 Ja '41 60w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 20w

"Written with rich humor and simplicity, this story of the pioneer Northwest will appeal to children from nine to twelve. The drawings are bright and lively. Good format." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 130w

"Pleasant but a little flat." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 30w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. Final edition. 304p $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27749

These "memories of people and places" cover the years from 1900 to about 1936. E. F. Benson, son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, author of Dodo in the 1890s, the Lucia and Miss Mapp stories in later years, writes here of his brothers, Arthur and Hugh, of his mother and his sister Maggie, of Henry James, Kipling, Marie Corelli, and many others, and of places, the family home in Sussex, London, Italy, and, notably Lamb House at Rye where he succeeded Henry James as tenant. Index.

"The present rather tired volume is more anecdote than anything else: a source-book for the literary and social historian, for the Bensons went everywhere, knew everybody, and had the confidences of a roster of notables that looks like the English Who's Who."

Atlantic N '40 180w

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

"If not quite a life work, the reading of E. F. Benson is at least a habit, and certainly an agreeable one. In the past it might well have included the literary efforts of several other Bensons; they were notably a literary family. The present volume is a kind of potpourri jar preserving the fragrance of the late Victorian era." Isabel Paterson

+ Books p5 S 29 '40 700w

"Though there are times when the reader feels that the author, who did not live to see the publication of this work, is a little weary, this is a very pleasant book, gracefully written, unassuming, wise and witty. It is, however, not really an autobiography but the last in a series written through the years, of somewhat random reminiscences." T. M.

+ — Cath World 152:626 F '41 600w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 800w

"The book is full of the mellow philosophy and the kindly humor of an old man, with a British frankness, especially concerning his own family. The author is interested in all sorts of people and things, and those who would like to get on the inside of a world that is probably forever gone will enjoy this delightful book." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 154:20 O 15 '40 140w

"Pretending only to sketch in the surface traits of his time, and relying upon that highly developed instinct of discrimination and that impeccable style, E. F. Benson produced something small but durable, an agreeable footnote to history which many future readers will prefer to the solemn text itself." Desmond Shawe-Taylor

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:42 Ja 11 '41 950w

"A sad book this, in its way, but a wholly delightful one." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p8 N 17 '40 600w

"This must be one of the most modest, most charming, and most sympathetic autobiographies ever written." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 O 19 '40 850w

"It is not for doggedness that Benson can be extolled. He had not had to wrestle with any of those awful drawbacks. He had lived in the centre of things, he had a keenly discriminating eye, he knew intimately many people well worth knowing, he had a very clear memory for anything that mattered, anything characteristic or illuminating or amusing; and he could write: he had become, in course of time, master of a lucid, concise, light, flexible prose that exactly fulfilled his purposes; a prose abundant in natural felicities; a prose greatly superior to that of either of his brothers, who never were able to curb or chasten their immense facility. . . Amidst all the fun that pervades this book, one is conscious of a serious, a gallant and even noble character." Max Beerbohm

+ Spec 165:446 N 1 '40 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p532 O 19 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

BENSON, JOHN HOWARD, and CAREY, ARTHUR GRAHAM. The elements of lettering. 125p il $3 John Stevens, 29 Thames st, Newport, R.I.

745 Lettering 40-12870

" 'The Elements of Lettering' divide themselves in the author's arrangement into Theoretical Elements, Practical Elements and Historical Elements. . . 'Lettering is an art' is the opening sentence of the text. . . In simple direct sentences, with purposive reiteration of principles, and with some didacticism, they lay down the basis of the artistic discipline. Certain concepts here enunciated—purpose, nature of materials, character of tools, and the image of the thing to be achieved—inform their later treatment of the practical elements of lettering. . . The historical section repeats the tale, often told, of the development of survivals in calligraphic forms." Books

"In moments taken from the rigorous business of an ancient Newport marble yard, these master workmen have produced a practical treatise on lettering which is at the same time a rich and stimulating book for any thoughtful practitioner of the arts. Despite its title, one must not suppose that 'The Elements of Lettering' is an elementary treatise. It is a fundamental book, but not an elementary one. . . It is a book for serious students of an art which antedates printing and underlies it, written by men convinced that they are discussing a skill which cannot be practiced successfully except by one who clearly conceives his purpose and trains his mind and hand and eye to effect it." L. C. Wroth
+ Books p22 S 22 '40 1000w

"I hope the book will find its way into the schools and influence the writing teachers of the younger generation. It is unfortunate that the chapter on carved lettering is not more extensive, as there is hardly anything extant on the subject and few people are as qualified as the authors to write about it. But that would probably have raised too much the price of the book, which is an amazing bargain for a fine product of Mr. Updike's Merrymount Press." A. De Béthune
+ — Commonweal 32:355 Ag 16 '40 150w

"This small book has in it more sense and less rubbish than most. In a compact and very agreeable form its hundred and thirty pages manage to tell about lettering in a straightforward way, and to give the impression of a fresh consideration of an old subject. . . The book is a statement of sound principles, and more valuable than most lettering books." C. P. R.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 18 '41 230w

BENSON, MRS SALLY. Stories of the gods and heroes; il. by Steele Savage. 256p $2.50 Dial press
292 Mythology, Classical 40-33522

"[A] book based on Bulfinch. . . Some of the stories have been rewritten, others have been cut, edited and clarified, but the flavor of the older book remains, for the dialogue, as [Mrs] Benson explains, is in most cases the dialogue of Mr. Bulfinch, which he carefully translated from Greek and Latin legends or from Virgil and Homer." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 22 '40 120w

"Sally Benson has made her selection with judgment and skill, omitting stories that are too complicated, following Bulfinch when he suits her purpose, re-writing when his style is formal or sentimental. . . Children will find this easier and more compelling reading than many other versions. Unusual line drawings complement the imaginative quality of the text." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 17:30 Ja '41 110w

"A book of rare distinction." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 70w

"This delightful book fills a real need. Boys and girls will thoroughly enjoy it, older readers will find it a pleasant way of brushing up their mythological knowledge and will take satisfaction in giving it to young people in whose reading they are interested. . . There is imagination, strength and restraint in Steele Savage's drawings, perfectly in key with these great stories from the classic past." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p22 N 10 '40 320w

BENTHAM, JOSEPHINE. Janie. 265p $2 Dial press
40-35315

A story of adolescence. "Janie [at sixteen] is sure that love has passed her by, but her understanding mother and father are able to lend a helping hand when life becomes too muddled for their daughter and rescue her from the fogs of her own contriving." Springf'd Republican

"Life is just one crisis after another for Janice, and some are all the more real because they are so deliciously imaginary." Lisle Bell
+ Books p32 D 8 '40 240w

"The byplay of modern small talk is realistic. 'Janie' is a lifelike picture of many a high school senior whose parents can afford to give her a good time."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 240w

BENTLEY, JOHN. Mr Marlow stops for brandy. 242p $2 Houghton 40-11885

Detective story.

"This would appear to be mostly British underworld stuff, with stretches resembling the American hard-boiled school, if such a distinction may be made. Dick Marlow drinks too much brandy, uses bad language, hits people on the head and arrives at an answer, as what fictional sleuth doesn't?" Will Cuppy
Books p10 Jl 21 '40 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Jl 21 '40 150w
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Jl 20 '40 40w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. The power and the glory [Eng title: Take courage]. 475p $2.50 Macmillan [9s 6d Gollancz]
(W) 40-27202

Traces the vicissitudes of two families of Yorkshire puritans and their royalist cousins from 1625, thru their civil war, and into the Restoration period.

"At first one feels that here is a Victorian novel, a kind of Lorna Doone of Yorkshire, but, as one reads on, the calm, sure, unhurried telling becomes entirely convincing. It is a book in the great and full tradition of the classic English novel. It has truth and beauty and a sense of the real values in human life."
+ Atlantic My '40 80w
Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40
Bookmark p12 My '40

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
Books p5 Mr 31 '40 950w

"It is a long novel, rounded, detailed and intensely interesting. In the foreground the occupations, the hopes, the convictions of a middle class woman whose fortitude and beauty were extraordinary for any age or class, are never overbalanced by the battles, the politics which form the background of the novel." Pamela Taylor
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 13 '40 280w
Cath World 151:254 My '40 130w
Christian Century 57:1001 Ag 14 '40 120w

"A phrase Penninah uses to describe her brother can fairly be borrowed in summing up the book—'very reputable and honest, though perhaps rather lacking in joy.'" Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 16 '40 320w

"An unusually thorough and sober revival."
New Repub 102:418 Mr 25 '40 50w

"'The Power and the Glory' is a deeply entertaining story, deserving of a place in the long list of notable historical novels in the English tongue. Even the reader ordinarily averse to historical novels should think twice before passing it by, for in Miss Bentley's handling of her tale the temporal is always subordinated to the essentially human that is timeless." Percy Hutchison

BENTLEY, P. E.—Continued
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 31 '40 950w

"The uniform narrative flows gently on the surface of things, keeping to the news-in-every-paragraph system. The author is generous with births, marriages, deaths, and the care of children. There is nothing in the book to offend anyone, to cause indignation or surprise, and it ends on what is referred to as a Note of Hope." Richard Aldington
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 30 '40 350w

"The Yorkshire convention of character and dialogue, wedded as it is here to the Puritan convention in both, makes very heavy going. . . I should have found it unreadable, were it not that Miss Bentley has a remarkable power of impressing life on lay figures, almost in their despite. And the history of the time is admirably imposed—with power and justice, and with a subtle but obstinate insistence on the reader's attention, so that we become concerned to remember events ahead of our author, and humiliated that we never can. Indeed, this novel's secondary title might well be Brush Up Your Civil War." Kate O'Brien
— + Spec 164:88 Ja 19 '40 330w

"'The Power and the Glory' is a forceful, dramatic piece of writing, with a true sense of values, with deep sympathy for a time of England's stress, with a delicate understanding of the human everyday feelings of the people." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 1250w

"Miss Bentley tells her story with feeling and in simple and dignified language that captures from time to time a ring of seventeenth-century eloquence. She writes fairly and with her usual skill in elaborating a background of the great issues of religion and politics, also—and almost inevitably—with an eye to the theme of our own day. Where she fails is in the conventionality of both the romantic plot and the structural design. . . There are good things in the book, which is always very readable, but it is wanting in the individuality that comes from force of imagination alone."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 20 '40 410w
Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

BENTON, JOHN. Faith, hope and a horse. 249p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton-Century 40-4881

"This hilarious tale of a race track gambler who attached himself to a young lady with a 'gospel trailer' and assisted her to frustrate the devices of a gang of hypocritical crooks who were conducting a chain of slum missions as a racket, is not as frivolous as it sounds." Christian Century

"'Faith, Hope and a Horse' is the portrait of a likable tout, generous when luck is running in his favor, undepressed if he guesses wrong, willing to grin at himself as well as at the world. It is a crisply written and entertaining yarn." Lisle Bell
+ Books p23 Mr 3 '40 280w
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 9 '40 40w

"The author writes a crisp and racy tale, the language of which sounds authentic to one who has not had his opportunities for acquiring it at first hand. But there is nothing of cynicism in his story. He is on the side of the angels."
+ Christian Century 57:321 Mr 6 '40 150w

"There is considerable humor in the telling of this odd tale, but Lila Allen was a serious young woman, determined to run the mission honestly, so it is for the most part an earnest story." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p17 F 25 '40 150w

"Mr. Benton combines a good plot, a sense of humor, and a thorough knowledge of his subject with an ear for the niceties of American speech comparable only to that of the British novelist. His characters do the right thing in the right way, but they spoil a lot of their own effects by [some] transatlantic horrors." K. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 24 '40 170w

BERGE, ANDRE. Body and spirit. See Body and spirit

BERKELEY, GEORGE FITZ-HARDINGE, and BERKELEY, J. Italy in the making. [v 3] 489p maps $6 Macmillan [25s Cambridge]
945.08 Italy—History—1815-1870. Italy—Politics and government

"This third volume of an extremely interesting—and for purposes of record most valuable—work deals chiefly with the diplomatic and military features of the struggle between Austria and the Italian states in the year 1848. It seems to have spoken the last word in the citing of pertinent documentary material and in the careful analysis of field operations. Of course Pius IX. looms large in the story." Cath World

+ Cath World 152:366 D '40 290w

"The characters and the problems of 1848, a turning-point in Italy's history, are a fascinating study, and Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley have written a book that would have been most interesting to read at any time and is particularly interesting to-day." J. L. Hammond
+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 17 '40 500w

"Although, then, this somewhat exhaustive study of bygone events may seem somewhat out of proportion in these terrible times, it yet contains certain lessons for the present. Like the previous volumes, too, it may be recommended as a thoroughly scholarly work, written with great impartiality, and very readable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Jl 20 '40 650w

BERKSON, ISAAC BAER. Preface to an educational philosophy. 250p $2.50 Columbia univ. press
370.1 Education—Philosophy. Democracy
40-7263

"Dr. Berkson has written this preface to an educational philosophy in the belief that the function of philosophy is to grasp the spirit of an age, to describe its character and to divine its guiding idea. . . The author attempts an analysis of the democratic thesis as the underlying social philosophy with which our education must be in accord. If philosophy has meaning for education it is because 'philosophy' can be used to denote an ideal way of living, as well as a correct way of thinking. So Dr. Berkson insists: 'A pattern for individual and social living, rather than a metaphysical theory of the nature of the universe, must underlie a philosophy of education,' and an 'ethics joined with an appropriate politics gives the ground plan.'" (Christian Century) References. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Benjamin
Ann Am Acad 211:237 S '40 420w

"The book is a well written, interesting, concise statement of the social beliefs of the 'reconstructionists' in education. Teachers, students of education and ministers who are interested in the social gospel will find it stimulating." Evelyn Luchs
+ Christian Century 57:579 My 1 '40 700w

"Dewey and Kirkpatrick have been the great influences. Counts, too, figures largely. With Hutchins the author has little sympathy. One hardly needs to be told, then, that he is decidedly on the 'progressive' side. But, like most reformers, he fails to make clear just what is needed to form the 'better society' to which he would have the schools apply themselves." C. H. Brewer

Churchman 154:16 My 15 '40 190w

Reviewed by Joseph Ratner
J Philos 37:670 N 21 '40 360w

Reviewed by Theodore Brameld
New Repub 103:878 D 23 '40 20w

Reviewed by M. J. Shore
Social Educ 4:368 My '40 500w

"The trouble with this book is that it gets off to a bad start by one of the oldest fallacies, and remains consistently within the fallacious atmosphere throughout. The fallacy is that, since educational institutions are within society and often are subordinate parts of the political state, education is the handmaid of politics and must have a political end. Aristotle and Plato are misquoted on this against Robert M. Hutchins. Of course the answer to this fascist fallacy is that individuals are being educated for their whole lives, not merely for their parts in political and social change." Scott Buchanan
Survey G 29:300 My '40 440w

BERLE, ADOLF AUGUSTUS. New directions in the new world. 141p $2 Harper

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Relations (general) with Latin America. Latin America—Relations (general) with U.S.
40-27831

A volume of essays on economic problems and their bearing on our relations with the South American states, by the Assistant Secretary of State in Washington. Contents: American patterns in a post-war world; The Lima conference and inter-American peace; One nation indivisible; Problems of business in a democratic economy; A banking system for capital and capital credit; Heirs of the future.

Booklist 37:167 Ja 1 '41

"It is well that we should be reminded of the essential nature of our moral order in times like the present, and of the existence of statesmen who believe in it. Mr. Berle's book possesses the additional merit of stating his faith in vigorous and graceful language." A. N. Holcombe
+ Books p3 F 2 '41 550w

"If Mr. Berle's little book is not exactly a stylist's paradise, it still has other virtues. It is more than a collection of odds and ends, but less than a really connected volume." R. H. P.
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 200w

"His style is clear and luminous, free from technicalities, and yet the result of deep thought and conviction." Mother Mary Lawrence
+ Commonweal 33:378 Ja 31 '41 650w

"Many will challenge certain of Berle's conclusions, but few will fail to have their thinking stimulated by reading them. 'Tired liberals' will find in it new interpretations and cogent arguments to renew their faith. This is no mere rhetorical appeal for American principles. It weighs democracy, with full knowledge of its shortcomings and full knowledge of both the merits and dangers of dictatorship and despotism." Quincy Wright
+ Survey G 30:88 F '41 490w

BERNANOS, GEORGES. The star of Satan; tr. by Pamela Morris. 348p $2.50 Macmillan 40-10763

This novel by the author of Diary of a Country Priest (Book Review Digest, 1937) was first published in France in 1926 and marked the beginning of the author's fame. The story is roughly in two parts—the first dealing with the girl, Mouchette, and her fall, the second with the life and death of a Catholic priest who becomes a saint.

"This novel was first published in France as long ago as 1926, and it established Bernanos' already growing position as one of the leading writers in a group that included Maritain, Bloy and Mauriac. . . To those readers who wish to understand fully the nature of Bernanos' contribution, 'The Star of Satan' can be highly recommended; to those who cannot read a novel that requires any intellectual activity, the book may be boring in spots, but skipping will strip the novel of its great underlying implications. A word must be added about the translation, which can only be described as less than mediocre." J. W. Chase
+ — Books p2 Je 16 '40 1050w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 290w

"The Diary of a Country Priest, which to the present reviewer seemed more convincing than this earlier volume from Bernanos' pen, was a curious mixture of sublimity and neuroticism. And now this fairly adequate translation of the book which first arrested the attention of French and particularly of Catholic critics reveals it as a storehouse of even more sublimity and even more neuroticism." K. B.
Cath World 152:115 O '40 480w

Reviewed by L. N. Feipel
Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien
Nation 150:783 Je 29 '40 430w

Reviewed by Dunstan Thompson
New Repub 103:252 Ag 19 '40 500w

Reviewed by Brian Howard
New Statesman & Nation 20:338 O 5 '40 500w

"The interest is compelling, even though 'The Star of Satan' is not a masterpiece like 'The Diary of a Country Priest,' and lacks the latter's universality of theme and setting. . . The book seems destined in this country for a small but thoughtful, indeed absorbed, audience." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p2 Je 16 '40 1250w

"Feverish all the way through, and will seem strange to American readers."
New Yorker 16:115 Je 15 '40 60w

"However great its qualities may be, it is obvious that this book is not for everyone. Indeed, it may be safely recommended to only two classes of readers: those whose faith obviates the need of an imaginative effort; and those whose powers of imaginative sympathy are sufficient to enable them to feel and understand—at least partially—even in the absence of belief." B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:6 Je 22 '40 460w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith
Spec 165:370 O 11 '40 900w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 90w

Time 31:91 Je 17 '40 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p493 S 28 '40 550w

BERNARD DE CLAIRVAUX, SAINT. The steps of humility; tr. with introd. and notes, as a study of his epistemology, by George Bosworth Burch. 287p $3 Harvard univ. press

189.4 Humility 40-32426

"In an Introduction of 112 pages, the metaphysical framework of this epistemology is outlined on the basis of the extant writings of St. Bernard. There follows the translation of the De Gradibus Humilitatis, accompanied by the Latin text; the latter, according to the translator is 'substantially the critical text edited by the late Rev. Barton R. V. Mills.' Nineteen pages of Notes, and two short Appendices on Isaac of Stella and Abelard, complete the work." J Philos

"Mr. Burch has done a beautiful piece of scholarly work."
+ Christian Century 57:1179 S 25 '40 180w

BERNARD DE CLAIRVAUX, SAINT—Cont.
"George Bosworth Burch probably knows as much about Bernard of Clairvaux as any man alive. 'The Steps of Humility' is the fruit of twenty years labor, a contribution to the study of medieval philosophy that cannot be ignored by the student." Sister Mariella

+ Commonweal 33:84 N 8 '40 240w

"The Introduction and Notes are for the most part informative and to the point, though marred by occasional anachronistic comparisons and interpretations of St. Bernard's thought in function of the epistemological categories of Hume, Kant, Ouspensky, and W. P. Montague. The attempt, likewise, to exhibit St. Bernard as the precursor of St. Thomas on the problem of faith and reason, while characterizing Abelard as a reactionary Augustinian in his solution of the problem, is none too convincing." E. A. M.

+ — J Philos 37:637 N 7 '40 370w

"'The Steps of Humility' is a beautiful, polished piece of prose and Professor Burch has retained its full charm and cogency in his translation." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p33 O 27 '40 100w

BERNARD, LUTHER LEE. Social control in its sociological aspects. 711p $4 Macmillan

301 Sociology 39-21702

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"The author seems to have been guided in collecting these materials by a very loose and elastic definition of his field of interest—an admirable research procedure, but one which, in this case, does not appear to have been followed by sufficient analysis and reflection to produce a very clear concept or theory of social control. The book remains little more than a collection of cases; the cases are, however, extremely interesting and thought-provoking." F. N. House

+ — Am J Soc 45:937 My '40 410w

Reviewed by R. H. Williams
Am Soc R 5:131 F '40 700w

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 52:304 O 5 '40 850w

"As one reads, one wishes, page after page, to argue with the author, to question, to challenge, but this is its merit—the book is stimulating, provocative, original. Its method is inductive, its treatment is specific, its material is concrete. There is a skillful use of current material: it is at once textbook, case book, and source book." J. H. S. Bossard

+ — Social Forces 18:443 Mr '40 400w

BERNARD, THEOS. Heaven lies within us. 326p il $2.75 Scribner

181.4 Yoga (W) 39-31183

In this book the author of Penthouse of the Gods (Book Review Digest, 1939) has tried to set forth the various practices of Yoga in such a way that an independent student could proceed alone. The account is based on the story of his own pursuit of the "Way of Life." Index.

"Some reviewers of Mr. Bernard's previous book, 'The Penthouse of the Gods,' the story of his adventures in the forbidden Tibetan city, were concerned with the unconvincing nature of some of his narration and analysis. This book will do little to help them. The personal history, from sickness in Arizona, to a degree in Columbia University and to studies in Yoga in India is of the uninspiring type we associate with warmed over diary notes; and even the last chapter 'My Final Initiation' is wanting in warmth or interest. Either Mr. Bernard's experiences were not as profound as he gives us to understand or he is a distinctly ungifted writer." W. A. Carey, S.J.

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '40 280w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 9 '40 600w

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Speak up for democracy; what you can do; a practical plan of action for every American citizen. 128p pa $1 Viking

321.8 Democracy. Public opinion—U.S. (W) 40-35765

A well-known public relations expert attempts to answer the question, "What can I do to help America?" in the present difficult time, and maps out a campaign which may promote the democratic idea in any community. He takes up speeches, forums, holiday celebrations, newspapers, pamphlets, radio, and other media.

"Here is the book you have been looking for. Edward L. Bernays has written an understandable, reliable book about democracy. Now scores of books about democracy are reliable and understandable, but the special feature of this book is that it is written by a man who has a sense of form in printing. Every page is displayed like an advertisement. . . The book really cries out to be read by American youth." W. A. White

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:1 Ja 10 '41 320w

"Clearly written, and seems practical."

+ New Yorker 16:124 D 7 '40 80w

"Mr. Bernays's book is direct, forceful, realistic. . . It is possible that scholars or social philosophers may criticize the work as perhaps unsophisticated or lacking in profundity. Yet this book was not intended for the specialist, who already has several shelves full of more abstract works to suit his purposes, but for the average person who is subjected to a barrage of information or propaganda from all sides and who would like to know just what he is supposed to do and how." N. C.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 D 21 '40 270w

Special Libraries 31:435 D '40 180w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A.

BERRY, KATHERINE FISKE. A pioneer doctor in old Japan; the story of John C. Berry, M.D. 247p il $2.50 Revell

B or 92 Berry, John Cutting. Japan—Social conditions. Missions, Medical 40-33116

Dr Berry, as an American medical missionary in Japan from 1872 to 1893, saw the beginnings of Japan's progress, helped in the fight against superstition and disease, introduced prison reform, helped to establish medical schools and nurses' training schools. Tho the anti-foreign movement in the 1890's caused him to return to America, years later he was the recipient of marks of appreciation from the Emperor and the Japanese people. His daughter in this biography, devotes most of her pages to the years the family spent in Japan.

Christian Century 57:1216 O 2 '40 120w

"The whole story is significant and very interesting."

+ N Y Times p37 N 10 '40 550w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK BERRY, ANNE MAXON, pseuds). Lock her through. 246p il $2 Oxford

(W) 40-27634

Second in a trilogy of historical fiction dealing with various types of transportation for readers of twelve to sixteen, the first of which was Go and Find Wind (Book Review Digest, 1939). Sabrina Parrott's father ran the Indian Queen, a coaching inn on the Mohawk Turnpike. Gideon, an English immigrant boy who worked on the Erie canal boats, and Sabrina formed a close but unsentimental friendship. With the sheriff's young son the two were instrumental in breaking up a gang of horse thieves. The time is the early part of the last century.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

"I never had a really uninteresting book about the Erie Canal; this one, for readers under fifteen, is interesting all through." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 10 '40 300w

"This is an unusual and well conceived story." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:380 D '40 50w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '40 290w

"The young people's success in solving the mystery seems a little far-fetched and the ending is weakened by a rather hasty meting out of moral justice to all, including double good fortune for Gideon. But the story is enjoyable, with good atmosphere of inn life and the significance of the Erie Canal in a raw period of America's growth." Maude Adams

+ — Library J 65:712 S 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 40w

"Unlike most stories based chiefly on the recreation of a period, [this book] is as vital and readable as it is informative, for even its minor figures, representing various aspects of the times, are not types but individuals, sketched with a humorous eye for human foibles. . . Episodic at first and a little slow in getting under way, the story has that first requisite of historical narratives, an exciting plot." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 2 '41 360w

BEST, HERBERT. The twenty-fifth hour. 321p $2.50 Random house

40-6586

A novel of the future, of a post-war world following a war in which both sides seek to wipe out the civilian populations. The chief characters are two: the first is a British officer who is first seen leading a band of wandering, marauding soldiers across Europe. Thru the years he sinks to the level of all others, a hunter and a hunted man, a cannibal. The other character is an American girl who, because she is living on a lonely Caribbean island with her brother, escapes the plague, man-started, which depopulates the Western hemisphere.

"A pessimistic book, but illuminating if the logic of destruction is to prevail—and interesting throughout."

+ Atlantic Je '40 110w

Booklist 36:398 Je 15 '40

"Mr. Best's is not a very good novel, but it is a very ambitious fantasy; and he has piled ruin on ruin so industriously, painted so suggestive a picture of Europe's end, that the effect is ghastly. . . If Mr. Best's novel were on the level of pulp fiction, of course, criticism might seem pretentious. But the quality of its imagination is actually high; the writing is close, intelligent, sober; there are even some interesting moments of high comedy, as when the Cambridge-educated hero encounters a former Oxford don in the wilds of what used to be Bohemia. But a kind of invincible triteness wins out in the end; and the effect is as curious as Spengler set to swing." Alfred Kazin

— + Books p12 Ap 7 '40 750w

"Not since Conan Doyle's 'Lost World' has such a convincing horror tale, guaranteed to make each individual hair of the head stand erect in fright, come this reader's way." Pamela Taylor

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson

Manchester Guardian p6 Ag 30 '40 80w

"Mr. Best's picture is brilliantly convincing, handled with a neat and precise concreteness, and with enough of the appalling impassivity of Swift's 'Modest Proposal' to be thoroughly uncheering." Edgar Johnson

New Repub 102:648 My 13 '40 460w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins

New Statesman & Nation 20:314 S 28 '40 150w

"The story, except for the germ theory, which might have been less slightly built up, is a closely reasoned, sanely imaginative conception, boldly integrated by unshakable conviction and held together by a central human motif that has the reader as hypnotically gripped as was the wedding guest in 'The Ancient Mariner.' There is no getting away—no faintest desire to get away—till the last word has been said." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 7 '40 950w

"It is probably not quite fair to remark on the unoriginality of a work that merely happens to fall into the same frame of reference as several others—notably John Collier's 'Full Circle.' Within that frame this is a good specimen. It has smoothness of execution, a good narrative style, interesting action." F. P.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ap 13 '40 290w

Time 36:63 Jl 29 '40 270w

BEVAN, EDWYN ROBERT. Christians in a world at war. 188p $2.25 Macmillan [6s Student]

172.4 War and religion [A40-2826]

Chapters on the Christian's place in a wartime world, written from the standpoint of the Christian philosopher. The author emphasizes the fact that thruout history, as well as in the present, the Christian has been buoyed up by the hope of immortality. The two final chapters are entitled: Pacifism, and What ought we to do? The latter a discussion of the terms which a victorious France and England would have made.

"If this book and the Archbishop of York's Thoughts in War-Time are typical of religious leadership in England, we must withdraw our criticism of Chamberlain's political befuddlement. If its postulates are true, German brutality, which it wishes to resist in the last chapter, would be the world's greatest good. Most of the book is a 'proof' that there has been no moral progress at any time for other than very short and quickly compensated periods." J. S. Watson

— Christian Century 57:1078 S 4 '40 430w

"The first 152 pages are fine gold; the last 88 pages are alloy with the final chapter very base metal. . . It is in his chapter, 'What [ought] we to do?' that the author uses base metal. . . It is too bad; the rest of the book is written in such a fine Christian spirit, it is a pity he should lapse into pure secularism." A. L. Byron-Curtiss

+ — Churchman 154:19 S 1 '40 260w

"Here at last is a book about the war which does come to grips with the real question. This short notice gives but a poor idea of Dr. Bevan's admirable study—its masculine thinking and its clear insight or the large range of subjects discussed. Some of the best things are in the footnotes. It does not attempt any easy answer to the particular challenge of the hour. It sets forth the Christian world-view as an interpretation of all history. It is a cordial for drooping spirits which is to be very warmly recommended." F. R. Barry

+ Spec 164:722 My 24 '40 1000w

"Others have dealt more fully and more forcibly with these particular issues of the war; but to do this was not Dr. Bevan's aim. The strength of his book lies in its powerful reassertion of the central Christian tradition about the right attitude towards the evils of the world, war included."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p228 My 11 '40 800w

BEVAN, EDWYN ROBERT. Holy images; an inquiry into idolatry and image-worship in ancient paganism and in Christianity. 184p il $1.90 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen, G]

291.218 Idols and images [40-14850]

"When Dr. Edwyn Bevan's lectures at Edinburgh in 1933 on Lord Gifford's foundation

BEVAN, E. R.—Continued
were published under the title 'Symbolism and Belief' four were omitted since 'they constituted a digression on a particular instance of symbolism—the use of carved and painted images in religion—and might be left out without the general argument of that book being affected.' They have now been published as a separate book, 'expanded with a good deal of additional matter.' " Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by S. L. Riddle
Churchman 154:18 D 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by W. R. Inge
Spec 164:662 My 10 '40 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Ap 27 '40 500w

BEWKES, EUGENE GARRETT, and others. Experience, reason and faith; a survey in philosophy and religion. 649p il $3.50 Harper

201 Philosophy and religion. Religious thought 40-30440

"This volume is one of a series of four semester survey textbooks for freshmen worked out by the faculty of Colgate University. . . The present volume is designed for the survey course in philosophy and religion, as well as for an important part of the course in the history of western civilization. . . The subject matter covers the entire period from primitive times to the present, with special emphasis upon such significant periods as the Hebrew, the Christian, and the Greek and Roman cultures, and the modern world." (Publisher's note) Index.

"As an attempt to trace within human experience the origin and development of the philosophic and religious traditions which have produced us, to point out their significance for our Western culture and to make them articulate, the present 650-page volume must by all standards be adjudged a substantial achievement. It sets a new high in theological and philosophical lucidity, which brings it well within the grasp of college sophomores, if not of the freshmen for whom it is primarily intended. . . By no means just another textbook, its clarity and continuity of presentation should do much to make the conscientious reader feel at home in the universe of religious and philosophical discourse, and should give him considerable proficiency in 'speaking the language.' . . The usefulness of this highly informative volume is seriously impaired by the very limited index, which ought to be considerably expanded." P. F. Laubenstein
+ Christian Century 57:1214 O 2 '40 1000w
J Philos 37:615 O 24 '40 500w
School & Society 53:160 F 1 '41 150w

BIALIK, HAYYIM NAHMAN. Aftergrowth, and other stories; tr. from the Hebrew by I. M. Lask. 216p $2.50 Jewish pub.

40-4499

"Of the author, who died in 1934, the publishers say: 'Not since Judah Halevi, who died 800 years ago, has there been any such master of the Hebrew word or any such interpreter of the Hebrew spirit.' The translator contributes an extended introduction interpreting the work of this remarkable writer." Christian Century

---

"This attempt and Danby's translation of 'And It Came to Pass' should prompt more activity by translators and give the English reader a true glimpse of the greatest name in modern Hebrew letters—Hayyim Nahman Bialik." H. U. Ribalow
+ Books p10 My 19 '40 380w
Christian Century 57:250 F 21 '40 40w

"These stories from the Hebrew have some value as samples of the art of a notable modern poet and as autobiographical insights into the life of a man who played an important role as Zionist laureate. The rhetoric may sound less perfervid in the original than it does in Mr. Lask's translation."
+ — New Repub 102:322 Mr 4 '40 50w

BIBLE. WHOLE. New analytical Bible and dictionary of the Bible; auth. version [comp. by James R. Kaye]. 295,6,1639,18p maps $7.75-$18.75 c1938 Dickson, J.A. [34s to 85s Pickering]

220 Bible. Whole—Texts 39-1919

"The New Analytical Bible and Dictionary of the Bible is a new edition of the New Analytical Indexed Bible, copyright 1931, which was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin for January 1937 [Book Review Digest, 1937]. . . This new edition follows the same plan and purpose as the earlier volume. . . Several changes and added special features increase the reference value of the 1938 edition. A Bible dictionary, 300 pages in length, replaces the 200-page Index and digest that appeared in the 1931 volume. Included in this section are names, places and topics. The arrangement is alphabetical and frequent cross references to other special sections of the volume are given. A new section immediately preceding the Book of Acts is entitled 'Teachings of Christ' and is alphabetically arranged by subject. A third innovation is the subject index to the notes and helps that follows the Concordance." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"The corrections are valuable for those who seek a more accurate translation from the original language. These corrections are from 'the more correct renderings of the American revised version, copyright 1929 by the International Council of Religious Education.' . . The New Analytical Bible and Dictionary of the Bible is factual, conservative and free from any denominational bias. The book is recommended for personal or library purchase for the use of the Bible student or teacher."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:4 Ja '40 360w

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. En-Roeh; the prophecies of Isaiah the seer, with Habakkuk and Nahum; introd, tr. and notes by W. A. Wordsworth. 508p $6 Scribner [14s Clark, T]

224 Bible. Old Testament—Isaiah. Bible. Old Testament—Nahum. Bible. Old Testament—Habakkuk

"This volume deals chiefly with Isaiah. The thesis is that all the Book of Isaiah is the product of one man, and that both the prophet and the book bear a double meaning, one for the period 737—689 B.C., and the other for the beginning of the Christian era." Crozer Q

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon
— Christian Century 57:1055 Ag 28 '40 480w

"Here the pale ghost of ancient allegory walks again. 'Hezekiah sealed the mouth of the spring; Isaiah sealed his well of doctrine. Jesus, loosed the seals of the book, . . .' (5). The author expects this method of interpretation . . . will seem fantastic to the modern western mind (32). Surely, he will not be disappointed." I. G. Matthews
Crozer Q 17:152 Ap '40 140w

"One publisher after another rejected this book. Nor perhaps are the reasons far to seek, for at several important points Mr. Wordsworth's views differ fundamentally from those accepted by the standard commentators. . . That an enormous amount of labour has been put into this book is not open to question; that its conclusions will prove acceptable to scholars generally, however, is quite a different matter."
Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 16 '40 250w

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL PLANNING COMMITTEE OF PHILADELPHIA. A faculty survey of the University of Pennsylvania libraries. (Philadelphia library resources) 202p pa $3 Univ. of Pa. press

027.774811 Pennsylvania. University. Libraries. Libraries—Special collections 40-11034

"This survey of the resources of the University of Pennsylvania libraries forms a small part of a large plan for the survey of library resources in the whole Philadelphia metropolitan area. It was undertaken at the instigation of the Bibliographical Planning Committee of the Philadelphia Metropolitan Area, a joint committee of the University of Pennsylvania and the Union Library Catalogue of the area, created to plan for the closer integration of Philadelphia library resources. . . It represents an appraisal of the library collections of the university by the experts in the several fields of knowledge represented on the university faculties. To some extent it reaches beyond the university libraries and calls attention to other valuable collections of books in other Philadelphia repositories." (Introd) Index.

"It would naturally be assumed that in a work prepared by more than eighty hands there would be considerable unevenness. Descriptions vary greatly in fullness. Extensive lists of titles are contained in some sections; other collections are described in terms so general as to be almost meaningless. A certain proportion of such disparities may be due to varying knowledge of the literature of a field. More probably, however, it can be attributed to lack of an exact plan, with some individuals uncertain precisely what was expected of their contributions in the matter of length and amount of detail." R. B. Downs

+ — Library J 65:490 Je 1 '40 1200w

"Here is 'inside Pennsylvania' by insiders. The accounts are intimate and frank. They vary in value according to the encyclopedic knowledge of the writers. As, however, it is doubtless true that most of the reviewers could write encyclopedia articles on their specialties, the average of this writing is high. They are correct in the intimation that only those who know a subject have any business dabbling with its bibliography. But lack of comprehensive bibliographical checking robs the presentation of definitiveness. The introspection was undoubtedly stimulating to the participants and good for the university, while to outsiders it makes disclosure of some remarkable ore for future working. The Planning Committee has performed an important public service." M. L. Raney

+ — Library Q 10:594 O '40 1000w

BICK, ALEXANDER FREDERICK. Artistic metalwork. 236p il $3.25 Bruce pub.

739 Metal work 40-4672

"The author, who is an instructor in the Milwaukee public schools, has designed this book 'for classes and home shops with very limited equipment, and for those who are seeking for projects that are artistic and yet low in cost.' Over 50 plans are offered, involving the use of tin, brass, copper, pewter, iron, and steel, and ranging from simple candle sticks to the more complicated pieces in cast and wrought iron." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 36:302 Ap 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:49 O '40

"The book is very thorough in its treatment of all techniques and processes and the many fine illustrations make it easily followed. . . Special attention is given to design, each project being a fine example of the best design in both historical and contemporary forms."

+ School Arts 40:12a O '40 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:65 Ap '40

BIDNEY, DAVID. The psychology and ethics of Spinoza; a study in the history and logic of ideas. 454p $3.75 Yale univ. press [17s Oxford]

199.492 Spinoza, Benedictus de 40-4287

"This critical and historical study of The Psychology and Ethics of Spinoza is the sequel to a doctoral dissertation submitted to Yale University in 1932 and entitled The Problem of Value in the Metaphysics of Spinoza. The contents of this dissertation were partially summarized in an article published in the Philosophical Review for May, 1936, on 'Value and Reality in the Metaphysics of Spinoza.' A second article in the same journal (November, 1936) dealt with 'The Problem of Substance in Spinoza and Whitehead.' The major thesis of the aforementioned writings; namely, the conflict of original and traditional ideas in Spinoza's metaphysics, has been here applied to his psychology and ethics." (Pref) Index.

"Students of Spinoza will be grateful for Dr. Bidney's book. It is a clear, thorough and critical exposition of Spinoza's doctrine of the emotions, together with an illuminating account of the way in which this doctrine has influenced modern theories of psychology and ethics. . . Although Dr. Bidney's book is written primarily for students of philosophy and psychology, it can be read with great profit by many whose interests are not confined to these fields. It contains a wealth of information not only about Spinoza but also about the way in which Spinoza's problems have been treated by many modern and contemporary writers." C. H. Patterson

+ Christian Century 57:580 My 1 '40 800w

"There is nothing in Dr. Bidney's work that can honestly be praised. One only wonders that a reputable university press should have sponsored its publication." Marjorie Grene

— Ethics 50:464 Jl '40 2600w

"Dr. Bidney unfortunately retains Spinoza's ambiguity in language, and in employing the language of faculty psychology, he finds himself forced to admit exceptions to the so-called parallelistic doctrine, while in employing the language of universals, he detects either teleology or the logical demand for teleology in Spinoza. A more sympathetic interpreter would, it seems to me, endeavor to state Spinoza's troublesome propositions in terms of his nominalistic logic and parallelistic psychology before presuming to account for their inconsistency on historical grounds." M. W. Gross

J Philos 37:386 Jl 4 '40 850w

"For one who already knows Spinoza, the book is an enlightening and stimulating orientation, showing the results of wide research. It is well organized for reference, but it does not reveal the essence of Spinoza's greatness: the spirit of Spinoza tends to vanish in the letter; the author's powers of analysis outstrip his synoptic insight and appreciation. Nevertheless, The Psychology and Ethics of Spinoza is an important addition to our knowledge of Spinoza and is a credit to American scholarship." E. S. Brightman

+ — J Religion 20:408 O '40 480w

BIEGELEISEN, JACOB ISRAEL. The ABC of lettering. 221p il $4 Harper

745 Lettering (W) 40-27540

Lessons for the beginner in lettering. The book contains instructions on strokes, on brush exercises, and information about materials. Over twenty sample alphabets are included, covering letters and numerals. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:409 Jl 1 '40

Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

BIGELOW, JOHN MASON. Death is an early riser. 254p $2 Scribner 40-6439

Detective story.

BIGELOW, J. M.—Continued
"John Mason Bigelow looks like a comer. In fact, his first mystery is among the slickest of the current goods, notable for pace, cleverness in the less familiar tricks and an engaging manner just this side of the too hard boiled." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 Mr 10 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 70w

"The story reaches its climax with a sharp trick in the discovery of the last damning bit of evidence, and its suspense is well sustained. It suffers greatly, however, from sheer confusion of issues in the telling of the tale." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 180w

"Tight, bright story telling. The punch finish is telegraphed; but, surprisingly, the suspense is heightened rather than diminished. A click."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 20 '40 50w

BIGLAND, MRS EILEEN. Into China. 298p il map $3 Macmillan [18s Collins]

915.1 China—Description and travel. China—Social life and customs 40-27869

"Mrs. Bigland was the first European to travel the Burma Road from Lashio to Kunming (formerly known as Yünnanfu), as the only passenger with a convoy of Chinese ammunition trucks. . . At the end of this three weeks' test of endurance—a series of mishaps, hardships, sickness and grim horrors, intensified by practically continuous rain—Mrs. Bigland is able to record that she and Joe Chow (travelling agent of the China Travel Service) had 'never ceased joking for more than a few moments together.' " Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 37:215 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
Books p5 Ja 26 '41 950w

" 'Into China' is not a pleasant book. True there are lighter interludes, especially in Kunming, moments of humor and fragments of rare beauty, but mainly the tale is of hardship, dirt, hunger, privation and disease, an account of horror. It may well raise the same commotion as did Margaret Mayo's 'Mother India.' Yet it should be widely read as a compelling document of what a people can endure. The author holds the reader's absorbed interest on every page." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 950w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p9 Ja 28 '41 700w

"The main burden of the book is the Burma Road, which Mrs. Bigland seems to be the first white woman to have travelled. The present reviewer has not read her other books, but is forced to suspect that here at any rate she makes a 'good story' of an already good story. . . Perhaps the loss of manuscript accounts for at least some of the unfortunate inaccuracies in the book. . . There are sixteen fine photographs by Gerald Samson and a tolerable map. While one is at first amazed that such books as this can still be turned out in Great Britain, he wonders next whether it can get a proper sale, at any rate in Canada, at the high price asked." J. F. Davidson

— Canadian Forum 20:353 F '41 600w

Christian Century 58:153 Ja 29 '41 150w

"Mrs. Bigland finds it difficult to like both China and the West at the same time. Her vivid, colorful, adventurous, and excellent book is sometimes marred by the fact that she forgets that the West has produced Beethoven and Michelangelo as well as peppery colonels agitated about good form." D. M. MacKegg

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 26 '40 170w

"Mrs. Bigland's fellow travelers in the motor lorry carrying munitions to the Chinese army are shown with compelling clarity and her descriptions of people in the villages where it was often necessary to wait several days for repairs to the truck, or for permits to continue the journey to Yünnanfu, are convincingly portrayed. The reader is drawn into the author's own enthusiasm for the Chinese, even while despairing over their weaknesses." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 200w

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '40 390w

"For this book there can be nothing but praise. . . Any fears that the reader may have that he is about to be launched into a speculative sentimental journey of the spirit are speedily dispelled; 'Into China' is all excitement, fantasy and terror. . . A moving and remarkable book." Anthony Butts

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:265 S 14 '40 500w

" 'Into China' must be read as a travel book —not, that is, as an adequately equipped study of the Chinese people. As a travel book its material is set down without order (which is a virtue rather than a fault) and its judgments are of necessity founded on quick observation which may or may not be penetrating and representative, no matter how conscientious it may be. Mrs. Bigland might have produced better work, I think, if she had not set out with the contract already in her pocket ('Go to China and write a book about it'). . . She is at her best, that is, when she is most spontaneous and most simply reportorial, when her natural observation and sympathy have their own almost unconscious way. But her book is, nevertheless, one to be welcomed." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p22 Ja 26 '41 1300w

"Remarkable travel adventure, but also a sad and memorable picture of the Chinese at war."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Ja 25 '41 70w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Sat R of Lit 23:19 F 1 '41 280w

"To the description of ghastly conditions [Mrs] Bigland brings the touch of a good journalist. Beyond them she sees 'the kindliness and serenity' of the Chinese people; beyond that, 'something harder to define—the ageless, unconquerable serenity of China.' To that her book is vivid and painful tribute."

Spec 165:228 Ag 30 '40 250w

"Mrs Bigland is a provocative, high-spirited writer, with a vivid sense of humor, and sympathetic to human woes and happiness. Her sensitivity and keen observation, coupled with her determination to get at the kernel of any situation she attacks, give the reader a feeling of having been allowed to see behind the scenes." S. M. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 1650w

"A cheerfully humorous, vivid and remarkably outspoken account of a difficult and dangerous journey."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Ag 10 '40 1050w

BILLINGS, EDNA. Buttons and Bo [photograph-story book]. [32p] $1 Random house 40-6444

Teddy and Helen, twins aged four, spend a rainy day drawing cartoons which they name Buttons and Bo. That night their creations come alive, and cause quite a commotion. The book is illustrated with photographs, including pictures of Buttons and Bo.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p12 My 5 '40 220w

"The parent who is convinced that the photograph-story book has enough appeal for the very young child will be delighted with this book. There is an excellent welding of the realistic with the imaginative." Bess Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 70w

BINGHAM, ALFRED MITCHELL. The United States of Europe. 336p map $2.50 Duell

321.041 International cooperation. Europe—politics. United States of Europe (proposed) (W) 40-27476

The editor of Common Sense proposes a federation of European states, exclusive of Russia, as a practical solution of the present European problem. He analyses the situation, discusses the arguments for and against, available instruments, techniques, attitudes, etc. It is Mr Bingham's hope that eventually the federation will work so well that the economic institutions of the world will develop a new world order. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Bingham has done a service towards the cause 'Europe must federate or perish' by collecting facts and adding a good deal of clear thinking, if tempered by wishful hoping. It seems a hurried work, that might well have gained in permanent value by more thinking through than mere thinking about." B. E. Nelson

+ — Ann Am Acad 211:204 S '40 550w

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

Bookmark p22 N '40

"Mr. Bingham makes a cogent argument for his eminently sensible proposals. The chief weakness of his book is that, like many other American writers, he overlooks the ancient complexities of the European situation which have no counterpart in the New World, and do not lend themselves for the time being at least, to a pattern formulated largely in terms of Anglo-Saxon concepts and practices." V. M. Dean

+ — Books p4 My 19 '40 950w

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 29 '40 260w

Foreign Affairs 19:255 O '40 20w

Reviewed by R. A. Sawyer

Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 410w

"Mr. Bingham's approach is shrewd, realistic, hard-boiled, yet charged with humanity. He has been called an isolationist—that curious label without a living referent. Yet what he is trying to do is to find a formula by which the people of Europe may some day save themselves. I think that this is probably more helpful than joining the current civil war and seeing how many of them we can kill." Stuart Chase

+ Nation 150:686 Je 1 '40 1500w

"In objecting to Mr. Bingham's faith in the cartel, I do not mean to imply that I reject the whole of Mr. Bingham's book. Mr. Bingham is tough-minded in his realization that many experiments, some destined to be futile, some capable of growth, will have to be made before Europe can be federated." John Chamberlain

+ — New Repub 103:32 Jl 1 '40 1000w

"Mr. Bingham is nothing if not tentative. His favorite words are 'seems,' 'might' and 'perhaps.' . . Mr. Bingham's economic views are usually of the left-liberal variety. Acceptance of them requires that one admit many propositions which Mr. Bingham is not concerned here to explore." C. H. Grattan

N Y Times p21 My 26 '40 1150w

"Hypothetical, of course, but intelligently done."

+ New Yorker 16:90 My 4 '40 60w

"Alfred Bingham's latest book is a realistic, comprehensive, and profound study of the forces working for and against peace, for and against that European unity which alone can end the devastating wars of this century. If he has not been able to surmount every hurdle blocking the road to peace he has at least had a look at every one of them in his 'United States of Europe.' . . His book is an original and important contribution to a solution of the problems of our age, and although it is unlikely to be as popular as those of authors who gloss over the real difficulties in the way of European federation, is infinitely more valuable." Freda Utley

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 My 25 '40 1250w

BINGHAM, NELSON ELDRED. Teaching nutrition in biology classes. 117p il $1.85 Teachers college

612.39 Nutrition. Biology—Study and teaching 39-20218

"This 'experimental investigation of high school biology pupils in their study of the relation of food to physical well-being' is a Lincoln School Research Study on the educative value of instruction in food and nutrition, especially as shown in the attitude of the pupils toward health in general and food habits in particular." (J Home Econ) Bibliography.

J Home Econ 31:585 O '39 60w

"Teachers of science will find the report of this investigation very helpful and fertile with suggestions on how to make their teaching more functional. Students of education will likewise find the report useful, and there are important implications for the much-discussed issues in general education." P. O. Johnson

+ School R 48:236 Mr '40 900w

BINNS, ARCHIE. Mighty mountain. 440p $2.75 Scribner

(W) 40-33100

Historical novel about the Puget Sound country in the mid-nineteenth century. Elmer Hale, a New Englander, shipped on a sailing vessel in the early 1850's, intending to see the world. When he reached Washington Territory, where his uncle had already settled, Elmer, altho a Yankee to the bone, took up a section of land, married, and announced that he was there to stay. The relations between the Indians and the white settlers play an important part in the story.

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"Because he has come at the problem intelligently, Mr. Binns has understood his Indians without failing to understand the white man and the forces that drove the latter to the great expansion of the '50s. Wherefore what might in other hands have become merely a sentimental chromo of the Noble Red Man has, in his hands, no mawkishness about it. . . 'Mighty Mountain' is a sound and well done book, a thoroughly worth while addition to the slowly growing list of regional historical novels which are likely to be remembered a decade or two hence." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p4 O 20 '40 1050w

"There is real beauty in the book, a love of natural things that is the beginning of wisdom. But it is intellectually adolescent—the author still has to learn about men and women and sin, about real conflicts and about real human motives. His attitude is basically bourgeois—an attitude that does not permit finalities—that covers up everything hygienically with a little unplausible pantheism." W. J. Grace

+ — Commonweal 33:155 N 29 '40 360w

"Men would like it. Could be used on senior high school lists." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 65:762 S 15 '40 120w

"With increasing mastery of his medium, and with a feeling for his material unmatched in breadth and vigor by any of his contemporaries, Archie Binns is at work adding new panels to his picture of the last frontier." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p4 O 20 '40 850w

"A historical novel by a clever and capable writer. The characters—white settlers, Indians, the Army—are more than puppets in a period; they are alive and interesting. The Indians' unhappy struggle to keep their lands is described with real indignation, which the reader will probably share."

+ New Yorker 16:110 O 19 '40 50w

Sat R of Lit 23:19 D 14 '40 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 650w

BIOGRAPHICAL encyclopedia of America, v 1. $20 c1940 Biographical encyclopedia of America, inc, 309-11 5th av, N.Y.

920 U.S.—Biography 40-8435

"A short preface signed 'The Publishers' states that 'with this volume the Biographical Encyclopedia of America makes its appearance,' thus intimating that it is an entirely new work. The preface also expresses the hope that 'with each succeeding volume a more comprehensive picture of contemporary life in America may be portrayed.' . . The material is arranged alphabetically by name of person, with three pages of addenda at the end of the book. Articles vary in length from a few lines to a column, the amount of space allowed having little or no relation to the importance of the subject. The type of information given is similar to that of the average biographical dictionary but is occasionally supplemented by irrelevant material probably supplied by the subject. Educators, lawyers, writers, doctors, musicians, clergymen, etc., are included. Among librarians only Sarah B. Askew's name was noted, although many others of equal prominence are not included." Subscription Bks Bul

"No editors or compilers are listed, and nowhere is any explanation given of the method or the standard of selection used in choosing names to be included. . . Because much of the information given here is readily found elsewhere, and because it is unlikely that information about many persons included will be sought, the book is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 11:26 Jl '40 550w

BIOGRAPHICAL encyclopedia of the world. 583p il $15 c1940 Inst. for research in biography, inc, 234 E. 39th st, N.Y.

920 Biography—Dictionaries 40-7793

"The Biographical Encyclopedia of the World is a new compilation written primarily in English, but containing some entries in foreign languages. The preface states: 'This volume contains an authentic record of notable living men and women throughout the world.' No information regarding the identity of the editors appears in the volume. [It] includes biographical sketches of outstanding living men and women in all countries. 'It records the careers of the heads of governments in each country, outstanding financial and industrial executives, as well as leaders in the fields of art, science, religion, education, jurisprudence, medicine, engineering, the army, the navy, aviation, politics and diplomacy.' " Subscription Bks Bul

"There are very obvious gaps and lacks in individual fields. For example, the volume contains biographical sketches of Sherwood Anderson and Gertrude Atherton but Maxwell Anderson and Pearl Buck are not listed. In the field of art, Thomas Hart Benton and Alfred Stieglitz are omitted. The field of government, however, is much better represented. The importance and national or world significance of some of the entries is open to question. . . Because of unevenness in the selection of entries, use of foreign languages, duplication of material readily found in other biographical dictionaries, the volume is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 11:27 Jl '40 800w

BIRCHALL, FREDERICK T. The storm breaks; a panorama of Europe and the forces that have wrecked its peace. 366p $3 Viking

940.5 Europe—Politics 40-5519

The author, European correspondent for the New York Times from 1932 to 1939, writes of what he saw during those years of advancing war clouds.

Reviewed by W. J. Ronan

Ann Am Acad 210:150 Jl '40 370w

"Mr. Birchall has no secrets to tell, either about himself, in the manner recently considered almost compulsory for foreign correspondents, or about Europe. 'For as to the first,' he writes, 'there are none,' and as to the second he would be a dishonest journalist and therefore unworthy of credence who withheld from his daily stint, for later publication to his greater profit, any matters worthy of publication." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p14 Mr 3 '40 600w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 7 '40 380w

"While the book is factually dependable, and therefore of service in these days, it contains no surprises and will create no sensation. It will never reach the best seller marks set by Van Paassen, Gunther or Farson. Because it deals mainly with events in Germany, Austria and Britain which have been covered at great length in the press it is not likely to equal the popularity of the work of Fodor and Gedye. But it is solid, reliable first-person-singular journalism, and its strong anti-Hitler conclusions are given added impressiveness by Birchall's obvious liking for individual Germans." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 57:313 Mr 6 '40 360w

Foreign Affairs 18:750 Jl '40 40w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery

Nation 150:368 Mr 16 '40 650w

"The descriptive sketches composing this book are as good as any of their kind and prove once again that Mr. Birchall is one of our most reliable and intelligent journalists."

+ New Repub 102:386 Mr 18 '40 50w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p3 F 25 '40 1300w

"Not distinguished writing, but first-rate observation, often extremely vivid. A very readable book."

+ New Yorker 16:63 Mr 2 '40 60w

"Mr. Birchall's gift for description proves to be something of a weakness, for it leaves little room for analysis. His book resembles a newsreel, offering many separate pictures of men and events rather than a connected narrative. . . While enjoying the many brilliant portraits of human beings—individual and in the mass—and the graceful style, one is disappointed that Mr. Birchall fails consistently to scrape the surface of events and to relate and interpret his observations." J. F. Green

Sat R of Lit 21:13 Mr 9 '40 400w

Spec 165:402 O 18 '40 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p514 O 12 '40 270w

BIRD, CHARLES. Social psychology. 564p il $3.50 (18s) Appleton-Century

301.15 Social psychology 40-8066

College textbook by the professor of psychology in the University of Minnesota. The purpose of the work is "primarily to relate a large number of experimental studies to a wide range of social problems. A secondary aim has been to reveal the fundamental behavior processes underlying social adjustments. Thus [the] purpose has been not to assemble researches but rather to clarify, and if possible show the solutions for, social problems through the medium of research." (Pref) Indexes.

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 90w

"In method, viewpoint, thoroughness, simplicity and directness of presentation, as well as in its comprehensive synthesis and organization, this book is one of the few great college texts in the field of social psychology. It is one of the few books which can be confidently placed in the hands of a student with the statement, 'This is what social psychology stands for.' " C. W. Coulter

+ Christian Century 57:1056 Ag 28 '40 700w

"All in all the book deserves to be on the must list of social studies teachers, for it possesses scholarship, clarity, vigor, and pedagogical utility." E. B. Wesley

+ Social Educ 4:527 N '40 400w

BIRREN, FABER. American colorist; a practical guide to color harmony and color identification. [24p] pa $1 Crimson press, 40 Gorham av, Westport, Conn.

535.6 Color 40-7681

"A splendid little booklet that has been designed to simplify the problems of color harmony and color identification. It is illustrated with thirteen color charts, and contains chapters on 'The Art of Color Harmony'; 'The Harmony of Tints, Shades and Tones'; and 'The Science of Color Names.'" School Arts

"'The American Colorist' comes to the public with the enthusiastic testimonials of men prominent in the world of art and horticulture. It is certainly the most practical exposition of the subject which has yet appeared in concise and inexpensive form." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p24 F 4 '40 270w

+ School Arts 39:7a Ap '40 120w

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE HUCHET. The Kings' day; il. by Doris Spiegel. [38p] $1.50 Coward-McCann

(W)

Story of the Feast of Epiphany, the last day of the Christmas season, as it is celebrated in Normandy. The little actors are two brothers, their cousin, The Jeannette, and Terry, a little orphan. Because of his quick-wittedness Terry is made king of the feast.

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

"No one who saw Miss Spiegel's sketches for 'Paris to the Life' has forgotten them; she gives the same sympathetic touch to her drawings illuminating this sympathetic story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 10 '40 200w

Cath World 152:378 D '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:134 N '40 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 50w

"This will have a very limited appeal. It is for readers of nine to eleven, with the emphasis on atmosphere and custom rather than on narrative. For so slight a book, it has been most carefully planned and well printed with effective drawings by Doris Spiegel. Recommended for communities with a budget which permits experimenting with books." M. F. Potter

+ — Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 150w

BISHOP, MORRIS. Ronsard, prince of poets. 253p $3 Oxford

B or 92 Ronsard, Pierre de 40-8281

A full length biography of this sixteenth-century French poet, the story of his life set against a picture of his times. The author has included in the text many of his own translations of the poems.

"Mr. Bishop's knowledge is large, his scholarship accurate, his critical sense is reliable, his book is well organized, his style is easy and attractive. His metrical translations in particular are delightfully good."

+ Atlantic Je '40 120w

"If you are a doctrinaire of any kind, leave this book alone. To the social-minded it will be anathema. It is escapism naked and unashamed; it revels in the echoes of faint, far-off Renaissance music, while Europe and Asia are ablaze. To the scholar it must be a scandal. . . Nerved by Morris Bishop's quiet daring, I should like to launch a counter-attack against the doctrinaires. This work, without any pedantic apparatus, is scholarship of the highest degree: for the sole aim of criticism is to help us to understand, and Bishop makes Ronsard's poetry live again." Albert Guerard

+ — Books p4 Je 23 '40 900w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 14 '40 490w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 32:171 Je 14 '40 380w

"A sympathetic, intelligent and witty biography."

+ New Repub 103:126 Jl 22 '40 50w

"As an introduction to Ronsard for the general public, 'Ronsard, Prince of Poets' fulfills its function admirably. . . The translations, scattered throughout the volume, form the most valuable part of Mr. Bishop's contribution to the appreciation of his poet. . . Much love has gone into the making of these English versions as into the writing of the biography itself. Morris Bishop has fortunately not sought scholarly objectivity. On every page the reader is aware that Ronsard was a living man with that combination of greatness and pettiness which is the mortal lot." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p2 My 12 '40 1600w

New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 20w

"Instead of literary criticism, Mr. Bishop gives us many of his own translations of Ronsard's simpler poems. He is usually successful; but it is odd to notice that, although he scolds Ronsard for using baroque conceits, his own versions are often more elaborate than the originals. . . Still, the translations are the best part of the book. I wish that the rest of it did not make me feel so regretfully that Morris Bishop, although dealing with a Prince of Poets, was deliberately writing down to the rabble." Gilbert Highet

— + Sat R of Lit 22:8 My 25 '40 600w

Reviewed by R. J. Conklin

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p508 O 5 '40 850w

"If Ronsard's fame is to be revived among modern readers, anxious to escape from their own religious wars into tranquil recollection of emotions, Morris Bishop's admirable volume should perform the task. The author, a brilliant critic of French literature, a poet and a humorist as well as a university professor, has written a biography which is accurate, amply documented, profound and unpretentious, and superbly alive. The variety and the richness of his gifts, almost too lavishly displayed, are an insult to less agile minds." Henri Peyre

+ Yale R n s 30:172 autumn '40 550w

BIXLER, JULIUS SEELYE. Religion for free minds. 247p $2.50 Harper

201 Modernism. Religion—Philosophy. Liberalism (religion) 40-1848

Analysis and defense of religious liberalism. The author is Bussey professor of theology at Harvard and president of the board of directors, National council on religion in higher education. The book presents in somewhat expanded form the Lowell Institute lectures on religion delivered at King's Chapel, Boston, in 1937. Index.

"At the end of a decade which has witnessed a degradation of religious thinking probably unparalleled in the history of Protestantism, it is a service of capital importance for Professor Bixler to write this book. The times call for the story of what has been done to theology by the cult of 'unreason,' and here it is. One also sees the liberal, who has been all but done in these ten years, rise in the person of the author, not merely to profess liberalism, but to make out its case with such amplitude and power as to re-establish it again." A. C. Diefenbach

+ Books p17 Mr 10 '40 650w

BIXLER, J. S.—Continued

"The book is a meaty and compact treatment of many of the issues of our day, social as well as religious, aesthetic as well as ethical and theological, practical as well as theoretical. In the course of the argument the author shares with us a rich store of pertinent and suggestive illustrations from the history of art (especially of music), literature, philosophy and religion. From the present reviewer's point of view, it is to be regretted that the author shows little sympathy for or interest in the categories of Christian or of biblical theology. . . Not the least merit of the book, however, is the fact that it will sharpen differences and clarify affinities among the liberals themselves, especially with respect to the question of the proper relation between religious liberalism and historical Christian theology." J. L. Adams

+ — Christian Century 57:578 My 1 '40 850w

"Professor Irwin Edman once expressed the thought in which there was implied also the hope that eventually we men on earth would develop a warm, naturalistic religion. This book by Professor Bixler is a definite contribution to that end. He has sensed the dawn of a new era in religion, and suggests that the ancient enthusiasms inspired by ancient supernaturalism may some day be matched by the enthusiasms of a new faith built on more solid foundations. Much remains to be done, but this book is another eloquent testimony to the fact that a definite beginning has been made." E. T. Buehrer

+ Christian Century 57:901 Jl 17 '40 1000w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:18 F 15 '40 120w

"The volume as a whole is a vigorous expression of amor intellectualis dei and certainly puts those on the defensive who believe that free minds can not worship." H. W. S.

+ J Philos 37:445 Ag 1 '40 650w

"The chief value of this book is that it vigorously defends the distinctive reality of the human spirit and its values and, at the same time, sees spirit in its dynamic relation with nature. Its chief weakness, perhaps, is its neglect of certain distinctive insights of Christianity, especially the depth of human sin in the will and the need of divine grace. Only these insights, I think, can save those of us who still call ourselves liberals from falling into the humanism and moralism with which the Barthians reproach us." G. F. Thomas

+ — J Religion 20:292 Jl '40 750w

"A highly philosophical but nonetheless heartening volume for unrepentant liberals." F. G. Bratton

Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 700w

Reviewed by Mabel Skinner
Survey 76:118 Mr '40 200w

BLACHLY, FREDERICK FRANK, and OATMAN, MIRIAM EULALIE. Federal regulatory action and control. (Inst. for gov. research. Studies in administration) 356p $3 Brookings

353 Administrative law. U.S.—Executive departments 40-7781

"This study, which is largely preliminary in nature, describes briefly the organization, legal status, and relationships of the federal administrative system. The various plans that have been advocated for improvement of this system are also examined, both factually and critically." Management R

Reviewed by James Hart
Am Econ R 30:618 S '40 700w

"Federal Regulatory Action and Control is a significant contribution to the field of public administration. It is particularly important at the present time because of the demands for changes in the organization and procedure of the federal administrative agencies. The proponents of recent legislation to alter the organization and procedure of the administrative agencies could have read with much profit the pages of this important book." F. P. Hall

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:789 Ag '40 600w

"No student concerned with public administration can afford not to study this volume. In fact, he is likely to find that he must own it, for the large quantity of valuable information it contains should be at his elbow." Harvey Pinney

+ Ann Am Acad 210:172 Jl '40 650w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon
Commonweal 32:64 My 10 '40 650w

Management R 29:195 My '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 21 '40 80w

BLACK, ARCHIBALD, 1888-. The story of flying. (Whittlesey house publication) 267p il $2.75 McGraw

629.13 Aeronautics—History (W) 40-27429

Narrative history of the development of the art of flying from the legend of Daedalus to the stratosphere liner. Partial contents: The balloon is born; Zeppelin and the modern airship; Curtiss and the flying boat; Air mail and air transport begin; Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlin; Airports, airways and radio; Photography and other uses; Modern air transport; Some recent events; Aircraft of tomorrow. Index.

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:31 Jl '40

New Yorker 16:100 Ap 13 '40 20w

"Mr. Black, notwithstanding all his selectiveness, has filled his book a little too full, so that as history it is scrappy and as narrative it lacks colour. By way of compensation it avoids exaggeration and sensationalism."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p367 Jl 27 '40 190w

BLACK, MRS BARBARA CONROW. Doorbells. 300p $2 Coward-McCann

40-9005

An attractive, naive widow who sells cosmetics to make her rather scant living is the heroine. Because she is an unsuspecting person, Mary walks into several difficult situations, but always manages to walk out in safety.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p18 My 12 '40 360w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p23 My 12 '40 150w

"There's a romance in the book, but its real interest is in the sales psychology that crops out in every chapter. It is a sugar-coated short-course in salesmanship. Of course, the reader will say, Mary profits by the author's long personal career as a business woman. True; but there is realism as well as romance here, blended admirably into an interesting story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 340w

BLACK, MRS DOROTHY. First love. 304p $2 Penn

40-4661

On her way to India, Morven Caradine's mother died, leaving the girl penniless and homeless. The only way out of her difficulty seemed to be to marry Ned, who was on his way to his first job, also in India. This inauspicious beginning finally brought a happy ending.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 F 11 '40 130w

Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 80w

"On the whole it is better than average light fiction." C. D.

+ N Y Times p16 F 18 '40 160w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Flipper, a sea-lion; il by Glen Rounds. [48p] $1.75 Holiday

40-27720

"Flipper's story recapitulates the life of a sea-lion along the Pacific coast. . . Characteristics of the sea-lion are presented realistically with enough plausible incident to make the story interesting. Attractive format with cocoa, black and white illustrations. Grades 3-4." Booklist

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Stromdahl
Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 70w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Kip, a young rooster; pictures by Kurt Wiese. [68p] $1.50 Holiday

39-33741

Story for third-graders about an earnest young rooster whose big ambition was to crow like the sturdy ruler of the chicken yard. Kip has to go thru quite a course of training before he is able to crow convincingly.

Booklist 36:240 F 15 '40
Cath World 150:375 D '39 20w

"With knowledge and understanding but without personification, the author gives a picture of a modern poultry yard. The type is excellent, well leaded and clear, and the black and white illustrations by Kurt Wiese add to the book's attractiveness. Recommended for all libraries." E. G. Mullan
+ Library J 65:171 F 15 '40 110w

"Large, clear print makes this a good book for a child who can read by himself."
+ New Repub 101:236 D 13 '39 20w

"This is a most successfully told story for the pre-school child as well as for the child who is beginning to read for himself. The pictures of Kurt Wiese are in sympathy with the whole purpose of the book, but they in no way dominate nor do they detract from the 'imageful' language of the text."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:31 F '40

BLACK, RUBY AURORA (MRS HERBERT LITTLE). Eleanor Roosevelt. 331p $2.50 Duell

B or 92 Roosevelt, Eleanor (Roosevelt) (Mrs Franklin Delano Roosevelt)
(W) 40-33233

"Biography of the President's wife by a Washington newspaperwoman, which deals with her family affairs and public service. It's topped off by the remark of a New England lobsterman visiting the White House: 'She ain't stuck up, she ain't dressed up, and she ain't afeared to talk.' " (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

"Strictly speaking, there is nothing in this biography of Eleanor Roosevelt that has not been said before. Of her childhood, youth, marriage and belated entrance into politics she herself wrote in her autobiography. Miss Black wisely gives little space to this. The rest of Mrs. Roosevelt's life has been publicly recorded and, to a large extent, Mrs. Roosevelt herself had been the recorder what with her column, her articles, her radio appearances, her speeches. But Miss Black makes a valuable contribution in assembling this material and giving it a point of view and direction. . . One may not completely accept Miss Black's evaluation of Mrs. Roosevelt but cannot fail to be impressed with the thoroughness of her job." Rose Feld
Books p6 O 20 '40 900w

"Although the book is not an authorized biography, Mrs. Roosevelt aided the author by consenting to reply to all her questions. Miss Black's main difficulty appears to have been one of tense, arising out of an attempt to write a past account when the date Mrs. Roosevelt would leave the White House was still unknown." Mary Hornaday
+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 N 23 '40 390w

"Miss Black, a prominent Washington newspaperwoman who has 'covered' Mrs. Roosevelt since 1933, is, like practically all her colleagues, a warm admirer; yet there is nothing fulsome or sentimental in this biography. On the contrary, the material is handled with unusual restraint."
+ J Home Econ 33:45 Ja '41 120w
Living Age 359:394 D '40 140w
Nation 151:457 N 9 '40 40w

"Engaging biography."
+ New Yorker 16:111 O 19 '40 50w

"Having been in almost daily contact with Mrs. Roosevelt for seven years, Miss Black is aptly qualified to write about Mrs. Roosevelt, which she does with sympathetic understanding, although she still seems overawed by her subject." F. W.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 2 '40 700w

Reviewed by C. M. Kirk
Survey G 29:628 D '40 650w

BLACKMUR, RICHARD P. The expense of greatness. 305p $3 Arrow editions

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism 40-34148

Volume of critical literary essays. Contents: The everlasting effort: a citation of T. E. Lawrence; The shorter poems of Thomas Hardy; The later poetry of W. B. Yeats; Emily Dickinson: notes on prejudice and fact; The craft of Herman Melville: a putative statement; A note on Yvor Winters; Notes on the novel: 1936; The composition in nine poets: 1937; Nine poets: 1939; "It is later than he thinks;" The letters of Marian Adams; The expense of greatness: three emphases on Henry Adams; A featherbed for critics.

"These papers have not the air of papers written specifically about the theme; it would appear that the majority of them were written when a title came along like a Procrustean bed. By lopping a sentence here, stretching one there, Mr. Blackmur hoped to make a unified book. The unity does not come off. . . All this has sounded as though I dislike the book; in fact, the contrary is the case. It is difficult to dislike Mr. Blackmur's way, his authoritative and quiet tone, but rather more difficult to do him the proper justice in this short space." Howard Nemerov
+ — Books p11 Ja 19 '41 650w

"For honest, painstaking, thorough, direct criticism of contemporary literature, especially of contemporary poetry, there is none comparable to the work of R. P. Blackmur. With an extraordinarily well-stored knowledge, a rigidly honorable intent, and a really notable command of style, he is obviously one of the most useful and illuminating critics now writing in this country." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p9 N 18 '40 420w

"Mr. Blackmur is a good critic because he is serious, and has both sensibilities and intellectual subtlety. He has, it is true, in a marked degree, the faults of these virtues. His seriousness is often invalidated by the web of super-seriousness he tends to spin from it. His sensibilities are not always searching enough; he can hedge around with them, and miss the point, while using them with scientific precision. And his subtlety often enervates rather than reveals. He has, as well, extreme faults of style." Louise Bogan
+ — Nation 151:572 D 7 '40 800w

Reviewed by Harry Levin
New Repub 103:905 D 30 '40 950w

"Distinguished but somewhat technical literary essays."
+ New Yorker 16:103 N 16 '40 30w
Time 36:92 D 9 '40 480w

BLAIN, WILLIAM. Home is the sailor; the sea life of William Brown, master mariner and Penang pilot; foreword by Shalimar. 253p maps $2.75 Sheridan [12s 6d Hurst]

910.4 Brown, William. Seafaring life [40-10953]

Written in the first person, this volume contains the reminiscences of a Scottish sea captain whose experiences included a wreck on the Patagonia coast, bringing 2,000 coolies safe to port thru a typhoon, handling a cargo of natives plus fireworks, meeting the German raider Emden, etc.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 600w

"How far Mr. Blain used the words of Captain Brown I do not know, but the writing could not be bettered. Be it anecdote or adventure, this, one feels certain, is exactly how it happened: nothing has been 'touched up,' nothing added to, nor any concession made to literary effects, though the effects are there and the book reads delightfully. And Captain Brown, whether it be Captain Brown as he sees himself, or as Mr. Blain sees him, is set forth with the same fidelity as the incidents in his yarns. Every sentence is so expressive of his personality, so suggestive of a tone of voice and a presence, that to close the book is almost to feel that he has left the room." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 20 '40 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p234 My 11 '40 650w

BLAIR, LAURENCE. The garden clinic; care and cultivation of garden favorites; il. by the author. 146p $2 Macmillan

635.9 Gardening. Floriculture 40-31046

"There is no attempt to cover the entire gardening field, but step-by-step cultural procedures are given for about one hundred worthwhile and popular annuals, perennials, bulbs, evergreens, shrubs, vines and flowering trees. Many of the commoner insect pests and plant diseases are described and their damage illustrated so that they can be recognized and the proper remedial action taken." (Books) Index.

"An amazing amount of practical information has been packed into the pages of this essentially 'how-to' book." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p13 S 15 '40 150w

"This is a practical and quick method for the beginning gardener, and vivid for anyone who swings his own hoe. The book answers a host of fundamental questions that knit garden brows: How often and when should iris be transplanted? How may heavy clay soil be lightened? Is there any way to hasten the germination of morning-glory seeds? What to do about chewing insects, and how does one make delphiniums bloom twice a season." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 17 '40 370w

BLAKE, ELEANOR, pseud. (ELEANOR BLAKE ATKINSON) (MRS. B. K. PRATT). Death down East. 241p $2 Putnam

40-5953

Detective story.

"'Death Down East' is hereby urged upon those in search of a polite but thoroughly exciting account of triple murder at a New England summer resort." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 Mr 17 '40 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 60w

"Kathie Edwards, the youngest girl in the gay Sidley's Cove crowd, tells the story and tells it remarkably well, with a girl's naturalness and fervor and fright and perplexity. The plot becomes very complicated before it reaches its solution, and baffling intricacies of motive are brought to light in its backward search. But the narrative is straightforward, the characters are alive, and the background is consistent and convincing." K. I.

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 17 '40 130w

"Packed to gunnels with emotion, and sleuth's delvings reveal some quite unpretty pasts. Murder method cleverly developed. Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 16 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 160w

BLAKE, GEORGE. The valiant heart. 447p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Collins]

40-6199

Tale of a Scottish shipowner assailed with difficulties of family, business, and participation in the World war. His daughter helps him to solve his problems.

"It is a novel not marked by any unusual quality or vital characters; a gently-moving softly-going story without bite of things that happen, one after another, to its people; a way of looking back and making a pattern of unforgettable years." F. T. Marsh

Books p10 Mr 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 19:78 Ja 20 '40 150w

"The story is told with a naturalness that takes rough and smooth in its stride. . . But the author has tried to get in too much. Clo's lover, once too great for her to marry but later less than a good match through 'Death Duties' impoverishment, stands for the break-up of feudal Scotland. It does not quite come off. 'The Valiant Heart' is, none the less, a sound, heart-warming book of distinguished quality." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 17 '40 700w

"Mr. Blake is sincere, intelligent, and right-minded. But his trenches of 1914 seem hardly more than a story told too often."

+ — New Yorker 16:87 Mr 23 '40 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 800w

BLAKE, NICHOLAS, pseud. See Day-Lewis, C.

BLAKEY, ROY GILLISPIE, and BLAKEY, GLADYS MCALPINE (CAMPBELL) (MRS ROY GILLISPIE BLAKEY). The federal income tax. 640p $7.50 Longmans

336.24 Income tax—U.S. 40-6929

"The book includes twenty-four chapters. The first traces the origin of the movement for an income tax, and the second discusses the corporation excise tax of 1909 and the sixteenth amendment. These are followed by eighteen chapters, each treating a revenue act, or the tax measures of an act bearing another title, and discussing any controversies that may have arisen in connection with it. . . The next three chapters deal with the special problems of the evolution of the definition of taxable income, rates and exemptions, and administration. The last chapter undertakes an evaluation of the income tax. Supporting references are numerous throughout the text and an extensive bibliography is attached." Am Econ R

"This book bears the marks of solid, painstaking scholarship. But it was written for the reader. The sentences and paragraphs used yield clear meanings. The numerous tables and charts included are used effectively. And the result is not only instructive but interesting. In short, here is a work of outstanding quality." M. S. Kendrick

+ Am Econ R 30:188 Mr '40 650w

"A scholarly work, written by authors who have mastered the subject and are able to present it in clear and interesting fashion, this is a book which commands admiration. Professor and Mrs. Blakey, who are well known for their work in the field of taxation, bring to the task of writing this book an intimate knowledge of legislation and of the economic and fiscal intricacies of the problem." E. L. Bogart
+ Am Hist R 45:977 Jl '40 270w

"The layman can glean much from this monumental work, and certainly the tax specialist can ill afford to be without it." H. M. Groves
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:355 Ap '40 650w

Reviewed by T. R. Snavely
Ann Am Acad 210:170 Jl '40 480w

Reviewed by P. H. Wueller
Harvard Business R 19:249 winter '41 320w

Reviewed by E. N. Griswold
Harvard Law R 53:1218 My '40 490w

BLANCHARD, JOHN. Caravans to the Northwest; under the direction of the Northwest regional council, Portland, Oregon. 123p il maps spiral binding $1.90; high school ed spiral binding pa $1.24 Houghton

330.979 Northwest, Pacific—Economic conditions. Migration of workers 40-27721

"A graphic economic survey of the Northwestern states with special emphasis on the area's potential capacity to absorb the constant stream of migrants." New Repub

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40

Reviewed by R. F. Crandell
Books p33 D 8 '40 240w
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 40w

"Charts and pictures supplemented by sensible text."
+ New Repub 103:534 O 14 '40 50w
Social Studies 31:379 D '40 20w

BLANKFORT, MICHAEL. The brave and the blind. 376p $2.50 Bobbs (W) 40-7998

A story of the siege of the Alcazar in the Spanish civil war.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"The novel is expertly wrought, Mr. Blankfort having mastered his problem of shifting the center of interest from one group to another without losing the effect of continuity, the slow procession of the days. The result is that to the reader the story increases in power and effectiveness until it becomes absorbing. . . He has succeeded in giving us a superior novel of the European in our times." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p6 My 26 '40 800w

"Intensely moving, it sums up the tragedy of the twentieth century in terms of a few hundred people. Mr. Blankfort favors the Loyalists, but is amazingly fair; it is a story more of humanity than of ideologies." G. E. S., Jr.
+ Churchman 154:35 Je 1 '40 60w

"A tale of heroic self-defense sustains this interplay and conflict of ideas, this piecemeal arguing out of the Spanish war. The tone of the book is several planes below the exaltation of Major McNeill-Moss's 'The Siege of the Alcazar.' There are, as one would expect in real life, plenty of rude remarks and one or two brief incidents are distinctly sordid. On the other hand, there are inspiring moments of bravery, self-sacrifice, courage on both sides." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ — Commonweal 32:66 My 10 '40 450w

"Mr. Blankfort has done a truly remarkable job: basing his main events on the historical facts of the siege, he peoples the Alcazar entirely with characters imagined by himself. Even Colonel Sanchez is a fictitious personage, though his rejection of his son's plea for surrender was suggested partly by a story told about Colonel Moscardó, the actual commandant. Nevertheless, the few dozen men and women who are brought into sharp focus have the tangible, matter-of-fact reality of next-door neighbors: their hunger, their shrinking from the whine and roar of shells, their sick longing for peace are not mere symbols; they are our hunger, our fears, our wishes." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 150:633 My 18 '40 500w

"'The Brave and the Blind' is admirably moving in spots, but the whole does not quite carry the reader away. It was a play before it was rewritten as a novel, and perhaps Mr. Blankfort's theatrical training has proved to be an impediment in his fiction. . . There is no central character here, and it may be this which has weakened an otherwise impressive novel." Harold Strauss
+ — N Y Times p2 My 5 '40 1100w

"A deeply felt book, written with considerable power."
+ New Yorker 16:97 My 11 '40 70w

"A more powerful writer might have written a more terrible book, but on the whole Michael Blankfort has done justice to the defenders of the Alcazar." James Benét
Sat R of Lit 22:6 My 11 '40 450w

BLANSHARD, BRAND. The nature of thought. 2v 654;532p $8 Macmillan [32s Allen, G]

153 Thought and thinking [40-7177]

"Prof. Blanshard is here exploring the debatable and largely unoccupied territory which lies on the borders of psychology, logic and metaphysics. His book might almost be described as a dissertation on the meaning of the prepositions 'of' and 'about' as they are used when we say we are aware of something or think about something. . . The first volume is concerned with perception, as the lowest stage of thought, and with ideas, thought freed from its primitive dependence on perception. . . In the second volume there is first a very interesting discussion of the mental processes of reflection, observation and invention or creative thinking. Then follows one on the nature and tests of truth." (Nature) Index at end of volume two.

Reviewed by T. M. Greene
J Philos 37:686 D 5 '40 4550w

"The author is a follower of Bradley and Bosanquet. As their point of view is not very popular at present, it is useful to listen to one who is a persuasive advocate of it and an acute critic of other views put forward recently by British and American philosophers and psychologists. He is clear and forcible in expression, as was Bradley, but more temperate. He is thorough in his treatment, as was Bosanquet, but not so difficult." A. D. Ritchie
+ Nature 145:798 My 25 '40 700w

"That a major philosophical work should mature on American soil which reaches back beyond Royce—though Royce, at least the earlier Royce, is one of the formative influences of this book—to the mettle of that pasture from which Royce himself sprang is in itself a promise and a portent of a rare kind; and it is merely typical of Professor Blanshard's quiet and unobtrusive method that he should veil what is something of a historic revival under a nomenclature so sober."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p108 Mr 2 '40 650w

BLATCH, MRS HARRIOT (STANTON), and LUTZ, ALMA. Challenging years. 347p il $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Woman suffrage 40-11207

Biography of the daughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Mrs Blatch was a leader of the early suffragist movement both in England and America, and the book, besides giving the story of her life, contains much history of the movement in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Index.

BLATCH, H., and LUTZ, ALMA—Continued
"If American women are to retain the rights won by a century of struggle and tie up some of the many loose ends that remain in their social and economic patterns, they cannot do better than acquaint themselves with the history, controversies and meanings of that struggle as they are here presented by one who played an outstanding part in them." C. G. Stillman
+ Books p6 Jl 7 '40 900w

"Clear and unemotional, this story of the winning of the ballot for women is valuable and good reading." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 23 '40 350w

"Mrs. Blatch's life has been vigorous and capacious, and her book is both. Her early reminiscences introduce important people and activities here and in England, and reflect opportunities of unusual acquaintance in Germany and France. The illustrations show suffragists in action. The autobiography is valuable history, and good reading."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 16 '40 650w

"Solid, earnest, but good-humored history of the women's-rights movement."
+ New Yorker 16:71 Je 22 '40 60w

Reviewed by Dorothy Straus
Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 20 '40 700w

Reviewed by C. M. Kirk
Survey G 29:627 D '40 420w

BLATZ, WILLIAM EMET. Hostages to peace; parents and the children of democracy. 208p $2 Morrow

172.4 War. Peace. Child study. Children—Management (W) 40-9266

Taking as his thesis that war is not instinctive the author, professor of child psychology in the University of Toronto, writes these letters to the American mother of four children. He discusses patriotism, the discipline of freedom, prestige—its cause and cure, the sense of power, military toys, etc. He contends that we can educate our children so that war will be outmoded in three generations. Index.

Bookmark p22 N '40

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p19 N 24 '40 550w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"It is not, in any way, an easy book. But it ought to be useful."
+ N Y Times p10 Je 9 '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

BLISS, ADAM, pseud. See Burkhardt, R. F. and E.

BLISS, MRS HELEN (CORY). Honorable goat; il. by Aldren A. Watson. 168p $2 Crowell

(W) 40-30720

"Though the goat lives in China, he behaves as goats do anywhere. But he is accessory to the story of Chengting, who is very much of a boy in spite of the fact that he wears gowns of padded silk, rides in a ricksha and learns to write with a brush." Christian Century

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 13 '40 280w

Christian Century 57:1032 Ag 21 '40 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:350 S '40 80w

"Chengting and his white goat Pow Deh are an engaging pair that will keep you amused by their faculty for getting into mischief. . . Illustrations in the Chinese manner by Aldren Watson are expressive of this story of Modern China that is so ably told by the author." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 30w

"The eternal affinity between boy and goat should insure a large audience for this story, even though the boy lives in Central China, for Chengting, first and last, is not so very different from young Americans of 8 or so, and goats are the same trouble-makers the world over. . . The climax is a little too ingenious and breath-taking to be convincing, but 8 to 12 year olds will not cavil at that exciting point." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '40 390w

Wis Lib Bul 36:171 D '40

BLISS, SIDNEY M., and ROWE, CLYDE E. Everyday law. 660p il $1.80 Heath

347.7 Commercial law 39-19476

"A concise compendium, compiled for the student in business courses, but equally valuable for the general reader or for self-instruction. Gives a logically arranged summary of the general principles of law underlying the everyday situations which arise in everyone's life. Users should remember that these are law principles and not the state laws governing the situation. The principles hold true generally for all states." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

"The text is easily read. The main topics are set off in bold type, the chapters are short, pages are broken up into short paragraphs, and the type is restful to the eye. There is an unusually large number of pictorial illustrations, and the diagrams are excellent. . . It should be a pleasure for any teacher of commercial law to use this book; the unity and the continuity of topics, the abundant illustrations and diagrams, and the excellent chapter reviews and tests should make it thoroughly teachable." I. N. Knehans
+ School R 48:475 Je '40 410w

"As a high school textbook this book can hardly be used for grades lower than the twelfth; although its subject matter is greatly simplified, it necessarily abounds in concepts, definitions, and principles which are beyond understanding by younger students. But it presents socially meaningful materials in a clear style and in a logical, though 'textbookesque,' organization. . . As a whole, the book retains much of the phraseology of the laws and the courts. Nevertheless, it very well fills the need for such a book." E. J. Urch
+ Social Educ 4:143 F '40 400w

BLOCHMAN, LAWRENCE GOLDTREE. Wives to burn, and Midnight sailing. 2v in 1 285, 311p $2.50 Harcourt

40-11292

Two detective stories, the first one new, the second a reprinting of a novel published in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1938).

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Je 23 '40 160w

"Both novels are exciting and both are filled with lovely women and sinister gentlemen. A good volume for vacationers." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 90w

Christian Century 57:798 Je 19 '40 10w

"Exciting and entertaining." G. E. S., Jr.
Churchman 154:35 Je 1 '40 20w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p14 Jl 7 '40 210w

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 8 '40 40w

"Both contain brisk action, lively dialog and neat sleuthing."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 150w

"Two excellent novelettes about death, India, a ship afire at sea. For the Somerset Maugham trade."

+ Time 36:72 Jl 1 '40 20w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

BLOOR, MRS ELLA REEVE. We are many; an autobiography; introd. by Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. 319p il $2.50 Int. pubs.

B or 92

Autobiography of a seventy-eight-year-old American Communist, long an active member of the party, and an organizer in the American labor movement. Index.

"You may not approve of Mother Bloor, but you will find it hard not to be stirred by her straightforward, simply told story." Mary Ross

Books p14 D 15 '40 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 D 11 '40 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 650w

BLUM, ANDRE. The origins of printing and engraving; tr. from the French by Harry Miller Lydenberg. 226p il $3 Scribner

655.11 Printing—History. Engraving—History 40-27477

Translation of the second and third parts of Les origines du papier, de l'imprimerie et de la gravure, published in Paris in 1935. The author is professor of art in the School of the Louvre, and curator of the Edmond de Rothschild collection of prints in the Museum of the Louvre. The translator is director of the New York public library. For the translation of part I, The Origin of Paper, see Book Review Digest, 1935.

Booklist 36:377 Je 1 '40

"Mr. Blum's work is more than a mere synthesis of facts and opinions. It interprets [much] accumulated data and weighs them by the experience which its author has gained through many years of association with books and prints significant in the history of the graphic arts. Dr. Lydenberg's translation is in easy, idiomatic English, preserving the simplicity which undoubtedly characterizes the original. . . In a book so compressed the reader is almost sure to find omissions of matters of his own special interest, either in the form of significant books or of discussions of processes. In speaking of illustrated books, for example, one may well regret that there is no mention here of the Boccaccio, 'De la Ruine des Nobles hommes et femmes' of Bruges, 1476. . . Nor is there a word about fifteenth-century map engraving." L. C. Wroth

+ — Books p14 Jl 28 '40 470w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 60w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

Commonweal 33:148 N 29 '40 130w

"Dr. Lydenburg's careful translation has made available for the librarians of this country another valuable reference work by André Blum. . . The great value of Mr. Blum's work consists in bringing us firsthand observations, carefully considered, on the origins not merely of typographic printing, but also of its necessary adjuncts, of paper making, woodcut making and metal engraving." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt

+ — Library J 65:1080 D 15 '40 220w

"The great value of Mr. Blum's work consists in bringing us first-hand observations, carefully considered, on the origins not merely of typographic printing, but also of its necessary adjuncts, of paper making, woodcut making and metal engraving. . . Those among the readers who have gone over this ground before, will be particularly grateful, I believe, for the insight into French archives, French libraries and museums. . . His work is, in fact, a model of liberal and unpartisan scholarship. His treatment of the Gutenberg-Coster question, for instance, is an excellent piece of work along these lines." Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt

+ Publishers' Weekly 138:52 Jl 6 '40 650w

"A book for the specialist and the serious student of the arts."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 18 '40 490w

BOAS, ERNST PHILIP. The unseen plague: chronic disease. 121p $2 Augustin

362.13 Diseases, Chronic. Medical economics 40-10510

"A timely review of the extent of chronic diseases and of their social significance in a community, with summaries and appraisals of present methods of medical and social care. One chapter suggests a community program for the care of the chronic sick. Probably the first book dealing with community aspects of the subject." Booklist

"This book should be of value to physicians, health officers and other public officials, social workers, and all concerned with individual and community health and welfare problems." C. F. Wilinsky

+ Am J Pub Health 30:1366 N '40 480w

Booklist 37:5 S '40

"Written by a veteran in the field of chronic disease this volume is a welcome addition to public health literature, not only for its intrinsic value but also for the stimulus which it is bound to give to this comparatively new field of activity. As a running commentary on the growing problem of the chronic patient, it is indispensable for the student of the management of chronic disease. This is particularly true of the chapters on the significance and the medical, social, and economic aspects of chronic disease. The author's analysis contains some excellent thinking, even though his conclusions may not be completely acceptable to all workers in this field." E. M. Bluestone, M.D.

+ — Survey 76:307 O '40 410w

BOAS, FRANZ. Race, language and culture. 647p il $5 Macmillan

572 Anthropology. Ethnology 40-4051

"This volume consists of sixty-three essays which originally appeared in scientific publications between 1887 and 1937. They cover a wide variety of topics, such as race problems, growth of children, statistical analysis, American Indian languages, ethnological aims and methods, historical reconstruction, social organization, mythology, archeology, art and religion. With a few exceptions no attempt has been made at revision or incorporation of new material, since the author believes that his theoretical treatment is still sound. Dr. Boas claims that anthropology, the science of man, has a direct bearing upon modern problems." (Commonweal) No Index.

"An exceptional book. Exceptional because it brings into one volume sixty-two papers written by the most influential figure in American anthropology during the last half century. Exceptional in that it exhibits the wide range of interests and the scientific exactness which made it possible for one man to exert such a profound influence on the growing science of anthropology. Exceptional in that the author's selection of papers apparently gives us his present attitude on many controversial matters. . . This is a volume every student of anthropology will wish to possess; it will also have a wide distribution among other students of the social sciences, and all interested in problems of race." Fay-Cooper Cole

+ Am Anthropol 42:689 O '40 500w

Am Soc R 5:684 Ag '40 200w

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40

"The many admirers of Franz Boas will welcome this collection of some sixty papers, presented over a period of half a century. . . The book is not an epitome but a one-man anthology of the anthropological sciences. Because of its miscellaneous character, the work imperiously demanded an index, and failed to get it." Albert Guerard

BOAS, FRANZ—Continued
+ — Books p22 O 6 '40 200w

Reviewed by T. M. Avery, Jr.
Commonweal 32:47 My 3 '40 470w

Reviewed by Peveril Meigs
Geog R 31:160 Ja '41 320w

"In this collection of reprinted pieces, representative examples will be found of much of the most original and lasting contribution by Prof. Boas to anthropological thought in general and the anthropology of the American continent."
+ Nature 145:951 Je 22 '40 550w

"Teachers of the social sciences will find in this collection of essays invaluable data for both factual and theoretical class-room discussions of very timely topics." D. S. Davidson
+ Social Studies 31:284 O '40 130w

Reviewed by Alden Stevens
Survey 76:279 S '40 100w

BOAS, FREDERICK SAMUEL. Christopher Marlowe; a biographical and critical study. 347p il $4.50 (15s) Oxford

B or 92 Marlowe, Christopher

"Few things in Elizabethan literature are more exciting than the best moments in Marlowe's plays, and nothing in the age is more mysterious than his life. It is inevitable that the romanticising biographers should have sought the image of the impetuous and ambitious dramatist in the plays and, since facts are scarce, should have been content to invent the rest. Dr. Boas follows a more difficult but a far more absorbing path. The Buttery books of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, the Privy Council's Certificate, the Middlesex Sessions Roll, the records of the Coroner at Deptford—through such documents as these Dr. Boas traces Marlowe's strange and sometimes unaccountable exits and entrances of the Elizabethan scene." Manchester Guardian

---

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
Books p7 Ag 4 '40 800w

"Dr. Boas has accomplished his difficult task with an enviable union of scholarship and grace." B. I. Evans
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 19 '40 350w

"Dr. Boas's volume makes few concessions to the general reader: but it will prove a work of absorbing interest to those who love his subject." Peter Quennell
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:278 Mr 2 '40 1300w

"Frederick Boas's 'Christopher Marlowe' is an outstanding work in English literary research and reconstruction. Not written primarily for general consumption, for the scholar and the student, rather, it is at the same time couched in so facile a style that the general reader is likely to derive more solid pleasure and satisfaction from the pages than he would be likely to find had the author striven for popular appeal." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p22 Je 23 '40 900w

"Those of us who are at work in the splendid, and remunerative, field of our sixteenth-century history and literature, expected that this would be the standard work on Marlowe. It is." A. L. Rowse
+ Spec 164:419 Mr 22 '40 1000w
Times [London] Lit Sup p268 Je 1 '40 1050w

BOAS, GEORGE, ed. Romanticism in America. 202p il $2.25 Johns Hopkins

810.9 Romanticism. American literature—History and criticism 40-32317

Contents: Democratic bifocalism: a romantic idea and American historiography, by E. F. Goldman; New patterns of greatness, by E. P. Spencer; Thomas Cole and the romantic landscape, by W. L. Nathan; The romantic lady, by R. P. Boas; Books for the lady reader, by O. E. Winslow; The romantic interior, by Roger Gilman; Early American Gothic, by Agnes Addison; The Beethovens of America, by Lubov Keefer; Romantic philosophy in America, by George Boas.

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
Books p14 Ag 25 '40 550w

"A lively wake for the grandparents of American culture."
New Repub 103:222 Ag 12 '40 50w

BODE, BOYD HENRY. How we learn. 308p $2 Heath

370.15 Learning, Psychology of. Intellect. Education—Philosophy 40-27507

"A part of this book consists in a re-working of the author's earlier volume entitled Conflicting Psychologies of Learning, but well over half of it is entirely new material. Professor Bode takes the position that educational practices reflect the prevailing theory of learning and that there are still present in education many practices which derive their justification from outmoded and discredited psychological theories. In showing the relation between psychological theory and educational practice, he organizes his discussion around four outstanding theories of learning, which in turn are related to four concepts of the nature of mind." (El School J) Index.

Booklist 36:393 Je 15 '40

"Bode's book is not to be recommended for light reading in one's spare time, but it will well repay serious study by students of education and by school administrators who are concerned with underlying principles that guide educational practices." G. T. Buswell
+ El School J 41:226 N '40 950w

BODENHEIMER, EDGAR. Jurisprudence. 357p $3.50 McGraw

340.1 Jurisprudence. Law—Philosophy. Sociology 40-12666

"This book seeks to give aid to the student of law and politics who is interested in the general aspects of the law as an instrument of social policy. The author realizes that the problems of jurisprudence and legal philosophy can be approached in many different ways and by many different methods. He has attempted to emphasize above all those issues which have some relation to the great political and social struggles going on in the world today. Among those issues the contrast between arbitrary power and law, between totalitarianism and constitutionalism, has received particular attention and has been made the starting point of the discussion." (Pref) Selected references. Index.

"In a book which covers so wide a field, it is easy to discover oversimplifications and overgeneralizations, but the author, in his lively and succinct presentation, catches the essential points and shows clearly the contribution of each jurist to the great tradition and discussion. The author's own observations present new and fine insights, for instance, in his passages on the correlations between economic structure and law in ancient Rome, in the elegant comparison of the spirit of classical Roman law and Anglo-American common law, in his discussion and critique of the neo-Thomists and French institutionalists, and even in the chapters on such well-known theories as those of the natural-law school of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries." Max Rheinstein
+ Am J Soc 46:617 Ja '41 950w

Reviewed by J. A. C. Grant
Am Pol Sci R 34:1217 D '40 750w

BODLEY, RONALD VICTOR COURTENAY, and HEARST, LORNA. Gertrude Bell. 260p map $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Bell, Gertrude Lowthian (W) 40-27799

"Gertrude Bell (1868-1926) made herself one of the greatest Western authorities on Arabia, and on the Near East generally, and became one of the guiding influences in the organization of the kingdom of Iraq. Born and bred in Victorian England, a woman of wealth, social station and beauty, she ignored (rather than defied) the tabus of her time and, while always remaining the very feminine and rather elegant lady, she went forth with an extraordinary courage and resourcefulness to explore the desert places and to make acquaintance with peoples not pre-disposed to friendliness with Christian visitors." (Christian Century) This biography is based mainly on Miss Bell's letters and other writings. Index.

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

"There is too much emphasis upon Miss Bell's personal appearance, her feminine charm and her exercise of it upon impressionable males, her Paris clothes, her refusal to 'go native.' When all is said however, the narrative is interesting, and even a rather trivial treatment does not spoil a fine subject." S. C. Chew
+ — Books p16 N 24 '40 850w

"Her life, here told with competence and charm, is a contribution to the record of archaeological and ethnological research and of political reconstruction in the Near East after the World War."
+ Christian Century 57:1452 N 20 '40 140w

"The book is written in an easy narrative style, although at times it seems a bit prosy. . . [It] is rich in varied anecdotes about outstanding men and colorful pictures of the Arabs and their ways. The parts dealing with the Arabian Desert and the forming of the kingdom of Iraq with Feisul at its head are especially good. . . The volume will appeal to the reader of popular biography and will also make an excellent addition to the young people's library." E. M. Olcott
+ Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 210w

"Though this biography is in no way interpretive of its subject the strange and admirable personality of Gertrude Bell cuts through, particularly in the too few fine letters quoted." Hassoldt Davis
— + Sat R of Lit 23:14 N 30 '40 550w

BODY and spirit; essays in sexuality by Andre Berge [and others] tr. by Donald Attwater. 200p $2.40 (7s 6d) Longmans

176 Sex. Sexual ethics 40-8912

Essays on the modern theories about sex by various philosophers and psychologists. All of them are written from a standpoint which is "Catholic at least in spirit, and about half of them are written by Catholics."

"The book as a whole may be set down as a valuable contribution to a department of literature in which sane, scientific writing is especially welcome." J. McS.
+ Cath World 151:120 Ap '40 230w

"It is natural that the sacramental view of life should be taken by most of these authors, and even if non-Catholic readers will not find themselves in agreement with all the views expressed, it is impossible to deny the persuasive power of the arguments and the dignity of their view of life."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p459 Jl 29 '39 110w

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. The development of social thought. 564p $3.50 (18s) Longmans

309 Sociology—History 40-4217

"This book is designed as an introduction to the field of social thought for college students, irrespective of the fields in which their special interests lie. It is planned to give any college student a broad background for orienting himself and his life work in this human world. . . The book is designed also to meet the needs of the reading public which has not made an acquaintance in a systematic and historical way with the social thought of the leaders of mankind in all ages and all cultures." (Pref) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. K. Merton
Am J Soc 46:393 N '40 1000w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen
Ann Am Acad 212:274 N '40 180w

"While it might be suggested that the term 'social thought' appears with rather wearisome frequency in the contents, the featuring of outstanding names, locales, and schools, is excellent. It is a well conceived guidebook to a field where formerly the student and the general reader had only works on particular thinkers, subjects, or periods." W. L. Bailey
+ Survey 76:247 Ag '40 260w

"As a manual of sociology for students and general readers interested in the eternal problems of human relationship in organized communities the book has its merits. The volume embraces nearly all the major sociological systems and renders the main currents of 'group thinking' throughout the ages in a clear and concise form."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Jl 20 '40 800w

BOGERT, LOTTA JEAN. Nutrition and physical fitness. 3d ed rev 602p il $3 Saunders

613.2 Nutrition. Food. Digestion. Diet. Hygiene (W) 39-15805

"The book has been reset and revised, and it has new material on vitamins, food economics, and metabolism." (Booklist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest, 1932, 1935.

"A large amount of new material has been incorporated in this edition, and at the time of completion the subject matter had been brought up to date. The treatment is adequate and authoritative. So far as possible the vocabulary is non-technical and the book can be read profitably by anyone who wishes to know something of nutrition and its relation to health, comfort, and efficiency." A. G. Hogan
+ Am J Pub Health 30:438 Ap '40 140w
Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40
J Home Econ 31:646 N '39 50w

BOGGS, SAMUEL WHITTEMORE. International boundaries; a study of boundary functions and problems; with a foreword by Isaiah Bowman. 272p il maps $3.25 Columbia univ. press

320.128 Boundaries 40-8082

A series of lectures delivered by the geographer of the United States Department of state, in a course on current geographical problems given at Columbia university during the 1939 summer session. Contents: The changing role of boundaries in a changing world; Classification and terminology of boundaries; Boundary-making between the United States and Canada; The functioning of the boundaries of the United States; South American boundaries; European boundaries and their functions; Grappling with European boundary problems; Asiatic boundaries; African boundaries; Water boundaries; The peaceful solution of boundary problems. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by N. J. Spykman
Am Pol Sci R 34:1016 O '40 850w

"The value of the book is greatly enhanced by a first-rate collection of maps and photographs that add much to a well-written and interesting text." W. H. Heicher
+ Ann Am Acad 211:205 S '40 360w

"Mr. Boggs has done us a good service in putting down this socio-historical dissection of boundaries." B. E. Nelson
+ Christian Century 57:976 Ag 7 '40 550w

BOGGS, S. W.—Continued
Reviewed by Richard Hartshorne
Geog R 30:507 Jl '40 1100w

"Adequate presentation of the economic and social aspects of boundaries over the world can hardly be made in one slender volume, and the discussion might perhaps better have given room to more pertinent historic material, in an essentially geographic summary. The book is a valuable addition to any reference collection on the topic, and is especially helpful for collecting, under one cover, data on Asiatic and African boundaries which cannot otherwise be found except by extensive digging in bulky and disconnected sources." G. I.
+ — Harvard Law R 53:1410 Je '40 320w

BOJER, JOHAN. The king's men; tr. from the Norwegian by Barrows Mussey. 350p $2.50 Appleton-Century 40-5843

Story of army life in Norway during the years leading up to 1905 when Norway's conflict with Sweden was ended.

Bookmark p12 My '40

"The tale is Bojer in his lighter vein (forget that big novel, 'The Great Hunger'); and his humor (Scandinavian humor—and there is such a thing) is irresistible. His fisher and peasant lads of the rank and file are sometimes solid wits, sometimes unconscious ones. . . The story is not dramatic but sociable, full of all sorts of people sketched in with the artistry of a master story teller. It seems remote from our day. But it is not without significance for it." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p5 Mr 24 '40 500w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 180w

"The author sketches all this tersely, blending humor with an air of quiet solemnity."
+ New Repub 102:554 Ap 22 '40 50w

"If we call it a lesser novel than 'The Great Hunger' that does not mean it is less true. It is happier, healthier, satisfying as the yellow home-made butter sent from the farm to the homesick recruits being trained to shoot down imaginary armies; a novel to relieve the mind of present-day realism." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 7 '40 650w

"[The novel] is pertinent, adroitly told, interesting for its background as well as for its people. Mr. Mussey's translation is admirable."
+ New Yorker 16:74 Mr 30 '40 80w

"Most of the characters are drawn firmly, sometimes with masterful strokes. Like Hamsun, Bojer has the rare and Scandinavian gift of making his people live and act. He does not share Hamsun's novelistic conciseness. 'The King's Men' requires from the reader much leisure, and much patience too." Marianne Hauser
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 Mr 30 '40 280w

BOLITHO, HECTOR. Roumania under King Carol. 175p il $2.75 Longmans [7s 6d Eyre]
914.98 Rumania. Carol II, king of Rumania
(W) 40-7301

Written before the war broke out, this is Mr Bolitho's contribution toward a stronger friendship between Great Britain and Rumania. It contains a picture of Rumanian pride and patriotism, descriptions of city and country, a sketch of King Carol, and something about the Rumanian peasantry.

"Written last year 'after Munich' but 'before Poland,' here is an absorbing and informative prologue to whatever may soon be enacted in Rumania's part of the world. The book is not dated by impulsive prophesy. The author is a friend of the Rumanians, and he admires their King. Consequently, he has left much unsaid, but all that he does relate is worthy of attention." R. B. Harris
+ Books p20 Ap 7 '40 650w

BOLITHO (bō-lī'thō)

Reviewed by Frank Nowak
Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40 120w

"These sketches are interesting and well done, but all Mr. Bolitho's skill and experience scarcely cover up the dearth of solid material and the want of genuine knowledge of the nation that repeatedly betrays itself throughout the book." H. J. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 25 '40 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40
Manchester Guardian p3 N 3 '39 250w

"Events have changed its emphasis without destroying its interest. And although it is obviously—and frankly—written as an expression of what is known in peace-time as a 'point of view' and in war is accused of being 'propaganda,' it is illuminating and pertinent reading at the present time."
+ N Y Times p28 Ap 7 '40 460w

"Mr. Bolitho's book is far from accurate, principally in the sense that it is inadequate in respect of nearly all the subjects of which it treats. . . But it has the merit of telling us rather more about King Carol as he appears to an interlocutor than any interviews so far published have succeeded in doing. . . Rumania, indeed, is a far more interesting place than Mr. Bolitho would have us believe; and the character of King Carol only assumes greatness in comparison with the problems which he has set himself to solve, but on which Mr. Bolitho hardly touches."
Times [London] Lit Sup p546 S 23 '39 700w

BOLLES, JOSHUA K. Father was an editor; il. by Arthur D. Fuller. 284p $2.50 Norton
B or 92 Bolles, Joshua Augustus. New Milford gazette (W) 40-27591

Reminiscences of the author's father, editor of the New Milford Gazette in the '90s and early 1900s. In addition to the portrait of Father there is a picture of family life fifty years ago and character sketches of other personages of the town.

Booklist 37:10 S '40
Bookmark 2:9 Ja '41

"A quiet, nostalgic book, full of excellent characterization." Stewart Holbrook
+ Books p2 S 8 '40 1300w

"Since Clarence Day's 'Father' first warmed the pages of 'The New Yorker,' books and plays have been filled with characters who seemed to be imitations of that stanch individualist. There is no hint of imitation in 'Father Was an Editor.' But Father Bolles is like Father Day in this: Once you have experienced him you will not forget him." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 S 5 '40 800w

"Joshua Bolles would be the last one to say that anything dire would happen to you, if you didn't read his book; but I can say that if you want solace for your soul, chuckles for your digestion, and a respite for your 1940 nerves, you should go back a few decades to the days when 'Father Was an Editor!' " Virginia & A. E. Laisson
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 1050w

"Those who read the book will commend a dutiful and admiring son for his temperate admiration of one whose foibles and eccentricities he wholeheartedly condones, and whose worthy accomplishments he sincerely commends. The difficulties, apparent to even the casual reader or observer, are that the horizon limiting the vision and imagination of the country editor and his Boswell are necessarily narrowed and circumscribed." F. L. P.
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 19 '40 490w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton
Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 150w
New Repub 103:482 O 7 '40 50w

"The book has no pretentiousness in a single line. It does not make its subject a great editor or public figure. It just tries to picture Editor Bolles as he was, and to picture, through him, New Milford as it was in a quieter time. . . Because it is such a simple book, one feels that it is truthful. It is, incidentally, as tender a tribute as any son could pay to his father." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
+ N Y Times p3 S 8 '40 1500w
New Yorker 16:71 S 7 '40 50w
Sat R of Lit 23:19 N 9 '40 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 1150w

BOLSTER, EVELYN (MRS FORREST BARNES). Morning shows the day. 301p $2.50 Vanguard
(W) 40-27302

When Mother died Father tried hard to keep Ted and Ellen and Susie with him, tho it meant that the children had to do the housework and ran wild in their leisure time. Father's moral teachings and good comradeship didn't always keep them out of trouble, and when at the end of a year Grandmother interfered, he had to acknowledge defeat—tho, fortunately, he found a better home for them than Grandmother's.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

"This is not an idyllic picture of childhood. It is a realistic picture, full of the ruthless struggle to survive that we are so apt to forget. As Miss Bolster says at the end, 'It was a fight from start to finish. Because nobody ever said, "These children are Ted and Ellen and Susie, and they are brave and strong and smart." They had to fight for all of it, for the fun and for the honor.' That sums up the book." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p10 Mr 31 '40 600w

Reviewed by E. S. Fainsod
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 6 '40 220w
Churchman 154:35 Je 1 '40 100w

"It seems to me that Evelyn Bolster, whose first novel this is, has written a most engaging and a quite distinctive story, one that belongs with the topnotchers of its class. 'Morning Shows the Day' is not wholly without traces of sentimentality and artifice, but it is as free from such blemishes as any one could reasonably ask. Simple, forthright, with a delightful crisp twist of speech, it enters so naturally into the child's own world that one does not at once realize how very good it is." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 31 '40 900w

"A friendly, perceptive novel."
+ New Yorker 16:75 Mr 30 '40 50w

"To recapture not only the details of childhood, but the whole weave and feel of it, requires a sensitivity of memory and perception which few writers have. The author of 'Morning Shows the Day' has it in abundance. She makes her three child characters come alive for us through one lovely year. She does not condescend to them; nor yet does she talk baby talk to convince us that they are really children. Her style is sophisticated and expressive." Katharine Scherman
+ Sat R of Lit 21:14 Ap 20 '40 390w

BOLTON, IVY MAY. Luck of Scotland; il. by Victor Dowling. 229p $2 Longmans
(W) 40-13164

Historical romance of Scotland in the time of Robert Bruce, for boys and girls of twelve and older. It is the story of a young girl who, dressed as a minstrel, roused the men of the border by her singing and playing so that they flocked to the standard of Bruce. Later when she was captured by the English she was able to recover the Scottish talisman, called the Luck of Scotland, and return it to her native land.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

"A grand present for a girl of Scottish ancestry. Also, I may say, for girls who like to find heroism in their historical stories." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Ja 26 '41 230w

"Conversational language seems occasionally wooden; no dialect; lively adventure for both boys and girls, twelve to sixteen." Maude Adams
+ — Library J 65:712 S 1 '40 130w

"Older boys and girls who might shun a more sober historical story will read this one." I. S.
+ N Y Times p46 N 10 '40 110w

"Good action and background." F. G. Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 50w
Social Studies 31:336 N '40 20w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 170w

BOND, FREDERICK WELDON. The Negro and the drama. 213p $2 Associated pubs.
812.09 Negro drama. Negroes in literature and art 40-32025

"A study of the direct and indirect contribution which the Negro has made to American drama, including works both by and about Negroes." Christian Century

Booklist 37:171 Ja 1 '41

"A well informed survey which will be valuable to all students of Negro culture as well as to all students of drama."
+ Christian Century 57:1250 O 9 '40 40w

"This is a rather sketchy treatment of a subject of considerable interest. . . It is unfortunate that the author did not see fit to illustrate his somewhat dull text with illustrations from theatre programs, handbills, and contemporary newspaper criticisms. Much could have been done with a subject of so vital and lively a nature." W. P. S., Jr.
— + Churchman 155:35 Ja 1 '41 70w

BONE, STEPHEN. Albion: an artist's Britain. 154p il $4 Macmillan [15s Black, A. & C]
914.2 England—Description and travel [40-13308]

"A quarto volume with twenty-four plates in color from the author's paintings, and also with a number of line drawings. In text and picture Mr. Bone takes his readers to the green, treeless hills the island over, to the 'intake' of cultivated land and marshes long since drained, to the changing coastline of Britain, the waterways through the land. One of his chapters sketches the history of the English village; another outlines the development of a typical, though imaginary, market town. And when he comes to the industrial settlements he finds surprising diversity there. The paintings are of gentle vistas for the most part—rolling hills in Wales, boats in Yarmouth harbor, Harlech, Spring in the New Forest, Winter dusk over Knaresborough Bridge." (N Y Times) Index.

Books p19 Ag 25 '40 110w

"The writing, and, to a greater degree, the illustrations, which consist of the author's drawings and of colored plates from his paintings, have a fresh, buoyant quality that is most attractive." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 6 '40 80w

"His pictures neither illustrate nor comment on his prose, but they show the peaceful, contemplative side of Stephen Bone, with which frequenters of contemporary art shows are familiar. His observations in prose are not peaceful: they are stimulating. They call up exciting mind-pictures and recall exciting experiences of that British countryside which the average Briton is inclined to think a little smug." Eric Newton
+ Manchester Guardian sup xii D 1 '39 180w

BONE, STEPHEN—Continued

"Charming and surprisingly inclusive book. . . It is a delightful book of an Albion whose scene is immemorial, even if it is largely the product of man's own work and needs."

+ N Y Times p8 F 18 '40 550w

"Mr. Bone is much more informative, serious and inquiring than most of those who travel in search of the picturesque, and the book actually begins with a sketch of the geology and pre-history of Britain. His information is agreeably mixed with personal observation and anecdotes, and certainly the book is none the worse for it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 350w

BONIFACE, SAINT, abp of MAINZ. Letters; tr. with an introd. by Ephraim Emerton. 204p $3 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 40-33656

"These letters of one of the early and intrepid missionaries from England to the European continent reveal the expansion of Christian civilization in the region east of the Rhine in the eighth century. Winifred, or Boniface as he is better known, is remembered primarily as the 'Apostle to the Germans.' The reason for this title lies in his statesman-like work in aiding the conversion of the North German tribes from paganism to Christianity. This activity, as well as valuable insights into the life of the Middle Ages, is disclosed in the course of the translated letters." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"The appearance of an English translation of the Letters of Saint Boniface will be welcomed by every student of church history. Its value as a sourcebook for a highly interesting period of history is too well known to demand further comment." Ansgar Nelson

+ Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 330w

"This volume will prove valuable to the student of church history and also to those who desire to establish the relationship between our own culture and that of the Middle Ages." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 18:78 Ja '41 90w

BONIFACE, MARJORIE. Murder as an ornament. 271p $2 Doubleday

40-8544

Detective story.

"Practically not a dull moment in this first novel." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Je 2 '40 210w

"Marjorie Boniface's 'Murder as an Ornament' is a success. The well-drawn characters and subsequent events well fulfill the promise of the first two chapters." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 80w

"Sheriff Odom has no experience in crime of this type, but he proves to be a better detective than any one, including himself, has ever imagined him to be. This is the author's first novel, and it compares favorably with the work of many a more seasoned writer." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 26 '40 200w

"The reader should have no difficulty in putting the finger on the murderer of beautiful Charmian Hornaday. Love mixes agreeably with the thornier side of life in this first novel by an author who has written short stories and articles."

New Yorker 16:96 My 25 '40 50w

"Jam full of action, romance, and variety of crimes. Gets pretty melodramatic at moments, and terminal 'confession' drags a bit. Acceptable."

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 1 '40 40w

BONN, JOHN LOUIS. So falls the elm tree. 287p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Ann Valencia, Mother. Hartford, Connecticut. St Francis hospital 40-12901

"A biography of Mother Ann Valencia, who founded and directed St. Francis Hospital in Hartford, Conn., written somewhat in the form of fiction." Christian Century

---

Christian Century 57:825 Je 26 '40 20w

"A really remarkable life, pointed with neat humor, as gripping as any fictional romance." M. L. E.

+ Churchman 154:35 O 15 '40 140w

"A good book—a very good book because it is a loving tribute to a person who was really great." Sister Mary of the Compassion

+ Commonweal 32:272 Jl 19 '40 360w

"The story is well told with dramatic sense and a nice interplay of comedy and tragedy. The author calls it a novel-biography. A thorough knowledge of his facts and what seems an uncanny insight into the thoughts and emotions of his characters justify his claim." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:22 S 21 '40 250w

BONNELL, JAMES FRANCIS. Death over Sunday. 248p $2 Scribner

40-7110

Detective story.

"A tiresome affair, written with all the present-day speed, snap, and international entanglements possible." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 30w

"It is a briskly interesting story, told with colloquial ease." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 3 '40 160w

"Damatos is no Dimitrios. Story almost suspenseless. Motivations flimsy. But author shows mystery writing potentialities. Dull."

— Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 16 '40 30w

BONNER, CHARLES. Legacy. 372p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 40-6585

Adam Stoddard was a firm believer in family solidarity. When his wife died suddenly Adam decided to be both father and mother to his five sons—with the able assistance of Emily, the French governess. The period covered is from 1905 until just after the World war, and the story charts the successes and failures of Adam Stoddard's system.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"The novel moves swiftly, with tenderness, humor and beauty clothing incident and dialogue. Adam Stoddard and what he stands for will linger long in the reader's mind." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Je 23 '40 850w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 480w

New Repub 103:94 Jl 15 '40 50w

"'Legacy' is simply told, in a good, straightforward, chronicle style. There is plenty of action, and no little dramatic suspense. . . Nevertheless . . . the burden of the novel rests finally upon the characterization of Adam himself. . . Adam is sure to have his warm partisans among Mr. Bonner's readers. To the present reviewer he is vivid enough, but never altogether real. He seems virile and energetic at some points, fussy and timorous at others." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p7 Je 23 '40 650w

"Mr. Bonner's people are complicated, credible, and absorbing, and he writes in a clear and intelligent style."

+ New Yorker 16:70 Je 29 '40 50w

"'Legacy' is not a sound and serious novel. It is a smooth, attractive tale already earmarked for the screen." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 29 '40 250w

"The novel is pleasantly, if not brilliantly, written. Its interest lies mainly in the picture it presents of the attitudes and prejudices, as embodied in Adam Stoddard, of a world that will never live again."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 380w

BONNEY, JOSEPH L. Death by dynamite; a Simon Rolfe mystery. 269p $2 Carrick

40-32552

Detective story.

"An active and frequently exciting opus, over nobody's head for all that talk about pure reason." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 O 20 '40 130w

"'Death by Dynamite' is a good story, far better than average, but our advice to the reader is to forget all about 'psychological logic.'" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 230w

"Rolfe's anti-Holmesian and pro-Montaigne campaign less pronounced than in earlier opus, plot trifle screwy but worked out with interest and finesse. Diverting."

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 240w

BONNEY, JOSEPH L. Murder without clues. 303p $2 Carrick

40-5392

Mystery story.

"We were all agog until the final revelation, even if Mr. Bonney's manner is a little stiff and eighteenth-century in spots." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p16 Mr 10 '40 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 90w

"Both author and publisher are new to the crime-and-puzzlement field; they have made a good beginning! . . The novel makes a special appeal to interest, too, in its deliberate, and often amusing, presentation of Simon Rolfe as a successor-with-a-difference to Sherlock Holmes. And the narrator's name is Watson!" Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 210w

"Without extinguishing immortal Sherlock story manages to be amusing, thrilling, and barring occasional slip, expertly built. Narrator Watson satisfactorily dumb. Good hunting."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 16 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 210w

BOODIN, JOHN ELOF. The social mind; foundations of social philosophy. 593p $3.50 Macmillan

301.15 Sociology. Social psychology 39-31312

"Professor Boodin's collection of articles deals with such topics as the biological basis of society, the group as the basic sociological principle, the existence of social minds, the law of social participation, social systems, education and society, the idea of progress, and social immortality. . . Dr. Boodin's particular contribution here is his emphasis on creative synthesis, an approach now known as 'gestaltism,' which he emphasized already in 1913 but which has become popular only during the last decade." (Social Educ) Indexes.

Reviewed by J. O. Hertzler

Am J Soc 46:257 S '40 290w

Reviewed by N. L. Sims

Am Soc R 5:441 Je '40 500w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen

Ann Am Acad 209:246 My '40 490w

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 6 '40 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus

Churchman 154:16 My 15 '40 140w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider

J Philos 37:187 Mr 28 '40 1150w

"Here is a calm, analytical survey of the dilemma into which this unthinking world has run. . . I am thankful that Professor Boodin has turned his attention to America, because I am convinced that America stands as the last (and most hopeful) outpost whose gates may be shored against disintegration." L. B. Bloch

+ Living Age 358:188 Ap '40 1100w

"When one closes Boodin's book it is with a sense of the vast distances that separate it from the abundance of transient and superficial writing upon social subjects. When he speaks of contemporary scientific thought or of its historical background, it is with both a breadth and depth of understanding which few writers upon social subjects possess. Here there is not merely a familiarity with facts and methods, but a facility in bringing details together in comprehensive syntheses that disclose their deeper significance—a kind of urbanity in the scientific world." Clifford Barrett

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 28 '40 1250w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Social Educ 4:144 F '40 150w

BOOKER, EDNA LEE (MRS JOHN STAUFFER POTTER). News is my job; a correspondent in war-torn China. 375p il map $3 Macmillan 915.1 China—Description and travel. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

(W) 40-27203

An account of the experiences of an American newspaper woman in China, where she lived from 1922 to the present. She lived, worked, and married in Shanghai during those years, but her work for the International News service took her some 50,000 miles thru the interior of China. Her personal friendship with Mme Chiang Kai-shek is described in her record, as well as her interviews with such famous men as Sun Yat-sen, Wu Pei-fu, and Chang Tso-lin. Index.

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

Bookmark p10 My '40

Reviewed by Elsie McCormick

Books p8 Mr 10 '40 480w

"The book's value derives chiefly from its author's amazing flair for news, for being on the spot when things happen. . . The defects of the book are principally superficiality, inevitable in the circumstances. . . In addition, her unappealing style only occasionally justifies its strongly journalistic character by heightening the speed of the narrative. Nevertheless, if the reader wants eye-witness reporting of individual events rather than a carefully digested historical appraisal, he will not be disappointed in this highly personal account of modern China. Many photographs, some taken by the author, increase the effectiveness of her descriptions." E. E. McLaughlin

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Mr 2 '40 220w

Cath World 151:242 My '40 280w

"A well informed and eminently readable account."

+ Christian Century 57:321 Mr 6 '40 40w

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 25 '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:763 Jl '40 40w

"The story of her experiences, entertainingly written, provides what is undoubtedly the most readable account of the last two decades of Chinese history to be found anywhere. . . Readers who are interested primarily in the war should be advised to look elsewhere. But those who want a broad perspective, or a reliable account of the little-known events of the early twenties, will find a mine of information and keen enjoyment in the memoirs of this brilliant woman journalist." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 150:456 Ap 6 '40 600w

"Miss Booker has written a selective autobiography of remarkable charm. From the beginning of her career as a foreign corre-

BOOKER, EDNA LEE—Continued
spondent . . . we are interested in the personality of the author rather than in the events which she relates. And, in a good many cases, Miss Booker's temperament helps to bring the civil wars, the generals, the things she saw and the people she talked to, peculiarly close to the reader. . . The pleasant narration, the author's ability of establishing an almost physical contact between the reader and her strange oriental world, make this book stand out as a charming and highly personal contribution toward the understanding of the Far East." E. O. Hauser
+ N Y Times p9 F 25 '40 1050w

"Not very well written, but loads of information."
+ — New Yorker 16:83 F 17 '40 40w

"The title of Miss Booker's volume is accurate, but not wholly fair. For China, and not journalism, is its real subject; and China even more than the author's life there. All three, in any case, are mingled together in a personal narrative that is lively, entertaining, and informative." T. A. Bisson
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 17 '40 330w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 31 '40 850w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

BOOTH, HAROLD H. Book of modern airplanes; foreword by Roscoe Turner [il. by the author]. [30p] $1 Garden City pub. co.
629.13 Airplanes (W) 40-35067

Twenty-three types of planes used in the United States, France, Great Britain, and Germany, are pictured in color, with short descriptive text for each of them.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 3 '40 70w

"Excellent for young and old alike who are interested in aviation."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:169 D '40

BOOTH, HAROLD SIMMONS, and DAMERELL, VIVIAN RICHARD. Quantitative analysis. 246p il $2.25 McGraw 545 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative 40-9112

"Designed for the introductory college course in elementary quantitative analysis, this combination textbook and laboratory manual includes detailed directions for calibration of weights and volumetric apparatus, and for twenty gravimetric and volumetric analyses, together with extensive theoretical discussion of many points in connection with the laboratory work. The theory, which is unusually complete, has been largely incorporated with the laboratory directions, enabling the student to integrate theory and practice as the work progresses." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This book is designed for the usual college course in elementary quantitative chemical analysis. It appears to fulfill this purpose admirably. . . The book is perhaps a little over-extended on the subject of balances, weights and weighing (24 pages) and, on the other hand, the number of determinations does not allow the student or instructor a very wide choice." H. W. Foote
+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:2252 Ag '40 260w

Chem & Met Eng 47:446 Je '40 90w

BOOTHE, CLARE (MRS HENRY ROBINSON LUCE). Europe in the spring. 324p $2.50 Knopf
940.53 European war, 1939- (W) 40-27683

The author spent from February to June, 1940, in Italy, France, Portugal, the Low Countries, and England, while she attempted to learn just what was happening in Europe. She talked with people in all walks of life, from waiters and shopkeepers to diplomats, and then came home to write about it. In all that has happened abroad she sees a lesson for America and recommends an American crusade to establish world democracy.

"This is a brilliant piece of reporting. Free from the harassments of censorship and of writing against time which cramp the style of the best foreign correspondents, Miss Boothe conveys a vivid and realistic sense of the curiously mixed atmosphere of apathy, false confidence, and despairing criticism which characterized political and social circles in London, Paris, Amsterdam, and Brussels on the eve of catastrophe."
+ Atlantic D '40 280w

Booklist 37:66 O 15 '40

Bookmark 2:7 Ja '41

"It isn't often, unfortunately, that the female report on anything so maleficently male as war can give much information to either of, let alone both of, the sexes. But it is precisely because Clare Boothe's eyes, ears and pen are all feminine (and somewhat because she is, when she travels abroad, Mme. Henry Luce with a passport probably specially stamped 'Open Sesame') that her 'Europe in the Spring' is a rare, a uniquely informative book." Janet Flanner
+ Books p3 S 29 '40 1200w

"You can't just dismiss Clare Boothe's 'Europe in the Spring' by saying that it is hysterical, or that it is a little too bright. It is both and it is more. It hurts. It must have hurt Miss Boothe to write parts of it, and you feel the savage hurt as you read. Sometimes it seems wantonly, maliciously intended to hurt certain named and quoted persons. And it is a warcry. Because Miss Boothe, who in the spring saw Europe's beauty crumble like a burning leaf before her eyes, sees America in the autumn as desperately like Europe in the spring . . . 'Europe in the Spring' is a powerful and a frightening book." Louis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 S 19 '40 950w

"A book that is vivid and highly readable, a bit slapdash and disconnected, and demonstrably inaccurate here and there as to factual statements. . . It would be a mistake to regard Miss Boothe as an authority on modern European history and politics; but she has produced a sparkling reporter's story of what she saw in Europe in its crisis, rich in personal touches and suffused with the atmosphere of the higher political and social circles in the capitals which she visited."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 19 '40 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '40

"Knowing what we all know now, and relating what she saw, it was perhaps inevitable that Miss Boothe should disturb with the still small voice of reality the optimistic Allied dream world of before the collapse. What counts in this book is the vivid reporting, the dramatist's sense for style and dialogue—the reserved emotion."
+ Commonweal 32:495 O 4 '40 50w

Current Hist & Forum 52:6 O 22 '40 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 151:247 S 21 '40 700w

Reviewed by Mary MacCarthy
New Repub 103:633 N 4 '40 370w

"In this sane, sad, disturbing recital the reader will find no scabrous accusations, no catchpenny sensationalism. . . There are glimpses of nobility in this book, courage and devotion and unselfishness beyond all praise. But the reader will not find a fair and rounded evaluation of French and British character here, and should not seek it. The point of the book is something quite different." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p5 S 22 '40 1150w

"Despite a lot of incidental chitchat, this is a compelling, though familiar, history."
+ New Yorker 16:82 S 21 '40 50w

"This is not only a brilliant book; it is a very important book. It has all the impressionistic charm of a Colette, or a Katherine Mansfield, but also, at times, the deep significance of a Siegfried, or a Madariaga. It is witty, hard, and often bitter, cynical; it is equally ardent, generous, and often moving, stirring. It awakens regrets, despair, but also enthusiasm and hopes. In one word, it is true." André Maurois
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 S 14 '40 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 22 '40 1100w

Time 36:82 O 7 '40 950w

BOOTHE, CLARE (MRS HENRY ROBINSON LUCE). Margin for error; a satirical melodrama. 198p $2 Random house

812 (W) 40-7389

The machinations of a brutal Nazi consul in an unnamed American city form the motive of the play. During a broadcast from Germany the consul is killed, and it devolves upon a Jewish policeman to solve the mystery of his murder.

Booklist 36:379 Je 1 '40

"The trouble with the play isn't a lack of a democratic philosophy, it is a failure soon enough to warn us that it is going to be a detective game, and hence we have not been watching for the physical clews on which the solution depends, and feel a bit cheated." W. P. Eaton
Books p21 Ap 28 '40 160w

"Miss Boothe's 'satiric melodrama' is pretty cheap melodrama and a pretty cheap farce but after the abominable German consul gets his punishment by the end of Act I., Officer Finkelstein is left in charge of Act II. and the law of compensation is seen to be in good order." E. V. R. Wyatt
— + Cath World 150:339 D '39 390w (Dramatic criticism)

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"Though Clare Boothe can write about the women of café society and their male counterparts with a pen of vitriol, she seems at sea when she attempts more masculine themes. . . The first act has some interesting moments, largely because of the Jewish policeman, the one character Miss Boothe makes real, but the last act, devoted to a continuous and repetitious reenactment of the crime is dull indeed." Grenville Vernon
— + Commonweal 31:118 N 24 '39 240w (Dramatic criticism)

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts 24:19 Ja '40 280w

BORCHARD, EDWIN MONTEFIORE, and LAGE, WILLIAM POTTER. Neutrality for the United States; with new material covering 1937-1940. 2d ed 461p $3.50 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Neutrality. U.S.—Foreign relations. Neutrality 40-27508

"A 75-page chapter on the developments in international relations and on America's foreign policy in the 1937-1940 period has been added to a 1937 book [Book Review Digest, 1937]." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by H. S. Foster, Jr.
Am Pol Sci R 34:1245 D '40 300w

Booklist 36:432 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps
Boston Transcript p1 Je 22 '40 480w

"This book is not mere pacific emotionalism. It is logically written, its approach is scholarly, the evidence amply documented." J. B. Parrish
+ Churchman 154:20 Ag '40 300w

Nation 151:178 Ag 31 '40 90w

BORSOOK, HENRY. Vitamins; what they are and how they can benefit you. 193p $2 Viking

612.39 Vitamins (W) 40-27833

The professor of biochemistry at the California Institute of Technology has writen an account of the nature of the various vitamins and the foods from which they can be obtained. The book covers the entire field of nutrition, but places the emphasis on the accessory food factors. Child nutrition is also considered.

Booklist 37:169 Ja 1 '41

"I should like to suggest this book as required reading for directors of camps, both army and summer." H. H. Darby
+ Nation 151:613 D 14 '40 260w

BOSSARD, JAMES HERBERT SIWARD. Marriage and the child. 178p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

392.3 Marriage. Parent and child 40-4028

This volume is in two parts: part one discusses the background of the child welfare movement; part two is a report, largely statistical of a study of certain selected problems of marriage such as: the age factor; residential propinquity; marriage rates and the depression. Index.

Reviewed by Kingsley Davis
Ann Am Acad 209:247 My '40 600w

J Home Econ 32:397 Je '40 100w

Social Forces 18:607 My '40 180w

"One feels as he reads this solid work so free of soft spots, that social science is in truth on the march, that perhaps our increasing child-mindedness will give us saving vision, and that perhaps after all of yesterday's and today's deals, the 'i' has not completely dropped out of ideals for childhood and family life. Seldom does a book appear that contributes so much so well in so little space." L. M. Brooks
+ Survey 76:180 My '40 280w

BOSSENBROOK, WILLIAM JOHN. Development of contemporary civilization; with contributions by Richard V. Burks [and others]. (History of western civilization, pt 2) 805p il maps $3.75 Heath

901 Civilization—History 40-33618

This second part of the Foundations of Western Civilization carries the chronicle to the Sino-Japanese conflict and the Nazi conquest of Poland. Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 52:208 S 14 '40 40w

Social Studies 31:378 D '40 10w

BOSSENBROOK, WILLIAM JOHN, and JOHANNESEN, ROLF. Foundations of western civilization; with contributions by Richard V. Burks [and others]. (Hist. of western civilization, pt 1) 695p il maps $3.75 Heath [12s 6d Harrap]

901 Civilization—History 40-2107

The authors, with their five collaborators, members of the faculty of Wayne University, Detroit, have made use of this book in their classes for two years. It follows the progress of western civilization from the stone age to the reign of Louis XIV, with emphasis thruout on cultural and artistic development. There are many illustrations. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is clearly and interestingly written, but is set up in such a fashion that the close type makes reading something of a strain. . . It is significant that in a book of this sort the authors have stressed and have given so much space to the Middle Ages. They are to be congratulated for what some would consider their boldness, others their sanity, in doing so." G. C. Boyce
+ Ann Am Acad 207:241 Ja '40 110w

Cath World 151:126 Ap '40 180w

BOSSENBROOK, W. J. and JOHANNESEN, R.—Continued

"This book is one of the best of its kind. In the first place, it is a superb job of bookmaking. The end-paper maps, the typography, the illustrations, and the index are all extremely useful and well done. The works in the bibliography are well selected with the reader of English in mind. . . One chapter must be excluded from the laudatory remarks—chapter one, which deals with the pre-literary culture of Europe." T. A. Brady

+ — Social Educ 4:374 My '40 450w

"Wayne University, Detroit, is justly regarded as one of the best of the teaching institutions of Michigan and this book, which grew out of a coöperative teaching venture there, amply supports its reputation. . . A well written and learned text is supplemented by twenty-seven groups of illustrations of the civilizations described therein." Caroline Robbins

+ Social Studies 31:94 F '40 250w

BOTKIN, GLEB. Fire bird; an interpretation of Russia. 278p maps $2.50 Revell

947 Russia—History. National characteristics, Russian 40-35695

History and interpretation of Russia from the sixth century to 1940. The author "attributes much of the unhappiness and maladjustment of Russia as a nation and of Russians as individuals to this naïve belief that one can find happiness, instead of achieving it, to this pursuit of something splendid but vague and perhaps mythical, accompanied by a neglect, perhaps a contempt for the little practical steps of everyday life which make for individual and collective improvement." (Christian Science Monitor) No index.

"Botkin eliminates all features which would cast odium on the tsarist regime, has no critical word to say of the Russian Church, and can see nothing in the revolutionary movement of 1905 except 'a wave of savagery.' . . The partition of Poland was 'not without its sordid side,' but it was chiefly the fault of the Poles. After all this, one does not have unlimited confidence in Mr. Botkin as a historian."

Christian Century 58:26 Ja 1 '41 490w

"Mr. Botkin has not filled this need for a first-rate interpretative history of Russia, but his book is stimulating and suggestive enough to point to this need. . . It is scarcely accurate, for instance, to say that Nicholas II 'repeatedly tried to pursue a course of considerable liberality.' Nicholas was actually a weak reactionary. . . In general, Mr. Botkin's treatment of Russian history in less controversial eras is both vivid and realistic. . . It is history told in entertaining story form and it may serve the useful purpose of stimulating wider interest in the colorful Eurasian pageant of Russia's national development." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '40 550w

BOTLEY, CICELY MARY. The air and its mysteries; Am. ed. arranged by Hanor A. Webb; with a foreword by Richard Gregory. 302p il $3 Appleton-Century [8s 6d Bell, G]

551.5 Meteorology. Air. Weather (W) 40-27478

The author, who is a Fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society, writes about meteorology, air physiology, light, sound, aeronautics, bird flight, the stratosphere, etc. Short bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:377 Je 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

"The author has the gift of a pleasant, lucid style, coupled with no small literary grace, evidently resulting from wide and well-chosen reading outside, as well as inside, the realms of science." E. L. Hawke

+ Nature 142:375 Ag 27 '38 750w

"This is a thoroughly amusing book. It is pleasantly free from the defects of many recent books on scientific subjects which have been designed to give the reader the feeling of full information without the trouble of ploughing through any dreary elementary work; the scientific equivalents of Inside Europe."

+ New Statesman & Nation 16:742 N 5 '38 490w

N Y New Tech Bks 23:58 O '38

"The chapters on climate and weather are among the most interesting in this survey of the air's mysteries. . . [She] makes no compromises in the direction of popularization, but her clearly written book is easy to follow and rich in familiar exemplification over its wide field."

+ N Y Times p16 My 12 '40 360w

"The author of this book has selected her material carefully, has arranged it skillfully, and has presented it in simple, clear, and unobtrusive style. The result is one of the most complete, interesting, authoritative, and well-written popular books regarding the atmosphere and its phenomena which we have seen."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:15 Ag 17 '40 180w

"Miss Botley, an English scientist and a contributor to various scientific journals, has performed a signal service in presenting in most readable fashion in her first book the facts and explanations concerning the mysteries of the air." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 Ap '40 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p619 S 24 '38 90w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). The heart of a child; with drawings by Sascha Kronbourg. 167p $1.50 Putnam

(W) 40-33212

Ten-year-old Karl was the oldest of the ten children of a Tyrol mountain innkeeper. It was the last year of the World war and meat was so scarce that when his father fell ill the doctor ordered Karl's beloved St Bernard dog killed for meat to nourish the father. The story describes the steps Karl took to save his dog, and how it all came right on Christmas eve.

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"It is a good Christmas story, robust, real and religious, and its spirit is true old Austrian. The religion is that of a peasant, which is always realistic. Its humor is that of a people who are healthy, hard and kind." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 24 '40 500w

"Any new book by Phyllis Bottome merits attention, but her latest is such an exquisite gem, so lovingly fashioned and carefully burnished, that it can be unequivocally recommended as a source of delight." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '40 450w

"A slight but lovely story full of sincerity." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 65:982 N 15 '40 130w

"Charming, it is prevented by its candid handling of peasant character from being too charming." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p6 D 13 '40 120w

"It makes a pretty fable, and Miss Bottome's technical dexterity gives a charm and liveliness to many of the scenes. The economy and easy directness which I admired in Masks and Faces are present here, too. In fact, I doubt if Heart of a Child could have been much better written. My criticism of it is not directed to its execution (at least in the narrow sense) but to its conception. I am appalled that Miss Bottome could accept so uncritically a piece of hokum which is as blatantly dated as The Scarlet Pimpernel or Mary Rose." Desmond Hawkins

— + New Statesman & Nation 20:628 D 14 '40 950w

BOTTOME (bŏt-tōm')

"It takes a rather high degree of artistry—such artistry, for example, as Miss Bottome possesses—to achieve the simple and guileless and yet avoid the saccharine. . . Thanks, however, to Miss Bottome's humor, and to her precise, delicate use of form and phrase, 'The Heart of a Child,' though frankly sentimental, has a fresh, tender radiance and charm." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 D 22 '40 650w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 165:656 D 13 '40 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p601 N 30 '40 270w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Masks and faces; a book of stories. 277p $2.50 Little

40-9859

Contents: The cup of alteration; Cæsar's wife's ear; The point of vantage; A splendid fellow; Security; The captive; The ruling passion; Pink medicine; A breath of ozone; A choice of evils; Fixtures; Next door; Dark blue; The defence; A mountain lover; A pair; A helping hand; Facing the music; The strangle-hold; The outsider.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"Despite their diversity, and whatever their mood, these stories are basically homogeneous in theme and pattern. Fortuitous circumstances play a subordinate role in them; the action is consistently determined by human character." J. S. Mabon

+ Books p8 Je 30 '40 650w

Reviewed by Olga Owens

Boston Transcript p1 Je 22 '40 600w

Churchman 154:35 O 1 '40 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"This is a collection of short stories, admirably written and with the further merit of having an unforced unity of theme." Desmond Hawkins

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:212 Ag 31 '40 400w

"Those who know Phyllis Bottome's 'Private Worlds' will not be surprised to find that the stories in 'Masks and Faces' derive unusual interest from her special knowledge of psychology and psychiatry. . . As stories per se as well as from a solely artistic viewpoint those in which the psychology is stressed take top place. Among these there are ten (an extraordinarily large proportion in a book of twenty) that come uncommonly close to perfection." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Je 16 '40 650w

"Twenty short stories, some very sharp and deeply felt, some theatrical and superficial."

+ — New Yorker 16:115 Je 15 '40 60w

"Two or three of the tales are trivial, but through most runs a sharp perception of the eccentricities and superstitions of modern life and the deeper permanencies of human nature." R. A. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Jl 6 '40 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p361 Jl 27 '40 240w

BOUCHER, ANTHONY, pseud. See White, W. A. P.

BOUCHER, PAUL EDWARD. Fundamentals of photography; with laboratory experiments. 356p il $3.50; text ed $3 Van Nostrand

770 Photography (W) 40-12157

"Based on lectures and laboratory notes for a one-semester course in photography for college students. Includes chapters on the history of the hand camera, developers and fixing solutions, lenses and shutters, photographic emulsions, intensification and reduction, toning and dye staining prints, color photography, useful tables, a formulary, and a glossary. The author is professor of physics at the Colorado College." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by G. S. Forbes

Am Chem Soc J 62:2887 O '40 130w

"The weakness of the book lies in the inadequacy and in some parts erroneous nature of much of the discussion of the chemical reactions in photography. . . On the whole, however, the book is well done, and can be recommended for students and serious amateurs, particularly if read in conjunction with the publications listed in the extensive lists of references." Walter Clark

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:958 N 10 '40 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:38 Jl '40

"There is in this book a disposition to overqualify, resulting in weak and diluted sentences. . . In spite of exasperating mistakes . . . there are good things in this book. Color photography, especially the Kodachrome process, is clearly explained. The experiments are fully outlined, so that any teacher with the modest equipment specified can carry them through. The book demands a thorough and critical revision." W. W. Sleator

— + R of Scientific Instruments 2:332 O '40 1200w

BOVERI, MARGRET. Minaret and pipe-line; yesterday and to-day in the Near East; tr. from the German by Louisa Marie Sieveking. 422p maps $5 (21s) Oxford

915 East (Near East) 40-7302

"A one-volume survey of the Near East. It covers Turkey, Iran, Arabia, Iraq, Syria, the Hatay, Palestine, Transjordan, the Persian Gulf and the Caucasus. On each of them Dr. Boveri brings to bear imagination as well as shrewd judgment, completing her analysis of the strategical, economic and political factors with keen descriptions of the peoples and their ways of life. And besides taking the countries one by one, she brings out the factors they share." New Statesman & Nation

---

"Among the many books, usually of some value, which the press continues to pour forth on subjects connected with the Near East the present work deserves special consideration for its good proportions, its skillful relating of past and present, its reasonable generalizations, and its occasional vivid description, based on sympathetic personal observation. . . Although the author is a German, no tendency is apparent toward propaganda." A. H. Lybyer

+ Am Hist R 46:368 Ja '41 450w

"In general, the author's story is better in its observations than in its historical background, which leans for the most part on well-known secondary sources. That which she has seen, however, she describes in a most interesting fashion." W. W. White

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:611 Je '40 300w

"Notwithstanding a number of excellent points, the survey is neither a book for specialists nor for popular reading. For the most part, specialists will pass it by, preferring to go to the original sources or to secondary sources better organized and with less admixture of naïveté and inaccuracies. The 'Layman's Glossary,' in particular, abounds in misinformation. As a popular book, readers will not notice the large gaps in the author's knowledge, but will probably find the background material heavy going, although they may find compensation in the author's accounts of her brief travels in the Near and Middle East." P. W. Ireland

Ann Am Acad 211:205 S '40 500w

Foreign Affairs 18:761 Jl '40 30w

New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 60w

"An outstanding achievement." Jonathan Griffin

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:858 D 9 '39 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p546 S 23 '39 1300w

BOW, FRANK T. Independent labor organizations and the National labor relations act. 120p $2 Prentice-Hall

331.88 Trade unions. U.S. National labor relations board. Industrial relations 40-9842

"This book is addressed to those employees who, for one reason or another satisfactory to themselves, do not wish to be members of any national labor organization, but who do desire to organize their own independent organization for the purpose of bargaining collectively with their employers and to have the protection of the National Labor Relations Act in so doing. That is a right to which they are unquestionably entitled and their problem is the simple one of how they can best avail themselves of that right." (Pref) Indexes

Am Econ R 30:634 S '40 90w
Booklist 36:424 Jl 15 '40
Eng N 125:64 Ag 29 '40 180w

BOWEN, FRANK CHARLES. Conquest of the seas; the history and adventure of sea and ships. 423p pl map $3.50 McBride

387 Naval history. Ships. Great Britain—History, Naval. Merchant marine—Great Britain 40-32453

"The aim of this book is to trace the history of the Sea and of ships through the ages, particularly the part played by the Anglo-Saxons in the conquest of the seas. . . Every effort has been made to illustrate the story in all its aspects, and this has been rendered possible only through the kindness and enthusiasm of Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson, who has put the whole of his famous collection of maritime prints at the disposal of the publishers. . . This book is, in effect, a companion volume to America Sails the Seas [Book Review Digest, 1939] which traced the maritime history of America from the time of Columbus' first voyage to the early days of the steamship. For that reason, no mention of the American scene occurs in these pages." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"The author is an encyclopaedia of British maritime history, packing his book with a thousand and one tales of valorous exploits. Unfortunately his literary skill is not equal to his knowledge, so that the effort reads like a rehashed serial from a boy's magazine. By far the greater attraction is the wealth and range of illustrations from the incomparable Macpherson collection of marine prints—these are well worth the price of the whole book." P. J. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '40 110w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '40 2150w

BOWEN, HOWARD ROTHMANN. English grants-in-aid; a study in the finance of local government. 156p pa $1 Univ. of Iowa

352.1 Municipal finance. Local government—Great Britain 39-28786

"The author's particular interest is to investigate the effects of English grants in distributing local government costs among the several income groups, the principles and results involved in apportionment of the grants among the several local authorities, and the efficacy of English grants in stimulating local activity. The general conclusions, carefully analyzed and qualified, are that grants, by shifting some part of local government cost from ratepayers to taxpayers, effect to a certain extent a more equitable distribution of this cost, that the English system effects no appreciable redistribution of available resources among the several local areas, and that the grants have in considerable measure succeeded in encouraging and improving local activity." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by E. E. Oakes
Am Econ R 30:425 Je '40 420w

"Students of political science will extend a particularly hospitable welcome to this work of a student of economics. The author, though he displays an acute apprehension of, and a humane sympathy for, the broader political and social implications of his subject, not unnaturally places his primary emphasis on economics. . . Unfortunately, the tables and charts involve no small strain on the eyes; and, in general, format, printing, revision, proof-reading, and the like leave a good deal to be desired. There is no index. These things involve little fault on the part of the author. It is merely regrettable that considerations of form detract so much from so meritorious a study." R. K. Gooch
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:601 Je '40 340w

BOWEN (bō'ĕn)

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Man on horseback. 295p $2 Little 40-8824

Western story.

Booklist 36:413 Jl 1 '40

"Though mild, this is good fun." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 My 26 '40 100w

Reviewed by G. W. Harris
N Y Times p23 My 12 '40 160w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). The spirit of the range. 303p $2 Little [7s 6d Collins] (W) 40-12268

Western story.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p26 O 27 '40 80w

"Altogether as pretty a romance as any in the amazingly long list of Flying U stories, contrived with the late B. M. Bower's accustomed skill and ingenuity and written in her smooth and pleasant style. In fact, she never wrote better." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p25 N 3 '40 240w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Sweet grass. 296p $2 Little (W) 40-2115

Western story.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 Ja 21 '40 100w

"A spirited, devious and often astonishing tale. Some of its details skirt the impossible and the preposterous, but it is all carried off in B. M. Bower's smooth, suave style and with that veteran's sure craft, holding the reader's interest to the very end." G. W. H.
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 7 '40 170w
Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

BOWERS, CHESTER. Advanced tennis. 124p il $1.75 Macmillan

796.34 Tennis (W) 40-7434

Handbook on tennis technique, giving pointers on strategy, game planning, sequence of plays, etc. Partial contents: Tennis grips; The service; Volley strokes; Smashes; Essentials of a fine tennis player; Court strategy; Sequence plays; How to practice; How to teach; The alley game; Physical condition; Court surfaces; Interesting facts about tennis. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"Although a slender book and obviously not attempting to be as comprehensive or exhaustive as some others in the growing literature of tennis, it has positive, not to say unique, merits. It is to be heartily recommended to all players, whether advanced or not, who are ready to make an intelligent approach to one of the best of all sports."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 950w

BOWERS, CLAUDE GERNADE. The Spanish adventures of Washington Irving. 306p il $3 Houghton

B or 92 Irving, Washington. Spain—Court and courtiers. Spain—Description and travel
(W) 40-5769

While serving as American ambassador to Spain, the author "set out to follow the Spanish meanderings of Washington Irving." The resulting book is a picture of Spain a hundred years ago, as seen thru the eyes of a former ambassador. Index.

Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

"Mr. Bowers, with amazing detachment, has kept his study within the frame of the century gone by and the mild mentality of the writer whose peregrinations he is following. . . Readers will enjoy his excellent evocation of the Spain of one hundred years ago and of Washington Irving, beloved by Americans and Spaniards alike." Elliott Paul
+ Books p3 Mr 10 '40 1050w

"Mr. Bowers writes pleasantly (though sometimes carelessly), and the result is a volume of mild interest on familiar materials. . . Real criticism is absent, and the research, though occasionally ingenious, is haphazard and narrow; and its fruits are vitiated by vagueness of ascription. For the scholar the book has little value; for the browser among the well-known legends of our men of letters it recreates a romance, with, perhaps, a sweetness too long drawn out." Stanley Williams
+ — Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 500w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 13 '40 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"The Spanish Adventures of Washington Irving are pure entertainment against an authentic background. In contrast to his method in other works, Mr. Bowers makes no use of this volume to grind his political ax, nor does he find any opportunity for heroic Jeffersonians to oust villainous Hamiltonians from office. Above all it is a relief to have one book come out of modern Spain not written in blood with iron." J. J. Slocum
+ Forum 103:328 Je '40 320w

"Mr. Bowers displays in this, as in his other historical books, a genuine talent for evoking the past at once realistically and romantically. Only one who had immersed himself to the same degree as Irving in the history, legendary lore, and national culture of Spain, could have extracted such an enchanting account of Irving's rambles through Old Spain, or transcribed with such vivid immediacy the emotions experienced by Irving during his sojourn in the ancient palace of the Alhambra." A. C. Hansen
+ Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by L. B. Beach
Nation 151:309 O 5 '40 360w

New Repub 102:618 My 6 '40 30w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra
N Y Times p5 Mr 17 '40 1350w

New Yorker 16:91 Ap 6 '40 60w

Pratt p23 autumn '40

"In recreating his predecessor, Mr. Bowers has recaptured the flavor of the past and restored a Spain that has gone. He draws no moral; he merely tells his tale." R. E. Spiller
+ Sat R of Lit 21:6 Mr 23 '40 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 220w

Time 35:85 Mr 11 '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:67 Ap '40

BOWERS, DOROTHY. Deed without a name. 286p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]
(W) 40-34000

Detective story.

"Now here's a polite, excellently contrived and most enigmatic story worth the attention of all fans so minded. . . Inspector Pardoe, a likable and gifted sleuth, does all that's humanly possible with the generously distributed clews, and the break comes in unexpected fashion. Try this for intensive detecting, smooth narrative and all-around merit." Will Cuppy
+ Books p24 N 17 '40 160w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p7 O 15 '40 220w

"Much-too-confused story. . . Early in his investigation Inspector Pardoe discovers a clue which he believes to be an important one, but he does not follow up that clue until it is almost too late. It seems to us that a detective story should have at least one good detective." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p29 N 17 '40 140w

"Excellent writing and convincing detection, also good picture of England in pre-blitzkreig blackout days. Moves methodically to logical finish. Good—of its type."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 30 '40 50w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake
Spec 165:320 S 27 '40 100w

"Miss Bower's story is exciting because it steers clear of familiar ways. There is no fuss over detectives' personal appearance or idiosyncrasies; and though she cannot overcome the prevailing passion for apt quotations she keeps them for chapter headings instead of dialogue. Her business is strictly the unravelling of a murder mystery."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p440 S 7 '40 330w

BOWERS, DOROTHY. Shadows before. 284p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder] 39-32827

Detective story.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

"Miss Bowers builds up a fascinating and fairly quiet case in her first two parts, then awful events follow in what we can only call rapid succession, making a heady brew of sense and extravagance. . . The jigsaw skill displayed is elegant." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 Ja 14 '40 200w

"It mainly is painstaking, pedestrian, and I have a feeling that, as she neared her conclusion, Miss Bowers shook the names of the characters in a hat and drew out one as culprit." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 80w

"Characterisation and writing are both excellent, though possibly the narrative might be more effective if Miss Bowers were a trifle less addicted to the oblique approach. It is often an impressive and successful method, but one Miss Bowers is inclined to overwork." E. R. Punshon
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 11 '39 130w

"Miss Bowers has a genuine conception of a plot, but has not yet developed the technique to handle it convincingly. She wishes to juggle with so many motives and characters at once that some slip to the ground without her noticing. Her intentions, however, are admirable; and Shadows Before is full of bright ideas." Ralph Partridge
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:96 Jl 15 '39 60w

"The story gets off to a slow start, but picks up speed as it goes along, until at the end events move just a little too swiftly for the narrator to keep up with them. The summing up of the steps by which the detective reaches his solution is so hurried that it makes difficult reading." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p19 Ja 14 '40 110w

"A superb mystery, expertly written by a young Englishwoman with a decided gift for mannerly hair-raising."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 13 '40 60w

"Solidly constructed puzzle, with final pieces falling into place at slightly confusing speed. Sleuth undistinguished but competent. Adroit."
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 13 '40 40w

Time 35:68 F 5 '40 30w

BOWERS, DOROTHY—Continued

"This story has two great virtues—that it is really competently written and that the thread of detection is straightforward and well planned, with absolutely no cheating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Jl 1 '39 100w

BOWIE, WALTER RUSSELL. Remembering Christ. 183p $1.50 Abingdon

232.9 Jesus Christ. Sermons (W) 40-5929

Twelve sermons by the recently appointed professor of practical theology at Union Theological Seminary, who was before that rector of Grace Church, in New York, for sixteen years.

Booklist 36:337 My 1 '40

"Dr. Bowie brings a combination of gifts into his homilies. He is a literary and structural craftsman of high order, a lucidly evangelical interpreter of deep and warm religion, a zealous and outspoken crusader against social wrongs, especially in the economics and the international orders, a prophet who knows his way around and who brings his readers into the presence of Christ and describes him with original insight and persuasiveness. Here, again, the psychological elements are present, though not obtrusive, because the form of the sermons is in many parts the finished product of an artist in the Gospel." A. C. Dieffenbach

+ Books p14 Jl 7 '40 130w

Christian Century 57:250 F 21 '40 30w

"These twelve [sermons] are all of them of the high quality which we expect from their author. They reveal a deep spiritual insight, a clear perception of moral issues, and never neglect the social implications of the Gospel. While they are often original, they betray no attempt to be merely startling or clever, but are always firmly grounded in the fundamental truths." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 154:17 Ap 1 '40 200w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt

Crozer Q 17:161 Ap '40 50w

J Religion 21:96 Ja '41 160w

BOWMAN, ARCHIBALD ALLAN. A sacramental universe; ed. by J. W. Scott. 428p $5 Princeton univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

110 Metaphysics 39-17996

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by W. A. Marzolf

Boston Transcript p9 Mr 16 '40 430w

"The title of this volume is misleading. The word 'sacramental' refers to the compresence of both physical and spiritual 'systems' throughout experience. The theological sacramentalist—Catholic or Quaker—would be disappointed if he were drawn to the book by the title. Professor Bowman's work has, however, great importance for Christianity because of his championship of real conscious selves. Concordats between Christianity and naturalistic monisms may have a certain pedagogical value in relating Christian truth to the contemporary mind, but they must be essentially unstable. Both Christianity and, I believe, the ineradicable intuitions of common experience can be at home only in a philosophy which takes seriously the subjective dimension of reality and which once more finds a place for the enduring self as the organizing center of experience." J. C. Bennett

+ Christian Century 57:452 Ap 3 '40 500w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 17:223 Jl '40 360w

"Except for some doubtful interpretations, and even purely verbal fencings, in dealing with Whitehead (whose mature philosophy was not altogether accessible at the time [1934] Bowman was writing) the book is on a high level of critical discussion." Charles Hartshorne

+ Ethics 50:364 Ap '40 750w

Reviewed by H. N. Wieman

J Religion 20:295 Jl '40 700w

BOWMAN, JAMES CLOYD. Mystery mountain. 293p il $1.75 Whitman, A. 40-10778

Mystery story for young readers.

"I kept reading on, hoping against hope this would turn out to be a deliberate burlesque on a 'mystery for girls,' or at least the mystery might be meant for a spoof like the one in 'Northanger Abbey.' For Dr. Bowman wrote that grand book 'Pecos Bill: the Greatest Cowboy of All Time;' he wrote 'Tales From a Finnish Tupa;' it did not seem credible that he should write anything as naive as this." M. L. Becker

— Books p6 Ag 11 '40 310w

"Another mystery story—better than many but not so good as some." Miriam Snow

Library J 65:596 Jl '40 130w

"This is a story which moves well and is supplied with good details and atmosphere."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 90w

BOYD, MORRISON COMEGYS. Elizabethan music and musical criticism. 363p il $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press [21s 6d Oxford]

780.942 Music—England 40-4083

"It is the purpose of this book to assemble the comments concerning English music, its practices and composition, during the period represented by the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James (1558-1625); to summarize the works on musical theory published in England between those dates; and to illustrate the Elizabethan attitude and opinion as to music in theory and practice." (Pref) Bibliographies. Index.

"The vital and truly significant problems posed by the Elizabethan period in music are, unfortunately, scarcely implied, and their solutions certainly brought very little nearer, by this volume of Professor Boyd's. . . The ultimate value of this volume probably resides in its convenience as a reference book, and in its collection of writings on music gathered from sources not specifically musical in nature. This latter virtue may indeed make it quite valuable in the hands of an investigator who is willing to employ these sources as a means to a more vital end." M. B. B.

— + Sat R of Lit 21:21 Mr 9 '40 260w

"Scholarly but never ponderous. . . This is a pleasant account of the age in England when music was in fullest flower."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 3 '40 430w

"A valuable compilation of a large amount of material not hitherto available between the covers of a single book. There does not appear to be any original research nor on the other hand are there any obvious gaps in the book. A good deal of care has gone to providing references, but occasionally a statement slips through, such as that Cabezon, the Spaniard, was in England in 1554, for which one would like to know the authority. Apart from its usefulness as a ready book of reference it provides a delightful field for browsing, since the acute Elizabethan mind seems unable to have uttered a word without throwing off something shrewd, racy or pungent."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p583 N 16 '40 300w

BOYKIN, ELEANOR. This way, please; a book of manners; with il. by Chichi Lasley. (Am. youth ser) 280p $1.75; text ed $1.40 Macmillan

395 Etiquet (W) 40-5499

"An informal, pleasant book intended to show boys and girls of high school age how sensible,

BOWIE (bō'ĭ)

well-mannered people are expected to behave in the ordinary home, school, business, and social situations of American life and how and why they can and should adapt themselves to these standards." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 36:393 Je 15 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40
J Home Econ 32:397 Je '40 50w

"To have correct manners and be self-confident are qualities that all young persons want, and here is a book to help both boys and girls achieve them. It is interestingly and amusingly written, with examples throughout that young people will appreciate." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 150w

"The book's lively, friendly style, its spice of humor, and the very direct and practical way in which it approaches problems of behavior . . . at once establishes a basis of understanding between author and reader. Miss Boykin wastes no words, but though her book is concise it is also comprehensive." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 12 '41 280w

"The book is very readable and should find a wide sphere of usefulness among young people both in and out of school." P. R. Pierce
+ School R 48:552 S '40 120w

BOYLE, KAY (MRS LAURENCE VAIL). The crazy hunter. 295p $2.50 Harcourt
(W) 40-6737

Three short novels. Except for one short excursion to Capri, the scene in each case is England. The Crazy Hunter is the story of a young girl's love for a blind horse; The Bridegroom's Body concerns two unhappy women who come to know each other on the night when a murderer swan kills a younger one; Big Fiddle is the story of a pathetic American boy in Devon and Capri.

"One of the finest modern novelettes to be found anywhere is the title story in Kay Boyle's new volume 'The Crazy Hunter.' . . The dark world of sightless sensation which the author creates, the forest of frightening images through which the girl and the horse wander together in their exquisite communion, is an experience that will be stamped indelibly in every imaginative reader's memory. . . Neither 'Big Fiddle' nor 'The Bridegroom's Body' can be decently compared with the superb title story of the book." William Soskin
+ — Books p2 Mr 10 '40 1050w

"The arresting beauty of Miss Boyle's prose derives from its concision, its fresh diction, its striking clarity. It's 'The Crazy Hunter' which shakes the heart. . . Miss Boyle's story may be taken as a fable of the power of tenderness and human understanding in a menacing world. It is also a very great horse story." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 9 '40 700w

"A great many novels could be condensed to this size to their own and the reader's advantage. These are not only compact but tense—so tense that the thread of each might snap if it were spun out longer. But the texture is too close for that. With all their subtlety, their eeriness and their dealing with implications rather than events, they have solid substance beautifully wrought."
+ Christian Century 57:706 My 29 '40 70w

"Kay Boyle tells her stories in beautifully written though definitely mannered prose. . . Excellent figures of speech, carefully wrought phrases . . . reward the reader for the difficulties of her style. Even in a less-successful, forced story like 'Big Fiddle'. . . Miss Boyle's fascinating portrayal of carefully selected but seemingly unimportant, details holds the reader spellbound." P. T. Hartung
+ Commonweal 31:497 Mr 29 '40 370w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Forum 103:324 Je '40 360w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 15 '40 450w

"Being in possession of an elaborate technique and having developed disciplined habits of observation, Miss Boyle seems to be able to turn her hand to almost anything. As a result one feels all too often that she is not really involved with her themes, that she has not conceived but merely used them. And what, after all, is the difference between use and conception if not a measure of the gap separating competence from creation." Philip Rahv
— + Nation 150:396 Mr 23 '40 480w

"All the adjectives about Kay Boyle's writing are in use and used up, I believe. It is simply fine writing in both senses of the word, controlled to the point of elegance but still running as free as you please. In this book it is at its best in 'The Crazy Hunter.' " Otis Ferguson
+ New Repub 102:480 Ap 8 '40 550w

"The first is . . . one of the best horsy stories written since that animal became intellectually tabu as a philistine totem. What people like about horses, and dealing with horses, is conveyed with considerable elegance and the personal situation of the people in the story built up with some force. The content of the second and third stories is tenuous to the point of invisibility, but the writing and the imagery are so delightful that they can be enjoyed as soap bubbles can be enjoyed." Anthony West
+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:372 Mr 16 '40 100w

"At her best in this book Miss Boyle demonstrates that she is one of the best short-story writers in America, and probably the most careful, percipient and unusual." P. M. Jack
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 17 '40 900w

"The longest tale in the book is the title story. . . The veterinary atmosphere is too thick, and I'm convinced that the full value of the narrative is wasted on anyone who, like myself, knows nothing of horses and doesn't believe that the death of one is as tragic an event as the death of a human being. But even to casual readers, 'The Crazy Hunter' will seem an original, and in spots a moving, story, very D. H. Lawrence in effect." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 16:88 Mr 9 '40 360w

Reviewed by H. T. Moore
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 23 '40 400w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 164:457 Mr 29 '40 800w
Time 35:87 Mr 11 '40 100w

"Miss Boyle has many of the rarer qualities of the good story-teller, but her besetting danger is to try to convey more esoteric intimations than her words or perhaps any words will carry."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p133 Mr 16 '40 800w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:xii summer '40 70w

BOYLSTON, HELEN DORE. Sue Barton, rural nurse; with il. by Forrest W. Orr. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 254p $2 Little 39-30078

Continues the story of the plucky nurse, Sue Barton, whose romance with Dr Barry reaches a happy culmination in this book. For earlier books in the series see Book Review Digest, 1936 to 1938.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Mr 17 '40 80w
J Home Econ 32:115 F '40 60w

"The new setting has the right flavor and the love story still holds satisfying suspense for young girls. Sprightly dialogue, dramatic situations, and easy readableness give us another certain favorite. Contemplating the tre-

BOYLSTON, H. D.—Continued
mendous appeal of these Sue books, children's librarians may as well be glad it is a trained nurse (albeit a pretty one) who has caught the popular fancy, and ride out the tide with such equanimity as their stock of duplicates will allow." Irene Smith
+ Library J 65:214 Mr 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 Mr 3 '40 130w
Sat R of Lit 21:22 N 18 '39 30w

BOYLSTON, HELEN DORE. Sue Barton, superintendent of nurses; with il. by Forrest W. Orr. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 239p $2 Little
(W) 40-32432

This last book about Sue Barton describes her experiences in establishing a training school for nurses in Dr Bill's small town hospital, and her own adjustment to marriage with Dr Bill.

"The most interesting book of the five. It is really the closing one. Sue resigns on the last page. She will be needed at home for at least a year. Hers has been a well sustained story of a vocation in which, as nurse or patient, most of us are interested." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 N 3 '40 160w

"Miss Boylston again combines humor, excitement, and a knowledge of human nature and its problems to make a good career story. Girls fourteen and up." D. L. Wood
+ Library J 65:984 N 15 '40 100w

"The best book in a series of five novels about this engaging red-head." Katherine Ulrich
+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 16 '40 180w

BRADFORD, ROARK. John Henry; [a] play; music by Jacques Wolfe; sets by Albert Johnson. 91p il $2.50 Harper 812 40-27026

A dramatization of the legend of John Henry, the big black man who could outdo all other Negroes in work, play and love. The story is told in rhythmical prose and song.

Booklist 36:211 F 1 '40

"The work has two major faults which would almost certainly preclude success. The first is a rigidity, or monotony of method in fitting music to the scheme. Over and over the scenes open with a kind of rhythmed dialogue which gradually rises into song, and then the song itself falls into monotonous repetition. No doubt this is negroid, but it is too simple and rigid a pattern for a whole opera. The second fault is greater. The play immediately builds up the huge figure of John Henry, and the consequent expectation of rip-roaring dramatic action—and then does not deliver. Episode after episode peters out into tame sentiment. The play never rises to the stature of its hero." W. P. Eaton
— Books p21 F 25 '40 180w

"It is difficult to see who would care to read a stage piece without plot, without genuine dramatic conflict, and without character interest. For John Henry is not a character. He is a symbol, hero of a folk epic, a black Paul Bunyan. . . He makes a poor reading-play. Maybe when he appears as Paul Robeson surrounded by a rich chorus he comes through. Otherwise, the usual ballads and tales are a better medium for him." A. S.
— Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 240w

"There was not enough laughter and violence in the script. Yet so unusually rich was the material in music, singing and idea, and so warm and vital was Paul Robeson's personal contribution, that the shortcomings of play and production and its consequent failure are among the season's major theatrical regrets." Rosamond Gilder
Theatre Arts 24:166 Mr '40 320w (Dramatic criticism)

BRADFORD, WILLIAM. Homes in the wilderness. See Mourt's relation

BRADLEY, HUGH. Such was Saratoga. 386p map $3 Doubleday 974.748 Saratoga Springs, New York
(W) 40-30167

Sketches the history of Saratoga Springs, from the days of Sir William Johnson, who is reputed to be one of the first white men, if not the first, to take the cure. Gentleman Johnny Burgoyne, who lost one of the fifteen decisive battles of the world here, has his share in the story, as has General Washington, who at one time intended to purchase a Saratoga estate. The story continues thru the days of Saratoga's glory as one of America's social centers, down to its present state with pari-mutuel and state-spa limitations. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Bradley has ransacked the archives and grilled the oldest inhabitants to produce a beguiling and comprehensive book about Saratoga. It is no small task to get the full flavor of Saratoga into one volume, but it seems to me that he has done it." Frank Sullivan
+ Books p4 Ag 18 '40 900w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 10 '40 800w

"Mr. Bradley has written a very interesting social history. . . This is the romantic story of a century and a half told with care, sympathy, and enthusiasm." F. S. Ambrose
+ Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 320w
New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 60w

"'Such was Saratoga' is packed with varied and picturesque fact, legend and character. Individualism, which won at Saratoga its right to survive, here took some of the strangest forms to appear on the American scene. Without attempting to probe deeply, Mr. Bradley brings out the duality of its life, the permanent and the impermanent, the solid community beneath, which combated and yet profited by the flamboyant surface." Anita Moffett
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 11 '40 1250w

"All in the standard Herbert Asbury manner, and interesting enough, particularly to racing enthusiasts."
New Yorker 16:64 Ag 17 '40 40w

"If, as a philosopher avowed, reading maketh a full man, Mr. Bradley brings home the Bacon. His research was extensive, and he is able not only at digging it up but at writing it down—a happy combination not too often found. He has rolled the dry bones of history and made his point in a lively chronicle." Fairfax Downey
+ Sat R of Lit 22:13 Ag 31 '40 460w

BRAGHINE, ALEXANDER. The shadow of Atlantis. 288p il map $3.50 Dutton [15s Rider]
572.4 Atlantis 40-11514

An attempt to prove, by archeological evidence, not only that Atlantis—the lost continent of the mid-Atlantic—did exist but that it was the center of an ancient civilization extending from southern South America to Egypt. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 57:546 Ap 24 '40 200w

Reviewed by William Adams
— Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 18 '40 550w

BRAHMS, CARYL, pseud. See Abrahams, D. C.

BRAILSFORD, HENRY NOEL. From England to America; a message. (Whittlesey house publication) 130p $1 McGraw 940.5342 European war, 1939—Great Britain. European war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 40-31253

"In this eloquent and closely reasoned appeal the London correspondent of The New Republic calls upon the American people to declare war on Nazi Germany, and to do it quickly. It is a bold appeal, made bolder still by the proposal that we send a volunteer army of 500,000 men to help invade and liberate the German Continent in 1941 or 1942. Only by a declaration of war, Mr. Brailsford believes, can we hope to preserve our American heritage. Only by going into this war as an ally of England, he assures us, can we avoid 'the longer, more difficult and costly struggle' we shall otherwise have to wage alone." N Y Times

Commonweal 32:515 O 11 '40 80w

Living Age 359:291 N '40 270w

"This is a personal message from a humane and qualified expert in international affairs, and deserves to be read as such. There is no more important question for the American people to consider during the next few months, and we trust consequently that this book will have a wide circulation and earnest reading."

+ New Repub 103:434 S 30 '40 1350w

"The author does not deal with the legacy of hatred that this war will bequeath to future generations; he does not try to guess how it will twist the sanity of those Europeans and Americans who will be left to clear the debris away. In particular, he offers no solution except federalism for the moral and medical problem of 80,000,000 Germans who will be left in the heart of Europe, their minds poisoned by the hate and violence that have been fed to them all these years. Whatever his omissions, however, he has made his point. His little book is too serious to be dismissed with mere denunciation. We shall have to think about it, and think hard, in the weeks and months ahead." Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

+ — N Y Times p5 S 15 '40 1650w

New Yorker 16:82 S 21 '40 50w

"A more eloquent and persuasive statement of the case for intervention can hardly be imagined. Mr. Brailsford both thinks and writes clearly, and his pamphleteering tract is a model of cogent argument and graceful style." J. F. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 O 5 '40 200w

Time 36:76 S 23 '40 400w

BRAINARD, DAVID LEGGE. Six came back; ed. by Bessie Rowland James. 305p il map $3 Bobbs

919.8 Arctic regions. Lady Franklin bay expedition, 1881-1884 40-30801

In 1881 an expedition composed of volunteers from the United States army under command of Lieutenant Adolphus W. Greely, established winter quarters at Lady Franklin Bay on Ellsmere Land. There they remained for two years making exploring trips toward the Pole. At the end of that time they attempted to retreat to the south, relief and rescue ships were prevented from reaching them, and of the twenty-five men only six came back. One of the survivors had kept a daily record and it is this diary which is here published with some explanatory notes and a final chapter.

Booklist 37:33 O 1 '40

"Brainard's story, told with the magnificent, disciplined restraint of the first-class soldier, is one of the world's horror classics, precisely because of that restraint. . . It is good that this complete story is now made available in popular form; it is not so good that editor and publisher alike missed a large bet. . . However, within the limits of a traditional point of view, Mrs. James has done a fine job with what must always remain one of the most harrowing and tragic horror stories of the nineteenth century." E. P. Hanson

+ — Books p9 S 1 '40 700w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ag 22 '40 300w

New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 90w

"It is a book which gives the most gruesome picture of an ill-fated expedition, and yet which rebuilds one's faith in the plain decency of the average man. Most of these men made good, even in death. . . Only one side of the unhappy adventure has ever been told. Greely naturally suppressed much of it in his journal, and obviously Brainard has done the same. One wishes that a little more was known of what really happened. But men don't write much with such awful things happening, and they are glad to forget." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p6 S 8 '40 1450w

"This diary will stand as a moving record of one of the most heroic polar explorations in history. . . A good job of editing by Mrs. James."

+ New Yorker 16:72 S 7 '40 50w

BRAND, MAX. Calling Dr Kildare. 223p $2 Dodd 40-13549

Mystery story.

"Moviegoers who have thrilled at the Dr. Kildare pictures will doubtless enjoy this one, even if they have already seen it on the screen. It is a mixture of science and sentiment, with just a little mystery thrown in for good measure." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 D 1 '40 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 170w

BRAND, MAX. Danger trail. 311p $2 Dodd 40-10764

Western story.

Booklist 37:92 N 1 '40

"As ever, Max Brand comes through with all the active incident you could ask. He's also showing a fine line of clipped lingo." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Jl 7 '40 120w

"Here, written with Max Brand's wonted gusto and in his terse, hard, glittering style, is a fast and snappy story of the reformation of a yegg." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p12 Je 30 '40 160w

BRAND, MAX. The Dude. 298p $2 Dodd 40-2380

Western story.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ja 28 '40 100w

"It's all told with Max Brand's accustomed realism and gusto and deftness in dialogue, yet notwithstanding the snap and sting of the narrative, the tale is only second-grade Max Brand." G. W. Harris

+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 28 '40 150w

BRAND, MAX. The secret of Dr Kildare. 227p $2 Dodd [8s 3d Hodder] (W) 40-7413

Mystery story. "The adventures of Dr Kildare have had success on the screen. This new novel marks their first appearance in the book form." (Springf'd Republican)

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 F 17 '40 40w

N Y Times p16 F 18 '40 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 220w

BRAND, MAX. Wine on the desert, and other stories. 271p $2.50 Dodd 40-31515

Collection of short stories by a prolific writer known chiefly for his "Westerns" and detective stories. Contents: Wine on the desert; A watch and the wilderness; Our daily bread; The Kin-sale; Lew Corbin, gentleman; The luck of Pringle; The small world; Hummingbirds and honeysuckle; Internes can't take money; Men get old; Oh, wonderful! A special occasion; Charlie; The wedding guest; Fixed.

BRAND, MAX—Continued

"With all their scope and variety, all the tales are tense and snappy. Written with Max Brand's characteristic verve and skill, they are vastly entertaining in their rough and peculiar way."

+ N Y Times p32 N 17 '40 300w

"It is possible to read any one story and admire its neat, tight structure, the most that is accomplished in the least space. But to read through 'Wine on the Desert' is to see the impulsions toward melodrama which underline every word in it." N. L. R.

— + Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 250w

BRANDI, KARL. Emperor Charles V; the growth and destiny of a man and of a world-empire; tr. from the German by C. V. Wedgwood. 655p il $5 Knopf [21s Cape, J]

B or 92 Charles V, emperor of the Holy Roman empire [40-27135]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40

"Considering that the German original was first published in 1937 it is perhaps not immaterial to remark that from beginning to end there is not a hint or suggestion of the 'ideological' approach to history. This is the more noteworthy in that the subject is one which a German historian of less rugged integrity might have easily turned to purposes of Nazi propaganda. There is no distortion of evidence to force it to conform to a pre-conceived theory. About midway in his book Brandi sets forth the standard by which he has himself written: 'Neither prejudice,' he writes, 'nor ingenious selection can make a convincing picture of a man, but only the strictest devotion to historic truth.' " S. C. Chew

+ Books p19 Mr 31 '40 950w

Reviewed by Frank Nowak

Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 400w

Reviewed by D. A. Elms

Commonweal 31:388 F 23 '40 440w

"This biography is not only scholarly—the author is the greatest living authority on this ramified subject—but readable, and the translation is of the smoothest."

+ Nation 150:287 F 24 '40 80w

"The best biography of the greatest of the Holy Roman Emperors."

+ New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 50w

BRANDT, KARL. Whale oil; an economic analysis. 264p il maps $3 Food research inst.

338.3 Whale oil. Whaling 40-13328

Describes the rise, decline and the revival of whaling during the last few years, and the present uses of whale oil, with statistics. "Whale oil is not as remote from the sphere of agricultural fats as first thought may suggest. In the United States it has recently become the center of the struggle for tariff protection and support of prices for domestic oils and fats. In England and Germany . . . it competes directly with agricultural fats from domesticated animals and oil-bearing plants." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Am Econ R 30:860 D '40 60w

"Those who have read Moby Dick will find this volume a very interesting factual sequel. . . Thirty charts distributed throughout the entire volume serve as excellent illustrative matter, both for momentary reading and for their permanent reference value. Anyone interested in any phase of fats and oils utilization in this country should have a copy of this book." G. W. McBride

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:654 S '40 550w

BRANN, ESTHER. Patrick goes a-hunting; il. by the author. 48p $1 Macmillan

(W) 40-13976

"This is a new story of Patrick, the ingratiating terrier who belonged to Bobbie and Donnie, the twins of Miss Brann's earlier books. Bobbie and Donnie have grown considerably since their first appearance, have moved to the country and have become enthusiastic gardeners, and thereby hangs this tale of the testing of Pat." N Y Times

"The pictures are large and amusing, especially if one likes wild rabbits and kind little dogs." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 11 '40 260w

"A rather longer story than is usual for young readers and listeners of the picture-book age, this is well sustained with lively action and it leaves its audience with the glow of satisfaction which comes from seeing the object of one's sympathies triumphantly vindicated. The pictures, simply composed, point up the humor and action of the text and convey with charm and sensitiveness the feeling of the outdoor setting." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 11 '40 310w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 110w

Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

BRANSCOMB, BENNETT HARVIE. Teaching with books; a study of college libraries. 239p $2.50 A.L.A; Assn. of Am. colleges

027.7 Libraries, University and college. Library administration 39-29435

Study of methods for bringing the college undergraduate into closer acquaintance with books. Among other suggestions the author considers the expedient of simplifying library service, mainly in the catalog room. Partial contents: How much do undergraduates use the library? Teaching with books; Some responsibilities of the college president; Making books accessible; Centralization versus departmentalization; How large should the college library be? What books should the library buy? The costs of library service. Index.

Booklist 36:167 Ja 1 '40

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 80w

"This book, if read by college and university administrators, should produce a more intelligent and understanding attitude toward the library than, in the majority of cases, now exists. For librarians, its chief value lies in its open-minded, searching, critical analysis of familiar problems and standardized routines. It is a job well done and a significant contribution to a growing body of professional literature. There is little in it, and rightfully so, to encourage complaisance, either in college librarians or administrators." W. H. Carlson

+ Library J 65:445 My 15 '40 1600w

"For a college president who believes, as I do, that next to the faculty the library is the most important educational instrument in an institution, Branscomb's 'Teaching with Books' contains a wealth of suggestion and encouragement. In every college where the library forces have been underdeveloped this volume should be required reading for all members of the faculty. Deliberate efforts should be made also to suggest pointedly to trustees that pertinent information is here available which, even though they may not recognize its value now, sooner or later will be forced upon their attention by the normal course of modern educational progress." Levering Tyson

+ School & Society 52:143 Ag 31 '40 600w

"This volume deals so brilliantly with both dilemmas and dreams that it deserves the word 'challenging.' " Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 29:296 My '40 370w

BRAUN, HUGH. The story of the English house; il. from plans and photographs. 116p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

728 Architecture, Domestic. England—Historic houses, etc.

"The story of the development of domestic architecture in England. . . The first fine photograph is of a prehistoric 'beehivehut' near Wells, the last a bird's-eye view of a District Council Housing Scheme. Between these are illustrated chapters on the housing conditions of the Feudal Age and its remaining buildings; changes arising from the importance of the yeoman; houses of the Tudor's spacious days; the Great House of the Renaissance; and the principles and results of 'architecture for all.' Beside many photographs are drawings of details and whatever needed. The style is easy and non-technical." Books

+ Books p18 S 15 '40 110w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 10 '40 360w

"A delightful book, pleasantly written and superbly illustrated."
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 7 '40 60w

"Those who have not acquired a taste for Wardour Street medievalism will still find much in this book to interest them. When Mr. Braun is discussing the actual methods of construction employed by early builders he is invariably interesting, and his final chapter, wherein the whole of modern domestic architecture from Nash to Mendelsohn is wittily dealt with in half-a-dozen pages (in which incidentally neither William Morris nor Philip Webb is even mentioned) represents a tour de force that can have few parallels in the whole corpus of architectural criticism." Osbert Lancaster
+ — Spec 165:126 Ag 2 '40 750w

"Inclined to be facetious in parts—particularly when it comes to the present—this new book by the author of 'The English Castle' [Book Review Digest, 1936] gives, nevertheless, a clear and interesting account of the development of the dwelling-house in England from immediately before the Roman conquest to the present day. For illustration 108 good photographs are supplemented by drawings of plans which are extremely useful for reference, and there is a frontispiece in colour."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p331 Jl 6 '40 230w

BRAWLEY, BENJAMIN GRIFFITH. A short history of the American Negro. 4th rev ed 288p il $2 Macmillan

325.26 Negroes—History. Slavery in the U.S. (W) 39-30828

This book first appeared in 1913 and has gone thru four editions. "The book presupposes only an elementary knowledge of American history, but it does presuppose so much. From the nature of the discussion, the treatment could hardly be primarily original, and frequent citation is made to the conclusions of investigators along special lines. At the same time, it is hoped that in more than one instance the presentation will be found to be substantially new." (Pref) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1913. Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"Since the author referred to the importance of periodical literature in the study of the Negro, he might have included at least the Journal of Negro History and the Journal of Negro Education in his bibliography. A wider knowledge of contributions in these and other repositories of historical articles would have added fineness and variety of detail to the presentation. This is, however, a useful volume for those who wish an introduction to the Negro's history in America." M. E. Carpenter
+ — Social Educ 4:590 D '40 360w

"The material is treated topically within a general chronological framework. The book is suitable for public school use or for general reading for those who wish a simple treatment of the subject." I. C. B.
+ Social Forces 18:611 My '40 80w

"From the nature of the discussion, the treatment could hardly be primarily original, and frequent citations are made to the conclusions of investigators along special lines. But the result is really very good. We are particularly enthusiastic about the last two chapters which outline the contributions made by the colored man to our civilization." J. S. Roucek
+ Social Studies 31:88 F '40 200w

BREEN, MARY J., and LAWSON, ARTHUR, comps. The weekend companion. 372p il $2.50 G. W. Stewart, 67 W. 44th st, N.Y.

808.8 Literature—Collections 40-27635

Collection of poems, short stories, songs—some with music, plus ideas for games, drinks, and quick meals, compiled by two veteran week-enders. Indexes.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40
Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 30w
New Yorker 16:71 S 7 '40 40w

BRETZ, MRS ALICE. I begin again [foreword by F. Fraser Bond]. (Whittlesey house publication) 201p $1.75 McGraw

B or 92 Blind (W) 40-27060

The author, a New York woman, lost her sight after a severe illness. With charm and humor she describes her life, beginning just before her illness and bringing the chronicle up to the present. She tells step by step how she achieved and maintained her cheerful philosophy under her handicap, reorganizing her life in order to be independent, instead of becoming a burden to her friends.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40
Bookmark p11 My '40

"Mrs. Bretz tells her story with grace, charm, and dignity. It is unexpectedly exciting. Her absence of self-pity leaves her free to tell, as only one who has had sight could tell, what it means to get along without light." Mary Ross
+ Books p4 F 4 '40 900w
Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '40 310w
+ Cath World 150:760 Mr '40 150w

"A thoroughly delightful book. Blind or not, [the author] must be a charming person with gifts of wisdom and humor and the happy phrase. Her experience in learning to find her way around and live happily in the dark will be valuable to other blind persons, and the contagion of her buoyant spirit will be invaluable to those who have sight."
+ Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton
Churchman 154:18 Mr 1 '40 200w

Reviewed by J. J. Walsh
Commonweal 31:330 F 2 '40 240w

"There is not one word of pathos in this book. . . It is a true story which is intensely interesting from start to finish, which is often charming, always entertaining, touched with a light humor which is as honest as it is brisk, yet not afraid of the expression of deep feeling, in the utmost sincerity. And its vivid interest carries the reader through not one misfortune but several."
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 21 '40 700w

"The spirited, quietly humorous record of a pioneer in the country of the dark."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 27 '40 30w

"Through her book, many a resident of New York will see the city for the first time. 'This New York is wonderfully friendly,' she tells us,

BRETZ, ALICE—Continued
and then observes what few of us take time to think about, since the coming of motor cars, that 'the strangest aspect of all streets is their emptiness.' 'I Begin Again' should be read by all seeing people so that they too may begin again." Sydney Greenbie
+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 F 3 '40 450w

Reviewed by G. R. Neuman
Survey 76:148 Ap '40 320w

BREWER, CLIFTON HARTWELL. Later Episcopal Sunday schools. 197p $1.50 Morehouse

268.83 Sunday schools. Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A. 40-2585

Continuation of the author's Early Episcopal Sunday Schools (1933). In this volume the history is carried from 1865 to the present. It covers methods, courses of study, worship services, the Sunday school library, various types of schools, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 57:51 Ja 10 '40 20w

"Every leader or student of religious education should have the book." W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 154:18 Mr 1 '40 130w

BREWTON, JOHN EDMUND, comp. Gaily we parade; il. by Robert Lawson. 218p $2 Macmillan

821.08 Children's poetry—Collections (W) 40-27636

Collection of poems about people for young children. The poems are grouped under such headings as: To the shops we go; Relatives all; At our house; Neighbors of ours; Beyond far blue hills; Out in the country; Ring-a-ring o' fairies; Bells for Christmas ring, etc. Indexes of authors, titles, and first lines.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 29 '40 180w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:445 N '40 50w

"The title is well chosen, for a livelier, more spirited collection could scarcely have been assembled. . . Not a few [of the authors] are newcomers to our juvenile anthologies and will make many friends among boys and girls from eight to twelve." Florence O'Gara
+ Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 110w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 20w

"The selection is fresh and interesting and the poems and their arrangement will appeal to boys and girls from 8 to 12. In making his drawings Robert Lawson has entered completely into the spirit of the collection and his gay and lively pictures will make this volume doubly dear to children." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 S 22 '40 450w

BRIDGES, ROBERT, and BRADLEY, HENRY. Correspondence, 1900-1923. 197p $2.75 (7s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Bridges, Robert. Bradley, Henry

"The interest of [these] letters is chiefly parasitical, and lies much less in their content than in the personalities of the men who wrote them. Juxtaposing in random confusion domestic news with brief critical observations, they afford an intimate glimpse into the lives, minds, and activities of two men who, as the anonymous editor remarks in a prefatory note, were 'not more impressive by their intellectual versatility than by their purity of heart.' . . In serious subject matter they deal with the minutiae of the highly specialized interests and activities of their writers, and chiefly of those of Bridges. His experiments in quantitative verse in English, his invention of a phonetic font, his accession to the Laureateship, his concern for spelling reform, [etc] . . . all form a helpful supplementary record. They are also of value in helping to fill a biographical void." Sat R of Lit

"Whereas there is evidence of the personal regard and respect shown for one another by the correspondents, this collection can only hold minor interest for the average reader."
Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 70w

Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 9 '40 230w

"This volume is but one among hundreds of volumes of letters possessing at best only a supplementary utility, and therefore fated to only modest fame and favor, for the subject-matter is too recondite to be of wide appeal: but readers with any special interest in either Bridges or Bradley can feel only delight and gratitude for its appearance." A. J. Green
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 21 '40 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p304 Je 22 '40 550w

BRIFFAULT, ROBERT. Fandango. 316p $2.50 Scribner

40-7111

The story of the beautiful Carlotta von Goerlitz, daughter of a Viennese diplomat, told in three episodes. The first pictures her as the pampered daughter of the Austrian ambassador in Spain, just before the revolution. Then the father is recalled and Carlotta spends one last happy winter in her homeland. With the Anschluss, Carlotta's father is killed, and she and her mother escape to France. The last episode describes Carlotta's degradation when she tries to make a living for her mother.

"The whole shines with the phosphorescent luster of decay, 'Fandango' sparkles, but its froth is the kind that comes not from champagne but from some poisonous concoction—stirred hectically so that we may see all that swirls at its dark bottom. . . 'Fandango' is essentially a light novel, sometimes self-consciously 'modern' and racy, but it succeeds in conveying an almost morbid sense of the demoralization of European culture." Milton Rugoff
Books p5 Ap 21 '40 700w

Reviewed by Charlotte Bassett
Boston Transcript p1 My 11 '40 190w

"It is a tirade against injustice, bureaucracy, and brutality, but suffers from too much anger, becoming confusing, breathless, and uneven. None of the characters is sufficiently well-drawn to touch our sympathies and where the book should be tragic, it is merely maudlin." Katharine Shorey
— Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 180w

"Quite sketchy in its account of the tribulations of Carlotta von Görlitz, and unconscionably melodramatic."
Nation 150:577 My 4 '40 50w

New Repub 102:650 My 13 '40 60w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss
N Y Times p6 Ap 28 '40 800w

"The imagery is tawdry, the poetry absent and the presentation wooden. There is even that well known sexual interpretation of a bullfight. Believe me, there is! Psychological perception? I'm afraid not, though there are one or two references to Freud and Havelock Ellis. In short, I can't take it. It's like a short-winded playing of the Day of Wrath on a ten cent horn." Ralph Bates
— Sat R of Lit 22:11 My 18 '40 480w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '40 360w

Time 35:99 Ap 22 '40 170w

BRIFFAULT (brĕf'ō)

BRIGGS, HAROLD EDWARD. Frontiers of the Northwest; a history of the upper Missouri valley. 629p il map $5 (21s) Appleton-Century

978 Missouri valley. Frontier and pioneer life—Northwest. Northwest 40-12572

Economic and social history of the region of the Dakotas, Montana, and Wyoming, and parts of Idaho and Colorado, during the second half of the nineteenth century. The work is divided into six frontiers: that of the miner, the buffalo, the cattle rancher, the sheep rancher, the settler, and of agriculture. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40

"Taken as a whole, the book represents a useful and solid addition to our existing body of historical literature, in the achievement of which the commonwealths directly concerned and the author who has so carefully narrated their early history may take just pride." M. M. Quaife

+ Books p3 Jl 28 '40 1150w

"The West is a grand land. It has mountains with gold in them, fields with the world's choicest grains in them. And that much of the West Professor Briggs gives us in careful detail. He also, in text and footnotes, gives us an accurate idea of the succession of events. For these reasons, the volume may become a valuable source book for students of the place and the period."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 10 '40 260w

"This is the work of a painstaking scholar written after years of delving into all possible sources. It is completely documented and has numerous quotations from newspaper records, personal narratives, and official reports. It is a factual and statistical reference book with an impressive bibliography. The style is pedestrian, informational, enlivened occasionally with anecdotes such as the true story of Calamity Jane." F. L. D. Goodrich

Library J 65:590 Jl '40 210w

New Repub 103:286 Ag 26 '40 50w

"Here is a book which is certainly not the most thrilling ever written about the American West, certainly not one to be swallowed at a gulp or not put down till finished, but just as certainly one of the most useful for those who really want to know about its region and its period. . . Professor Briggs says that he began to study this section fifteen years ago. That he has studied it long and carefully is evident." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 14 '40 1550w

"Lots of fascinating detail and some new material."

+ New Yorker 16:67 Jl 13 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 180w

BRIGHTFIELD, MYRON FRANKLIN. John Wilson Croker. 464p $3.50 Univ. of Calif.

B or 92 Croker, John Wilson 40-28302

Biography of an English Tory politician of the early nineteenth century. "Mr. Brightfield seems to have had comparatively little interest in Croker's personality or private life. His principal aim was to write 'a chapter on the influence of politics on literature in England during the first half of the nineteenth century' with Croker as the center. Croker 'more than any other man, set the tone and determined the character of nineteenth century editing' and at the same time 'fitted' literature into the 'frame' of Tory politics." (Am Hist R) Bibliography of Croker's writings. Index.

"It was high time that someone wrote a biography of Croker, and it seems fortunate that a scholar not only so indefatigable but so systematic as Professor Brightfield first undertook the task. Croker's intense Tory partisanship, his proclivities for quiet maneuvering and violent attack, and the sorry impressions of him recorded in literature by Macaulay, Disraeli, and others, present dire temptations to a biographer. It would be so easy to make the man more 'colorful' than 'meaningful'. Hence the severely topical method adhered to in this book has distinct advantages. . . Mr. Brightfield, however, sometimes displays the amiable fault of becoming a protagonist in ways that are not always amiable." H. C. F. Bell

+ — Am Hist R 46:398 Ja '41 600w

"This book has been badly needed not only for the fresh light it throws on a perennially fascinating period but as a corrective of long prevalent myths from which an able and honest man was the sufferer." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 152:370 D '40 600w

BRIGHTMAN, EDGAR SHEFFIELD. A philosophy of religion. 539p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

201 Religion—Philosophy 40-9467

"In addition to a survey of the chief problems of the philosophy of religion (religious values, the conception and knowledge of God, personality and immortality), to which the central portion of the text is devoted, and in which Professor Brightman's own ideas on these problems are presented in the context of other solutions, there is an introductory survey of the sciences of religion and a final chapter on 'external criticisms.'" (J Philos) The author is professor of philosophy at Boston university. Bibliographies. Index and lexicon.

"The book is by no means merely a survey, for Professor Brightman has a very definite philosophy of his own, and he presents his own conviction forcibly while yet trying to give the most objective possible account of divergent opinions. . . One ought not to argue with Professor Brightman without emphasizing that the protagonism of a particular philosophy of religion is only one purpose of his book. The other is to give a fair account of conflicting and contrasting positions. This he has done as fairly as any one who has a very definite position of his own can do it." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ — Books p29 O 6 '40 950w

"At a time when each of us is re-examining his convictions to see which ones can stand the pressure of world events it is a good thing to be brought back to the elemental truths which cannot be shaken. This volume is not only Professor Brightman's latest and largest work but also, in the opinion of the present reviewer, his best. The range of topics is inclusive and the argument is clear-cut." J. S. Bixler

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 8 '40 900w

"The book is an important contribution to the current religious debate as well as a particularly effective textbook for the study of the field, for in it Professor Brightman clarifies his earlier defense of this thesis of the finite God and presents fresh evidence for its relevance to all of the central problems of religion." D. V. Steere

+ Christian Century 57:1114 S 11 '40 650w

"This is an amazingly thorough presentation of the major problems of philosophy of religion, carefully organized and clearly written." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 154:19 S 1 '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"All in all, this is a most useful book for a college classroom; beginners will find here expert guidance to one of the most rewarding subjects of the college curriculum." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 51:125 O '40 190w

J Philos 37:475 Ag 15 '40 220w

BRION, MARCEL. Michelangelo; tr. from the French by James Whitall. 336p il $3.50 Greystone

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarroti
(W) 40-12588

A sympathetic biography of the great Florentine painter, sculptor, architect and poet. The facts of his life are given in chronological order, with interpretation of his works and analysis of his character added. Concise bibliography. Index.

"This fictionized biography, while not without interpretative merit, is unconvincing because of its oversimplification. The naïveté of the narration gives a juvenility to the noncritical material which is incongruous with the Michelangelo mentality."
— + Atlantic S '40 140w

Booklist 37:11 S '40

"Marcel Brion has told the story of the loneliest of artists in a work that is brief, orderly and, at this moment, inspiring. It is possible that artists who are fortunate enough to be alive may extract some comfort from Michelangelo's battles against his age; and that laymen may be somewhat heartened by his mighty example." Thomas Craven
+ — Books p5 Je 30 '40 650w

"There is no better way of looking at Michelangelo than through the eyes of this his latest interpreter. In simple prose approaching sometimes poetic beauty which even the translation does not efface, Marcel Brion probes and explains titanic forces within the artist's soul. . . But the story of Michelangelo is not alone the story of a gigantic art; it is equally the struggle of a stormtossed soul seeking the harbor of its peace. M. Brion has grasped this fact, and with it, the secret of the life he records so knowingly and so tenderly." S. L. Riddle
+ Churchman 154:17 O 1 '40 300w

Reviewed by David Burnham
Commonweal 32:272 Jl 19 '40 360w

Reviewed by G. E. Brown
Library J 65:541 Je 15 '40 270w

"Though not always convincing, the critical passages are fresh and provocative. Written with clarity and enthusiasm."
+ — New Repub 103:254 Ag 19 '40 50w

"A new biography of Michelangelo is surely needed, for excellent as John Addington Symonds's classic biography is, a modern one making use of new information and modern methods would not be out of place. This book is not such a one. It is more like what Romain Rolland has written—how Michelangelo strikes one man, though obviously M. Brion does not see the same Michelangelo that M. Rolland did. But if the individual is sufficiently important—the individual in general, and also this particular individual—then there cannot be too many lives of him. . . And M. Brion does certainly add a few skillful strokes to our composite portrait of this great man, for which we can be duly grateful." T. C. Chubb
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 7 '40 1050w

"Readable and penetrating biography."
+ New Yorker 16:68 Jl 13 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 1200w

BRISTOW, GWEN (MRS BRUCE MANNING). This side of glory. 400p $2.50 Crowell
(W) 40-27259

The third in the author's series of Louisiana novels, of which the aristocratic Larnes and the plebian Upjohns are the chief characters. In this story the Upjohns have become affluent and respected in the community, but there is no denying their background. The Larnes are living in graceful poverty, on the verge of bankruptcy. When Kester Larne marries Eleanor Upjohn, against the advice of both families, the stage is set for a long struggle, which ends in a lasting understanding between the two.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

"'This Side of Glory' is a fine love story, told with charm and with strength." Lyle Saxon
+ Books p3 Mr 24 '40 600w

Reviewed by Olga Owens
Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 950w

"This book is competently written and it is fairly entertaining but it is not important." R. B.
+ — Commonweal 32:66 My 10 '40 80w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 12 '40 350w

New Repub 102:514 Ap 15 '40 50w

"There can be no question any longer of Gwen Bristow's solid and versatile talent as a novelist. Considered by itself, without reference to the two volumes which preceded it, 'This Side of Glory' is a good story—a convincing study. . . Miss Bristow writes with simplicity and candor, without sentimentality. 'This Side of Glory' inevitably loses something by comparison with the more picturesque earlier books. No novelist on earth, addressing a contemporary audience, could make the flu epidemic of 1918 as gruesomely exciting as a yellow-fever epidemic in the eighteenth century. But it is, by way of compensation, the most expert piece of straight story telling Miss Bristow has given us yet." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 31 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:86 Mr 23 '40 70w

"Although we are told that Kester is an intelligent but irresponsible cuss whose charm is terrific, none of that charm is communicated to the reader. We are merely told that he charmed all whom he met. . . In other words, you won't find any revelations germane to the South, either old or new, as typified in Kester and Eleanor. So all there is left is a love and marriage story that is handicapped by the fact that neither of its main characters is convincingly drawn or becomes anything more than a name in a book. There is very little pace to the story, its climaxes are powerless, and the writing is seldom more than competent, often less than that." W. J. G.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:32 Ap 6 '40 350w

"A fresh, solid and extremely competent novel." J. A. Smith
+ Spec 165:44 Jl 12 '40 450w

"People who read for entertainment only will find this story of compelling interest. And those who desire something of inspiration, of uplift, may find it in the way that Kester and Eleanor 'faced the specters of the mind and laid them; thus (they) came at length to find a stronger faith (their) own,' a mutual faith transcending their differences. The moral is not thrust upon the reader, but one can discover and appreciate it."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 21 '40 500w

"It is a vigorous and thoughtful piece of work, done with an admirably firm sense of character and a loving eye for the landscape of the Mississippi valley in the neighbourhood of New Orleans. Miss Bristow is a good story-teller, as adroit in dramatic effect as she is emotionally sincere in sympathy. . . Not a completely harmonious novel, but a very honest and well-written one."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p337 Jl 13 '40 380w

Wis Lib Bul 36:112 Je '40

BRITISH universities encyclopedia; 2v; v 1, World's universities; v 2, World's libraries and librarians. 571p 10gns 1939 British universities encyclopedia, ltd, Bessemer house, Adelphi, London, W.C.2. [English publication; handled by G. E. Stechert, N.Y.]

378 Colleges and universities. Libraries

"The arrangement of the information is a geographical one under four general headings, (1) Europe, including Great Britain, Northern Ireland, Irish Free State and Malta, (2) British Empire. (3) United States of America and

BRION (brē-ohN)

(4) Other overseas countries. Subheadings are alphabetically arranged by country and under each country alphabetically by city, i.e., Europe, Czecho-Slovakia—Bratislava, Brno (Brünn), Olomouc, etc. The general scheme followed for the individual entries is to give a short history of the institution, the number of students enrolled, and a list under each department of those of professional rank. . . V. II, World's Libraries and Librarians is similar in arrangement, content and format to World's Universities. . . The information is arranged under four general headings, (1) Europe, (2) British Empire, (3) United States of America and (4) Other overseas countries. Subheadings under these general headings are alphabetically arranged by country and under each country alphabetically by city, i.e., Europe, Belgium-Antwerp, Arlon, Ath, Bruges, etc." Subscription Bks Bul

"The historical paragraphs [in World's Universities] where included, are clearly written and generally accurate. Among the inaccuracies noted was the date of the founding of the University of New Brunswick, given as 1859. The date given in Index Generalis, 1938 and in the calendar of this university is 1800. The address of the University of Alabama is given as Tuscaloosa, instead of University, Alabama. . . For most American libraries the information is extremely brief being limited to the date of founding, name of the librarian and the number of volumes in the library collection. The statistics are inaccurate in many instances in v. II. . . In view of the inaccuracies, incompleteness and high cost of the set it is not recommended except for those larger libraries which can afford the set as an extra purchase."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 11:1 Ja '40 1500w

BRITT, GEORGE. The fifth column is here! 124p pa $1 Funk, W.

351.74 Spies. Aliens—U.S. European war, 1939—U.S. 40-31588

"According to Mr. Britt there is in this country a Nazi Fifth Column, one million strong, which is occupying strategic spots—factories, offices, educational institutions—working and waiting to break down our industrial machine as well as our psychological defenses. . . Mr. Britt's roll of Fifth Columnists is a long one. It includes the German and Italian diplomatic representatives in Washington and in the consulates of those countries throughout the nation. It includes the German-American Bund and its members, and innumerable other German and Italian organizations in this country. It includes foreign language newspapers, foreign agents and propagandists. It includes Communists." N Y Times

Cath World 152:253 N '40 70w

"Names and incidents are piled up profusely, but the reader will be left a bit bewildered because the author does not present the adequate reasons for this plot, or show how it can be effectively counteracted. Another serious omission, in the face of the growing Fifth Column hysteria, is the author's neglect to bring out in a positive way the contributions by the anti-nazi and anti-fascist German and Italian Americans and others." Emmanuel Chapman

Commonweal 32:452 S 20 '40 190w

Nation 151:253 S 21 '40 150w

Reviewed by Mill Lampell

New Repub 103:598 O 28 '40 360w

"Always a courageous journalist, Mr. Britt, at present an editorial and feature writer on The New York World Telegram, has stepped forward and pointed his sword at some of those in our midst who are working for Hitler and Mussolini, and against our own form of government. . . Altogether he has done a useful, if not all-embracing, job. Though frequently he has not gone behind the scenes he has made a contribution to the study of one of the major problems before us." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p9 S 1 '40 650w

"The author's figures—5,000,000 Fascists or sympathizers in Central and South America, 1,000,000 in the United States—may be too high, but even so his book makes rather sober reading."

New Yorker 16:55 Ag 31 '40 50w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 11 '41 550w

BRITTAIN, VERA MARY (MRS GEORGE EDWARD GORDON CATLIN). Testament of friendship; the story of Winifred Holtby. 412p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Holtby, Winifred (W) 40-27027

Biography of the English novelist, author of South Riding (Book Review Digest, 1936) who died in 1935 at the age of thirty-seven. The author, who was an intimate friend describes her girlhood in Yorkshire; her war work in England and France; her years of journalism in London, when the two writers shared a flat in Maida Vale; and her enthusiasm for unselfish service to others.

Atlantic Ap '40 120w

Booklist 36:213 F 1 '40

"Apart from the personal element the book has value to students of present-day fiction and of the trends of thought and action among women directly after the great war. . . But most of all, the book is valuable for just what its title implies—proof out of real life that friendship did not die with the generation of Emerson." M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 Ja 14 '40 750w

"The facts of Winifred Holtby's life are all here in usually interesting, though sometimes repetitious, detail. There are occasional omissions: for instance, the American reader would appreciate a fuller explanation of the magazine 'Time and Tide,' of which she was a director. And the biography exhibits the same emotional immaturity that is to be found in 'Testament of Youth.' Miss Brittain is as truly a war casualty as those who were killed or shell-shocked: she faced loss and suffering before life had given her time to put on that cloak of mild cynicism in which most of us are protected. It is therefore not surprising that she attached herself so devotedly to a friend whose genius for living could blot out her own bitterness. Nor that the book has the flavor of a paean composed by a girl in the Lower Fourth to an adored Senior Prefect. It was not written in haste, but perhaps it was written from too near a view." Charlotte Bassett

Boston Transcript p11 Ja 11 '40 800w

Cath World 151:379 Je '40 450w

Christian Century 57:116 Ja 24 '40 90w

"Miss Brittain's tribute is nobly paid, with tenderness, yet with restraint, with a power of controlled emotion that forces one to feel and to understand, and that leaves one at the end deeply moved. It is a book worthy of the author of 'Testament of Youth'—and that is very high praise." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 17 '40 750w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson

Churchman 154:17 Mr 15 '40 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"From chapter 1 onwards the author's competent literary craftsmanship asserts itself, with the result that a remarkably well told story of a remarkably well loved person unfolds itself. It is not too long, it is not too meticulously documented, it is not oversentimentalised, it is not coldly impersonal. It tells us what we want to know about Winifred Holtby's domestic background, about her social activities, her literary work, herself. And yet about herself it does not tell us more than—nor perhaps even so much as—the illuminating series of letters to Jean McWilliam, published a few years ago under the title 'Letters to a Friend.' But the biography covers a more varied field and a wider range of personal contacts, and in this sense it certainly does tell us more." Mary Stocks

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '40 500w

BRITTAIN, V. M.—Continued

"Had the friendship of Vera Brittain for Winifred Holtby been untinctured by idolatry, 'Testament of Friendship' might have been less redolent of an epitaph. The sustained impulse of the writer has been to extol, with the result that she has fabricated a woman in the semblance of a ministering angel, whose wings overshadow every human relationship." Eileen Holding

+ — Nation 150:260 F 17 '40 350w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 102:384 Mr 18 '40 800w

"Testament of Friendship is a difficult book to describe. Miss Brittain, in spite of the clotted, adjectival redundancy of her style, has a remarkable power of self-expression. Whatever she writes throbs with intense feelings of tragedy and frustration, and comes to the reader like a sacrifice on the altar of self-pity. You may dislike such public offerings of the intimate details of the heart; you may doubt whether life can really be such a poignant affair all the time; you may even, with a superior air, pooh-pooh such extravagant femininity; but you will not, unless you are very hard-boiled, leave Miss Brittain's book unfinished; and when you look back on it, whatever prejudices she has offended, you will be forced to admit that, though she sometimes uses clumsy tools, she has built a solid structure and made thousands of people think about Winifred Holtby, for whom South Riding is the vague memory of a pleasant film." R. H. S. Crossman

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:45 Ja 13 '40 1100w

"It is a biography which is worth reading, though its presentation falls considerably short of perfection. Vera Brittain has none of Winifred Holtby's humor, and she neither looks at the world with so much imagination nor writes with so incisive a style; she makes little differentiation of emphasis; nor does she recover easily from even old hurts. And it is not in the biographer's words but in her own that Winifred Holtby becomes a real personality in these pages." Katherine Woods

+ — N Y Times p2 Ja 14 '40 1100w

"Really moving, despite the loose writing and the frequently mystrico-sentimental tone."

+ — New Yorker 15:63 Ja 13 '40 50w

"Here is a picture of a life, as quickly, as intelligently, as fully lived as any, where there was still richness in love and work, and joy in loyalty." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ja 13 '40 1500w

"The quality of the book . . . is a paradox. To read it is to suffer almost continuous embarrassment. One feels that awful discomfort around the collar, that queasy wish to be somewhere else a long way off, induced in some by crooners, in others by patriotic recitations, in others by dear-doggie talk, and in most people by the spectacle of anyone taking off, as here, their skin in public. . . Yet, hot behind the ears and passionately thankful not to be reading aloud, one continues eagerly to read; for in spite of everything the record is convincing. Here was a woman, and here was a friendship, in a million." Honor Croome

+ — Spec 164:115 Ja 26 '40 700w

"The book moves slowly, for there is much detail, and there is no humor. One wonders how anyone can write about Winifred Holtby and be serious all the time, for Winifred sparkled with humor. It is an idealistic picture which Miss Brittain gives us of Winifred Holtby, as is apt to be the case when one woman writes in admiration of another, but it is sincere and warmly and sympathetically written."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 13 '40 650w

"Throughout Miss Brittain's biography, with all its mass of irrelevant detail, its author's vigorous self-justification and trumpet-blowing, the personality of Winifred Holtby emerges radiant and serene as well as touchingly young."

Times [London] Lit Sup p3 Ja 6 '40 950w

Wis Lib Bul 36:47 Mr '40

BRO, MRS MARGUERITTE (HARMON). When children ask. 268p $2 Willett

173.5 Parent and child. Child study. Conduct of life 40-6964

A series of chapters addressed to parents, dealing with the questions children ask and how they should be answered. The questions range from What makes the noise in the radiator? to How are babies born? and What is God? The author is herself the mother of four children. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:394 Je 15 '40

"Mrs. Bro's book cannot fail to be a great help to parents who want their children to think of them as their wisest and most trusted friends and not as stuffy old folks who have forgotten, if they ever knew, what it was like to be young."

+ Christian Century 57:514 Ap 17 '40 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"The lazy parent casting about for a crutch will scan these chapters in vain. The matter is not over-simplified. On the other hand, the thoughtful father and mother will find much practical guidance." W. A. Binkley

+ Crozer Q 17:234 Jl '40 210w

Reviewed by E. J. Chave

J Religion 20:409 O '40 210w

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. At midsummer time; a story of Sweden [il. by the author]. 80p $1.50 Knopf

Children in Sweden (W) 40-6807

A Swedish midsummer's day festival is pictured here thru the eyes of Sigrid, aged nine, and her charges, the twins, aged four.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

"You never can tell nowadays, when you buy a book for a child, whether you're getting a historical document. Anyway, in this one, Sweden is still alive." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 5 '40 480w

"Miss Brock's pictures are just right for her story, for she has visited Sweden and knows these good friends, their customs and their country." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 29 '40 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:269 Jl '40 130w

"Large libraries will find it useful for nine- and ten-year-old readers." J. L. Sauer

Library J 65:543 Je 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 20w

"With a touch that is light but sure Miss Brock tells a story that will please 7 to 9 year olds. It is made the more convincing by her drawings. Grown-ups also will enjoy the book, for here is the atmosphere of a country and a picture of childhood that, though slight, is true and gay and gracious." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 19 '40 340w

New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 40w

Wis Lib Bul 36:143 O '40

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Too fast for John [il. by the author]. [95p] $1 Knopf

40-10078

Describes a trip to California, taking two days and nights on a streamline train, which small John made with his aunt. John decided the train was too fast for him, but he liked to travel.

"This story repeats just enough to make it very easy reading; it is steadily amusing and the pictures true to life. People whose small boys are 'train crazy' should know about it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 22 '40 140w

"Trains and travel are fascinating subjects for small boys and in this easy-to-read book they will enjoy John's trip on one of the new red and silver streamliners." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 50w

"Much real information is given in this easy-to-read story. Illustrations in black and white by the author add to the interest." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 150w

BROCKUNIER, SAMUEL HUGH. The irrepressible democrat, Roger Williams. 305p map $4 Ronald

B or 92 Williams, Roger 40-31938

"Biographies of Roger Williams have in the past been concerned too largely with blame or praise, even when they have not been special pleading. In this respect, Mr. Brockunier's book is a notable exception. It is true that the author shares the liberal viewpoint, and is sympathetic toward his subject, but he does not glorify him. Instead, with very careful scholarship, he shows his relation to the general movement of Protestant reform and to the political issues in England, in the Colonies, and between the two during his life. With considerable art in the early part of the work, he somewhat subordinates Williams, and later allows him to become increasingly dominant as his life progresses and his impact upon colonial politics increases." Am Pol Sci R

"The biography deserves criticism for the lack of an effective conclusion. It does not attempt a careful summary of Williams' significance for his time. . . Rather, under the title 'Williams and the American Tradition' it informs us of early posthumous neglect and misinterpretation and of subsequent restoration to fame, until at last Williams has become a lesser hero of American history. Even in doing this, however, Mr. Brockunier gives a cavalier outline, rather than a careful inquiry, into the reasons for the change; and in a book generally so excellent this failure is as regrettable as it is glaring." T. I. Cook

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:1225 D '40 1200w

"The consideration is a careful one, and no one can deny that it contributes to our knowledge of Williams and of Rhode Island social history during his lifetime. The discussion of land policies is particularly valuable, and the map in the end-pieces does much to clarify a complex section of American colonial geography. But the position of Williams in relation to his time is not designated with greater accuracy than it has been before. He remains the 'Irrepressible Democrat,' and democracy remains undefined." E. S. Morgan

+ — New Eng Q 13:728 D '40 1350w

Social Studies 31:378 D '40 30w

BROGAN, DENIS WILLIAM. France under the republic; the development of modern France (1870-1939) [Eng title: The development of modern France, 1870-1939]. 744p maps $5 Harper [21s Hamilton, H]

944.08 France—History. France—Politics and government 40-33736

"Political history of France from the war of 1870 to the outbreak of the war of 1939. [It carries] us through the rapid débâcle of 1870 and 1871, through the difficult and sometimes scandalous political life of the 'eighties and 'nineties, through the agonies of the war of 1914 and the intoxication of victory, through the troubled period of disillusionment and disarray 'between two wars.'" (Spec) Epilogue. Index.

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 Ja '41

"It has been my business, for some forty years, to read every important book about contemporary France: I have never come across one that was at the same time so full, so clear, so fair and so brilliantly written. The wealth of information in these 700 pages is amazing." Albert Guerard

+ Books p3 D 15 '40 1400w

"It is a book of more than 700 large pages; it is the work of a scholar; but the general public will read it with unflagging interest. Although it avoids all scholarly paraphernalia, it gives careful attention to every detail, and it is based on the most conscientious research and intimate contact." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 151:338 O 12 '40 800w

"Nothing could be timelier than the publication of Professor Brogan's admirable history of the Third Republic. For there is no question to-day which is asked with greater persistency than the question why France collapsed. The book, naturally, does not deal with the immediate causes of the breakdown; but anyone who wishes to understand the deep and fundamental causes of France's weakness cannot do better than read Brogan. . . While Brogan is a scholar, he is also a brilliant writer, and the time spent on his remarkable book will be a gilt-edged mental investment." A. W.

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:141 Ag 10 '40 900w

"Professor Brogan has produced a work of dispassionate scholarship, intimate knowledge and insight, clarity and wit. And although it is too much to hope that so long and detailed a historical study will be read (as it ought to be) by every intelligent American, we must point out at once that the author's design of a book 'for the general public' is illuminatingly fulfilled." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 12 '41 1800w

"Professor Brogan tells the story with laudable impartiality. He distributes blame right and left, with equal severity. . . His qualities of style, implemented with a dry Scotch humor, make the reading of this history as provocative as it is moving. 'In France, the forces of order have never been orderly.' The book is full of such epigrams. Indeed if Professor Brogan did not know his subject so well, one might now and then accuse him of being flippant. Some of his epigrams are charming, others shocked me." André Maurois

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 S 28 '40 950w

"An authoritative, much-needed account which gives a well-rounded picture although emphasizing politics."

+ Social Studies 31:379 D '40 50w

"This is a work of immense learning. There is no important political event of these seventy kaleidoscopic years which escapes Professor Brogan's massive survey, no French politician, major or minor, who is not fitted accurately into his place in these crowded pages. In so vast a collection of facts there must be a few slips, but I have spotted only one: a reference to Clemenceau as 'just-under forty' (he was twenty-nine) at the time of the Commune." E. H. Carr

+ Spec 165:18 Jl 5 '40 900w

"Mr. Brogan is careful, eloquent, incisive, and understanding. His volume is not a livre de circonstance. It is a treatise that will be read for many years and, I suggest, will, to those who wish fully to comprehend the underlying causes of France's collapse, offer a good deal more light and leading than many of the more contemporary materials." Lindsay Rogers

+ Survey G 29:624 D '40 240w

Times [London] Lit Sup p326 Jl 6 '40 1700w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy

Yale R n s 30:407 winter '41 400w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Night in Bombay. 351p $2.50 Harper

(W) 40-8657

"The heterogeneous and sophisticated society of Bombay is the background. Into this society comes Bill Wainwright, a reformed playboy, on a business trip for his father. Here he meets his former wife, Carol Halma, a beautiful ex-

BROMFIELD, LOUIS—Continued
dancer, and Buck Merrill, a college friend doing welfare work in the districts beyond the city." Library J

Atlantic Jl '40 190w
Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"Mr. Bromfield's capacity to handle the threads of his completely convincing story and at the same time to build into it a good deal of the life of India as travelers see it, makes 'Night in Bombay' an informing as well as an engrossing tale. Sordid and sensational though it be in detail, he manages to end the novel on a rather high level of idealism because two excellent young human animals stand ready to make a completely unselfish gesture for love with a capital L." F. H. Bullock
+ — Books p2 My 12 '40 1250w

"Mr. Bromfield is primarily a magnificent story-teller. He uses action, intrigue and even impish maliciousness to further his absorbing plot. . . As a literary masterpiece we would not rank 'Night in Bombay' with 'The Green Bay Tree' or with 'The Strange Case of Miss Annie Spragg.' Even so it is an enormously exciting and intoxicating story." Olga Owens
+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 11 '40 900w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"Libraries that bought the earlier novel [The Rains Came] will doubtless want this. Not for the young adult." A. T. Davidson
Library J 65:352 Ap 15 '40 130w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 2 '40 110w

" 'Night in Bombay' is a little phony and a little cheap—and under Mr. Bromfield's flawless direction it works like a charm. It moves with incredible ease through the heat mists of India, from the garish splendor of the Taj Mahal Hotel to the showy race track to the filth of the mill workers' section and back again to the fantastic hotel. No wonder it also moves easily on to the best-seller list." Miriam Borgenicht
New Repub 102:800 Je 10 '40 370w

"Mr. Bromfield has handled his numerous characters very ably; the reader is never in doubt as to their identity and their relations with one another. He has presented a group, drawn together partly by chance, partly by natural attraction, and he has made each of them a living person, while around and about them, barely seen by most of them and less understood, swarms the teeming life of India, its heat and filth and poverty and degradation." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p6 My 12 '40 900w

" 'Night in Bombay,' all gloss and a yard wide, is as hugely readable as 'The Rains Came' and even more pervious to sober analysis. It offers you a quick and easy way of learning nothing about India and a great deal about a collection of belated F. Scott Fitzgerald folk. . . All the characters are vigorously overdrawn and would be readily understood and recognized by any nine-year-old who had not led too sheltered a life. The contrasts of mood and locale are equally violent and so skillfully and vividly developed that you wonder why Hollywood should bother (as it will) to film this book—it's such a good movie already. . . I have rarely read a book that contained in harmonious solution so much first-rate craftsmanship and second-rate feeling." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 16:96 My 11 '40 420w

"This is fiction for fun. And as such it is done with sophistication, good meaty sentimentality, a shrewd seeing eye for surfaces, and the greatest skill in writing for pure entertainment. Half-way between Richard Harding Davis and Ernest Hemingway, the story catches and holds the romantic attention of these times. It is smart enough to please such intellectuals as are not afraid to relax, and it will certainly satisfy those souls who read for entertainment and not as a chore in adult education. Mr. Bromfield has given us the best gin sling for our young summer: it has both the right flavor and the correct alcoholic content." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 My 11 '40 700w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith
Spec 165:152 Ag 9 '40 260w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 70w
Time 35:102 My 13 '40 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 17 '40 350w

"One doesn't believe a word of it, or a character in it; one doesn't even believe in the sprawling, scrawling, background of India which Mr. Bromfield has studied at first hand. But it is an extraordinarily easy book to read, because Mr. Bromfield enjoys every slick bit of it, without ever quite betraying whether or not he really believes a word of it himself." Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:xii summer '40 100w

BRONSON, FRANCIS WOOLSEY. Nice people don't kill. 292p $2 Farrar 40-31516

Detective story.

"Whether or not the tale proves that nice (well-to-do) people don't kill, it should serve to entertain almost any customer with its forthright deducing by Sheriff Jones, its sinister socialites and its ingenious jigsaw. Mr. Bronson is one of those Yale authors. He's president of the Yale Alumni Publications and editor of the 'Yale Alumni Magazine.' " Will Cuppy
+ Books p18 O 20 '40 140w

"This is Mr. Bronson's first mystery novel, but many an old hand at the game might well be proud to have produced it." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 160w

"Quest for missing diamond, trailing of black-mailer, and search for pivotal volume of Keats add zip to lively and exciting opus. Commendable."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 50w

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Children of the sea; il. by the author. 264p map $2 Harcourt
(W) 40-27684

The first half of this book for young readers tells the story of a dolphin from the Florida Everglades, and the marvelous sights he sees in the ocean caves and coral islands. The second half is devoted to Smudgy, a Nassau boy, who made friends with the dolphin.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

"A new classification must be made for this book—better, take it out of pigeonholes altogether, and let a child who loves nature and his own kind enjoy it for what it is. . . Much enjoyment in the book comes from the uncommonly large number of beautiful nature pictures." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 N 10 '40 300w
Cath World 152:377 D '40 40w
Churchman 154:35 D 1 '40 30w

"Mr. Bronson is past master in combining scientific accuracy with an engaging and lively style of writing. . . Plenty of fun and excitement and a convincing sense of reality make this finely illustrated story one to awaken a keen interest in the life of the Caribbean Sea." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:346 S '40 120w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Horn Bk M 17:61 Ja '41 40w

"The division of the narrative may detract from its appeal to children, as may the use of dialect, but the charm of the story, the multitude of Mr. Bronson's drawings, and the engaging humor of his writing should be bait enough to catch and hold attention." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 120w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 30w

"Excellent writing, scientific background, and many helpful pictures make this a book of distinction." Lena Barksdale
+ Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 30w

"This is the best of the many excellent books Mr. Bronson has written for boys and girls. . . The book is unusual in its combination of scientific accuracy and fancy. The life of the sea creatures is described in a fashion that is absorbing and exciting and touched with humor. The illustrations have the accuracy of all Mr. Bronson's work; in addition they have real beauty and give a fine sense of the wonder and vastness of the sea. For boys and girls from 10 to 14." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p32 N 10 '40 160w
New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 70w

"Successful and unusual." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 160w
Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

BROOKE, MRS ESTHER EBERSTADT. Career clinic: the answer to your job problem. 290p $1.90 Farrar

371.425 Profession, Choice of. Applications for positions. Success (W) 40-27303

This book of advice, by an employment counselor, is divided into three parts: Part one, Find yourself, shows how by tests and personal analyses one learns what one is fitted to do; part two, Find your job, gives advice on applications, employment agencies, interviews, etc; part three, Find success, contains three chapters: What part endeavor? What part luck? What part you? Index.

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

"This advice on choosing and getting jobs is as sound and stimulating as we are likely to get in print."
+ Books p22 Mr 24 '40 270w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40
Wis Lib Bul 36:44 Mr '40

BROOKE, IRIS. Western European costume, and its relation to the theatre; 2v; v 2, Seventeenth to mid-nineteenth century. 144p il col pl $5 Macmillan [18s Harrap]

391 Costume (W) [39-27578]

The second volume in the author's history of European costume contains many line drawings and sixteen plates in color. There is an index which includes references to volume one (Book Review Digest, 1939).

Booklist 36:300 Ap 1 '40

"It is unfortunate that the sections devoted to the theatre, to justify the sub-title, no more warrant their inclusion than they did in Volume I. Miss Brooke is an admirable draughtsman, but she is neither a clear thinker nor a skilful writer, and she does not show the specialized knowledge of the theatre, theatrical costume and dramatic literature which would be necessary if these sections were to be lifted above the scissors and paste level."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 10 '40 450w

BROOKE, SYLVIA LEONORA (BRETT) lady, rani of Sarawak. A star fell. 257p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton 40-8816

This study of Eastern mysticism brought in contact with Occidental beliefs tells the story of Rama Chandra, a member of a hill tribe of Borneo, who as a child comes under the influence of Protestant missionaries. "A chance and wholly unconsidered fragment of a sermon . . . is taken literally by the glowing adolescent boy, who consecrates his life, thenceforth, to an altruistic, mystic purpose. His hard, ascetic years of preparation, his search for the perfect wife . . . the birth of the child 'Mary' and the death of her mother are the prelude to an exquisite idyl of sheltered, dedicated girlhood that breaks down into tragedy when nature intervenes." (N Y Times)

"It is a fantastic narrative, vivid in detail but obscure in its ultimate goal." Lisle Bell
Books p10 My 19 '40 340w
Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 110w

"It is a book in which the cruelest irony and starkest realism are offset by pity and understanding. An unusual, thought provoking book whose appeal is half primitive, half exotic." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p7 My 19 '40 700w

Reviewed by Talbot Mundy
Sat R of Lit 22:15 Je 15 '40 400w

"The book shows some carelessness in organization, and rather too great a reliance on picturesque coincidence for effect. Furthermore, the style in which it is written is often more florid than even such a theme and setting require. Nevertheless, the story moves rapidly and is consistently interesting in spite of these structural defects."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '40 420w

BROOKES, GEORGE S. Thank you, America! the tribute of an Englishman. 199p $2 Dodd

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-6764

When an English immigrant landed in New York in 1912 he thought he would be satisfied if he could find an opportunity to earn a modest living as a printer. This volume of reminiscences tells how America gave him the opportunity to study and work as he rose from a humble post as lay preacher in a tiny church to become an ordained preacher, a graduate of a theological school and college, a pastor of a large city church.

"After the flip criticisms of hasty visitors, who often reveal unflattering truths with unholy glee, it is a welcome change to hear the grateful praise of one who, though not blind to faults, sees America as still a land of opportunity."
+ Christian Century 57:454 Ap 3 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. H. Crowell
Library J 65:166 F 15 '40 130w
N Y Times p24 Mr 31 '40 360w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 600w

BROOKS, RICHARD ALBERT EDWARD, ed. See Carlyle, T. Journey to Germany, autumn 1858

BROOKS, ROBERT ROMANO RAVI. As steel goes, . . . unionism in a basic industry. 275p il $3 Yale univ. press

331.88 Steel industry and trade. Trade unions—U.S. 40-27479

The author of Unions of Their Own Choosing (Book Review Digest, 1939) here tells the story of trade unionism in the American steel industry from its beginnings to the present. Index.

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh
Am Econ R 30:881 D '40 700w

Reviewed by C. E. Warne
Ann Am Acad 211:232 S '40 350w
Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40
Christian Century 57:641 My 15 '40 180w

"This book is more than just the story of labor in the steel industry. It provides an insight into the broad structural problems of the industry, the personalities in the industry, both in labor and the employer groups, and the recent changes in the lives of all those living and working in steel towns. Though Prof. Brooks concedes a healthy interest in furthering collective bargaining, his discussion of unionism in the steel industry is remarkably fair to both sides. A good index is included." J. B. Parrish

BROOKS, R. R. R.—Continued

+ Churchman 154:17 Je 15 '40 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"With a complete awareness of the dramatic intensity of the story, Mr. Brooks has thrown his academic inhibitions to the wind and has written an enthusiastic and exciting book. For the most part, the evidence on which the book is based was the result of interviews of the author with a large number of union men, leaders and rank and file, as well as factory managers, superintendents, personnel men and others. The result is that the book suffers from the vices of its virtues. In speaking through the mouth of a union leader as in chapter 3, or through the mouth of a steel worker, as in chapter 1, Brooks presents a personalized version of the events, with the kind of ex parte statements that are more fitting for feature articles in the daily press than for perpetuation in book form as a valid account of an epic story." Benjamin Haskel

+ — Commonweal 32:192 Je 21 '40 750w

"Throughout the book, general issues are presented by means of particular illustrations. Half of the author's material was obtained from interviews with scores of steel employers, union leaders, and workers. Numerous photographs help make the text as absorbing and readable as fiction."

+ Management R 29:231 Je '40 360w

Reviewed by Theresa Wolfson
Nation 151:308 O 5 '40 650w

Reviewed by N. J. Ware
Pol Sci Q 55:458 S '40 750w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman
Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 3 '40 550w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Survey G 30:95 F '41 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 N 9 '40 120w

Reviewed by S. H. Slichter
Yale R n s 30:197 autumn '40 430w

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. New England: Indian summer, 1865-1915. 557p $3.75 Dutton

810.9 American literature—New England. American literature—History and criticism. New England—Intellectual life

(W) 40-30493

Takes up the study of New England's literary history where the former volume: The Flowering of New England (Book Review Digest, 1936) left off, with 1865, and brings it up to the year 1915. The study recreates a period of decline and decadence, with some interludes of brilliance and vigor, the whole outlined with scholarly detail and enlivened with many anecdotes. Index.

Booklist 37:9 S '40

Bookmark 2:6 Ja '41

"Mr. Brooks has found the later nineteenth century a time of fascinating complexity, calling for all his delicacy in social diagnosis and esthetic appraisal, and he has responded to the many problems of interpretation with superb insight and power. In 'New England: Indian Summer' he has produced the richest, most penetrating and most significant of all his books." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p1 Ag 18 '40 1700w

"The story Van Wyck Brooks tells is punctuated by the lives of four almost-great men, all in some degree frustrated: Henry Adams, Henry James, Francis Parkman and William Dean Howells, but the rich light of the tapestry Brooks weaves is largely due to the mixed colors of scores of lesser, half-forgotten men and women. . . Van Wyck Brooks paints scores, hundreds, of such minor characters with his lavish pen. Perhaps their abundance confuses the total picture; perhaps the confusion of such lesser men is the essence of the age." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 Ag 15 '40 600w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 650w

"A work full of life and beauty and wisdom, a surging narrative, and criticism filled with light." T. M.

+ Cath World 152:113 O '40 1000w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 32:430 S 13 '40 900w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen
Current Hist & Forum 52:2 F 13 '41 280w

"The same careful scholarship and vivid style of the preceding volume are here. Ranking among the outstanding non-fiction publications of the year, it is a must book for libraries large and small." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 65:651 Ag '40 70w

"For over five hundred pages the long waning of New England's golden day is chronicled with the fullest resources of [the author's] affection and research, now enhanced by a drama of decline and melancholy attenuation even more expressly suited to his gifts and sympathies than the story of 'The Flowering.' . . Mr. Brooks has capitalized to the utmost the pathos and melancholy dignity of this drama. He has lovingly resurrected his hosts of authors and brought the warmth of his intense antiquarian zeal to all their acts and works. His scenes show his superb felicity in genre and milieu. . . His quotations and footnotes alone make his book unrivaled, a trove of discoveries and recognitions." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 151:137 Ag 17 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Theodore Morrison
New Eng Q 13:719 D '40 1300w

"Mr. Brooks's medium and field are justified, as every writer's must be, by the fact that he can produce through them a beautiful book which has something of importance to say. His love of literature is not to be proved or disproved by his habit of evaluating authors in terms of their social implications against the immediate local background any more than the knowledge of humanity of a novelist is to be tested by his setting or his not setting his characters in relation to the rest of the world or by his neglect, in his preoccupation with his own particular scale of values, of someone else's different scale of values. It is proved by the purity of his enthusiasms and by his own splendid abilities as an artist." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 103:452 S 30 '40 2550w

"Mr. Brooks does not attempt to impose upon this period any artificial unity. He recognizes, rather, its complex, incongruous and disassociated character and he interprets it to us in a tapestry skillfully and subtly woven in pastel colors and broken lines. Here is no grand theme such as was furnished earlier by transcendentalism and reform, but a dozen minor themes, none of them impressive or important. Yet from this fragmentation there emerges a pattern significant for the history of New England and for the whole of our intellectual history." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 18 '40 1950w

"The book thousands have been waiting for is out at last, and the only essential news is that it is at least as fine as its predecessor—to my taste, even finer. . . [It] confirms once more the indisputable position of Van Wyck Brooks as the premier literary historian now at work in the United States. If there is a careless, a vulgar, an inexact phrase in the whole of these five hundred and forty-three lucent pages, I have still to find it." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:59 Ag 17 '40 800w

"To the study of the maltreated decades Van Wyck Brooks brings the splendid talents which made memorable 'The Flowering of New England.' The same insight, the same sympathy, the same devouring eye for revelatory phrase and characteristic gesture, the same capacity for adroit synthesis, and, happiest of all, the same supple and luminous prose reappear. New England landscapes—the sea, the dark pines, the cliffs, or else the abandoned fields and the silent villages—flash upon the page as settings for these charming and talented writers, at once so memorable and so forgotten." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 22:3 Ag 17 '40 2800w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 1700w

"Mr. Brooks's 'Indian Summer' is not merely another book; it is an event in literature." Lilian Whiting

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 650w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:473 S '40 1250w

Time 36:80 Ag 19 '40 1700w

Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

"Van Wyck Brooks has triumphed again. The second section of his projected literary history of America is a worthy successor to 'The Flowering of New England,' and that means that everyone who cares for books at all must own this book, keep it within arm's reach for deliberate absorbing, and very likely make it the centre of a winter's program of reading. It is not every day that we are bidden to such a feast." G. F. Whicher

+ Yale R n s 30:158 autumn '40 1250w

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy's cousin Weedly; il. by Kurt Wiese. 283p $2 Knopf 40-32216

The animals on Mr Bean's farm, left to guard the place while the Beans were in Europe, foil the plot of some visiting relatives to carry off a family heirloom, and at the same time help Freddy's shy cousin to overcome his handicap.

"Comparisons are never fair, but all things considered I think I can safely call Mr. Brooks the Wodehouse of American juvenile fiction. Nobody else has just this ability to put over the incredible and make it seem the most natural thing in the world, the unpredictable dialogue and, what's more, the knack of keeping this up for book after book, practically all alike but preserving the illusion of difference. . . The play the animals write and act has the air of being lugged in, and I could well spare it, but the rest is up to sample." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 5 '41 270w

"It all makes the most delightful nonsense. The tea party, the incident at the movies, the play given by the animals, the lesson taught by the wise old owl, and the battle with the caterpillars are good incidents for reading aloud to eight and nine-year-olds. The Kurt Wiese illustrations are in the spirit of the text." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 140w

BROOME, EDWIN CORNELIUS, and ADAMS, EDWIN WESLEY. Our democracy; il. by Hilda Scott. 466p $1.32 Macmillan

342.73 Citizenship. U.S.—Politics and government 39-18988

"A text for young people on citizenship and government, in which emphasis is laid on the duties of citizens rather than on their rights and privileges. The book is organized about experiences common to American students; these experiences are interpreted so as to lead to the study of governmental functions and institutions." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 36:116 N 15 '39

"The authors deserve especial commendation for their emphasis on civic ideals and character development. After each chapter they have inserted one or two questions designed to bring about proper social attitudes. The book is marked, too, by several unusual features, including chapters on 'Laws Everyone Should Know,' and a summary of parliamentary procedure in the appendix. Only two errors of fact were noted by the reviewer. . . This is a carefully done work in language which seldom gets away from the vocabulary of the adolescent." Robert Rienow

Social Educ 4:298 Ap '40 500w

BROPHY, JOHN. Gentleman of Stratford. 348p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Collins]

Shakespeare, William—Fiction (W) 40-3844

A novel which tells the story of Shakespeare's life, keeping as close to the known facts as possible and interpreting the nature of the man by intensive study of his writings.

"His very caution and respect sometimes make Mr. Brophy's Shakespeare a little noble and thin, rather more like a Victorian than an Elizabethan dramatist, and in the commentary on Shakespeare's work itself Mr. Brophy lacks the unusual insight which marked Mark Van Doren's recent study. Yet if the portrait of his protagonist reveals come inadequacies, Mr. Brophy's treatment of the Shakespearean era succeeds and admirably so. From the dim shadows of the past and the dusty pages of forgotten texts he's brought back a host of haunting memories." Maxwell Geismar

+ — Books p8 Ap 21 '40 800w

"Shakespeare was a man and therefore to be won to the novelist's purpose, and Mr. Brophy, facing the task squarely, has achieved a large measure of success. Not only is his Shakespeare a credible human being, but he touches our imagination sufficiently for us to give his genius the benefit of the doubt. . . Only in respect of his style do I think he has made a mistake; for he has attempted to give it an archaic turn. The result is an affected, mincing air that is much more apt than a few anachronisms to introduce a spurious element. However, in spite of this, the novel remains a very good novel indeed, thoughtfully conceived, and carried out with a vigorous, dashing ability." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 O 21 '39 550w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p5 Ag 29 '39 270w

"Once you concede the author's right to invention, here is fictionalized biography more vivid, more intelligent and generally more arresting than most."

+ New Repub 102:553 Ap 22 '40 60w

"Mr. Brophy is at pains to colour his period background, and bravely faces maggots, lust, stench and throat-slitting in the cause of verisimilitude. But the title of the book is all too apt; its hero is merely a gentleman from Stratford, and even his habit of quoting Shakespeare at great length cannot make him other than a dull little fellow with a penchant for purple phrases. Such a novel might have been written by Lytton, could have been forged by Ireland, but should not have been seriously attempted by anyone who was not more than a little of a genius." John Mair

— New Statesman & Nation 18:313 Ag 26 '39 500w

"Mr. Brophy is an admirable critic of Shakespeare and one might wish that he had kept to his critical suggestions instead of turning them into a novel. For a novel with Shakespeare as hero is impossible. On the one hand we have his life as we know it from the history of factual biography, and on the other we have his plays as we know them from the history of literature. To put the two together is the dream of biographical novelists, and Mr. Brophy is probably the very best of these; but readers will read novels as novels and Shakespeare as poetry, and to match the one with the other is the best of all possible conceptions and the worst of all possible achievements." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 14 '40 850w

"Great numbers will read this laborious book, and will be pleased to discover therefrom that the greatest and most enigmatic poet in the world would probably have made a pretty decent golfer, and was altogether a clubable sort of chap." Kate O'Brien

BROPHY, JOHN—Continued
— Spec 163:386 S 15 '39 340w

"Mr. Brophy's Shakespeare, as he insists in his postscript, must be to some extent Mr. Brophy himself. He is also—and here lies the strength of the book—a legitimate and lively deduction from the facts—a man whose smooth and gentle exterior concealed intellectual and emotional turmoil. . . Mr. Brophy's Shakespeare, by that or any other name, would be a vigorous and convincing portrait of a poet; but the reader must trudge many sandy leagues of Wardour Street English to get at him."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p505 Ag 26 '39 600w

BROWDER, EARL RUSSELL. The second imperialist war. 309p $2.75 Int. pubs.

940.53 European war, 1939-. Communism—U.S. U.S.—Foreign policy 40-11322

This book gathers the author's writings—speeches, articles, reports—for the period from March, 1939, to the beginning of May, 1940. Partial contents: Religion and communism; The world anti-fascist front and the struggles for peace in the United States; The U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R.—good neighbors; The German-Soviet non-aggression pact; The 20th anniversary of the Communist party of the United States; America and the Soviet Union; Internationalism—the tradition of Jefferson and Lincoln; The people against the war-makers; The Jewish people and the fight for peace; The historical significance of the Soviet-Finnish peace; The war plans of Roosevelt and Wall Street. Index.

Reviewed by C. M. Frasure
Am Pol Sci R 34:1247 D '40 300w

"It is a victory for liberalism that such a book can be published. It would be a victory for the judicial, or, if you prefer, for the scientific spirit, if it could be read widely, attentively and with an open mind. . . I read this volume honestly. It is a volume, not a book: a bundle of essays, articles, addresses, some of them very brief and very hastily sketched. But it is not a chance collection of ephemeral pieces. The issues discussed by Browder are of permanent interest, and he treats them with the earnestness and consistency of a believer." Albert Guerard
+ — Books p2 Ag 11 '40 1650w
Foreign Affairs 19:256 O '40 20w

"Marx and Lenin sometimes admitted that they had made mistakes, but Stalin is always right, and so are his imitators in the rest of the world. The Communist Party of the United States has the courage of its dogma, and thus goes on publishing Mr. Browder's speeches in book form, no matter how much the line changes. . . One might assume that Mr. Browder's life is made up of sudden revelations and astounding discoveries. I have come to doubt, however, whether he is anywhere near so stupid as he makes himself appear. His job is neither to anticipate changes nor mourn them when they have happened, but to do the best he can with the line that is given him. He sees himself as a brakeman on what Communists are fond of calling the railroad train of history. Others may ask where the locomotive is headed; Mr. Browder is satisfied if he can hang on." Granville Hicks
— New Repub 103:90 Jl 15 '40 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 460w

BROWN, MRS CATHERINE ESTELLE (HAYES). Letters to Mary; with a foreword by Charles Mac Arthur. 343p il $3 Random house

B or 92 Hayes, Helen (Mrs Charles Mac Arthur) (W) 40-27061

In the form of letters to her granddaughter, Mary Mac Arthur, the mother of Helen Hayes describes her daughter's career in minute detail, from early childhood to October 17, 1939. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"The idea is better than it sounds; its treatment and development excellent. Given a choice between a biography written by a press agent or an awed admirer and one written by a person as close to the subject as Mrs. Brown, the second wins. Especially if the writer is as hard-headed, as sensible and free of illusions as Mary's grandmother." Rose Feld
+ Books p6 Ja 28 '40 1200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40
New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 50w

"All through the crassness and silliness of this book we keep looking for glimpses of the Helen Hayes we know. Sometimes we find her. And if we have the patience to read through a great many pages which are, to put it gently, not worth reading, we may find indeed some nuggets of interest as the actress's talent develops and her achievement grows."
— + N Y Times p12 Ja 28 '40 600w

"At first glance, one would suppose that the coyness of this [book] would inevitably lead to the disaster which overtook Mrs. Parker on that memorable occasion which found her knee-deep in Mr. Milne. Second, third, and fourth glances leave a similar feeling of insecurity. And then an odd and rather pleasant thing happens. The mind rejects the whole device as too implausible, the eye ignores salutation, subscription, and rhetorical interrogation, and the stomach quiets. Because, in spite of everything, this is not primarily a sugary book. There is the salt of personality in it. Mrs. Brown's superficial naïveté proves to have astringency under the surface. Miss Hayes emerges charmingly, as one seen not only with love but with perception, and the book takes on character and flavor. It is informal and chatty, and it is for practical purposes without gush." Richard Lockridge
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:7 F 3 '40 650w

BROWN, CORA; BROWN, ROSE, and BROWN, ROBERT CARLTON. America cooks; practical recipes from 48 states. 986p maps $2.69 Norton

641.5 Cookery 40-6888

Typical recipes gathered from each of the forty-eight states of the United States. The arrangement is alphabetical, according to name of state. Index.

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

"It's chatty, humorous, practical, and interesting. It's more of a food book than a cook book, for you won't get any of that orderly classification of 'breads, pastries, meats, vegetables, sauces, desserts,' etc., characteristic of more conventional recipe collections in print. . . Experts will doubtless find omissions, while others may scoff at some of the attributions. But it is a book that offers plenty of fun in the reading and remarkable variety in the eating. And in drawing on both regional tastes and the racial traditions of the world as maintained in various sections, the Browns provide excellent material for the interpreter of the American scene." Ann Springer
+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 8 '40 500w
J Home Econ 32:396 Je '40 40w
Pratt p12 autumn '40

"Whether even modern facilities will make up for the deft, sure 'touch' of the cooks of a past era who originated and made famous some of these dishes may be a subject open to debate. Some also may ask whether a California or Texas cook or housewife would be able to prepare a genuine Rhode Island clam chowder. But in 'America Cooks' the Browns provide an admirable opportunity for an interstate exchange of popular recipes."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 370w

BROWN, CORA; BROWN, ROSE, and BROWN, ROBERT CARLTON. Outdoor cooking. 506p $2.50 Greystone

641.5 Cookery. Camping 40-8498

Instructions and recipes for outdoor cooking of a wide variety of foods, from clam chowders and barbecued meats to biscuits and flapjacks. Index.

"In this as in their dozen previous cook books, the Browns give good eaters a feast of good reading."

+ New Repub 103:93 Jl 15 '40 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

BROWN, COURTNEY PARMLY. Red iron! 258p $2 Dodd

40-31870

Describes the experiences of a newly graduated civil engineer in his search for work in his profession. He took any position which would advance him in his work, and his jobs ranged from construction work on a railroad bridge to work with the CCC camps.

Booklist 37:221 Ja 15 '41

Cath World 152:377 D '40 20w

"The story may suffer perhaps from the author's trying to cover too wide a range of experiences in the field of civil engineering and thus not being able to dwell enough in detail on any one phase. Will have good vocational use and be read by older boys from twelve to fifteen years." E. A. Groves

+ — Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 210w

BROWN, ELINOR. Holiday for hearts. 256p $2 Arcadia

40-29641

"The heroine, Polly Horton, lived in a big old rambling farm house with her grandmother, and wondered how she and Stan could ever get married when he would never work except at something he thought suitable to his training and station in life. . . Polly finally got desperate for money and advertised in the city papers for guests who might pay well for an old-fashioned Thanksgiving and Christmas in the country. Guests came in numbers and for a while it looked as if Stan might be right in his prophecies of crooks and thugs." N Y Times

"A lively seasonable romance." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 O 27 '40 80w

"Shoppers looking for a merry little Christmas story to amuse the young and innocent might consider Miss Brown's airy confection. It has a proper amount of mystery for the season, scheming and secret plotting, all for the happiness of others, and a plotty love story for two couples." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p27 N 17 '40 210w

BROWN, ELINOR. Little story book; il. by Grace Norcross. 30p $1.50 Oxford

40-5385

"A collection of thirteen stories for children of two and three years. Each story runs just one page in length and on the opposite page is a colorful illustration. The stories are of the simple, everyday experiences of very young children: a trip to the zoo; a ride on a bus; playing in the snow; feeding a squirrel; setting the table, etc." Library J

Booklist 36:330 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 My 12 '40 170w

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '40 60w

Reviewed by E. G. Mullan

Library J 65:213 Mr 1 '40 100w

"Were it not for the engaging pictures, which are gay in color and full of lively action, the book might seem keyed in too monotonous a tone. The occasional introduction of a climax, the use of a style less studiously level and less commonplace, without interfering with the simplicity and directness of these tales, would give them a more vital quality and a more lasting interest. But though it lacks the spark which a more imaginative treatment and a touch of humor would supply, this book will help to fill the need for realistic everyday stories for the youngest children." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '40 230w

Wis Lib Bul 36:72 Ap '40

BROWN, HERBERT ROSS. The sentimental novel in America, 1789-1860. 407p $3 Duke univ.

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism 41-135

"The author is Professor of English at Bowdoin and on the faculty of Duke University summer school. In this book he makes a contribution to the literature of novel writing. His history is fully documented with references to novels and novel-reading from Noah Webster's protest on the 'new-fangled taste for fiction' to the wide reading of domestic novels before the Civil War. In its development it becomes a history of the manners and mores of America." Library J

Reviewed by Catherine Van Dyne

Library J 65:1041 D 1 '40 200w

"Scholarly but amusing study."

New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 40w

Time 36:89 D 9 '40 450w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Broadway in review. 295p $2.75 Norton

792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism 40-27685

A book of essays on the theater combined with reviews of plays produced on Broadway during the last two seasons. The author is dramatic critic of the New York Post. Index.

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"When John Mason Brown puts Broadway in review on the lecture platform, as he not infrequently does, he stages a show which is often much more entertaining than some of the plays he talks about. He carries epigrammatic audacity to the point where the good ladies are deliciously afraid that he may carry it a bit further, and he makes sufficient parade of his sound and serious critical opinions to give his talks authority. But when he collects his reviews from the New York Post, over a two-year period, in book form, some of the qualities which make his talks pungent are seen to make his prose painful." W. P. Eaton

Books p20 O 13 '40 450w

"Although 'Broadway in Review' is the least ambitious of his books, it is actually one of the most valuable. . . With the single exception of Paul Vincent Carroll's 'The White Steed,' all the memorable plays recorded in this book are American. Mr. Brown discourses brilliantly about them. . . No newspaper reviewer equals Mr. Brown's ability to comprehend and convey that elusive entity which we call a production. Some of his most vivid observations are to be found in the pages he devotes to the artistry of such performers as Katharine Cornell, Helen Hayes, Tallulah Bankhead, Gertrude Lawrence, and, since there is nothing snobbish about his appreciations, Ethel Merman and Victor Moore. . . Moreover, Mr. Brown includes forthright reflections on the broader problems of dramatic theory, being notably successful when he discusses the nature of tragedy. . . 'Broadway in Review,' in short, is not only a vivid chronicle but a coruscating collection of criticism." John Gassner

+ N Y Times p16 O 13 '40 950w

BROWN, J. M.—Continued
"Over a period of years Mr. Brown has proved himself the ablest of the Broadway critics. He has (which no good critic can be very happy without) a fine background of the theatre. He reacts warmly to what he sees, whether with his mind, his emotions, or his sense of humor. He has an eye for detail and a sense of the whole. And he writes imaginatively, as though raiding one's mind for good things to say at midnight were as easy as raiding the icebox." Louis Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 9 '40 650w

"Mr. Brown, as much as any critic writing on Broadway today, nurses that vision of which he speaks in his foreword when he says 'the splendor of the critic's dream for the theatre's possible perfection is not only the best thing about him but his major excuse for being.' It is the splendor of that dream which the theatre needs to cherish today more than ever, and which Mr. Brown has succeeded in crystalizing in many pages of this book." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 24:409 D '40 650w

BROWN, JOSEPHINE CHAPIN. Public relief, 1929-1939. 524p $3.50 Holt

361.60973 Charities—U.S. U.S. Federal emergency relief administration 40-34168

"Miss Brown approaches her task from the historical angle. . . However, she attempts not merely a chronology of public and private social work, legislative enactments, expenditures, administrative procedures, etc., but, throughout the book, developments are analyzed against a background of changing philosophies, and relationships are clearly pointed out. Accordingly, the book is logically divided into four parts: (1) Public Relief before the Depression of 1929; (2) Unemployment Relief, 1929-1933; (3) The Federal Emergency Relief Administration; (4) The Beginning of a Permanent Program: 1935-1939." (Social Forces) Bibliography. Index.

"An exceedingly valuable book, within its limits, for all students of the subject and for all citizens."

+ — Christian Century 57:1418 N 13 '40 160w

Reviewed by Katharine Jocher

Social Forces 19:290 D '40 700w

BROWN, KENNETH IRVING. A campus decade; the Hiram study plan of intensive courses, 1930-40. 133p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

378 Hiram college, Hiram, Ohio 41-813

Discussion and estimate of the working out of the "Hiram plan" during the last ten years at Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio. This is the plan by which students concentrate on one subject for a term, and then take up another. The author was president of Hiram during the ten years, 1930 to 1940, during which the plan was inaugurated.

"President Brown's history and critical estimate of the plan will be read by educators with professional interest, but it has also a great human interest for the laity."

+ Christian Century 57:878 Jl 10 '40 140w

School & Society 51:768 Je 22 '40 30w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Country noisy book; with il. by Leonard Weisgard. [44p] $1 Scott, W.R.

40-32066

Picture story book for very small children, describing a little dog's trip to the country and all the noises he heard on the way and after he arrived.

"A two-year-old will have fun with this book and so will the parent or nursery school teacher who shares it with him, if the story is read with the proper dramatic flair." M. F. Potter

Library J 65:877 O 15 '40 150w

"Children love this story because they can join in it, making appropriate noises for all the sounds that Muffin hears on his journey." E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 103:842 D 16 '40 40w

"The text, with its crisp sentences and many interrogations, demands response from small listeners and thus not only increases perceptivity of a sense too often neglected for that of sight but insures a lot of fun for those of an age who would rather, and generally do, make a lot of noise than do anything else in the world." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 19 '41 180w

BROWN, PAUL. No trouble at all [il. by the author]. 126p $1.50 Scribner

40-31349

A fictionized step-by-step account of the way to bring up a dog. The dog in question is a mixture of Scottie and Chow, and his name Trouble Maker is justified, but the Dawsons think he's worth it. For grades four to six.

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

"An absorbing story for the person who wants to know how to bring up his dog properly, or the person who doesn't quite understand dogs, or for any dog lover who likes to read about an attractive everyday dog." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 40w

"The author knows dogs, his superb drawings and the details of the story indicate that he is a dog lover, but his writing in this, as in his other stories, is inferior to his illustrations." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 80w

BROWN, ROSE (JOHNSTON) (MRS ROBERT CARLTON BROWN). Two children of Brazil; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 229p $2 Lippincott

Children in Brazil (W) 41-1481

Story of child life on a great plantation near the jungle in Brazil. The most thrilling adventure is the trip to Rio de Janeiro for the carnival.

"I am assured by people who should know that information in this book is not only accurate and up to date, but so chosen as to be representative of progressive, upper-class life of the nation rather than that of Indians who have hitherto been so generally chosen to represent it in our children's books. My own acquaintance with Brazil is altogether second-hand, but my friends from that great country have been singularly articulate; I recognize in this book much I have been told with much pride." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 12 '41 280w

"Sugar-coated geography." Katharine Scherman

Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 20w

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. A teacher and his times; a story of two worlds. 391p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 40-27136

Dr Brown became, in 1892, a member of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary in New York, a position which he held for the next forty-four years. His various educational and religious activities and wide travels brought him in contact with personalities in many fields and places and their names fill the pages of his autobiography.

Booklist 36:263 Mr 1 '40

"To the notable autobiographies of American teachers that have appeared in recent years the life story of William Adams Brown, of Union Theological Seminary, is a welcome addition. It is a quiet book and somewhat overloaded with detail, but it gives a remarkably complete insight into a distinguished career of a kind that is too often taken for granted and passed over." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p12 F 11 '40 850w

"It is a life extraordinary in the fact that it united the experience of a learned and exact scholar with practical service to his city and State. The humility and good temper of the entire volume are exemplified in the vivid description of the famous heresy trials in the Presbyterian Church connected with the names of Briggs and McGiffert, and the book is filled with intimate reminiscences of the great philosophers and thinkers of his day." J. E. Park

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 280w

"This is a book of absorbing interest. Dr. Brown's many friends and associates will not only find much that throws light on the situations within which they have known him but will also discover aspects of his personality and areas of achievement which will be new to them. Those who know little or nothing of the author will find it a fascinating record of persons, movements and events. The book moves rapidly, with no wasted words and with a style that is both clear and genial. One of the author's many claims to versatility is that he is a good autobiographer." J. C. Bennett

+ Christian Century 57:317 Mr 6 '40 900w

"This is the charming story of a life lived on a high plane, but ever touching the needs of humanity." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 9 '40 900w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 154:16 Mr 15 '40 180w

"As an educator, long associated with Union Theological Seminary, and a figure prominent in religious activity, Dr. Brown has earned the esteem of men engaged like himself in works of human welfare, and he has been in intimate contact with famous persons here and abroad better known to the general public than himself. . . And, of course, where there are such personalities there are good stories; Dr. Adams has a great many to tell about himself and people he has met." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 21 '40 480w

Reviewed by W. L. Phelps

Sat R of Lit 21:13 F 17 '40 900w

"The book will naturally make its strongest appeal to kindred spirits of Dr Brown in religion, education and sociology; but there is a vast human interest for the general public in these memories of old New York, of summering at Mount Desert, of browsing in Oxford and golfing at St Andrews, of fighting Tammany at home and serving in England and France on the wartime commission. He shines as a man of unusual versatility and accomplishment." H. L. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 4 '40 1100w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseuds). Old lover's ghost. 240p $2 Scribner

40-11816

Detective story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"This one is as notable for its puzzle as for the narrative skill, wordage and all-around style with which it is composed." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Jl 21 '40 200w

"'Old Lover's Ghost' is a perfect book for summer reading. Leslie Ford pleases me because she only kills off the unpleasant people in her stories." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 80w

"Like most of the Leslie Ford stories, this is a skillful blend of mystery and romance—better than good on both counts." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 21 '40 180w

"Highly entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 3 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 280w

Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 40w

Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseuds). Road to folly. 248p $2 Scribner

40-27295

Detective story.

Booklist 36:307 Ap 1 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p14 F 25 '40 160w

"Not quite up to the standard set by 'The Town Cried Murder,' 'Road to Folly' is still a fine tale, embroidered as it is with suspense and just the right amount of heart interest." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 60w

"This highly romantic story needs good telling and real suspense, and Leslie Ford gives it both. She is one of the cleverest and most original of our mystery novelists. . . 'Road to Folly' like everything Leslie Ford writes, is a good story; but her next story will be better if she gives us a little more variety, as this ingenious and sophisticated author is abundantly able to do." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 240w

"Mystery neatly handled, but subordinated to deft characterizations, and to low-country atmosphere thick as gumbo. Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 24 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 36:48 Mr '40

BROWNELL, MRS KATHRYN OSMOND. Textbook of practical nursing. 418p il $3 Saunders

610.73 Nurses and nursing 39-29847

"The director of the Brooklyn Y. W. C. A. School of Practical Nursing here brings between two covers the essential principles, techniques, and methods of practical nursing. There are chapters on professional ethics, household management, cooking, community health, as well as on anatomy, physiology, hygiene, general nursing procedures, and the care of special types of patients, including expectant and convalescent mothers and children of various ages." J Home Econ

"The book is written simply, and should be of interest and help to those who desire the essential information relating to the care of the sick." M. E. Pickett

+ — Am J Pub Health 30:698 Je '40 220w

J Home Econ 32:42 Ja '40 60w

BRUCE, LEO. Case with four clowns. 313p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Davies]

40-1699

Detective story.

"The slaughter, in our opinion, came too late in the day for a proper effect, though Mr. Bruce was within his rights in trying to prolong the suspense; somehow he overfiddled himself in this respect." Will Cuppy

Books p17 F 11 '40 150w

"In spite of the fascination of the circus life and the performers, the cumulative effect is highly aggravating." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 60w

"The story is long drawn out and does not get anywhere in particular until near the end, and even then it is not in the least exciting." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p22 Ja 28 '40 130w

"Disappointing."

Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 3 '40 40w

BRUNHOFF, JEAN DE. Babar and Father Christmas [il. by the author] tr. from the French by Merle Haas. [40p] $3 Random house 40-31350

Picture-story book describing the adventures of the elephant king, Babar, during his search for Father Christmas and what happened when he was found.

"There is the old, intimate charm in telling the simple story. It is, in short, another Babar book, with all that means." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 N 17 '40 200w

"The latest 'Babar' book lacks the spontaneous humor which the earlier books had, but even so there will be heard the usual peals of laughter as more than one page is turned. The story is good, with a real plot. It has suspense and a nice surprise ending." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:454 N 9 '40 10w

"If it is not the best of the Babar books it is well up to standard, and introduces some delightful new characters. The pictures are as pretty as ever, and made even more gay by an unusually winning Father Christmas, while the narrative style, direct and graphic in the tradition of Defoe, is a model to all." Frances Bird
+ New Statesman & Nation 20:588 D 7 '40 150w

"Childlike, gently humorous and convincing in its logical detail, 'Babar and Father Christmas' will take its place in childish hearts with Jean de Brunhoff's other much-loved books." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 D 1 '40 300w

"A delight to young and old alike."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:40 D 7 '40 30w

Reviewed by John Piper
Spec 165:611 D 6 '40 900w

BRUNNER, HEINRICH EMIL. Man in revolt; a Christian anthropology; tr. by Olive Wyon. 564p $6 Scribner [15s R.T.S.]

233 Man. Anthropology. Theology, Doctrinal
40-9394

"This volume has a double interest. It is first of all a notable discussion of the Christian conception of man, a timely treatment of a theme that is central not only for religion but for our whole social and political scene. At the same time, it gives occasion for raising questions as to Brunner's relation to the movement variously referred to as dialectical theology, the theology of crisis or Barthianism." Christian Century

"On the whole Brunner lives up to his avowed purpose, to present theology in non-technical terms as something not limited to the experts. His treatment is stimulating and takes account of current scientific, psychological and social studies. If there are any who still suppose that the dialectical theology is simply a learned European counterpart of our American fundamentalism, this volume should effectually disabuse their minds." H. F. Rall
+ Christian Century 57:17 Ja 3 '40 1800w

"Simple minds like that of the reviewer may not always be able to follow the author's reasoning, especially his insistence upon man's responsibility for sins he cannot avoid, but the book is full of strong meat for those with good mental teeth and a well-functioning theological digestion. It offers another proof that no consistent theologian can stick very long to the whole of Barthianism." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:18 F 15 '40 120w

"In this volume we have one of the most complete treatments of the Christian doctrine of man which has seen the light of day in a generation. Thoroughly acquainted with the various sociological, psychological, biological, and philosophical views of man entering into various phases of modern thought, Dr. Brunner interprets the Christian view against these, setting it forth with bold, swift, and determined strokes." G. W. Davis
+ Crozer Q 17:154 Ap '40 1500w

"The volume as a whole is tremendously stimulating, both for its systematic survey of the anthropological problem and for its penetrating comments on historic theological views. At the same time there is a repetitiousness which renders the book tiresome by its too constant reiteration of the main theme, though this hammering at the point may serve to strengthen the impression created." E. E. Aubrey
+ — J Religion 20:282 Jl '40 1150w

BRUNT, SAMUEL, pseud. Voyage to Cacklogallinia; with a description of the religion, policy, customs and manners of that country; reproduced from the original edition, 1727, with an introd. by Marjorie Nicolson. (Facsimile text soc. Publication) 167p $2.20 Columbia univ. press [14s 6d Oxford]

827 Voyages, Imaginary. Interplanetary voyages. Satire
40-6468

Reprint in facsimile of a book first printed in 1727. At first it was attributed to either Swift or Defoe, but the author still remains unknown. "The narrator tells how he was shipwrecked on the coast of a fabulous land, how he lived among the natives, and how he went on a voyage to the moon. Figured in his adventures is a good deal of social and political satire, particularly of the crude speculation incidental to the South Sea Bubble. There are also interesting revelations of the scientific thought of the day." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by H. S. Hughes
Boston Transcript p1 Jl 6 '40 140w

Christian Century 57:283 F 28 '40 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p21 Mr 3 '40 400w

"Important to students of the eighteenth century." A. C.
Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 2 '40 130w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 2 '40 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p319 Je 29 '40 80w

BRUNTON, JOHN. John Brunton's book; with an introd. by J. H. Clapham. 164p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge]

B or 92 Engineers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
[40-13534]

The memoirs of a British engineer, born in 1812, who wrote the story for his grandchildren. The book is now first published, forty years after his death. Among his activities John Brunton numbered pioneer railroad building in England, Wales, and India, and the construction of hospitals during the Crimean war. Index.

"It goes with a swing. The anecdotes and adventures pop up briskly. [The author] has amusing stories to tell of the great engineers for whom he worked—Brunel, the two Stephensons and Trevithick; and his pictures of the pioneering work on the English railways, of Turkey, where he went to build a hospital, and where he met Florence Nightingale ('a wonderful business-like woman'), and of India at the time of the Mutiny, are full of interest. One smiles now and again, but soon one comes to have the deepest respect and affection for him." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 10 '40 330w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

" 'John Brunton's Book' is a suprisingly vivid and illuminating book, which throws sidelights on history and recalls the ideas and purposes of an era as well as its circumstances and achievements. . . There is humor in these memoirs, and shrewdness, and a great deal of family affection, spontaneously expressed. . .

Any one who is interested in the Victorians and their era should read this book and will certainly enjoy it."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 17 '40 500w

"Brunton met many interesting people—and a few explanatory footnotes would have helped the general reader and would have enlivened the text. However, the simple record, set down for the writer's grandchildren, with its evidence of the god-fearing, industrious, affectionate qualities of the man, whose rugged character no success and no solid application to plans, inventions and mechanics could destroy reveals a Victorian whom all may admire."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p330 Jl 6 '40 360w

BRUSH, KATHARINE (INGHAM) (MRS H. C. WINANS). This is on me; il. by Susanne Suba. 436p $2.75 Farrar

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27509

Revealing account of the author's career, punctuated with some of her own short stories and articles. It was written in an effort to take stock, after she found that she could not finish her novel; in fact, could not write at all. At her publisher's suggestion she agreed to tell the story of her writing—and the present book is the result.

Atlantic S '40 180w

Booklist 36:397 Je 15 '40

"Katharine Brush calls her new book a hodgepodge, and there is no point in trying to dispute her. As a matter of fact, it would be an extremely impertinent gesture, for Katharine Brush knows exactly what she wants to say and has the courage to say it, and if she says 'hodgepodge,' hodgepodge it is. But there are hodgepodges and hodgepodges, and this is as joyous, as serious, as mad, as earnest and as wholly delightful a one as ever came to gladden a weary eye." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 My 12 '40 900w

"Katharine Brush's new book's swift pace and readability never slacken. She tucks into it almost a score of previously published stories; they punctuate admirably the story of her life. . . Most of her early stories were machine-tooled for the slick-paper magazine industry. This book is still sometimes posey and smart aleck; it is also still the work of a good craftsman at writing. And it suggests that Katharine Brush, sooner or later, may once more have something to say." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 My 9 '40 500w

"Miss Brush's book isn't nonsense. Although she leaves out all the heavy bits that most autobiographers fondly suppose look beautiful away from home; and although her book is as impersonal as it can be under the circumstances, it is full of good sense and good humor. . . This is an excellent and highly entertaining book." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 410w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 29 '40 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

New Repub 102:769 Je 3 '40 60w

"As the humorous, unreticent, 'blow-by-blow' autobiography of a woman who has attained, while young, unusual success in a thoroughly desirable field . . . it should have some general appeal. But for the hundred thousand who spend nights and Sundays at their typewriters and dream in subways . . . this book will be of practically supreme fascination." Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p2 My 12 '40 850w

"Dated in viewpoint and self-consciously flip, but honest and humorous. Part of the contents has been published in various magazines. Neat decorations by Susanne Suba."

+ — New Yorker 16:98 My 11 '40 70w

Reviewed by M. C. Banning

Sat R of Lit 22:6 My 18 '40 1800w

"The stories might well have been left out. The autobiography makes lively reading, a free-&-easy, self-quizzical account of Author Brush."

+ Time 35:96 My 13 '40 500w

BRYAN, GEORGE SANDS. The great American myth. 436p il $3.75 Carrick

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Booth, John Wilkes 40-34652

"It is the aim of this book to offer, on the basis of considerable independent survey of evidence, (a) a new and authentic study of the affair of Lincoln's murder, with such account of preceding events and of the setting in which it took place as may help to a better understanding of it; and (b) the story of John Booth as he was, of what happened to him as it did really happen." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

" 'The Great American Myth' brings considerable new material to an overworked theme, and deserves to be read for its corrective sanity. It is unlikely, however, that it will be taken as the last word on the subject." P. M. Angle

+ Books p14 N 24 '40 600w

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 13 '40 440w

"Mr. Bryan has performed an excellent and much-needed task—he has cleared away a lot of untruth and exposed much fiction in connection with the murder of Abraham Lincoln. Here is considerable new material and a revaluation of some old."

+ Living Age 359:491 Ja '41 160w

Nation 152:136 F 1 '41 120w

"Most readers will probably find the narrative exciting down to the moment of the murder. The rest is inevitably an anticlimax. . . The book is certainly worth any one's reading for its breathless first half—breathless because through every page moves the shadow of approaching doom. . . The episode still needs the master hand which can subdue its details and extract its tragic grandeur. . . The full implications of this tremendous event are not in Mr. Bryan's careful and exhaustive book. Perhaps Mr. Robert Sherwood will some day turn his attention to this final Lincoln theme. It is great drama and calls for a great dramatist." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p3 D 8 '40 1600w

"The author, who has had access to the John T. Ford papers and other new material, makes what appears to be a good case against several previous misconceptions. Some overfamiliar data, and rather close detective work in spots."

+ New Yorker 16:95 N 23 '40 60w

"Mr. Bryan's book is history, and till we reach the anti-climactic last chapter on 'False Colors and Shapes,' extremely interesting history." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 4 '41 500w

BRYAN, JULIEN HEQUEMBOURG. Siege; introduction and captions by Maurice Hindus. 64p il $2.75 Doubleday

940.544 Warsaw—Siege, 1939. European war, 1939—Poland. European war, 1939—Pictorial works (W) 40-7614

The text tells the story of how Mr Bryan, American news photographer, happened almost by chance to be in Warsaw during the siege and what he saw and did there until finally forced to leave. The body of the book contains a selection of the photographs he took—a shattered church, a windowless skyscraper, the American consulate, dead animals, dead men, dead women—and women whose eyes had seen death.

"From this trip Julien Bryan was lucky enough to get home with reports, photographic and otherwise, on how one of the superior tribes of Europe, streamlined for murder, obtains lebensraum. It's pretty savage stuff and the brave Pole to whom the book is dedicated, Stefan Starzynski, ex-Mayor of Warsaw, is in a German concentration camp. . . The theme of the book was set by Adolf Hitler Sept. 1, 1939, when Herr Hitler announced 'I will not war against women and children. I have ordered my air force to restrict itself to attacks on military objectives.'" R. F. Crandell

BRYAN, J. H.—Continued

+ Books p5 Ap 14 '40 850w

Reviewed by H. B. Kane
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '40 250w

"The impressiveness of the whole book is truly horrible. A powerful indictment of war, the book will make many Americans understand—in spite of all our official 'neutrality'—why Hitlerism must go." J. S. R.

+ Commonweal 31:558 Ap 19 '40 170w
Foreign Affairs 18:750 Jl '40 20w

"The photographs which accompany the text are excellent; but it is a dismal commentary on the state of the 'modern' mind that they would be more striking or tragic or horrifying if we had not seen them before—with Spanish or Chinese or Finnish instead of Polish women and children, the madonnas of our age, staring at us out of the ruins of homes and hospitals. Yet Mr. Bryan's close-up of a Blitzkrieg is striking enough even for the 'jaded' observer." Margaret Marshall

Nation 150:515 Ap 20 '40 340w
New Repub 102:649 My 13 '40 70w

"In spite of the horror, and through all the tragedy, there are valor and great strength in these photographs, and in some of them there is a memorable beauty. As human documents they are beyond praise; and Julien Bryan's simple chronicle of his experience, and of what he saw, is a notable human document, too."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 14 '40 650w
New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 20w

"Julien Bryan's word and picture record of the eventful days of Warsaw's siege will open the eyes of many to what may be expected in all corners of the earth during the days to come. Mr. Bryan's narrative, which occupies the first half of 'Siege,' is so swift-paced and eventful, so lean and sinewy with action under war's stress and strain, that under certain conditions it could well stand alone." Margaret Bourke-White & Erskine Caldwell

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ap 20 '40 750w
Time 35:104 Ap 15 '40 120w

BUCHAN, JOHN, 1st baron TWEEDSMUIR. Pilgrim's way; an essay in recollection [Eng title: Memory hold-the-door]. 336p $3 Houghton [12s 6d Hodder]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-14308

In the preface to this volume the author says "this book is a journal of certain experiences, not written in the experiencing moment, but rebuilt out of memory. . . These chapters are so brazenly egotistic that my first intention was to have them privately printed. But I reflected that a diary of a pilgrimage, a record of the effect upon one mind of the mutations of life, might interest others who travel a like road. It is not a book of reminiscences in the ordinary sense, for my purpose has been to record only a few selected experiences. The lover of gossip will find nothing to please him, for I have written at length only of the dead. . . It is a record of the impressions made upon me by the outer world, rather than a weaving of such impressions into a personal religion and philosophy." Index.

"An exquisite work of an exquisite spirit, simple, gentle, affectionate, unpretending, disciplined, hard-working."

+ Atlantic O '40 160w
Booklist 37:33 O 1 '40
Bookmark 2:9 Ja '41

"Seldom censorious, Buchan is not blandly eulogistic; he is very discriminating in his praises, and his analysis of the puzzling pathetic figure of Ramsay MacDonald is very finely shaded. He fails to dispel the mystery of T. E. Lawrence; but so did Liddell Hart, and T. E. Lawrence himself. The very best pieces are those devoted to characters not so familiar to the general reader: Raymond Asquith, son of the Prime Minister, and Auberon Thomas Herbert, Lord Lucas, 'Bron,' that gipsy who became a Cabinet minister in spite of himself. This miniature biography is as whimsical and tender as anything in the language." Albert Guerard

+ Books p3 S 1 '40 1550w

"There is a richness and a charm to these memoirs of a man who so consciously felt himself born into the wrong century." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 Ag 27 '40 700w

"'Pilgrim's Way' is John Buchan's life and testament. It is not autobiographical in the factual manner although we do learn the major events of his life. Rather it is a study of living. What has life done to me? Is the adventure worth while? These questions are asked and answered courageously." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ag 31 '40 1050w

"Pilgrim's Way is filled with the author's reflections on men and things. They are nearly always worth hearing, often characterized by his well-known humor, shrewd with a Scottish canniness, sane and tolerant with the poise of the impartial and sincere observer." C. C. C.

+ Cath World 152:242 N '40 750w

"Even without knowing what the remaining three months may bring forth, one may safely pronounce this the biography of the year. . . Two things make this autobiography notable. The first is the series of portraits of the men with whom the author had contact as politician or as publisher. Many of these are among the most eminent of the time; others are less known but worth knowing. To all of them he brings a power of analysis and portrayal scarcely possible except in a writer who was at once biographer and novelist. . . The other and even more extraordinary feature of the autobiography is its indirect but brilliant delineation of the author's own personality." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:1281 O 16 '40 850w

Reviewed by D. M. Mackegg
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 12 '40 120w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 154:22 S 15 '40 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"Written with great charm and imagination, 'Pilgrim's Way' covers a fairly long span of years and contains besides an account of his life; a fine gallery of portraits of those with whom he was intimately or well acquainted, such men as the scholar-statesman Milner, Ramsay MacDonald and T. E. Lawrence." R. C. Pollock

+ Commonweal 32:472 S 27 '40 360w

"His little essays on America, on angling, deer stalking, mountaineering, or excursions in reading have as much charm as his recollections of personalities or places. If this autobiography has a fault, it is that it is over-crowded with figures, however fascinating, that overshadow, not the writer's personality, but the interesting activities of a full life. Pilgrim's Way is autobiography by a man of breadth, the record of an informed and highly cultivated mind. It stands, besides, as a noble testament of faith in living and mankind." E. V. A.

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:57 S '40 750w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen
Current Hist & Forum 52:4 F 13 '41 160w

"Among the many noteworthy passages in his book are the character sketches of his good friends Raymond Asquith and Auberon Thomas Herbert, and his fine appreciation of America in the chapter called 'My America.' Pilgrim's Way richly deserves a wide reading audience. It should appeal to many different types of adult readers because the essays vary so greatly in subject matter." H. P. Bolman

BUCHAN (bŭk'ăn)

+ Library J 65:651 Ag '40 280w

Reviewed by Basil de Sélincourt
Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 27 '40 500w

Reviewed by Eileen Forsyth
New Repub 103:425 S 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by Richard Coventry
New Statesman & Nation 20:211 Ag 31 '40 1750w

"'Pilgrim's Way' is a book of great beauty and strength, the book of the year in autobiography, and a distinguished addition to the few first-rate autobiographies in the English language. Among them it will be thought of first as the simplest and most readable, and then, as the depth of its character grows, as the soundest and sanest and most strengthening in its moral fiber." P. M. Jack
+ N Y Times p1 S 1 '40 1900w

New Yorker 16:55 Ag 31 '40 40w

"It is needless to say that [this volume] has all the charm, the moving quality, that one had a right to expect of [Buchan's] gifted pen which ventured into so many fields; one could speak of its preciousness if the word did not exclude the robustness and manliness of the book and the man. Here are true and touching pictures of Scotland, England, South Africa, and the United States, made possible by an affection which verged on adoration." O. G. Villard
+ Sat R of Lit 22:5 Ag 31 '40 1000w

"The mellow light which shines through the miscellany of [this book] will be a joy to all the host of John Buchan's friends, and will afford to many more some insight into the philosophy of a true master of the art of living." D. O. Malcolm
+ Spec 165:223 Ag 30 '40 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 1000w

Time 36:66 S 2 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Ag 24 '40 2600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

Reviewed by H. F. Gerould
Yale R n s 30:416 winter '41 650w

BUCHANAN, NORMAN SHARPE. The economics of corporate enterprise. 483p $3.25 Holt

658.1145 Corporations. Economics 40-4497

"Economic principles and logic underlying the formation, operation, expansion, reorganization and dissolution of corporate enterprises are explained in this college text. The material is divided into three sections: I, Legal aspects of corporate enterprise; II, Economic aspects of corporate enterprise; III, Business reorganization and enterprise in the modern economy." (Management R) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by S. E. Howard
Am Econ R 30:617 S '40 550w

"There may be student criticism that this text is too dry and vague, but these alleged defects can be corrected without difficulty. In fact, the author recognizes the need for concrete cases and states his intention to use them. Lecture notes and a selected list of readings such as those contained in this text will give the desired historical and practical background." H. J. Jordan
+ Ann Am Acad 210:166 Jl '40 600w

Management R 29:159 Ap '40 50w

"Although it is an author's privilege to set the bounds to his own work, I feel that the balance of Professor Buchanan's book is greatly damaged by his failure to afford thorough treatment to the pressing problems of corporate size and control, of governmental influences over capital markets and corporate financial practices and of inter-corporate competition. Professor Buchanan's style is lucid and conveys the feeling that he has done much reading and studying before sitting down to write. His bibliography confirms the latter impression."
+ — Yale Law J 49:1515 Je '40 850w

BUCK, ALAN MICHAEL. The harper's daughter; il. by Richard Bennett. 229p $2 Oxford

40-32772

Retelling of the Irish legend of Deirdre, the daughter of the Chief Story Teller, or Harper, to Conchubar, King of Ulster. For readers from ten to fourteen.

"Recommended for girls. . . Excellent type and fine illustrations by Richard Bennett in harmony with the spirit of the story." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 70w

"This young author has four books for boys and girls to his credit; each one has shown a steady growth in ability; with this latest one he attains an honorable place in the ranks of those whose books belong to both young and old. . . The tale as it is found here is a spirited prose version, but one full of poetic feeling. Every page shows Mr. Buck's familiarity with the sources Gaelic scholars have made available. His telling of the story has the easy transition from high and solemn beauty to the homely sayings and incidents of every day, characteristic of Gaelic literature." A. T. E.
+ N Y Times p10 N 10 '40 360w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Other gods; an American legend. 381p $2.50 Day [8s 6d Macmillan]

(W) 40-27062

When a young American mechanic, attached to an English scientific expedition, makes a lucky solo ascent of a Himalayan peak, he becomes overnight a great hero. In Peking, Bert Holm, who is really a naive country boy, meets and marries the shy, intellectual daughter of wealthy American parents. The story is of their attempt to make a happy marriage, and of the part played by American hero worshippers in their struggle to be human, rather than gods.

Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

"'Other Gods' by Pearl Buck is by no means the noblest of our Nobellist's novels. It is, however, a conspicuously workmanlike handling of a tempting theme in modern Americana—the crowd-worshiped hero. And by the critical standards which Somerset Maugham so frequently enunciates it rates A plus; from the first word to the last it entertains!" F. H. Bullock
+ Books p4 F 25 '40 750w

"Hero-worship is the theme of Pearl Buck's new novel, the best of her American ones. In our opinion she has never quite equalled 'The Patriot' either before or since. However, this is an absorbing story, and a beautiful example of the way this thoughtful and superbly talented writer puts her own beliefs into successful practice." Olga Owens
+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 24 '40 850w

"If Mrs. Buck wished to point out the dangers of hero worship and, indirectly of dictatorship, which seems to have been the case, one applauds her attempt. The trouble is that one does not find it possible to believe in her legend. It does not seem to have any remote bearing upon the truth. And the way in which Mrs. Buck presents it does not predispose one in its favor." M. W.
— + Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 11 '40 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

Forum 103:264 My '40 230w

"Unfortunately, the physical qualities of Bert Holm are identical with those of the living hero-aviator and the portrait of the poetic wife adds a further confusing note. This clouding of personalities is the more unfortunate because the imaginary hero wins his mountain conquests by luck and in spite of criminal neglect of others. The novel falls well below Mrs. Buck's best." Esther Johnston

BUCK, PEARL—Continued

— Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 110w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 8 '40 360w

"Highly readable though definitely not up to Mrs. Buck's best."

+ — New Repub 102:354 Mr 11 '40 60w

"The first thing that should be said about Pearl Buck's searching new novel is that from this beginning on it is an absorbing—and in one section toward the end a tremendous—story. . . In the national hero of her novel Pearl Buck has drawn a masterly and original portrait of a creature of impulse and immediacy, a man who cannot grow up—not even when he becomes a god. On the other hand, the denouement of the story is real enough, though it may seem satiric to some readers and sentimental to others and is indeed perhaps both." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 F 25 '40 1200w

"Mrs. Buck, as always, is thoughtful and intelligent, but her book, except when it is describing the devious ways of public-relations counsellors, is hardly incisive or gripping. I am not one of those who think that Mrs. Buck can write effectively only about China. Still, there is no doubt that her American novels do not as yet measure up to even the least successful of her memorable Chinese stories." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:76 F 24 '40 150w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 21:7 F 24 '40 700w

"There is a lot of cumbersome thoughtfulness, and wealth and refinement are glossily presented. It was the first book which I have ever read by the recent Nobel Prize winner, and I confess it was a great disappointment to me." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 164:390 Mr 15 '40 120w

"When Mrs Buck is writing about the actual mountain climbing she holds one by the vividness with which she makes the scene stand out, by the beauty of her style and thoughts. But there is a gloss of artificiality over the story as a whole, as if the author had thought out a satirical text and then written to it, without much spontaneity." M. D.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 850w

"The idea might have been put to excellent purpose. As worked out by Mrs. Buck, however, it does not go far beyond the range of a magazine short story. It is not merely that the young man's charm, for all that it goes with an obvious weakness of character, is very much sentimentalized. The chief trouble is rather that mob hysteria is consistently soothed and flattered."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p121 Mr 9 '40 480w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Stories for little children; pictures by Weda Yap. [48p] $1.50 Day

40-32433

Little stories for very young children, about the ordinary, everyday doings of five small boys and girls. They discover the sun and the moon, learn about the rainbow, and how not to be afraid of the dark, etc.

"The stories are quiet, the full-page pictures in soft, misty colors. The effect is of the calm wise parents try to induce just before sleep, and I believe the book will be much used for bedtime stories. It is for children from three to six, like those in the book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 10 '40 200w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p6 N 25 '40 60w

"Pearl Buck carries over into her group of stories for very small listeners a sense of style and a feeling for rhythm and beauty in simple things. . . Weda Yap's delicately colored drawings add to the child-like feeling of the little book." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 30w

"In these pages Mrs. Buck seems very remote from the childhood she tries to portray, and, while the emphasis on the larger, beautiful world outside the nursery . . . is an appealing feature of the book, the author's adult feeling of what a child's response should be gets between the reader and the children of the story. Indeed the author has such a strong tendency to regard her characters with complete objectivity, and to look upon them as a means of demonstrating how she thinks children should react to a situation, that her book recalls the juveniles of an earlier and more didactic period, and her characters never become flesh and blood. The illustrations are delicate and pleasing in color but have a vagueness that corresponds to the shadowy quality of the characterization." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p9 D 15 '40 250w

BUELL, RAYMOND LESLIE. Isolated America. 471p map $3 Knopf

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. European war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Neutrality

(W) 40-8760

The aim of this book is to "analyse the relationship between our critical domestic problems and the international situation. After pointing out the underlying causes for the present world chaos, and the extent to which the United States is responsible for it, [the author comes] to grips with what is probably the most important problem confronting America today: Can we maintain our democratic institutions, restore full employment, balance the budget, and retain private enterprise when the outside world is dominated by totalitarian controls and ideologies? . . . This volume is the outgrowth of six lectures before the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy in the fall of 1939. It is based upon twelve years' experience in the Foreign Policy Association and more recent work as Round Table Editor of Fortune magazine." (Pref) Index.

Am Econ R 30:593 S '40 20w

"Mr. Buell's is the long view—both ways—into the past and into the future. It is shared by many. It is the only honest and intelligent view tenable on the assumption of a German defeat." Johannes Mattern

Ann Am Acad 211:197 S '40 850w

Atlantic Ag '40 140w

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

Bookmark p22 N '40

Books p3 My 19 '40 750w

"Buell's book should be read by all those who at one time were confident that an isolationist policy was the wisest policy for the United States. Many of these are now completely bewildered to discover that the security which was to come as a reward for 'minding our own business' has not materialized. . . Mr. Buell has performed a great service in presenting these problems which are increasingly in the minds of our economists in a clear, objective and exceedingly readable manner." Anton De Haas

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

Reviewed by E. M. Lynskey

Commonweal 32:194 Je 21 '40 650w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins
Current Hist 51:1 Je '40 1000w
Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 70w

"This book will be of interest to all who are following world trends in economics and politics. It should have a wide reading." F. L. D. Goodrich
+ Library J 65:351 Ap 15 '40 180w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 150:656 My 25 '40 900w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 102:765 Je 3 '40 1250w

"Mr. Buell has written a book that is scholarly in substance, logical in argument and elevated in vision; a book that the staggering blows dealt to the free societies of Western Europe make more important and weighty. It offers an irresistible appeal both to the understanding and the heart. He has not prepared it in catchpenny haste." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p1 My 26 '40 1350w
New Yorker 16:93 My 25 '40 50w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
Sat R of Lit 22:5 My 18 '40 1000w

"Without attempting to evaluate Mr Buell's recommendations, one may feel that the author has done America a service by painting in broad, sure strokes a picture of the American position as he sees it. If only for his statement of the immensity of the task ahead to establish a sensible, stable world peace, and his frank facing of the alternative, a disrupted, chaotic world losing everything we hold right and dear, 'Isolated America' was worth the effort put into its composition. . . Though one must admit that his volume shows evidence of hasty writing, it is possible to add that many of his observations will be widely admitted by students of American government, and that the scope of his work makes it of special importance today."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 21 '40 900w

Reviewed by Quincy Wright
Survey G 29:443 Ag '40 420w
Time 35:90 My 20 '40 750w

BUELL, ROBERT KINGERY. Verse writing simplified. rev ed 133p $1.50 Stanford univ. press 426.8 English language—Versification. Poetry
40-13241

"These chapters are concerned with a simple approach to the writing of lyric poetry. They deal with the pattern of a single poem in the early chapters, and later with additional patterns and points of technique." (Page 1) The book was originally privately published and circulated but has now been given a new format and some revision for more general use. Index.

Booklist 37:118 N 15 '40

"First aid to young poets. Even those of some experience will find helpful suggestions, though much of the material is elementary and nothing is taken for granted except a desire to write verse. The book might well be used as a textbook for classes."
+ Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 50w

BUGBEE, WILLIS NEWTON. Drifting down the St Lawrence. 220p il map $2 Revell
917.14 St Lawrence river 40-663

Informal travel guide to the region along the St Lawrence river in Canada, from its source to the Gulf of St Lawrence. The descriptions of the country and the people who inhabit it are interspersed with bits of history, legend, and anecdotes. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

"While not always accurate, and sometimes annoying, [the book] covers the ground reasonably well." J. F. D.
Churchman 154:35 Ja 15 '40 50w

"The author is generous in relating the legends, authentic or otherwise, that cluster round each important settlement. A map and eight full-page photographs help the reader to appreciate the narrative. Interesting as it all is, the author will probably fail to convince the reader that 'greatest and grandest' is a tenable description of his favorite waterway."
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 F 19 '40 300w

BUGBEE, WILLIS NEWTON. The spirit of Finland. 157p il maps $2 Bugbee 914.71 Finland—Description and travel
40-4766

This book is based upon data gathered during two summers spent in Finland. It is a record of travel and a description of scenery and historic places, the people themselves, and their cultural achievements. Illustrated with many photographs.

Christian Century 57:353 Mr 13 '40 100w
Foreign Affairs 18:759 Jl '40

"Written frankly in the hope of making Americans a little better acquainted with the Finnish character and its setting, [the book] is published by the author with any profits derived from its sale to be donated to Finnish Relief." Agnes Rothery
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Mr 2 '40 80w

"The author was highly observant and comments upon much that has escaped attention. This account covers informally many phases of past and present life in Finland, including sports."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 300w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. A man of forty. 305p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Dent] 40-6200

A retired English civil servant, living in the country with his wife and child, becomes passionately devoted to a young girl, half his age. When his wife refuses him a divorce the stage is set for a violent ending.

"There is a kind of mannered urbanity about Mr. Bullett's story of adultery and murder which some readers may find unpleasant. But whether one likes the style or not, his novel is written with a precision which makes it seem inevitable and the author an amused, Olympian observer."
Atlantic My '40 90w

"There is a subtle deception in the disarming simplicity of this writer's approach. He skirts in such feathery fashion around seduction, adultery, abortion, homosexuality and murder, that it comes as a surprise to the reader to learn at the end that, instead of backing away from these unpleasant aspects of life, he has really been making them his instruments all along to supply motivation, misleading clues and a satisfactory solution. With Mr. Bullett ingenuousness has become an art." Muriel Chatain
Books p10 Mr 10 '40 440w

Reviewed by Peggy Lamson
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 270w

"Mr. Bullett belongs to that school of British writers which might be classified as diligent but dull. They have a rather accurate knowledge of the psychology of certain rather staid people, they make no mistakes in grammar and many of them, including Mr. Bullett, have even written books about the novel. But somehow they just don't manage to write very interestingly." Harry Sylvester
— + Commonweal 31:498 Mr 29 '40 240w

"His tale of the love affair of a middle-aged man begins admirably; but it rather goes to pieces when, in the later chapters, it turns abruptly into a rather commonplace detective story." Wilfrid Gibson
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 2 '40 80w

BULLETT, G. W.—Continued

New Repub 102:482 Ap 8 '40 50w

"Had Mr. Bullett not lost heart and lugged his irrelevant corpse into the story, it would have been an excellent book." Anthony West

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:146 F 3 '40 210w

"Here is a story as English in its sentiment and humor, its deft characterizations of social classes and odd types and in its pervading atmosphere of cheery optimism as one might find in a long search. . . This very entertaining psychological novel closes on a melodramatic note with a murder mystery." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 10 '40 650w

New Yorker 16:90 Mr 9 '40 40w

"A Man of Forty is [not] just sensational stuff; it is also well reasoned and convincing." John Marks

+ — Spec 164:190 F 9 '40 360w

"The writing is occasionally very skillful, but the author's continual intrusion of his own personality is an irritating device. Mr Bullett never lets the reader forget that the characters are his creations, and he cannot resist breaking into his story to point out that everything that happens is his own idea. . . It is difficult to take seriously either characters or action after his strident insistence on their unreality."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 360w

Time 35:97 Mr 25 '40 350w

"The chief impression left on one's mind by this novel is that it was intended to be a little more ambitious than it has actually turned out. Behind the fairly simple story of the actors one feels that some larger power is brooding and expects it to appear at any moment; and though this expectation is never realized it gives the book an unusual colouring that distinguishes it from others."

Times [London] Lit Sup p57 F 3 '40 300w

BULLITT, WILLIAM CHRISTIAN. Report to the American people. 29p 50c Houghton

940.53 European war, 1939-. U.S.—Defenses

An address delivered at Independence Hall in Philadelphia in which the American Ambassador to France warned the American people that unless they prepare swiftly for war, they may share the fate of France.

Christian Century 57:1217 O 2 '40 40w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch

Living Age 359:189 O '40 60w

New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 280w

BULLOCK, ALAN LOUIS CHARLES, ed. Germany's colonial demands. See Oxford university British commonwealth group. Germany's colonial demands

BULLOCK, CHARLES JESSE. Politics, finance, and consequences. 212p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [10s 6d Oxford]

930 History, Ancient. Finance—History 39-16414

"A study of the relations between politics and finance in the ancient world with special reference to the consequences of sound and unsound policies." Subtitle

---

"A clear, accurate and penetrating analysis." A. E. R. Boak

+ Am Econ R 29:830 D '39 280w

"Professor Bullock covers a great deal of ground in two hundred pages, and it is not surprising that he has relied largely on secondary sources. A more serious criticism is that some countries are given so little space that the essential facts are not fully developed, and the evolution of their financial policy is telescoped." J. R. Strayer

+ — Ann Am Acad 208:203 Mr '40 360w

BUNAU-VARILLA, PHILIPPE. From Panama to Verdun; my fight for France. 277p il $2.50 Dorrance

386.444 Panama canal. European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 40-35062

"Forty years ago the name of Bunau-Varilla was familiar to every American who read the papers. . . A thoroughly patriotic Frenchman, he was convinced that France and the world needed a Panama canal under American control. His work at Panama began in 1884, with De Lesseps. Now, in his eighties, he tells the whole story. His part in proving the innocence of Dreyfus and his participation in the World War are more briefly narrated." (Christian Century) Index.

Christian Century 57:1346 O 30 '40 140w

Churchman 154:38 D 15 '40 100w

"This volume, interesting though it is, shows clearly the limitations of autobiography. Should a great man tell how great he is? A biographer can legitimately praise his hero to the skies, but is it the same thing when the hero is his own mouthpiece? Yet it would be uncharitable to criticize too harshly the pride of a man of eighty-one, writing his memoirs in the last year of his life." W. J. Marx

Commonweal 33:306 Ja 10 '41 200w

"From the historical angle, many will question the weight that Bunau-Varilla gives to his own actions and opinions, but none will find his somewhat egotistic account of those days dull reading."

+ — Eng N 125:77 N 21 '40 200w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 50w

BUNKER, JOHN JOSEPH LEO. Revolt. 29p $1.50 Campion bks, ltd, 140 E. 45th st, N.Y.

811 40-33314

"In a poem of 28 pages, unrhymed and irregular in form, the author represents the revolt of the soul of man against the passion and greed, the materialism and spiritual starvation, which enslaved it during recent years. The revolt is directed toward the restoration (or creation) of a universal brotherhood which shall sweeten and save 'the intertwined lives of all men.' " Christian Century

---

"Structurally Mr. Bunker's writing suffers somewhat from loose and windy oratory, abstract imagery, repetitious cliches. An ounce of good satire usually accomplishes more in work of this type than a pound of solemn emotional sermonizing. Mr. Bunker, however, is to be commended for the strength of his vision and for the articulate challenge of his lines written in this time of world violence and destruction."

+ — Books p12 Ja 19 '41 180w

Cath World 152:241 N '40 400w

"The theme is great, the diagnosis painful, the proposed remedy salutary. One could wish for more imaginative power and a greater gift for memorable images and words in the execution of the design."

Christian Century 57:1555 D 11 '40 100w

BURBANK, ADDISON. The cedar deer; il. by [the author]. 157p $2 Coward-McCann

(W) 40-27593

Tomás, a Mayan Indian boy, whose great ambition was to become a sculptor, set off with his father and mother on an important errand. They were to appeal to the new president of Guatemala and ask him to free the Indians from their life of serfdom. The story describes the disasters which befell the family on their way, and how Tomás alone succeeded in reaching the President, to whom he made his appeal and presented the cedar deer which he had carved. For young readers.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

"This book has real literary distinction. The emphasis of the story centering around the mystic rites, religious ceremonies, and the economic plight of the Mayans, may, however, keep the book from being popular with all but the really thoughtful reader from ages twelve to fifteen." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 170w

"The story and pictures are full of authentic Guatemala flavor." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 30w

"The story follows a familiar pattern and sometimes seems a little stifled by the information in which it is embedded, but on the whole the interest is sustained and a realistic atmosphere is suggested. Illustrated by many excellent drawings, this is a book that many boys and girls from 9 to 12 will enjoy and one which will enlarge their knowledge of the countries that lie to the south." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p10 S 15 '40 340w

"This is not only a book for children, but for students of Guatemala as well. . . Mr. Burbank has cleverly numbered his chapters with Mayan numerals—a combination of dots and dashes—so by the time you have finished 'The Cedar Deer,' you also know how to count in Mayan. The book is profusely illustrated with characteristic sketches by the author." F. G. Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 210w

BURBANK, ADDISON. Mexican frieze; il. by [the author]. 268p map $3 Coward-McCann

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Indians of Mexico (W) 40-27780

The author-illustrator of this book went to Mexico in search of colorful native life and for evidences of former civilizations. One of the first things he did was to call on Diego Rivera who gave him a list of six Indian villages to see, and accounts of all these visits are included. The material is grouped under three main headings: Under the big sombrero; Life with the Indians; Yesterday in the land of tomorrow. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:134 D 1 '40

"This author's instant observant interest in the Indians of Mexico has not blinded him to other matters worthy of attention. We may read how he found Oaxaca the pleasantest city in Mexico, and why. We may follow his ramblings with an American youth who had been brought up in Mexico and knew the country well. We may absorb, and share, his enthusiasm for Bartolomé de las Casas. In short, an enjoyable book." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p11 Ja 5 '41 380w

"Bright color is reproduced in three full-page illustrations, and sketches from Mr. Burbank's portfolio are generously supplied. The book's end-paper map is decorative, too, as well as useful. As another travel book from Mexico this one offers an average assortment of personal adventure and observation; it is the author's interest in the Indians—an interest both pictorial and human—that sets it somewhat apart from the mass."

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 19 '41 490w

"This is not a pretentious book. It does not attempt to be either an encyclopedia or a last word about Mexico. . . The style throughout is excellent journalism, and the book is charmingly illustrated by interesting color prints and pen and ink drawings done by the author. And I believe if you are interested in adding to your authentic knowledge of Mexico, this is a book you will want to read and also to keep permanently on your shelves." Grace Flandrau

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ja 4 '41 600w

BURCH, GEORGE BOSWORTH, tr. See Bernard de Clairvaux, Saint. The steps of humility

BURCKHARDT, CARL JACOB. Richelieu; his rise to power; tr. and abr. by Edwin and Willa Muir. 413p il map $3.75 Oxford [16s Allen, G]

B or 92 Richelieu, Armand Jean du Plessis, cardinal, duc de [40-13081]

This first volume of a comprehensive biography of the French statesman covers Richelieu's early life and, in considerable detail, the years when he fought his open and secret enemies in his gradual rise to supreme power. The volume closes with the year 1630. Index.

"The story of Richelieu's rise to power affords an impressive and useful study of nationalist-imperialist technique, especially useful at the present time. If the reader goes through Mr. Burckhardt's book carefully and thoughtfully it will enable him to take a much calmer view of the disturbances and dislocations now going on in the public affairs of both hemispheres. . . Mr. Burckhardt's translators have carpeted his way to the reader by rendering him in an excellent and attractive English style which makes the solid value of his work most easily accessible."

+ Atlantic O '40 420w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books p22 S 29 '40 850w

Reviewed by E. B. Gulick

Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 850w

Cath World 152:249 N '40 280w

"Apart from Richelieu himself, the actors remain slightly enigmatic, and are not fully realized; they are masks rather than faces; and, unfair though it be, one cannot help comparing regretfully the vital creatures of Saint-Simon's Versailles with these marionettes at the Louvre. Yet it must not be thought that the book is dull. It is not. It marches briskly and lightly for all its learning; and, when he wishes, the author can be as vivid as the most romantic historian." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 My 4 '40 440w

"So long as the narrative deals with the intrigues and personal complications which brought Richelieu to power it hardly rises above the pedestrian; one feels the author labouring to convey the glamour and confusion and folly of a seventeenth-century court. But the later chapters on Richelieu as a French and European statesman are of far higher quality; the combination of design and necessity, or rather their coincidence, is firmly grasped, and the reader will wait with impatience for the later volume which deals with Richelieu at the height of his power." A. J. P. T.

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 My 6 '40 260w

"Unrelieved by lightness of style or pointed generalizations, this closely packed account will nevertheless repay the considerable effort of will required to read it even in the slightly abridged form of this admirable translation."

+ Nation 151:225 S 14 '40 60w

"The book is not merely personal biography. Dr. Burckhardt has a profound sense of history, of the great 'movements,' forces, and ideas which appear to mould the shape of human society, and of the relation of persons to them. His Richelieu is not merely a character which interests us psychologically; his beliefs, ideas, aims, and actions are always related to [the] current of events, and even in this volume we are enabled to see him as part—a determining part—of history." Leonard Woolf

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:508 Ap 13 '40 850w

"There are dull passages in this book . . . as well as some kindled writing that actually gives us the thrill and feel, so to speak, of the intense and clashing period. On the whole the book is to be commended for the very able research that is manifest in every chapter of it; on the other hand (and this is possibly a biased criticism), it is to be regretted that Mr. Burckhardt did not enliven his pages with a more picturesque re-creation of the great moments in Richelieu's career while he was mounting to that zenith of power that made him the first man in Europe." Herbert Gorman

BURCKHARDT, C. J.—Continued
+ — N Y Times p4 D 15 '40 1550w

"A thorough and animated study." Crane Brinton
+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 S 28 '40 600w

"Dr. Burckhardt's first volume gives promise that his completed life of Richelieu may be worthy of so great a subject." C. V. Wedgwood
+ — Spec 164:420 Mr 22 '40 650w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 26 '40 600w

Time 36:76 S 23 '40 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p107 Mr 2 '40 900w

BURDETTE, FRANKLIN L. Filibustering in the Senate. 252p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

328.739 U.S. Congress. Senate 40-5313

An account of "the fine art of obstruction from John Randolph to Huey Long." The story of each specific filibuster in the United States senate is described; the varied techniques used in filibusters are made clear; and the efforts to curtail filibustering are studied. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Nichols
Am Hist R 46:433 Ja '41 550w

"Mr. Burdette's studies in the little cultivated field of Senate filibustering have produced a volume of intense present-day interest and of large permanent significance in the history of congressional law-making." G. H. Haynes
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:576 Je '40 600w

"Dr. Burdette has added an important, scholarly volume to the literature on the Senate of the United States, which in its specialized field should be placed beside the recently published notable contribution by George H. Haynes." Belle Zeller
+ Ann Am Acad 209:238 My '40 500w

New Repub 102:553 Ap 22 '40 50w

"Mr. Burdette has written an amusing and valuable book... Mr. Burdette constructs a strong case against obstruction, because it is of obstruction only that he writes. But, to see it in its due proportion, he ought to have noted the immense amount of patient, cogent and rapid work performed by the Senate. With all its faults, it remains one of the great successes of the American Constitution." H. J. Laski
+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:21 Jl 6 '40 650w

Reviewed by V. M. Barnett
Pol Sci Q 55:622 D '40 500w

"This book should be in the reference library of every civics class. It is scholarly and yet will be read with interest by high school students." S. E. Dimond
+ Social Educ 4:374 My '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 25 '40 700w

BURDICK, WILLIAM LIVESEY. The bench and bar of other lands. 652p il $5 Metropolitan law bk. co, inc, 270 Flatbush extension, Brooklyn, N.Y.

340 Law—History and criticism 39-32691

" 'In no sense is it a technical work, being in fact, for the most part, a narrative of things an American law teacher has seen and heard in the courts abroad.' That, as its learned author hastens to explain, is the essence of [this work]. . . As the traveling law teacher, Dean Burdick is uniquely equipped to describe the structure of foreign judicial systems with accuracy and insight. What is more, he describes them in terms of things seen and heard. This last serves to cover a rough but well-proportioned skeleton—composition of courts, original and appellate jurisdiction, standards of legal education, etc.—with the flesh and blood of human conduct. The reader is given both to understand and to feel." Harvard Law R

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 22 '39 450w

Reviewed by William Clark
Harvard Law R 53:1067 Ap '40 800w

BURDON, KENNETH LIVINGSTON. Medical microbiology. 763p il $4.50 (18s 6d) Macmillan

616.01 Micro-organisms, Pathogenic. Infection and infectious diseases 39-13331

"The present work on microbiology is the outgrowth of an earlier book by the same author which was intended primarily for nurses, and even in the volume under review there remains evidence of the emphasis on the rôle of the nurse in the care of the sick and in the prevention of sickness. . . Part I is devoted to the fundamentals of microbiology; Part II largely to methods; Part III is entitled 'Infections and Resistance,' but it embraces much more than these terms imply; Part IV deals with groups of infections and with individual diseases considered chiefly in relation to the regions of the body primarily involved." Am J Pub Health

"Although the author makes acknowledgment of some aid received from professional colleagues, the whole book is essentially his own work; there are no sections or chapters written by others. The subjects are in general excellently covered and the book is second to none in the field." G. W. McCoy
+ Am J Pub Health 30:195 F '40 700w

"A useful handbook for the laboratory worker and clinician alike."
+ Nature 145:813 My 25 '40 210w

BURGE, RUSSELL DAVID. Life in the Ark. 263p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton

40-7802

"The 'Ark' is a great gabled house in a small town, and Mr. Burge's book is about the people who live in this house—the Button family. The Button family is presided over by Amos Button, a lawyer. . . When Mrs. Button's seventh child turns out to be a boy there is great excitement in the Ark. But when the boy grows up to be a spoiled, over-indulged child, he is hated by his sisters. . . The story, such as it is, concerns the death of the heir at the hand of one of the daughters. She is accused of the crime, and the last third of the book is taken up with the trial." Sat R of Lit

"There is a story here, a powerful story, but only its outline has been chiseled in the stone. . . It is almost as if the author has heard this story, seen the people, and tried to figure out what it is all about." Lorine Pruette

Books p12 My 12 '40 600w

Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 30w

" 'Life in the Ark' is strangely enough, interesting for its weaknesses as well as its strength—interesting, that is, to a reviewer who reads with an eye to a book's development and its author's talents. . . 'Life in the Ark' wavers continually between being a straight family novel and a horror story. Under a more practical hand the two might have been successfully integrated, but the union escaped Mr. Burge." Rose Feld
— + N Y Times p7 Ap 28 '40 500w

Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ap 20 '40 360w

BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON and COTTRELL, LEONARD SLATER. Predicting success or failure in marriage. 472p $3.25; to schools $2.50 Prentice-Hall

173.1 Marriage 39-25433

"This book is a contribution to the growing literature which seeks to discover by statistical and by case-study methods the factors associated with marital adjustment. It has also attempted the more difficult task of grappling with certain of the basic problems in prediction upon the solution of which further advance in our knowledge of human behavior depends." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Kelly
Am J Psychol 53:630 O '40 450w

"As a model of clearness and completeness in definition of the problem, discrimination in the use of all relevant methods, and lucidity in exposition of methods and results, this monograph deserves the respectful attention of all students and researchers. The book will stand for a long time as a bench mark of competent research in sociology." G. A. Lundberg
+ Am J Soc 45:805 Mr '40 950w

"This book is a splendid contribution to modern sociological research." Clifford Kirkpatrick
+ Am Soc R 5:303 Ap '40 650w

"It is chiefly as an extension of quantitative methods to a field where such methods have not previously been applied that the book deserves attention. The authors have had to find their way through a veritable wilderness of methodological difficulties, with each of which they have had to deal as best they could. It would be easy to criticize their procedure at many points, but much more difficult to suggest alternative procedures which would have solved their problems better." Willard Waller
+ — Ann Am Acad 210:186 Jl '40 370w

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p18 Mr 10 '40 700w

J Home Econ 32:253 Ap '40 80w

Reviewed by D. S. Klaiss
Social Forces 18:591 My '40 500w

BURGESS, PERRY. Who walk alone. 312p il map $2.75 Holt

616.998 Leprosy. Culion island, P.I. Langdon, Ned. pseud. (W) 40-30160

Written in the first person and based on facts, this book tells the story of an American ex-soldier who finds, nine years after his return from the Philippines, that he has leprosy. By a fake suicide he cuts himself adrift from family and friends, and after a year's treatments in New York goes to the leper colony on the island of Culion in the Philippines. The story, mainly concerned with Ned's own struggles and experiences contains also a picture of the life of the colony and the work of doctors, nurses and research workers. Index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p26 O 6 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p7 O 2 '40 700w

"The narrative of this graphic human document is told with amazing sincerity and restraint. It is a true story of gallantry, suffering, triumph, victory of the spirit. It is inspiring, it is beautiful." R. M. Green, M.D.
+ Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 600w

"This is one of the most painful, distressing, but entrancing and at the same time profitable books the reviewer has ever read." H. J. Simpson
+ Churchman 155:18 F 1 '41 190w

Reviewed by T. V. Kiernan
Commonweal 33:128 N 22 '40 410w

"The story is one of heroic courage under peculiarly tragic conditions. It has real interest for the general reader and will help to dispel some of the mystery and the horror associated with leprosy. There are maps and photographs and much information of reference value, all made available through a detailed index. The volume should be of special interest to social and public health workers." J. S. Cleavinger
+ Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 180w

"[A] first book, written with rare strength, sensitiveness and simplicity." M. L. Rossbach
+ N Y Times p4 O 27 '40 950w

"A gentle and profoundly affecting story, told without horror."
+ New Yorker 16:78 O 5 '40 70w

"It is possibly the first novel ever published with an appendix, and index, and photographs. For anyone who has ever imagined himself to be lonely, it should prove both salutary and gripping. Fault could be found with some of the writing, but the story is not one to which artistry in the telling is essential. Many books have been written on the theme that 'He that loseth his life shall find it.' This is one that is incontrovertible." Charlton Ogburn, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 N 23 '40 380w

"Mr Burgess has been a director of the Leonard Wood memorial (American Leprosy foundation) for 15 years, and the president and executive officer for the last decade. This is his first book, and, though not in all respects skillfully written, it is authoritative and unusually interesting."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 O 1 '40 800w

BURGLON, NORA. The cuckoo calls; il. by Ingri and Edgar Parin d'Aulaire. 280p $2 Winston

Children in Finland 40-12418

Story of modern Finland, sometime before 1939. The twins, Jukka and Vendla, find time between school and chores to start a museum, help their friend Coffee Mia with her harvest, and save the dam, which last helped clear up the misunderstanding between the local Finns and Swedes.

Booklist 37:38 O 1 '40

"There is more information about Finland than in other stories of that country that have lately come out in such profusion: Jukka and Vendla, the boy and girl who hear the cuckoo's call in the west, and so have good luck, have it in so many unusual ways that the story keeps jumping along. It is for ten-year-olds, and would be useful as background material for school work as well, having value for 'projects.' " M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 250w

"Though the background is carefully done, the plot is not well knit and some of the characters are unconvincing. Recommended for ages ten to twelve. Attractive make-up, with illustrations by Ingri and Edgar d'Aulaire well adapted to the text." Sonja Wennerblad
+ — Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 180w

"In 'The Cuckoo Calls' there is much that is fresh and interesting, much that is very welcome as a picture of conditions at the present day, but the very abundance of Miss Burglon's material, and the facility with which she writes, have led her into difficulties. Too much happens in her story with the result that it seems cluttered and our interest is divided among too many incidents and too many characters. . . Yet while careful editing and cutting would have improved 'The Cuckoo Calls,' it is nevertheless a story for boys and girls from 9 to 12, that is well worth reading because of its interest and timely picture of Finland." A. T. Eaton
+ — N Y Times p10 S 8 '40 290w

BURK, JOHN NAGLEE. Clara Schumann; a romantic biography. 438p il $3 Random house

B or 92 Schumann, Mrs Clara Josephine (Wieck) (W) 40-27304

Biography of the wife of Robert Schumann, who was also the great friend and inspiration of Johannes Brahms. The work is based largely upon Clara Schumann's diary. The author is program annotator of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Index.

BURK, J. N.—Continued

"The publishers say truly that in the whole history of music no woman has made so substantial a contribution to her art as Clara Wieck. Her story has great pathos, and Mr. Burk tells it with fine restraint and dignity. His account of Schumann's courtship might have been shortened to advantage, and so might some of his citations from letters: but it is hard to see how otherwise his book could be improved."

+ Atlantic My '40 230w

Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

Bookmark 2:11 Ja '41

"This glimpse of a tranquil era—that is, politically tranquil—gives the book at this moment a markedly refreshing quality. But at any period it would be worthy of attention as the story of a woman not without weaknesses, and not without faults, but with strength, with courage, and with a greatness of spirit that made her a worthy associate of the mighty and exacts from our generation respect and admiration." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p1 Mr 31 '40 1550w

"Mr. Burk has done a thorough job of research, and he includes many letters that have never before been translated into English. But his biography would have gained in strength, had he made it about half as long." C. B.

Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40 170w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 6 '40 410w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

"Historical knowledge, musical scholarship, human sympathy, and a quiet, simple style of writing go to make this a first-rate biography. . . A natural, charming book about a natural, charming woman."

+ Nation 150:430 Mr 30 '40 50w

"A sympathetic and competent interpretation of Robert Schumann's pianist-wife. . . The book does not equal 'Free Artist' in literary quality, but it is well worth reading."

+ New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 50w

"Mr. Burk keeps Clara at the heart of his book and thus gives it focus and unity of feeling. He has given his story something more—a warm, pulsing, human emotion. Clara seems to emerge intact, as do Schumann and Brahms. . . If there is any deficiency in this book it is Mr. Burk's failure to paint in more of the environment and spirit of a time when tremendous issues were at stake. But that would probably have meant a three-volume book. . . Mr. Burk has accomplished admirably what he set out to do." Howard Taubman

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 7 '40 900w

"Charming, solid biography."

+ New Yorker 16:88 Mr 23 '40 20w

"The life history of a remarkable artist and a remarkable woman is told in Mr. Burk's volume in a sympathetic and arresting narrative, well organized and happily free from the fulsome adulation that characterizes many a 'romantic biography.' It is a welcome addition to the none too numerous volumes on music that proverbially 'should be on every music lover's bookshelf.' " P. H. Lang

+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ap 6 '40 600w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

BURKHARDT, ROBERT FERDINAND, and BURKHARDT, EVE (ADAM BLISS, ROB EDEN, REX JARDIN, pseuds). Love comes flying. (Gramercy publication) 255p $2 Phoenix

40-13262

Ellen Anvers, set to catch a suspected spy working in a large American airplane factory, falls in love with her suspect, and succeeds in saving both his life and his reputation.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 Ag 25 '40 130w

Boston Transcript p1 S 14 '40 40w

BURLINGAME, LEONAS LANCELOT. Heredity and social problems. 369p il $3.50 (23s) McGraw

575.12 Heredity. Social problems 40-4493

College text on biology and heredity, and the relation of these two to social problems and human affairs. The author is professor of biology at Stanford university. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Landman

Am Soc R 5:837 O '40 130w

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

BURLINGAME, ROGER. Engines of democracy; inventions and society in mature America. 606p il map $3.75 Scribner

973 U.S.—History. Inventions (W) 40-27637

In this sequel to his March of the Iron Men (Book Review Digest, 1938, 1939) Mr Burlingame writes of inventions and their social implications in the America of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. There are chapters on photography, telegraphy, telephone, radio, the bicycle, the automobile and electricity. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:31 O 1 '40

Bookmark 2:4 Ja '41

"I have found Burlingame's narrative fascinating, and I believe that it will grip and hold a large and varied reading public. It is a churlish sort of criticism to complain because the author has written the book that he himself wanted to write instead of writing the book the reviewer would have preferred him to do. None the less, many readers may regret that a writer who sees the material background of contemporary American civilization in such clear outline refrains from committing himself to any clear cut proposals of remedies for social maladjustments arising out of the rise and fall of industries." Lancelot Hogben

+ — Books p2 Ag 25 '40 1500w

"Mr. Burlingame likes almost everything and everybody. Perhaps it is his very eclecticism which gives his book its rambling charm—more charm than punch." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 650w

Reviewed by P. M. Morse

Boston Transcript p1 S 14 '40 1100w

"The book is written in a style easily read and understood by the layman and should prove a valuable addition to all libraries." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 65:651 Ag '40 90w

New Repub 103:701 N 18 '40 100w

"Though Mr. Burlingame deals with inventions in groups . . . his book is not devoid of what the editors of popular magazines love to call 'human interest.' In his pages the familiar figures of Morse, Field, Edison, Bell, Whitney, McCormick and a good many others not so familiar live again. But they are no longer the old heroes. Though they loom large as personalities, though they struggle against tremendous odds, Mr. Burlingame handles them like bright-red circles and squares that give a national pattern social meaning and enable us to grasp it as a whole. Moreover, as a literary draftsman he is far superior to most of his predecessors, so that his narrative of invention has the velocity, the continuity and the interest that always distinguish a good book, whether it is a treatise on economics or a novel." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 25 '40 1450w

New Yorker 16:54 Ag 31 '40 70w

"This is an intelligent book about the technics of the recent past. The popular idolatry and mythology which so frequently shroud the truth about invention have been skillfully stripped away. Missing also are the half-baked comments of the popularizer. And as if such negative virtues were not enough, the whole text is shot through with social criticism of a reasonably high level of thoughtfulness." Paul Bixler

+ Sat R of Lit 22:14 O 5 '40 650w

"Because of the earnestness in research that it displays and the skilful writing which marks it, the author's latest book is an able continuation of his former study. Together, these two large volumes furnish a stimulating popular account of invention and its application in America." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 800w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

BURMAN, BEN LUCIEN. Big river to cross; Mississippi life today; drawings by Alice Caddy. 295p $3 Day

917.7 Mississippi river (W) 40-12531

Anecdotal account of the Mississippi river, the boats of various types which navigate it, and the people who live on its banks or ply the river in boats. The river packets, show boats, shanty boats, barges and steamboats all have a part in the chronicle. Many of the local tall tales are included, as well as new stories which the author picked up during his many river jaunts.

Booklist 37:10 S '40

Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"In his quest for legend and folklore, Mr. Burman's delighted credulity may have inspired roustabouts, shanty-boat men and their kinfolk to invent as well as recollect while they spun their stories. . . Eager sympathy, a native democracy and a passion for flowing water have equipped Mr. Burman to find out and record an amazing number of interesting things which nobody seems to have hit upon before." C. B. Firestone

+ — Books p5 Ag 25 '40 1050w

"'The Mississippi is well worth reading about,' Mark Twain wrote more than half a century ago. The Mississippi is still worth reading about, and Burman's 'Big River to Cross' is a good book in which to read about it." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ag 16 '40 500w

"The hard fact remains that Mr. Burman's pleasant book is not in the same class as Mark Twain's. In 'Life on the Mississippi' we get a sense of reality which Mr. Burman tends to gloss over. The violence and crime and the poverty of the river tend to be sentimentalized into the rather spurious romanticism of local color writing and few of Mr. Burman's river characters actually come to life. . . None the less, there are some grand sections in his book." G. K. Smart

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 420w

"At his best Mr. Burman can write with magic about the soft, wistful beauty of the Lower Mississippi as it winds its dreamy way past the bars and bayous of the Deep South." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 21 '40 600w

"In 'Big River to Cross' Mr. Burman has given us the sort of regional literature which is ever welcome, and ever interesting in that it makes live for the reader a part of America which hitherto has had for him only the most nebulous of half-realities." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 32:413 S 6 '40 350w

"Big River to Cross is an unusually good book for reading aloud, in fact, as one chuckles over the anecdotes told by rivermen on the different types of Mississippi boats, one really needs an appreciative listener with whom to share the enjoyment. . . An intriguing story." A. M. Colt

+ Library J 65:651 Ag '40 120w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 151:175 Ag 31 '40 80w

"Covering all aspects, it is still too light on some and heavy on others. I could stand a fuller and better account of the newer barge traffic, more about piloting and maintenance, the structure and handling of boats, a more thorough history and less scattered statistics. And I could get along without the haphazardly lore-ish tone of half the stuff in it." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 103:251 Ag 19 '40 310w

"The book is crammed with good stories. . . In fact, Burman has too many stories; they follow one another so closely they trip over each other. And Burman hurries them. The essence of a good river story is slow time and plenty of it. . . There is much more fantasy than fact in this highly idealized survey of the river of today with its few packets and its many towboats; but at bottom it is all true to the spirit of the river. . . It is something very precious, something very much our own, something truly American; and Burman has sublimated much of it here in this book." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p5 Ag 18 '40 1400w

"A fine, lazy, charming, slightly overwritten book that brings Mark Twain up to date. Mr. Burman is generally recognized as the leading interpreter of the Mississippi, so you can trust him. . . Local stuff at its most ingratiating."

+ New Yorker 16:64 Ag 17 '40 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Sabin

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 Ag 17 '40 1050w

"From a heart full of love for a great river he has taken a sentimental journey into a colorful, humorous and charming part of the nation, and can be chided only because he didn't make it twice as long."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '40 800w

BURNETT, PHILIP MASON. Reparation at the Paris peace conference from the standpoint of the American delegation. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Paris peace conference: hist. and documents) 2v 1148;833p $15 Columbia univ. press [75s Oxford]

940.31422 European war, 1914-1918—Reparations. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919 40-10882

"This publication consists of an interpretative essay of approximately 150 pages, followed by the texts of more than 500 documents, more than half of which have not previously appeared in any printed form accessible to the public. The author is especially emphatic in his conclusion that the famous Article 231 of the Versailles Treaty was not inserted for the purpose of passing a moral judgment upon Germany's responsibility for the origin of the war, but merely 'as a basis for the primary statement of her theoretical financial liability.' The subsequent distortion of this article by German writers and politicians was made possible because 'the article was compounded of unreality and imprecision.'" Am Pol Sci R

"Although the introductory essay is brief and legalistic, it is closely reasoned and complete. Together with the massive documentation, it constitutes the most important single source of information on the reparations settlement." G. L. Kirk

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1043 O '40 260w

Reviewed by W. M. Franklin

Social Educ 4:518 N '40 900w

BURNETT, WILLIAM RILEY. High Sierra. 292p $2 Knopf

(W) 40-5663

Gangster story, depicting the career of a criminal of the Dillinger type. He attempts to hold up a rich California hotel, but things go wrong, and he is killed in the mountains by a squad of policemen.

Atlantic Ap '40 130w

"Presenting a gangster who is at once a Public Enemy No. 1 and a disillusioned artist in a doubtful profession 'High Sierra' is an underworld story with an entertaining difference." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p10 Mr 10 '40 480w

BURNETT, W. R.—Continued
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 40w

Reviewed by Max Gissen
New Repub 102:480 Ap 8 '40 320w

"It is to Mr. Burnett's credit that his gangster is credible throughout. This is a likeable and honest portrait; human, not 'after all,' but all the time. This laconic, worrying, middle-aged man is, as he himself insists, some sort of relation under the skin to the more predatory sort of financial wizard; noticing that the nice guys in this world just get pushed around, he decides regretfully to do some of the pushing. And I doubt if his story will be better told than in High Sierra." Christopher Barton
+ New Statesman & Nation 20:114 Ag 3 '40 700w

" 'High Sierra' takes a place along in the middle of Mr. Burnett's dozen or so novels which, of their kind, are about the best on the market." F. T. Marsh
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 10 '40 650w

"A good, rousing melodrama with its heart in the right place."
+ New Yorker 16:90 Mr 9 '40 50w

"The connoisseur of underworld fiction will find himself at home in 'High Sierra,' surrounded by familiar figures and imaginatively involved in familiar criminal activities, with a certain zest added by a mountain setting in which tommy-guns and crooks' habits of thought and speech are as incongruous as a silk topper would be in the middle of Pyramid Lake. . . In his description of violent physical action Mr. Burnett's dramatic sense stops him short of melodrama; in his delineation of character his sympathy stops short of sentimentality. You can go along with 'High Sierra' just for the ride, fast and exciting, but it will leave you something to remember." B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:12 Mr 30 '40 850w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien
Spec 165:128 Ag 2 '40 600w

"For those who hesitate about reading a book that does not mince words, it may be said that Mr Burnett has used profanity with a naturalness that at least excuses him from being classed as 'crude'; the rough phrases seem consistent with the characterizations."
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 130w

"The story has all the thrills one can want, much brilliant hard wit in the creamiest American vernacular and more than a little of the common touch that no good novelist in America despises."
Times [London] Lit Sup p361 Jl 27 '40 550w

BURNHAM, DAVID. Last act in Bermuda. 244p $2 Scribner 40-30522

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 S 1 '40 90w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 60w

"The sleuth in this story is an attractive young police inspector; but it is his sister, as a refreshing new sort of Watson, who gives the tale its brightest turn of novelty. Joan Hopkins doesn't marvel at her brother's methods: she sets herself, instead, first to assist and then to beat them. 'Last Act in Bermuda' is both brisk and romantic, with a swift-moving interest that depends more upon personalities than on tangible clues." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p16 S 1 '40 200w

"Hoodwinker."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 7 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 220w

BURNS, ARTHUR EDWARD, and WATSON, DONALD STEVENSON. Government spending and economic expansion. 176p $2.50; pa $2 Am. council on public affairs
330.973 U.S.—Economic policy 40-13616

"Under the four general headings, Recovery and Spending, Growth of Spending Policy, Issues in Spending, and The Outlook, the authors review the depression spending, chiefly of the Federal government, which is charged with 65 of the 150 billions spent. Several interesting conclusions emerge: (1) spending began too late; (2) not enough was spent; (3) the spending was aimed at shifting—and conflicting—objectives; (4) it was uncertain and on an 'emergency' basis; (5) the analogy between public and private debt is fallacious; (6) a balanced budget is impossible and undesirable under present conditions; (7) spending is initiative and enterprise." Am Soc R

Reviewed by G. H. E. Smith
Am Pol Sci R 34:1231 D '40 360w
Am Soc R 5:998 D '40 170w

BURT, ALFRED LE ROY. The United States, Great Britain and British North America from the Revolution to the establishment of peace after the War of 1812. 448p maps $3.25 Yale univ. press
327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Relations (general) with Canada. Canada—Relations (general) with U.S. 40-29766

"Another volume in the monumental series on the relations of Canada and the United States [issued by the Carnegie endowment for international peace]. It covers the period from 'the parting of the ways' at the outbreak of the Revolution to the boundary settlement and the establishment of peace after the War of 1812." (Christian Century) Index.

Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 70w

"The Burt volume is a very learned one and in parts it is not too easy reading. But throughout most of it the weight of learning is lessened for the reader by the refreshing frankness with which the author expresses himself and passes judgment." F. H. Underhill
+ Canadian Forum 20:322 Ja '41 700w
Christian Century 57:1618 D 25 '40 40w

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). No surrender. 258p $2 Macrae Smith co.
40-33101

Story of two young people who thru misunderstanding came to hate each other and to seek open and hidden ways of revenge. Both loved the Galt home, Faildyke, and when Jed's father, hoping to bring the two together, left the home to Cathryn, he only added fuel to the flames. Tho each declared for "no surrender," years of sorrow finally ended in happiness.

"Not as light as some of Mrs. Burt's recent novels, but all the better for that." Lisle Bell
+ Books p24 O 27 '40 80w

"It takes years of painful growth for both Jed and Cathie to come together, and [Mrs] Burt has handled the slow change with tender skill. It may seem captious to complain at the sudden, mutual capitulation of two such proud, suspicious characters, but at any rate there is satisfaction in the picture of the two who loved Faildyke the best established there firmly at last." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p24 N 3 '40 400w

BURTON, DONALD, and ROBERTSHAW, GEORGE FREDERICK. Sulphated oils and allied products; their chemistry and analysis; foreword by T. P. Hilditch. 163p $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Harvey]

547.2 Sulfonated oils 40-26821

"The culmination of investigations begun in 1928 involving the practical and critical examination of a large amount of published data. An historical introduction precedes general chapters on raw materials, methods, and chemistry of sulphation. These are followed by chapters on analysis, covering sulphated oils, sulphated fatty alcohols, and petroleum sulphonic acids. Scattered throughout the book are more than 300 references." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by W. L. Abramowitz
Chem & Met Eng 47:270 Ap '40 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:9 Ja '40

BURTON, ELI FRANKLIN; SMITH, HUGH GRAYSON, and WILHELM, JOSEPH OSCAR. Phenomena at the temperature of liquid helium. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 362p il $6 Reinhold [36s Chapman]

541.36 Low temperature research. Matter—Properties. Helium 40-13324

"This monograph deals primarily with the physical properties of matter at temperatures as low as 4.2 deg. K. or less, but the authors have wandered freely outside this limited temperature near the absolute zero whenever it seemed necessary to do so. The first five chapters, dealing with a historical preface, methods of liquefaction of gases, the measurement of temperatures, the physical properties of liquid and solid helium and superconductivity (123 pages in all) are more or less an introduction. The remainder of the book deals with specific heats at low temperatures, magnetic properties, temperatures below 1 deg. K., electrical and thermal conductivities, the nature of the superconducting state and the λ-transformation in liquid helium." Chem & Met Eng

"Physicists and physical chemists interested in the properties of matter and the laws of Nature under conditions very different from those ordinarily encountered should find this A. C. S. Monograph extremely interesting." F. G. Brickwedde
+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:777 S 10 '40 570w

"The introductory chapters can be read by anyone to advantage, whereas the remainder of the book requires a knowledge of the principles of thermodynamics, a brief course in the quantum theory and some knowledge of theoretical physics. The text has numerous references to the bibliography at the end of each chapter and the material is well arranged. The book does the authors great credit." H. J. Macintire
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:654 S '40 230w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:35 Jl '40

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ). His dear persuasion; the life of Elizabeth Ann Seton. 304p $2.50 Longmans

Seton, Mother Elizabeth Ann (Bayley)—Fiction 40-27305

Elizabeth Ann Seton, the daughter of a Tory doctor, was a society belle in post-Revolutionary New York. After her marriage, the birth of her five children, and the death of her husband, Elizabeth Seton's attentions were turned more and more to religious matters. She became a Catholic, founded the Sisters of Charity in the United States, and established the first community for Catholic women in this country. The biography is written in the fiction form. Short bibliography.

"We are again indebted to Mrs. Burton for a fine book of Americana—and a fine piece of hagiography, too." Paula Kurth
+ America 63:413 Jl 20 '40 290w
Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

"Mrs. Burton's account of this life will be too sentimental for some tastes, but it is not lacking in the vitality which was so characteristic of its subject."
Books p28 S 29 '40 300w

"One who first meets Mother Seton in these pages might well ask himself why she should be considered a saint. She appears, it is true, as a loyal friend, and a devoted wife. She bore the cross of religious misunderstanding well. But nowhere in these pages is she more than an average good wife and mother. The convent life here depicted is more of a romantic Brook Farm, though limited to women, than a religious house. It is not from such books that the greatness of Mother Seton will be appreciated." Rev. J. L. Burke, S.J.
— Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 360w

"Mrs. Burton has her own genre of biography, one which reads like the account of a 'familiar' of the subject, and in its easy, facile style gives no hint of the labor and research that has gone into its making. It is a genre particularly well suited to a generation irked by effort and Mrs. Burton with no sacrifice of historical truth has done much to show forth the beauty of holiness in the lives of some of our American converts."
+ Cath World 151:766 S '40 160w

"Mrs. Burton has already shown that she has a private recipe for the writing of biography. The main element, that of the author's human warmth, is incommunicable. But she understands, as an experienced journalist, how to make biography as readable as fiction, though some, who prefer their biography 'straight,' will wonder if she is not at times too much of a novelist. Personally I do not greatly object to her taking off the top of people's heads and peeping inside, for the method is used with discretion, and Elizabeth's diary and letters are amply drawn upon. We are left with the conviction that here is the genuine Mother Seton." Theodore Maynard
+ Commonweal 31:495 Mr 29 '40 700w

"Katherine Burton has written as a Catholic for Catholics and has thus stressed the interest of one faith and one church, rather than universal humanity; she has also, apparently, sought to give her story popular appeal by emphasizing its emotional content. The interest of this book is thus sharply limited. And the quality that must have been Elizabeth Ann Seton's—her vital force, capacity and astute mentality—is never really brought to life. She must have been a remarkable woman; the value of Katherine Burton's book lies in its recording her remarkable career."
+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 17 '40 470w

BURTON, MILES. Mr Westerby missing. 271p $2 Doubleday 40-11103

Detective story.

Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"Here's another first-rate British offering in Miles Burton's best vein. . . Don't skip this, if you are keeping up with significant murders." Will Cuppy
+ Books p10 Je 23 '40 200w

"It is a calm, slightly obvious mystery, refreshing in that without ever meeting Mr. Westerby you become really quite fond of him." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 6 '40 120w

"Miles Burton has written many good mystery stories, and this is one of his best." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p17 Je 23 '40 180w

"Complicated mechanism used by Merrion to establish criminal's guilt may seem inconclusive to some addicts. Otherwise an outstanding British baffler. Good."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 22 '40 40w

BURTON, MILES. Written in dust [Eng title: Murder in the coalhole]. 267p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Collins]

40-4882

Detective story.

"This is a baffler in the best British tradition, with soothing background, people and wordage." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 28 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 40w

"The crime has been ingeniously planned and executed, and Merrion's sleuthing ability is put to a severe test. Miles Burton's detective stories are always good, but is it necessary to make his Scotland Yard representative quite so stupid?" Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 Ja 28 '40 160w

"Pedestrian."

— Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ja 27 '40 40w

"The tale is fairly told and the reader is in the position to reach a correct solution. It is perhaps a pity that in such a plausible novel the murdered man is pictured as writing a letter about the head mistress which would obviously have obtained for her enormous damages for libel. It is incredible that so grossly libellous a letter should be represented as a motive for murder rather than action in a court of law."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 27 '40 120w

BURTON, THOMAS. And so dedicated. 416p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton

(W) 40-5216

Saga of an American town and the people who rule it. Most of the action takes place during 1920 to 1930, during the years when Dr Tom Raleigh marries into the powerful Winthrop clan, and then seeks a way out.

"Just what it all means, what the novel sums up to, is for Mr. Burton to know and you to find out. Is it merely one of those historical panoramic pictures with all sorts of typical scenes selected to represent an age? Some of those scenes, some of the parts, are well done by themselves. But the whole left me frustrated and guessing." F. T. Marsh

Books p10 F 25 '40 500w

"A robust yarn . . . written with that kind of nervous impressionism which involves the use of a good deal of transient slang and a great number of verbless, ungrammatical sentences, together with learned references to all the arts and sciences. The pace is terrific. The characters are all more or less neurotic, and their doings are more sensational than sensitive and sensible. The few characters Mr. Burton admires, or asks us to admire, come off very badly indeed." C. H. Grattan

— N Y Times p18 F 25 '40 1250w

"This sensational novel is a remarkable jumble of bad writing, sophomoric thinking, and slovenly reporting. The author, who loves language not wisely but too well, pours out his words by the bucketful with a brave disregard of meanings and nuances. . . One has the uncomfortable feeling that Mr. Burton has kept his eyes fixed on what has been written about the twenties rather than on that interesting era itself." B. R. R.

— Sat R of Lit 21:22 Mr 2 '40 230w

Discussion by J. M. Howard

Sat R of Lit 21:9 Mr 23 '40 500w

"Mr. Burton writes competently and has produced an entertaining book if one is interested in recalling what a fool he was not very long ago. The writing is often excited and at times slightly hysterical—both excusable considering the era Mr Burton is writing about. The 1920s had a little bit of everything and the novel follows that pattern, with touches of 'Arrowsmith' and 'Revelry' and John Dos Passos thrown in for good measure."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 360w

BUTHMAN, WILLIAM CURT. Rise of integral nationalism in France; with special reference to the ideas and activities of Charles Maurras. 355p $4 Columbia univ. press [16s King]

944.08 France—Nationality. Maurras, Charles

39-32365

"The most detailed exposition in English of French integral nationalism—royalist, Catholic, anti-Semitic, anti-democratic—as expounded by its leader, Charles Maurras, editor of L'Action Française, here described as the great anti-Rousseau of nineteenth and twentieth-century France." (New Repub) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Kraus

Am J Soc 46:109 Jl '40 160w

"Every student of French institutions will realize the great value of this monograph, all the more because of the accuracy in handling copious materials and because of the richness of detail. One may venture to hope that, in a later volume, Dr. Buthman will follow the fortunes of integral nationalism through the last quarter of a century." E. M. Sait

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:364 Ap '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:571 Ap '40 20w

New Repub 102:93 Ja 15 '40 50w

BUTLER, GEORGE D. Introduction to community recreation; prepared for the National recreation association. 547p $3.50 McGraw

790 Recreation. Amusements. Community centers. Playgrounds (W) 40-10954

"The term 'community recreation' is applied in this volume to recreation services that are provided for the benefit of all the people. Special consideration is given to those forms of recreation which require a considerable degree of organization and leadership and in which participation plays an important role. Because governmental agencies are providing a large and increasing proportion of such services, this book is devoted primarily to the work of these agencies. It deals with recreation as a function of local government, like health, education, and other essential public services. . . Commercial recreation, which is motivated more by the desire for profit than by interest in the welfare of the people served, is not included as a part of community recreation." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The best recent book in this field." O. T. Mallery

+ Ann Am Acad 213:216 Ja '41 280w

Booklist 36:426 Jl 15 '40

"As an exposition of the community recreation movement, [this] book is practical, comprehensive, tolerant, and provocative. It should be valuable as a text for general survey courses in the scope, objectives, trends, and techniques as so far developed, especially in the area of governmental action." George Hjelte

+ Survey 76:340 N '40 330w

BUTLER, JOHN ALFRED VALENTINE. Electrocapillarity; the chemistry and physics of electrodes and other charged surfaces. 208p $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d Methuen]

537.2 Electrocapillary phenomena 40-26822

"'The book deals with potential differences at electrified interfaces, the origin and nature of the effects that arise therefrom, and with electrode equilibria and kinetics. It is not at all concerned with the extensive uses which have been found for reversible electrodes for determining the thermodynamic properties of electrolytes, of which there are a number of excellent accounts in text-books of electrochemistry and thermodynamical chemistry.'" N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by F. C. Nachod

Chem & Met Eng 47:656 S '40 300w

"This book is remarkable, owing particularly to the subject matter which it covers. The author uses the word 'electrocapillarity' in a wider sense than is generally done. The term is mostly reserved for our knowledge of the electrocapillary curves of liquid metals; one also finds it extended to include electrokinetic phenomena. Besides these subjects the author treats those parts of electrochemistry which deal with electrode processes as such, not with their usefulness in explaining the properties of electrolytes in solution." H. Freundlich

+ J Phys Chem 44:953 O '40 250w

"The selection of subjects has been made by avoiding those which [the author] feels to have been adequately treated in other works, and by concentrating chiefly on those in which he has become, through his own researches, most interested. To the general reader, the book will therefore appear to lack balance though not interest. To a student interested in some particular point, it may prove to be informative, stimulating or wholly silent." G. S. Hartley

+ — Nature 146:536 O 26 '40 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:34 Jl '40

BUTLER, NICHOLAS MURRAY. Across the busy years; recollections and reflections. v 2 474p il $3.75 Scribner

B or 92 (W) (39-27850)

This second volume of President Butler's memoirs deals chiefly with his interests in international affairs from 1893 to 1939. For volume one see Book Review Digest, 1939. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:34 O 1 '40

Reviewed by W. M. Houghton

Books p7 Ag 25 '40 1250w

"This second volume of Dr. Butler's autobiography is one of the most interesting studies of the life of a public man written in our time." J. E. Park

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 700w

Cath World 152:508 Ja '41 170w

Christian Science Monitor p16 S 4 '40 390w

Commonweal 32:393 Ag 30 '40 210w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 65:651 Ag '40 130w

"Altogether a cheerful and far-ranging book, not deep but wide." D. S. Miller

+ New Repub 103:391 S 16 '40 280w

Reviewed by Carlo Sforza

N Y Times p3 S 1 '40 1600w

"Invaluable to the future social historian, these memoirs of the great and the prominent are designedly and frankly full-dress."

+ New Yorker 16:55 Ag 31 '40 60w

Reviewed by John Erskine

Sat R of Lit 22:39 O 12 '40 360w

"Volume 2 of Nicholas Murray Butler's 'Across the Busy Years' is less a biographical chronicle than a conglomeration of letters, discussions, anecdotes and records of travel, incidents and personal contacts. The reader will have to do his own selecting; if he does, he will find pages of general interest and occasional revelation as well as some material that is minor or specialized."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 1000w

Reviewed by W. A. White

Survey G 29:626 D '40 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p426 Ag 31 '40 550w

BUTLER, NICHOLAS MURRAY. Why war? essays and addresses on war and peace. 323p $2.50 Scribner

172.4 Peace. International cooperation. World politics 40-8080

"These essays and addresses are appeals to public opinion which have been made during the years 1938 and 1939 on either side of the Atlantic. Their object is twofold: first, to convince the leaders of public opinion that the only sure way to prevent war is for the nations of the world to unite to remove the causes of war; and, second, that, violent hostilities having broken out on three continents, the minds of men must now be turned to such post-war settlement of those differences which have brought about hostilities as will pave the way to an orderly and peaceful world." (Introd) Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Park

Boston Transcript p2 My 4 '40 550w

Christian Century 57:902 Jl 17 '40 120w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 154:19 S 1 '40 150w

Foreign Affairs 18:747 Jl '40 10w

"The attitude of sweetness and light, in view of the recent destruction that blew through Poland and Finland, seems faintly Utopian to this reader, but perhaps we should repeat, 'Get thee behind me, cynicism,' until Dr. Butler's philosophy shines through and causes us to see its ultimate value. His writing is a bit too enthusiastic and breezy, and as we read, the feeling comes over us that we are listening to a chatty old lady who has very little understanding of anything outside her realm of wife and mother. At any rate, a reader finds he can whirl through the book with gratifying speed." Richard Oliver

— Living Age 358:392 Je '40 430w

" 'Why War?' is a collection of occasional—and often very perfunctory—papers and speeches—everything, apparently, that the President of Columbia University has said or written on the subject of war and peace in more than two years. Considered separately, each one of these essays and addresses is doubtless adequate to the occasion for which it was prepared. But when they are gathered together in a book the prevailing impression they leave in a reader's mind is one of repetitiousness." V. F.

Sat R of Lit 22:21 My 18 '40 250w

"The American position to-day is exceedingly difficult and complicated. If Dr. Butler's lucid thinking should clarify the minds of his compatriots, it ought also to help Englishmen to a sympathetic understanding of the problems which America has to surmount in giving practical effect to her faith in the cause of human liberty."

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 My 4 '40 250w

BUTLER, PIERCE. The origin of printing in Europe. (Studies in lib. science) 155p il $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

655.11 Printing—Hitsory 40-35556

A treatise on the early history of printing which concentrates attention on the technical details and on the changes wrought on civilization by the invention. The author was from 1920 to 1931 curator of the typographical collection in the Newberry Library; since 1931 he has been professor of bibliographical history in the Graduate Library School of the University of Chicago. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Booklist 37:264 F 15 '41

Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40 90w

"Any general reader interested in the history of culture will be doing himself a disservice if he passes [this book] up unread. It not only explains technical matters which, though they underlie our whole civilization, are a closed book to most laymen, but gives a really remarkable interpretation of the social significance of the 'invention' of printing."

+ Nation 152:26 Ja 4 '41 80w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins

Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ja 4 '41 150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:88 F '41 210w

BUTTERFIELD, OLIVER MCKINLEY. Love problems of adolescence. 212p $2.25 Emerson

136.7354 Adolescence. Sex 39-22227

"A study of the sex interests, and to some extent of the behavior, of more than a thousand persons from 13 to 25 years of age who were in attendance at young people's conferences, together with a discussion of the problems of friendship, courtship and marriage in which these young people had expressed interest." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"The book deserves wide reading." R. M. Atwater

+ Am J Pub Health 30:296 Mr '40 240w

"A valuable book for those who wish to know the adolescent as a person rather than as a statistic." J. R. Runner

+ Am J Soc 46:118 Jl '40 220w

Booklist 36:276 Mr 15 '40

Christian Century 56:904 Jl 19 '39 50w

J Home Econ 32:254 Ap '40 70w

BUTTERFIELD, WILLIAM HENRY. Goodwill letters that build business. 300p il $3.50; to schools $2.65 Prentice-Hall

651.75 Commercial correspondence 40-31544

Sample letters intended to create goodwill among every type of patron—new, old, or prospective. The book contains a chapter of "dont's" and an index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

Management R 29:388 O '40 40w

BYLES, MATHER. Poems on several occasions; with an introd. by C. Lennart Carlson. (Facsimile text soc. Publication) 115p $2 Columbia univ. press

811 40-5594

Reprint of a book of early American verse, which first appeared in 1744. The author was a clergyman who confessed that he wrote his rhymes as "the amusements of his looser hours" while in college.

Christian Century 57:219 F 14 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p21 Mr 3 '40 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p319 Je 29 '40 60w

BYNNER, WITTER. Against the cold [poems]. 125p $2 Knopf

811 40-30925

This volume of new poems by an American poet contains lyrics, satires and fantasies, and a group of sonnets: Against the cold.

Atlantic D '40 150w

Booklist 37:113 N 15 '40

"It is surprising how fresh and how good these poems are: one feels that they will stand, spare, delicately poised, enduring, when much of the 'exciting' and highly publicized work of modern experimenters is forgotten. Generous, keenly perceptive, few poets in this country have done more, apart from their own work, to further the cause of good poetry than has Witter Bynner. Because he has always been interested in young poets, his own writing has kept young, his own outlook in a healthy state of growth." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books p7 N 17 '40 290w

"Witter Bynner's new book seems to me one of the most satisfying books of the present season, because it contains a sort of quiet, pure and confident poetry we get too little of." John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p9 N 11 '40 120w

Reviewed by Randell Jonell

New Repub 103:797 D 9 '40 40w

Reviewed by Louis Forster, Jr.

Poetry 57:217 D '40 600w

"One recognizes the work of an accomplished technician. This said, all is said. 'Against the Cold' is a polished prettiness: for all its talk of the heart, heartless; and stuffy in spite of its apostrophes of wind and laughter." Dudley Fitts

— + Sat R of Lit 23:16 O 26 '40 270w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 330w

BYRNES, THOMAS WILLIAM, and BAKER, KEITH LANNEAU. Do you want to become an accountant? 189p $1.50 Stokes

657 Accounting as a profession (W) 40-27308

Two accountants discuss the problem of accountancy as a career, stressing C.P.A. examinations and opportunities offered. Contains a list of all the accredited schools of accounting registered in New York state.

Booklist 36:327 Ap 15 '40

"A very useful book."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '40

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 65:355 Ap 15 '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

C

C., S. M. The dark wheel. 218p $2 Kenedy [6s Sands]

40-2688

"The author of 'Brother Petroc's Return' [Book Review Digest, 1937] uses Cornwall again as her background. The story floats through time. Thanks to the prayers of his old nurse, a London barrister, who has come down to rest in her Cornish cottage, finds the barriers broken between himself and eternity. He is permitted to drift backwards on that living stream of consciousness which is continuous in the mind of God. . . From the hospitality of the Arundells of Lanherne he rides out to witness the martyrdom of Father Cuthbert Mayne in Launceston. There Greville's conversion is completed; he wakes to call for a priest, but it is the old nurse, Nellie, who baptizes him herself." Commonweal

Cath World 150:634 F '40 120w

"Though it has the charm of S. M. C.'s good, simple English, those who love to reread 'Brother Petroc' are sure to encounter disappointment in 'The Dark Wheel.' The narrative is shredded; time spins backwards and forwards; and the general theme is didactic. It seems something written to order for a publisher or the revision of an early manuscript. S. M. C. must be more chary of her gifts and of her inspiration." E. V. Wyatt

+ — Commonweal 31:270 Ja 12 '40 230w

C., S. M. The spark in the reeds. 249p $2 Kenedy

"A tale of a missionary priest in early nineteenth century England. . . The hero is a priest whose first act after ordination is to transplant a community of Cistercian monks from France to his ancestral home in Devonshire. . . His final effort is to bring comfort and faith to the miserable factory workers in the vile, hidden villages that have begun to spring up throughout Lancashire. His labors are worse than futile; they do more harm than good. Driven away, bearing in his arms a maimed and dying infant entrusted to him by its half-crazed mother, Hirst staggers across England to die unknown, and never to be identified, in the abandoned refectory of his own home." Sat R of Lit

"The author writes with literary art and the spiritual discernment which marks all her work."
+ Cath World 152:506 Ja '41 240w

"S. M. C.'s novel will unquestionably appeal more to her fellow-Catholics than to other readers. Its tone restricts it far more than its theme necessitates. No one, however, could question its integrity." F. S.
Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 11 '41 320w

CABELL, JAMES BRANCH. Hamlet had an uncle; a comedy of honor; decorated by Charles Child. 271p $2.50 Farrar 40-8274

A satirical, sophisticated novel in which the author claims to tell the true story of Hamlet. As the story develops here the hero of the tale is not Hamlet, but Hamlet's uncle Wiglerus.

Atlantic Mr '40 30w

"Consciously playful, saturated with bitterness, this version of the murder in Elsinore and the events which followed it has a peculiarly enticing charm which rises out of the lush vulgarity of its material in contrast to the graceful precision of Mr. Cabell's mental processes." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p3 Ja 28 '40 700w

Reviewed by Wilfrid Gibson
Manchester Guardian p6 Ag 30 '40 70w
New Repub 102:222 F 12 '40 60w

Reviewed by John Mair
New Statesman & Nation 20:269 S 14 '40 320w

Reviewed by Lloyd Eshleman
N Y Times p7 Ja 28 '40 850w

"It's a good story, full of blood, plots, sorcery, and more blood. But Mr. Cabell characteristically dresses it up with gingerbread figures of speech and scented naughtinesses, and the result is another Cabellian romance. If you want a really rousing tale about the prince whose uncle killed his father and married his mother, you know where to look, don't you?"
— + New Yorker 15:70 F 3 '40 100w

"[This tale] is always skillful and readable, often highly witty. It is quite as good, for what that is worth, as 'Jurgen.' But it is a dizzying question to ask oneself exactly how much that is worth. 'Jurgen' is a good book, and 'Hamlet Had an Uncle' is a good book; but trying to recollect the reasons why 'Jurgen' made such an earthquake when it appeared is like trying to recall the logic of a dream. . . One is still left wondering why . . . 'Jurgen' was a masterpiece. 'Hamlet Had an Uncle' is as good, but no one will call it a masterpiece; it is nevertheless a brilliant piece of entertainment." Basil Davenport
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 Ja 27 '40 600w

"The farce does, I think, drag on too long, and the central joke is a little too obvious for such elaboration as it receives, but a great deal of the talk is gracefully amusing, if here and there somewhat wry, à la Anatole France. But many of the jokes are in traditional Rabelaisian taste, and are neatly quotable, provided you know your company. Incidentally, Hamlet Had an Uncle offers a practical lesson on how to debunk the old stories, if you must; here we encounter none of the embarrassments lately created in us by tender-comic assaults on the Arthurian legend." Kate O'Brien
— + Spec 165:226 Ag 30 '40 550w
Time 35:76 Ja 29 '40 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Ag 17 '40 480w

CABOT, HUGH. The patient's dilemma; the quest for medical security in America. 284p $2.50 Reynal

614.2 Medical economics. Medicine—Practice (W) 40-27063

Discussion of what constitutes adequate medical care for modern Americans, how such care might be secured and how much it should cost. The author, a well known writer on medical subjects, has been a teacher in several medical schools and until his retirement last year, consulting surgeon at the Mayo Clinic. Index.

Atlantic Mr '40 100w
Booklist 36:233 F 15 '40
Bookmark p5 My '40

"This document will be received with cymbals and the noise of shouting by those who advocate government participation in the big business of keeping from dying and with Bronx cheers by those who believe in individualism and the present method of catch-as-catch-can. Even the latter group must concede that Dr. Cabot has drawn a clear picture of present day medical practice and of the dilemma which confronts doctors, medical schools and hospitals as well as patients." W. G. Lennox, M.D.
+ Books p4 F 4 '40 1250w

Reviewed by A. M. Butler, M. D.
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 2 '40 500w

Reviewed by E. M. Matsner
Forum 103:200 Ap '40 500w
J Home Econ 32:396 Je '40 210w

Reviewed by H. H. Darby
Nation 150:369 Mr 16 '40 650w

Reviewed by Felice Swados
New Repub 102:285 F 26 '40 750w

"Dr. Cabot's book is so clear and convincing an exposition of medical security that it ought to be read by every State and Federal legislator. It comes at a time when the air needs clearing and issues should be stated in a way that a non-technical but an intelligent public can understand." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 21 '40 1750w

"An authoritative, clearly reasoned survey."
+ New Yorker 15:72 Ja 20 '40 40w
Pratt p10 autumn '40
Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 F '40 480w

"Dr Cabot's arguments will provoke dissent at some points, but the presentation of his views is sufficiently thoughtful to deserve consideration from all students of the public aspects of medical policy."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 1600w

Reviewed by C.-E. A. Winslow, M.D.
Survey G 29:309 My '40 290w
Wis Lib Bul 36:26 F '40

CALAHAN, HAROLD AUGUSTIN. Rigging. 276p il $3 Macmillan

623.86 Masts and rigging (W) 40-14023

Directions for designing, installing, repairing, and replacing the rigging on a yacht. Contains photographs, drawings, and tables.

Booklist 37:7 S '40
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 20w

CALDER-MARSHALL, ARTHUR. The way to Santiago. 303p $2.50 Reynal [7s 6d Cape, J] 40-11293

Story of murder and international intrigue in Mexico during the second European war.

"It is a breathless story. . . It is hard and tough like the people and places described, but it is exciting, it gives a vivid impression of reality, and is written by a man who knows the scene and can tell a story. A book for those who take their adventures vicariously and like plenty of red pepper."
+ — Atlantic S '40 100w
Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

"For all its theatrical background and melodramatic action, 'The Way to Santiago' is no mere ten-twenty-thirty show. It is sophisticated, keen in its observations and, I expect, pertinent to these times." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p7 Ag 18 '40 750w

CABELL (căb'el)

CALDER-MARSHALL, ARTHUR—Continued

"The author's style, cleanly cut, rapid, colorful, carries the tale along tensely and dramatically. His senses are razor-sharp and not a moment is dull. 'The Way to Santiago' has everything, for here is adventure and timely importance joined together in a cause that everyone can read and applaud." E. J. Bartnett

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 500w

"Readers whose taste runs to adventure stories will find this one highly satisfactory for its unremitting excitement and its consciously virile style."

+ Christian Century 57:1083 S 4 '40 100w

"The writing is intelligent and knowing, and moves smartly. The characters, except for the occasional touch of delineation which lights up a roomful of people or a girl in the street, are not memorable. . . Some of the intellectual play and universal motivation sketched in by the book would be lost in a movie: none the less, the violence and people mentioned here will become more real if Hollywood takes it up with the right producer, director, writers and cast. It makes good reading; it could make a smashing film." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 103:285 Ag 26 '40 260w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 19:542 Ap 20 '40 290w

Reviewed by J. S. Southron

N Y Times p7 Ag 18 '40 900w

"A thoroughly readable novel."

+ New Yorker 16:63 Ag 17 '40 90w

"As a social thinker, his sympathies are all with the trades unions, who alone are willing to help his hero in his efforts to save Mexico from the fate of Spain, but even the proletariat is not altogether spared from his iconoclasm. As a psychologist, he treats the background of Señor Tom's Nazi fervor with understanding, and he gives a good characterization of a modern dilemma in analyzing Lamson's states of mind as he tries to break through the narrow confines of his role in life. Of his abilities as a writer of adventure, it needs only to be said that the pace of incident and manoeuvre in 'The Way to Santiago' hardly allows the reader a breathing space in which to realize how successfully his attention is being held." Charlton Ogburn, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:16 Ag 17 '40 700w

"Very well written Mexican thriller, up-to-date, competent, intelligent and entertaining." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 164:604 Ap 26 '40 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Ap 13 '40 430w

CALDWELL, ALFRED BETTS. Death rattle. 277p $2 Doubleday

40-9441

Detective story.

"This little opus might cheer you in one way or another without straining your mental powers in the least. . . You'll shudder at the old lady's demise and there's no reason why you shouldn't derive relaxation from the detecting of Freddy Philpotts, a man about town in love with Gabrielle Sargent." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 23 '40 160w

"Mr. Caldwell must believe that his readers have a mentality just above feebleminded, for his style is annoyingly juvenile. . . And if you can't solve the case well ahead of dear Freddie you're no book-detective." Marian Wiggin

— Boston Transcript p2 Je 29 '40 140w

"The story is ingenious in spots, but it is loosely and rather clumsily constructed." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p17 Je 23 '40 230w

"First unfortunate scared to death, second bashed, third shot. Beautiful blonde 'spy' also active. Only kitchen sink is omitted."

— Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 22 '40 40w

CALDWELL (kôld'wel)

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Jackpot. 756p $3 Duell

40-31621

Omnibus volume containing seventy-five short stories, nine of them never before published in book form.

"'Jackpot' is a full-dress parade of Erskine Caldwell as short-story writer. It is an impressive demonstration, in quality as well as quantity. If it wasn't clear before, this collection is, as it was meant to be, a conclusive kind of proof that Erskine Caldwell is, among modern short-story writers, a natural. In 'Jackpot' that fact keeps rolling by for 756 pages. You are a little tired when the parade's last contingent has passed down the street and no doubt aware of its repetitions, but you are even more deeply impressed by its appeal, its elementary yet consummate ability to catch and fix attention, by its gift for being continually interesting, for being everywhere entertaining." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p4 S 1 '40 1100w

"[These stories] range from slight to important; there are gusty tales of sub-human folk of the type set forth in 'Tobacco Road' and tragic episodes in the black-and-white life of the South. Mr. Caldwell is at his best in these two categories, and his best is excellent. In such stories as Rachel he drops, as if between two stools, into sentimentality. Mr. Caldwell has prefaced each story with a comment of his own. Critics and reviewers and 'Professor Horatio Perkins' are the butt of many of them; his grandfather is the subject of others, which I found the more amusing." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 151:175 Ag 31 '40 120w

"First-rate reading."

+ New Yorker 16:54 Ag 31 '40 40w

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. Trouble in July. 241p $2.50 Duell

(W) 40-27204

Story of the lynching of a colored boy in a southern community revealing the characteristics and motives of white tenant farmers, minor political officials, plantation owners and others.

Atlantic Ap '40 130w

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40

"The truth is that 'Trouble in July' uses lynching merely as a focus; it is only one fester in a culture which Mr. Caldwell represents as everywhere riddled by cancer. It is only the epitome of cruelty rampant. Incident after incident, from Sonny's good reputation to Katy's confession, robs the hunt of all its pretended aim but the last thing these hunters need is provocation or justification. The fever has entered the bones; it will need more than an anti-lynching law to quench it. In short, compounded of grotesque evil, monstrous humor and a desperate brand of pathos, 'Trouble in July' is one of those short drinks that kicks like the iron hooves of a mule. It goes, as I have said, to the pit of the stomach." Milton Rugoff

Books p5 F 25 '40 850w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum

Forum 103:197 Ap '40 250w

"Thoroughly unpleasant. Not recommended for conservative libraries. Others read before purchase." L. M. Kinloch

Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 90w

"'Trouble in July' illustrates once more that the first requirement for writing good fiction of 'social significance' is the ability to write good fiction. . . I should not hazard the prediction that 'Trouble in July' will live forever; I am merely asserting that being self-sufficient—in form, character, atmosphere, and suspense—it has a life of its own. And art is one field in which autarchy is necessary for survival." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 150:283 F 24 '40 950w

Reviewed by Richard Wright

New Repub 102:351 Mr 11 '40 550w

"Trouble in July is grotesque, amusing and in parts horrifying, but it does nothing save narrate simple events without either analysis or explanation. It is a short novel, but somehow an empty one, and draws its vitality almost entirely from its horrors. It should—and may—mark the end of a stage in Mr. Caldwell's development." John Mair
— + New Statesman & Nation 20:166 Ag 17 '40 330w

"'Trouble in July' represents not only no further advancement in Caldwell's art but a definite falling off. All of his fine craftsmanship is still in evidence, all of his simplicity and clarity of style, his brilliant selectivity of detail and his understatement. He still has his ability to penetrate the strange, futile, and apparently self-destructive behavior of the submerged folk of the Deep South, and to reach into the very core of their being. But they are the same people, moving in the same patterns and motivated by the same forces, about whom he has been writing for years." Harold Strauss
— + N Y Times p2 F 25 '40 800w

"The author has done this sort of thing, has produced these same grim-comic effects before, and previously given us characters too nearly akin to those in 'Trouble in July.' He is too honest and conscientious a writer for anyone to cry 'Formula!' at him, but there is no doubt that he is beginning to repeat himself. Despite the horror of the final scenes and the dramatic central theme, the book seems tired, like a Georgia drawl. Those who found 'Tobacco Road' funny may find this cool exposure of the minds of vicious or merely bewildered morons funny too, as well as horrible." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:74 F 24 '40 280w

Reviewed by Frank Daniel
Sat R of Lit 21:5 F 24 '40 650w

"Standpat Southerners deny such stories with heat and hatred; non-Southerners know too little to have any right to an opinion. Author Caldwell's taste for close crowding of extremes of cruelty, pity, irony, inconsistency and comedy, his occasional tendency to stack his cards, still further obscure these important facts: that the South is a country of incredible extremes; that for all his faults Caldwell is one of the best and fairest recorders of them."
Time 35:84 Mr 11 '40 250w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:x spring '40 120w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK). The eagles gather. 498p $2.50 Scribner
(W) 40-2382

A sequel to the author's first novel, Dynasty of Death (Book Review Digest, 1938) this work carries on the story of the Bouchard family from the end of the Great war to the election of Hoover.

"The authoress's softest whisper is a shout, and she shouts and howls indomitably through 498 pages. Such piling on of reiterative invective is bound to make the civilized reader smile, but there will be plenty of patrons ready and willing to accept these exaggerations as gospel."
— Atlantic Mr '40 150w
Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh
Books p4 Ja 7 '40 850w

"Readers who found Taylor Caldwell's best seller of a year ago, 'Dynasty of Death,' interesting, will not be disappointed by its sequel. The story continues along the same high level of interest, and the characterization is still as skilful." Mark Schorer
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 6 '40 420w

"There's no denying that, rotten as they are, the Bouchards are fascinatingly interesting to the reader. Although the present book is not so well-written as the first, it has the same powerful characterization which keeps one's mind on tip-toes as he pursues the Bouchards through their several ways." E. S. Hertell
+ — Churchman 154:17 F 1 '40 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '40

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p7 My 24 '40 160w

"Along with the underhanded business dealings are a couple of slender love stories, plus some material better suited for editorial columns than for a novel. Big, impressive and overdone."
+ — New Repub 102:62 Ja 8 '40 50w

"As primitive tribes place all unaccountable natural phenomena upon the doorstep of an anthropomorphic god, so Taylor Caldwell traces all perilous social phenomena to the Bouchards. She is unable to go beyond the Bouchards, to see what makes them behave as they do. But throughout history mankind has been expert at passing the buck to the devil, so that perhaps we must allow Taylor Caldwell her political naïveté. It is a little more difficult to overlook her careless writing. . . Nevertheless, in spite of these deficiencies, 'The Eagles Gather' is an undeniably powerful novel. The pace is swift, and dramatic scene follows upon dramatic scene." Harold Strauss
+ — N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 1000w

"Those who like complicated family chronicles with a raft of sinister villains will, I think, take to Taylor Caldwell's latest installment of Bouchards. My own feeling is that her message could have been projected in half the length and with half the characters. The book would have been about twice as effective, too." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 15:60 Ja 6 '40 200w

"One fault of the novel, less annoying than in 'Dynasty of Death,' is the confusing legion of characters. . . The author does not exercise her artist's privilege to select, but presents to us in detail, often amusing, the whole clan. Possibly, too, the novel is weakened by a glut of guile and hate. . . Everything considered, 'The Eagles Gather' is a full-blooded book, provocative and haunting." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ja 6 '40 700w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 450w
Time 35:68 Ja 15 '40 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p253 My 25 '40 700w
Wis Lib Bul 36:30 F '40

CALIFORNIA. UNIVERSITY. Bureau of public administration. Bibliography of crime and criminal justice, 1932-1937. See Culver, D., comp.

CAMBRIDGE, ELIZABETH, pseud. See Hodges, B. K.

CAMERON, DONALD CLOUGH. Death at her elbow. 274p $2 Holt 40-13039

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p15 S 15 '40 170w

"The story is romantic but not too romantic, and it is piled full of incident. If you are not wholly pleased with the murder's solution, you may take comfort in the presence of a likable city detective and a clearly drawn city scene." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p19 S 15 '40 180w

"Promiscuous love-lives of various Villagers thoroughly ventilated in well-written, amply thrilling, but curiously unconvincing tale."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:28 O 19 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 180w

CAMERON, DONALD CLOUGH. Grave without grass. 272p $2 Holt 40-2391

Detective story.

"Abelard Voss' adventures make pleasant enough reading if you don't check on him too closely. In our opinion, however, he caught the wrong fiend—we just couldn't believe it." Will Cuppy
+ — Books p12 Ja 14 '40 150w

"Voss perhaps is too explicit in his discussion of the criminal's character, for he gave him away some time before the arrest. But the case makes good reading." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 13 '40 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p19 Ja 14 '40 160w

"What starts out to be blood red ends up medium rare, however. A confused plot interferes with some neat writing."
— + New Yorker 15:64 Ja 13 '40 40w

"Occasionally borders on fantastic, but thrills are incessant, deducing slick—with neat twist at end—and Voss more credible than before. Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 13 '40 40w

"The astute Mr Voss after displaying even more than his customary acumen finally drags out the responsible person into the light of day. The atmosphere of tense excitement in a small town when it is known that a murderer is at large there is well conveyed to the reader."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 200w

CAMERON, EVELYN. Malice domestic. 264p $2 Doubleday 40-33928

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p16 D 15 '40 280w

"An absorbing story." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p26 D 15 '40 240w

"Sheriff Jake Thompson does the bloodhounding, which is just as well, because you'd never guess the solution by yourself."
+ New Yorker 16:88 D 21 '40 30w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 40w

CAMM, FREDERICK JAMES, ed. Dictionary of metals and their alloys; their composition and characteristics, with special sections on plating, polishing, hardening and tempering, metal spraying, rustproofing, chemical coloring and useful tables. 245p $3 Chemical pub. co. [5s Newnes]
669 Metals. Alloys 40-26823

"Chemical dictionaries, handbooks and other publications contain information on metals and alloys but this British compiled dictionary represents the first effort to bring all the data together in one volume. The editor states in his preface that the book contains information about every known metal and almost every type of metallic alloy." Chem & Met Eng

"The plan of this dictionary is good. . . The content of the text emphasizes English alloys but omits many American alloys. . . The method of presentation of data is not consistent. . . The incompleteness of explanations and definitions given in many instances, such as under Alloys and Antifriction Metals, would indicate that the author is not a physical metallurgist. . . A number of tables are embodied in this volume, but their usefulness suffers from lack of accuracy." W. M. Corse
— + Chem & Chem Eng N 18:641 Jl 25 '40 550w

"From the point of view of American chemical engineers, the attempt was not very successful. . . Approximately one quarter of this British book has been given over to workshop directions for rustproofing, electroplating, heat treatment and the like. Such recipes, directions and information may be found in other more complete sources. By elimination of this less pertinent material, space would have been available not only for more complete treatment of the various alloys but also for the inclusion of many which were omitted."
Chem & Met Eng 47:512 Jl '40 240w

Reviewed by R. L. Dowdell
J Phys Chem 44:950 O '40 180w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:37 Jl '40

"The book will have little, if any, value to scientists and certainly none for metallurgists. Other readily available reference books contain all of the useful information found in this book and much more, and have been edited with sufficient care so that information given can be depended on. It is indeed unfortunate that a more judicious choice of material was not made for this book and further that the subject matter was not subjected to a more searching criticism prior to publication." E. E. Schumacher
— R of Scientific Instruments 2:328 O '40 390w

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE ORMOND. They hunted a fox. 245p $2 Scribner [8s 3d Collins] 40-30393

Detective story.

"Miss Campbell's new book is a necessity for the horsey set and a good bet for the average fan who can take hunt breakfasts in his stride. . . Though hunting mysteries all sound alike, this one can boast of special merit in setting and character, with special emphasis on all the rites and ceremonies attending a week end with horses. For serious students who like to get down and grub at a tightly constructed plot." Will Cuppy
+ Books p16 S 8 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 40w

"The author has a curiously elliptical way of telling her story, but it is an absorbing tale none the less." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 18 '40 140w

"Nice new method of murder, if you are looking for one in a hurry, in this mystery about England's upper classes. Told from the point of view of an American, so you won't need to look up 'Yoicks.' "
+ New Yorker 16:68 Ag 24 '40 40w
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 24 '40 40w

"Those who enjoy a tightly-constructed plot will find it here, with the colorful background of the hunting field and a number of lively and realistically portrayed characters, among them an American girl, who is of real assistance to the harassed inspector."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 240w

"The solution scarcely depends upon facts available to the detective, Inspector Headcorn, or to the readers of the novel. But there is plenty of excitement, especially when Miss Campbell has cut the horses and come to the cackle."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 10 '40 120w

CAMPBELL, HARRIETTE (RUSSELL) lady. Three names for murder. 293p $2 Harper 40-10439

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Je 9 '40 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 50w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 9 '40 200w

"Able but arid."
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 50w
Time 36:72 Jl 1 '40 50w

"Even at the end the criminal's motives are not clear, and his identity may so startle the reader that he will be reluctant to accept it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 27 '40 60w

CAMPBELL, HARRY LINN. The working, heat treating, and welding of steel; supplemented with a series of laboratory assignments. 2d ed 230p il $2.25 Wiley

672 Steel—Metallurgy 40-32795

"New material has been added throughout to bring this textbook up to date." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1935. Index.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41

"Laboratory assignments are well chosen to supplement the text, and review questions at the end of each chapter furnish a guide in determining the important points which have been discussed. The book is well adapted for use in its intended field." W. P. Wood

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:1164 D 25 '40 350w

CAMPBELL, OSCAR JAMES; VAN GUNDY, JUSTINE, and SHRODES, CAROLINE, eds. Patterns for living. 1306p $2.75 Macmillan

820.8 English literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 40-10038

An anthology designed for college students of English. The selection of material is based on the editors' belief "that only when a person has something to say can he write lucidly and vigorously." The selections include chiefly essays, drama, poetry, fiction, and biography from modern English, American and Continental writers. Biographical notes. Index of authors.

New Repub 103:93 Jl 15 '40 30w
School & Society 51:720 Je 1 '40 20w

CAMPBELL, MRS RACHEL VIOLETTE. Why babies? il. by John Chase. 163p $2 Macmillan

649.1 Children 39-32618

"Mrs. Campbell is the mother of four small children, so that she really ought to know when she recommends babies. These are her notes on the state of being a mother, on bills, eating, what a baby teaches its parents, why it's so hard to practice what the psychologist preaches and dozens of other experiences common to all mothers who bring up their children themselves." Boston Transcript

"Readers who have never been in close and constant contact with small children might say that the picture is exaggerated, but it is not. Moreover Mrs. Campbell very adroitly includes a great deal of excellent advice on coping with problems, without ever once ceasing to be extremely amusing." Pamela Taylor

+ Boston Transcript p13 N 23 '39 200w

"Would be next to impossible to review but great fun to read aloud."

Wis Lib Bul 36:25 F '40

CAMPBELL, REGINALD. The keepers of Elephant valley; il. by Jack Matthew. 299p $2 Random house [6s Heinemann]

40-27686

Adventure story for children. The scene is Elephant valley in Siam, and the three children Desmond, Patricia and John, had been brought up there by their father, who made his living capturing elephants. The fortunate capture of a white elephant comes just in time to save the little family from financial ruin.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

"A story keeping its hero steadily in trouble until fourteen pages from the end is doing well by its young clients." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 18 '40 410w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 27 '40 110w

"The children are such nice ones. They are very real and likeable in their courage and in their fears, as well as in their loyalty to the strangely-fascinating life their father had made for them in the jungle of Siam." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:444 N '40 110w

Reviewed by C. E. Scott

Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 170w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 20w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele

New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 40w

"This story for boys and girls from 10 on makes us hope that the author will give us other books written with the same integrity, skill and humorous understanding." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 S 1 '40 600w

Reviewed by F. G. Wells

Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 30w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). King of the fur traders; the deeds and deviltry of Pierre Esprit Radisson. 326p il map $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 Radisson, Pierre Esprit. Hudson's Bay company (W) 40-34093

This biography is based on the Voyages of Pierre Esprit Radisson as well as on the author's own knowledge of the ways of Indians and fur traders. The story begins when Radisson, a boy of sixteen, is captured by Mohawk Indians, and adopted into the tribe. It follows the course of his highly adventurous career as scout and warrior, voyager, hunter, officer in the French navy, and finally promoter of the Hudson's Bay company. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:174 Ja 1 '41

"The story is dramatic and tortuous, but the author makes it easily intelligible through the signing of the Treaty of Ryswick in 1697, and the Treaty of Utrecht when Hudson's Bay became a British possession. But financiers and politicians and experts necessarily crowd the stage, and the incomparable Radisson fades into the background until his final appearance as applicant for the unimportant position of warehouse keeper, and his rejection. Even the date of his death is unknown. Mr. Vestal has given us an excellent and most readable book." C. J. Finger

+ Books p3 N 17 '40 800w
New Repub 104:94 Ja 20 '41 70w

"As history or historical biography this book lacks much that the reader would wish to find in it. As a wonder-book, however, it will well repay a close reading." W. J. Ghent

N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '41 1200w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 100w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Writing magazine fiction. 292p $2.50 Doubleday

808.3 Fiction—Technique. Authorship (W) 40-11786

The author, who is director of courses in professional writing at the University of Oklahoma, provides a textbook in fiction writing based on his teaching experience. The book is in three parts: Elements; Types; Marketing. An appendix contains models for study with explanatory notes. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40
New Repub 103:150 Jl 29 '40 50w

CAMPION, HARRY. Public and private property in Great Britain; introd. by J. Jewkes. 138p 8s 6d Oxford [English publication]

339 Property. Great Britain—Economic conditions [40-34405]

"This short monograph is primarily a statistical study 'to show the changes which have occurred in the distribution of private property since the war, and to indicate the extent to which the unequal distribution of property is a factor producing inequality in the personal distribution of wealth in Great Britain' (p. 1). The author has been careful to define his terms, to safeguard against double counting, and to set forth the methods employed in making the study." Am Econ R

Reviewed by D. F. Pegrum

Am Econ R 30:440 Je '40 330w

Reviewed by J. G. Herndon

Am Pol Sci R 34:387 Ap '40 380w

Economist 134:431 Mr 4 '39 1950w

"Mr. Campion has done his work with skill and care and has not attempted to prove too much or to pretend that he has made all the rough places plain. Moreover, he has given sufficient detail to enable other workers to determine the causes and degrees of difference in their results." Lord Stamp

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 17 '39 600w

Reviewed by Honor Croome

Spec 162:601 Ap 7 '39 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 8 '39 190w

CANNON, MARIAN. Children of the fiery mountain; il. by [the author]. 96p $2 Dutton

Children in Guatemala (W) 40-30186

The adventures of Pete and Tommy from Kansas, who went by airplane to spend a season on a coffee plantation in Guatemala. They discover a secret pool in the jungle where a witch doctor was performing secret rites, they help make a Nativity scene for the Christmas season, live thru a volcanic eruption, and altogether learn quite a bit about Guatemala customs, before flying home to Kansas. For ages ten to twelve.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p32 N 10 '40 160w

"Both with her words and with her illustrations the author paints a vivid picture of the boys' exciting new experiences in a strange country." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 80w

Wis Lib Bul 36:151 N '40

CANTRIL, HADLEY; GAUDET, HAZEL, and HERZOG, HERTA. The invasion from Mars. 228p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

791.4 Radio—Social aspects. Welles, Orson. Fear. Social psychology 40-27430

"A sober, significant study of the famous Orson Welles broadcast and its significance as a barometer of public attitude toward the radio." (Current Hist) Index.

"The book is timely and thoughtful, and probably is as scientifically thorough as could be expected in view of limitations of time and money, and the fugitive nature of the data." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Ann Am Acad 211:241 S '40 550w

Booklist 36:361 My 15 '40

"This study of a fascinating phenomenon was much worth doing and the report should be studied by educators and statesmen." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p44 D 1 '40 650w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p1 My 4 '40

Current Hist 51:8 Mr '40 30w

Nation 151:199 S 7 '40 50w

"Since the panic was unique in itself, and since no other panic has ever been carefully studied, 'The Invasion from Mars' would possess an exciting documentary interest even if its conclusions lacked value." Rebecca Pitts

+ New Repub 102:547 Ap 22 '40 600w

Reviewed by George Orwell

New Statesman & Nation 20:422 O 26 '40 900w

N Y Times p8 Ap 28 '40 550w

"A fascinating study of Orson Welles' panic. . . Should and will be studied along with more classic but less immediate researches into mass psychology."

+ New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 50w

Pratt p5 autumn '40

Reviewed by June Hynd

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ap 27 '40 480w

" 'The Invasion from Mars' is prepared for general reading. A psychological and sociological study, it nevertheless escapes the language commonly associated with a survey presentation of this kind. At no point does Prof Cantril concur with those who seek to erase the whole business with the commentary that no excuse, other than lack of intelligence, can be given for a panic reaction to the Martian dramatics. He finds other causes and makes them clear in a manner to command interest and develop broad lines of social thought, whether or not the reader is led to accept all his conclusions."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 1050w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:409 Jl '40 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p520 O 12 '40 360w

CAPEK, KAREL. The first rescue party; tr. by M. and R. Weatherall. 277p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen, G]

[40-3037]

The story of an accident in a Czech coal mine and of the work of the rescue party as seen thru the eyes and understanding of a young pit-worker, hardly more than a boy.

Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40

"It may sound strange and perhaps paradoxical that this novel about a group of miners and their rescue work after an explosion should leave behind an impression of clear, great beauty. Not that it is a romantic novel. It is as realistic a book as any by the remarkable Czechoslovakian writer. That means it is real, not photographically, but psychologically, and truthful in its artistic conception." Marianne Hauser

+ Books p12 O 13 '40 700w

"A sense of strain clamps down on the reader from the outset: he feels the oppression of being buried underground, the constant threat of danger, and the exhaustion of the struggle. He is so keyed up that each sharp, uncompromising revelation of character convinces him, as no subtlety would do; and finally, like the hero, he returns to the surface with his understanding and sympathies quickened by his intimacy with these men—with a vision, utterly unsentimental, of the courage and kindliness that go to the making of average human nature." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 18 '39 180w

"In its quiet realisation of fact and feeling the book is a masterpiece. It is an anatomy of courage in the universal form in which it is being tested at the moment." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '39 330w

Nation 151:281 S 28 '40 70w

CAPEK (chă'pěk)

"A quiet but distinguished book." John Mair
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:494 O 7 '39 280w

"Here is a book which has qualities that should recommend it to thousands. It is one of the best of Capek's books, perhaps the best; it is in its way a little tour de force. But putting its esthetic virtues aside it has another virtue fully as great as these; it breathes vitality and courage, something we could do with today in literature as in life." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p8 O 6 '40 760w

"Capek portrays human beings rather than robots moving mechanically in a class struggle, with the result that the world of labor is here made human and dramatic in terms of something beside economic and social values. Capek assumes as a matter of course that his hero is a boy and man before he is a laborer volunteering to rescue his comrades from death, and it is the manhood rather than the wage-scale which has interested him." H. M. J.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 9 '40 280w

"What one finally takes away from the book is Capek's conviction that your so-called plain man in a free society will stand the test of courage or fidelity—it is not for nothing that rescue parties consist of volunteers—and that it is this that makes men equal. There is more than one way of saluting the bravery of which perhaps most human beings are capable, and Capek's way in this novel has an entirely unaffected and eloquent homeliness."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 30 '39 750w

CAPEK, KAREL. The mother; a play in three acts; auth. English version by Paul Selver. 88p $1.40 Macmillan [3s 6d Allen, G]

891.86 [40-5778]

Symbolic play, in which a mother converses with her husband and sons, all of whom have given their lives for their country. The mother attempts to point out to them the futility of their sacrifice, but they remain unconvinced. As the play ends their country is calling for more soldiers and the mother relinquishes her hold on her last son.

"The play is written with considerable eloquence, and there are moments of true poignancy, especially the last scene; but the hatred of the mother for war, a hatred perfectly justified, is mixed up with her hatred of other things which are not equally ignoble. . . The chief theatrical weakness of the play is the repetition in the conversations with the various ghosts, a repetition which gives the action a certain monotony." Grenville Vernon
+ — Commonweal 30:76 My 12 '39 450w (Dramatic criticism)

"It is a moving and sincere play. . . The sense of family, of the protective femininity of the mother is always strong in countries that have been oppressed and have struggled for their freedom. You will find it filling the stories and plays of Poland and Bohemia. Capek's play is an artistic example of this familiar theme. Whether the sadness of the play and its atmosphere would make a dramatic presentation of it to-day insupportable is another matter. There are some stories too poignant for certain times."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 6 '40 300w

CAPEN, LOUISE IRVING. Story of man's progress across the ages. 895p il maps $2.20 Am. bk.

901 Civilization—History 40-3317

Topically arranged history of civilization from earliest times to the present. Many illustrations and maps, with questions for testing memory and powers of observation. Index.

"The interesting narrative style, useful illustrations, and inclusion of copious material on non-political topics in this textbook tempt the reviewer to recommend it. To succumb to this temptation would be unrealistic for the instructor in search of an accurate, practical presentation of the social and civic activities of mankind within the reasonable grasp of average high school pupils." G. I. Wadsworth
— + Social Educ 5:67 Ja '41 550w

"The author has done a good piece of work with a large and complicated subject. She has offered a complete picture of man and his progress in a simple straight-forward manner that should stir the high school boy or girl to a finer appreciation of history." J. J. Flynn
+ — Social Studies 31:284 O '40 390w

"An attractive and stimulating textbook for the high school history student as well as the general reader who wants to brush up on the story of man's progress."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 20 '40 350w

CARCOPINO, JEROME. Daily life in ancient Rome; the people and the city at the height of the empire; ed. with bibliography and notes by Henry T. Rowell; tr. from the French by E. O. Lorimer. 342p il $4 Yale univ. press [10s 6d Routledge]

937.6 Rome—Social life and customs. Rome (city)—History 40-34290

"For the reader who wants to see the streets of ancient Rome come to life before his very eyes, to know how the people lived, what and how they ate and how they earned the money to pay for it, how they amused themselves, what their social customs were, what their schools were like, what they thought about their gods and how they worshiped them, what the government required of them and did for them, and every other imaginable thing that the title covers—this is the book. It is the Rome of the second Christian century that is chiefly under consideration. Juvenal, Martial and the younger Pliny furnish much but by no means all of the data." (Christian Century) Index.

"It is written with vigor and zest and is amply documented. M. Carcopino is an eminent classical scholar and writes with authority and competence. Not all of his statements will be unquestioningly accepted by his fellow craftsmen, but to provide different points of view is what fellow craftsmen are for, in any field." Max Radin
+ Books p12 Ja 26 '41 750w

"The book sparkles with life, but also gives a thorough account of the Roman social, religious and intellectual life. The author is director of the Ecole Francaise de Rome and one of the most distinguished European archeologists. This edition in English contains maps and illustrations not in the original French edition and augmented notes which will add to its value for serious students of classical antiquities."
+ Christian Century 57:1586 D 18 '40 210w

Reviewed by Gilbert Highet
Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ja 11 '41 750w

"M. Carcopino has been wise in limiting his excellent book to a period which could be covered by the life of an urban Roman reaching his maturity in the reign of Trajan. . . The translation, barring a few idiomatic slips such as 'before' in the sense of 'ago,' is accurate and forceful. Professor Rowell provides not only a thorough bibliography, but a discussion of sources and an exhaustive list of references, both ancient and modern. . . One concludes that this volume is outstanding because of its new approach to an old topic. It serves a three-fold function—for the benefit of the general reader, the research scholar, and the comparative sociologist. Like the late Tenney Frank, who introduced a comparative method into the study of Roman economics and history, M. Carcopino has illuminated archaeology in the light of modern housing conditions." R. M. Gummere
+ Yale R ns 30:410 winter '41 1050w

CAREW, JEAN. Getting Mary married. 256p $2 Arcadia 40-29644

"Everybody in Deerhill came to Mary Dawson, the village dressmaker, with their problems. She knew almost as much about their souls as she did about their hips and their wardrobes. She was so busy looking after their happiness that she failed to realize that she was overlooking her own. That state of affairs is happily corrected in [this story]." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p32 D 8 '40 60w

"It all makes a pleasant little entertainment, homely and friendly and easy to read." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p27 N 17 '40 200w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Blue heaven. 250p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Mills & Boon]
40-2192

An English girl who had fought her way from a poverty-stricken childhood in the London slums to success on the stage, is the heroine. At the peak of her career, when she is about to marry a wealthy aristocrat, she throws away all her chances of security to marry a poor but cocksure young planter from the West Indies.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40
Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 D 31 '39 300w

"For variety of amazing incidents the story rates well up, and the style is in Miss Carfrae's usual and pleasant manner. But the trouble with the surprise twist, often repeated, is that the reader can see it coming, and it loses its wallop. At any rate, here is a British Blue Heaven which makes Irving Berlin's pale in comparison." B. S.
N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '40 280w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Jacob's ladder. 281p $2 Putnam [8s 3d Hutchinson] 40-11332

A pretty English girl, forced by her gold-digging mother into marriage with an elderly admirer, is the heroine. All her life Libby had loved a penniless naval officer, and a way was finally opened for a readjustment.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 7 '40 220w
Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p12 Jl 7 '40 180w

CARLSON, MRS BERNICE WELLS. The junior party book; il. by Magdalena Tolson. 160p $1.50 Cokesbury press
793 Games (W) 39-32492

Suggestions for twenty-four children's parties for different age groups from preschool to adolescent. The preparations are simple in each case and may be carried out by the child himself. Classified and alphabetical index.

Booklist 36:240 F 15 '40

"Refreshments are simple, and from the list of 'materials needed' at the end of each party it may be seen at a glance that little money is needed to swing any of them. Another good feature is that they take little time in preparation. Some may be arranged overnight or even re-arranged if the weather has suddenly changed." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ja 7 '40 80w
Wis Lib Bul 36:72 Ap '40

CARFRAE (cär′frā)

CARLSON, EVANS FORDYCE. The Chinese army; its organization and military efficiency. 139p map $1 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council [5s Allen, G.]
355 China—Army. China—History
40-14507

Description of the Chinese army and its organization, based on first hand knowledge acquired thru twelve years' contacts.

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley
Am Pol Sci R 34:1241 D '40 230w

"Major Carlson gives a unique picture of the structure and organization of the new Chinese army, including the guerrilla units. Unfortunately, he has little to say about the strategy utilized by the rival armies in the various campaigns. But he expresses great respect for the Chinese soldier and accords China an excellent chance of victory if its friends do their share in keeping open the lines of supply to the outside world." M. S. Stewart
+ Nation 151:429 N 2 '40 150w
Social Studies 31:334 N '40 20w

"Unlike many military histories, this small volume is both sufficiently technical and broadly human. The author's personal knowledge of the Chinese people and their military organization for the past twelve years makes this a valuable approach to an understanding of their chances for victory today." Grace Fox
+ Social Studies 32:41 Ja '41 280w

CARLSON, EVANS FORDYCE. Twin stars of China; a behind-the-scenes story of China's valiant struggle for existence by a U.S. marine who lived and moved with the people; il. from phot. taken by the author. 331p $3 Dodd 951 China. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-
40-27687

As a major in the United States marine corps, the author went to China with the marines in 1927. He made a study of the Chinese language in Peking from 1933 to 1935. In 1937 he returned to China to continue his study, but the Japanese war was beginning, so he was appointed observer by Admiral Yarnell. He has been in Nanking, Hankow, Shansi; has marched with the Eighth route army; went to the Mongolian border to see the elusive General Ma, and at one time or another has met most of the present war leaders. This volume is an account of his experiences. Index.

Booklist 37:66 O 15 '40

"There is no evidence that Major Carlson made a particular effort to make a literary gem of his book, but there is so much friendliness in it, the author introduces such an amazing number of charming and admirable people, and he finds every one so full of high purpose, selfless devotion and hope for the future, that this book by a military man about a war is really a charming piece of work." Rodney Gilbert
+ Books p22 O 27 '40 1400w

"I wish that Major Carlson had told the reader more about himself; he sounds like a good sort. Instead, he earnestly sets forth what he saw in China—and Mr. Snow and other journalists had already picked his mind and written better. His picture of a country transformed and determined at last to stand and fight is circumstantially convincing; his portraits of China's leaders seem suspiciously uncritical." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p13 S 11 '40 650w
Cath World 152:628 F '41 550w

"In general the author is more competent as a military observer than as a commentator on politics and economics. His account of his travels in the Communist-controlled area, while it is an interesting record of an unusual experience, lacks both the literary quality and the economic background of Edgar Snow's narrative of his visit to Red China."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 5 '40 600w

"Although written by a military man, 'Twin Stars of China' is in no sense a military treatise. It is a story of Major Carlson's experiences and adventures as he traveled over China visiting the various fronts. It is mature in its judgments on other than military matters and extremely well written. As one reads it one wishes that the United States had more military men with the intelligence and breadth of interest with which Major Carlson is obviously endowed." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 151:307 O 5 '40 400w

"Major Carlson is a good reporter on things he has seen and an intelligent commentator. He has no extraordinary gifts of style, but he writes simply and without affectation. He is certainly honest and he gives the impression of being painstakingly accurate." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 S 22 '40 1450w

Reviewed by Freda Utley

Sat R of Lit 22:13 O 5 '40 1050w

Springf'd Republican p12 N 22 '40 900w

CARLSON, WILLIAM SAMUEL. Greenland lies north; il. by Phyllis Wesley. 306p maps $3 Macmillan

919.8 Greenland—Description and travel. Eskimos (W) 40-27870

"On the basis of knowledge and experience gained by a year of residence in southern Greenland and a winter in camp near the most northerly settlement, primarily to study air currents, Mr. Carlson gives an informative and interesting account of the country and climate, the ways of the Eskimos, the Danish administration, and practically everything else that one would care to know in view of the growing importance of Greenland as one pier of the air-bridge between Europe and America." (Christian Century) Glossary.

Booklist 37:215 Ja 15 '41

"This friendly study, coupled with the winter's close association for the two men, gives 'Greenland Lies North' a deeper value than of a mere travel-and-adventure book. But the note that is left in the reader's mind at the end is one of question. Even so far north . . . the Greenland Eskimos had been in contact with the white man's civilization; and of the family with whom the two visitors had lived so happily through the dark months, Mr. Carlson writes rather sadly: 'It would be better for them when we were gone.'" H. M. Shaw

+ Books p24 D 8 '40 280w

Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 70w

"Despite the exclamation points, the style of it is as labored as if written with mittens—the drawings look as if they had been also—but it bears considerable informative matter for those of an encyclopedic mind."

— + Nation 152:108 Ja 25 '41 160w

"In this cheerful miscellany the most interesting items are more or less unrelated details. There is, for example, the shooting (or stoning) of the dull-witted ptarmigan and also the quality of their meat—of other meats, too, such as seal, caribou and the delicacy called matak, whale hide. . . In other words, this book sets down the content of the passing day with an easy spontaneity, and thus makes an entertaining chronicle."

+ N Y Times p12 D 15 '40 650w

"To an Arctic enthusiast, everything written about the Arctic is read with eager interest, therefore it is difficult to understand why this particular book seems to move so slowly. . . There is undoubtedly valuable material to be found in the course of the narrative and some of the descriptions of Arctic scenes and Arctic weather are much more sensitive and poetical than would be expected from a scientist, but for one reader at least, the book as a whole does not come off." M. A. P.

— + Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 11 '41 240w

"This is a very human document, for it records the day-by-day life of two Americans thrust into a rigorous climate, among Eskimos. . . The daily routine is told in an interesting, often humorous vein. Their Eskimo family was a source of amusement as well as of friendly help. The stories told Max by the author of his previous trip are replete with information concerning native customs. Scenic descriptions are vivid."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:2 N '40 450w

Social Studies 32:47 Ja '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 25 '40 550w

CARLYLE, THOMAS. Journey to Germany, autumn 1858; ed. by Richard Albert Edward Brooks; with an introd, notes and commentaries. 222p map $2.75 Yale univ. press

914.3 Carlyle, Thomas. Germany—Description and travel 40-14974

"While at work upon his 'History of Frederick the Great,' Carlyle made a journey to Germany in the autumn of 1858, accompanied by two faithful friends. He kept a diary of his experiences. . . By some odd chance this diary of which the original manuscript was purchased by the Yale University Library in 1932, has not hitherto come into print. . . Dr. Brooks has edited it with the patient fidelity that is usually expended upon a classical text. There is an informative introduction, an abundance of notes in which well-nigh every reference is explained, and a long series of appendices in which each of twelve battles in Frederick's wars is studied with the object of demonstrating Carlyle's general accuracy." Books

"This diary is well worth publication. In the first place, it is a very entertaining travel book, filled with the writer's inimitable idiosyncrasies of thought and expression. In the second place, it is an illuminating account of conditions in parts of Germany and Austria in the mid-nineteenth century. In the third place, it is of great importance for the student of historiography, for not only does it shed light upon Carlyle's method of work but it refutes the lately brought charges against his accuracy and first-handedness as a military historian."

+ Books p18 S 15 '40 450w

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '40 110w

"A hitherto inaccessible Carlyle manuscript acquired by the Yale University Library in 1932 is now given to the world by Dr. Brooks in a transcript distinguished no less by its outstanding scholarship than by the vividness of its presentation." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p5 D 29 '40 550w

CARNEGY, PATRICK. The assurance of God. (Teaching of the church ser) 267p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

231 God

"This is the second volume in 'The Teaching of the Church' series under the general editorship of Canon Roger Lloyd, of Winchester, England. . . In this volume, Canon Carnegy, vicar of All Souls, Leeds, guides his readers to the assurance of God which lies in the fundamental tenets of the Christian faith. It is the objective assurance given in the Christian revelation, not the subjective feeling of individual experience, of which he writes; hence his approach is historical and theological rather than psychological." Churchman

Reviewed by W. H. Bernhardt

Christian Century 57:1178 S 25 '40 750w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore

Churchman 154:23 S 15 '40 200w

"Canon Carnegy's book, as was to be expected from one with his wide experience both as a parish priest and as a conductor of missions, does really succeed in giving the kind of teaching that an intelligent and thoughtful layman may be supposed to desire, and covers a wide ground without ever being shallow or unconvincing."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 7 '40 160w

CARNEGY, PATRICK—Continued

"Mr. Carnegy's contribution to the series fulfils two of the general editor's intentions in being 'readable and competent'; and if the third hope, that the books should also be 'vivid,' is hardly realized, it will be a good exercise for those on whose behalf this volume has been written—the parish priest and his workers—to expand the author's outline with their own religious experiences."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Ag 17 '40 370w

CARNES, CECIL. Jimmy Hare, news photographer; half a century with a camera. 317p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Hare, James H. Photography, Journalistic 41-464

"Biography of a pioneer Anglo-American news photographer, now eighty-four, who has seen 'more battles than any living general' and who managed to be present at most of the other important happenings in the world during his fifty years' service." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by R. F. Crandell
Books p2 D 22 '40 900w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 N 20 '40 700w

"One of the liveliest, most engaging, and on-the-whole-true adventure tales of modern times. Perhaps Mr. Carnes's hyperbole helped to make it so, perhaps he was merely recapturing Jimmy Hare's irrepressibility, but one captivating anecdote follows another." S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p6 D 8 '40 750w

"A good-natured, well-written story."

+ New Yorker 16:95 N 23 '40 80w

"An amusingly entertaining and thrilling chronicle of the exciting career of that courageous little man with the goatee who has been appropriately designated 'The World's Greatest News Photographer.'" Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 7 '40 950w

"Jimmy Hare has the advantage of most of those who submit themselves to biography. He has the pictures to accompany the text and to support even his most amazing stories. They cover many pages of this volume and by themselves tell much of the story of how photography has progressed in a half-century and of how important a part pictures have played in this time in recording events for posterity."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '40 900w

CARPENTER, CHARLES ERNEST. Private enterprise and democracy; foreword by Merle Armitage. 217p $2.50 Longmans

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy 40-9505

"In the conviction that political and religious freedom can be maintained only under some system of private enterprise and that our competitive system must be modified to the exigencies of a changing economy, Professor Carpenter names seven of the more important major defects in the present system and offers a plan for their correction. . . The solution offered is the sharing of profits and of control and Prof. Carpenter shows how this plan would shift taxation from an enemy to an ally of private enterprise, would lead to more democracy in government and would result in that initial step toward a more intelligent electorate which is the prime requirement of successful democracy." Publisher's note

Reviewed by B. W. Knight
Ann Am Acad 213:226 Ja '41 550w

"The book is well written, cogent and stimulating. The author has placed his finger on seven of the major economic weaknesses which threaten democracy from within. There are doubtless other answers than those offered but as a trained legal observer he has faced each problem honestly and performed a signal service in showing the direction (sometimes the hard direction) in which solutions may be found." C. W. Coulter

+ Christian Century 57:1209 O 2 '40 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

"The author's economic solution sounds naive; he is stronger on constitutional questions."

Nation 151:253 S 21 '40 50w

CARPENTER, FRANCES (MRS W. C. HUNTINGTON). Tales of a Swiss grandmother; il. by Ernest Biéler. 266p $2.50 Doubleday

398.2 Fairy tales. Tales, Swiss (W) 40-27722

Thirty-one folk tales and legends of the Swiss Alps, retold for children in grades five to seven. Stories of the little mountain men, the toggeli, and the William Tell legend are among those included.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

"The feature that attracted my notice was the number of stories new to me. . . Perhaps a more erudite folklorist than I could identify stories of this book in other countries. But they are certainly not known to every one, and that is helpful to story tellers in search of new material. Another feature is that they are so closely attached to the soil, landscape and customs of the people." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 3 '40 240w

"Bound together by a framing story of Swiss family life, these tales afford rich and varied fare to readers for whom Switzerland spells romance and charm." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:436 N '40 70w

"Frances Carpenter has been particularly successful in giving a picture of Swiss life and weaving very naturally into the background the folk lore of the country." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 30w

"These are simply and vigorously told, retaining the style and flavor of peasant folktales. Each story is prefaced by a thread of plot involving a boy and girl engaged in the varied activities of family life. Ernest Bieler, noted Swiss artist, has illustrated the text with black and white line drawings. There are also many two-tone illustrations, but they have not been very well reproduced." Katheryn Kohberger

+ Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 160w

"'Tales of a Swiss Grandmother' will prove a boon to the story-teller, and boys and girls from 8 to 12 will find it a fascinating addition to the fairytale shelves. The illustrations in black and white by a noted Swiss artist are irresistible, catching completely the spirit of the tales and the atmosphere of Swiss mountain life. The full-page pictures in two-tones are less successful." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 26 '41 400w

CARPENTER, HARRY GAGE. Letters of an investment counsel to Mr and Mrs John Smith. 197p $2.50 Harper

332.67 Investments 40-2939

"Written in a non-technical style by a man who has spent more than 15 years in the banking and brokerage business with firms of high standing, the book should appeal to all who have investment problems or who desire to obtain in abbreviated, yet clear, exposition the fundamentals guiding the handling of investment money in good times and bad. . . Mrs. Smith will learn among other things about the nine mistakes investors make most frequently, why high-grade long-term bonds decline in periods of rising interest rates, and short-term bonds do not, why common stocks and second-grade bonds and preferred stocks should be employed with appreciation as the chief objective and income as secondary, why the bulk of one's money at times should go into changing percentages of stocks and bonds due to the character of the period in question." Christian Science Monitor

"The experienced investor will find no new ideas in the book, nor any discussion of the social and economic factors which make the present day situation so difficult. On the other hand the sales promotion department of any financial house might well keep it on hand as a copybook of clear, common sense."
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 27 '40 210w

"It is a book which can be recommended to students as well as investors, since it lays a satisfactory foundation for those who wish to carry their studies to related fields." G. R. E.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 13 '40 350w

CARPENTER, WILLIAM SEAL. Problems in service levels; the readjustment of services and areas in local government; with a bibliography by Lee Virginia Wingfield. 234p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

352 Local government—U.S. 40-31970

"Professor Carpenter discusses the important question of the readjustment of services and areas in American local government. . . In successive chapters he reviews the chief traditional methods for readjusting services and areas, namely, interjurisdictional agreements, consolidation and annexation, and deorganization. His review is based upon a wealth of material collected in connection with the Princeton surveys, and is very well documented." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The vagueness of the title of this book necessitated the subtitle, which is itself not a very accurate description of the contents. There is little in the work on the readjustment or transfer of services between levels of local government. . . The annotated bibliography prepared by Lee Virginia Wingfield, while not exhaustive, is a very useful one for any person studying the areas and services of local government and their interrelations." William Anderson
Am Pol Sci R 34:1216 D '40 500w

"As the author says, much more research and constructive thinking is needed upon this whole problem. He has laid a fine foundation upon which others may build." W. J Ronan
+ Ann Am Acad 213:238 Ja '41 550w
Booklist 37:212 Ja 15 '41

CARR, ALBERT H. Z. America's last chance. 328p maps $2.75 Crowell

355.0973 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Foreign policy. U.S.—Economic policy. Fascism 40-27800

" 'Today,' Albert Carr writes 'we Americans move irresistibly upward to world leadership or we move downward to humiliation and defeat. Either the American dream triumphs in the world, or the Nazi nightmare.' The book is mainly devoted to an exposition of this We-or-They thesis. The author believes that America threw away a great chance of world leadership by turning its back on the League of Nations in 1919. Now there is another chance, perhaps our last, provided that we become 'tough,' to use the author's expression, face the unpleasant facts of the world crisis realistically, pursue a policy of militant democracy, and do everything to help England win the war. Mr. Carr, one imagines, would not stop with 'measures short of war,' if these should prove inadequate." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40
Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
Books p5 D 15 '40 500w
Christian Science Monitor p20 Ja 2 '41 500w

"Frankly, Carr's book is journalistic in tone, and certain references to history, literature, or philosophy are rather crude. But the thought is cogent and the presentation vigorous. I have a professional bias in favor of a more cautious and more subtle treatment. But I know how hopelessly wrong the sophisticates are apt to be. Between the exquisite culture of the French Academy and the avowed 'toughness' of Albert Carr I do not hesitate. As La Bruyère said more than two hundred years ago: 'If it comes to a choice, je veux etre peuple' (I want to be with the people)." Albert Guérard
+ Nation 151:637 D 21 '40 900w
Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p19 Ja 19 '41 1050w

CARR, ALBERT H. Z. Men of power. 272p il $2.50 Viking

923.2 Dictators (W) 40-27688

In a series of essays, written in language suited to young students, the author reviews the stories of some "men of power," dictators of the past and present. Contents: Richelieu molds a nation; Cromwell leads a revolution; Frederick falls in love with war; Napoleon tries to conquer Europe; Bolívar fights for freedom; Bismarck builds an empire; Mussolini strikes against democracy; Stalin masters the soviets; Hitler challenges the west; About power and democracy.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40
Cath World 152:510 Ja '41 200w
Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 20w

"It is unfortunate that the author has been too conscious of his audience as children. He is not condescending but he is obviously adjusting himself to their capacities in his writing style. There is a constant, careless repetition of the word 'furious.' However, it has been a difficult piece of work to give the complex political background necessary for the understanding of the actions of each of these men, and this he has in most cases contrived to do, although historians would assuredly object to his simplifications." Eleanor Kidder
+ — Library J 65:812 O 1 '40 250w
Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:854 O 15 '40 30w
Nation 151:430 N 2 '40 60w
Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 40w

"If you are going to use this book as supplementary reading in your social studies classes, it would be advisable to do some collateral reading about the characters mentioned in the book. In the name of propaganda for democracy you can accept this book, but in the name of historical accuracy and subjective interpretation, there is much in it with which to disagree. But let us not quibble —read it." Harold Gluck
+ — Social Studies 32:94 F '41 150w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. Britain; a study of foreign policy from the Versailles treaty to the outbreak of war. (Ambassadors at large) 196p $2 (6s) Longmans

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations 40-8889

"Professor Carr was the First Secretary of the Foreign Office during the larger part of the period covered in this volume. . . Professor Carr believes that the root of Britain's recent difficulties lay in two things: the changed position of Britain in the post-war world and the effects of the democratization of foreign policy. Egged on by the press and by the Opposition, Britain had 'continued to protest, condemn, and admonish without regard for the increasing ineffectiveness of these gestures and the growing resentment which they provoked.' " Am Pol Sci R

"For all serious students of the background of the present war, Professor E. H. Carr's admirable little volume . . . is indispensable reading." G. L. Kirk
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1041 O '40 260w

CARR, E. H.—Continued

"In no sense a volume for specialists in international relations, Professor Carr's compact survey will be appreciated by the layman and the student who wish to secure a simple yet adequate account of British foreign relations following Versailles. . . This brief work adds nothing to the facts of British foreign policy as we already know them, nor do we find in it any novel interpretations; but for Mr. John Citizen who does not want his international relations treated in too complex or diffuse a fashion, this work should prove quite valuable." T. W. Wallbank

+ Ann Am Acad 212:238 N '40 700w

Foreign Affairs 19:261 O '40 20w

"Professor Carr's little book is not just an attempt to apportion blame. It is a compact analysis of British foreign policy in Europe and in other fields, not just in the last few years but over the whole period since Versailles. As such, it is a thoughtful and useful contribution to the history of twenty tragic years." Ferdinand Kuhn

+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 28 '40 1150w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. Twenty years' crisis, 1919-1939; an introduction to the study of international relations. 313p $3 (10s 6d) Macmillan

341 International law and relations

[40-10514]

This study, dedicated "to the makers of the coming peace," was finished just before the outbreak of the present European war, and the author has refrained from any modifications in his work. It is a consideration of force and power during the last twenty years, "a theoretical study of the bases of international relations in the thoughts and feelings of modern Western men. The author, acknowledging the influence of Karl Mannheim, contrasts the Utopian approach of men like Wilson and Lord Cecil, good children of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, and the realistic approach of the modern preachers of power politics, whose intellectual lineage he traces back to Machiavelli." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"To take [the author's] work at his own evaluation of it, it would make an admirable introductory text for any college course in diplomatic history or international relations. It deserves wider and more practical attention. A wiser commentary on why the nations are now at war, a more fruitful suggestion for the peacemakers, has yet to be written." A. W. Griswold

+ Am Hist R 46:374 Ja '41 550w

"Composed by an English scholar amid the political turmoil of the years immediately preceding the present war, this book is a monument to the human power of sane and detached analysis. In its examination of the collapse of the international system, it is utterly devoid of national bias, or that bitter denunciation of governments and men which marks so much recent literature dealing with the crisis. . . In the development of his thesis, Professor Carr has produced one of the most significant contributions to the systematic study of the theory of international politics that this reviewer has seen in years." W. P. Maddox

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:587 Je '40 700w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Ann Am Acad 210:152 Jl '40 230w

"The book is disarmingly honest and objective, and Professor Carr presents his case with great force and conviction. It should find a place on the shelves of every student of political science and international affairs." Ursula Wasserman

+ Books p18 Ap 14 '40 850w

"Professor Carr's book, which makes interesting reading, nevertheless seems to the present reviewer marred by a wrong perspective. There is much pointed and illuminating criticism of 'utopian schemes' and of international morality. But Professor Carr is much stronger in his criticism than in his constructive proposals." Hans Kohn

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 60w

"This book is both profound and provocative, and should be avoided by those who would establish their new world on loose, wishful thinking. Many will find much to disagree with in this book, but, what is more important, they should also find much that will set them thinking back to the fundamentals of our present political, social, and economic systems. . . Professor Carr's criticisms are penetrating and sincere and call for careful examination. The reader will probably find that his constructive suggestions are not so helpful; but it should be remembered that this book was written before war broke out and was concerned mainly with the criticism of the old as a basis for the new order." E. W.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 D 29 '39 700w

"Professor Carr spares nobody. Few books in recent years can compare with his as a formidable enterprise in deflation. For every bubble of thought his pin is ready, and in a community such as ours . . . a reading of 'The Twenty Years' Crisis' may well have a salutary and refreshing effect. . . Nevertheless, in spite of the balance and sweet reasonableness of the argument, one is haunted by the feeling that something is lacking and that it is not the compelling nature of the matter so much as the compelling nature of the argument that has dictated the type of simplification introduced and the choice of examples. The analysis is brilliant; it is not so easy to say whether it is profound."

+ — Economist 138:61 Ja 13 '40 700w

Reviewed by C. D. Burns

Ethics 50:344 Ap '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:564 Ap '40 70w

"Writing smoothly and clearly, widely read in political theory, and with a gift for apt quotation, Mr. Carr devotes much of his book to catching the 'utopians'—Sir Alfred Zimmern or Professor Toynbee, for example—in mental undress and demonstrating that their negligee is careless. He is more interested in silly things that utopians may have said than in what statesmen have done and whether they could have persuaded their peoples to support them in doing otherwise. The result is a series of straw men set up and triumphantly knocked down." Lindsay Rogers

Nation 150:285 F 24 '40 500w

Nature 146:209 Ag 17 '40 1350w

New Repub 102:222 F 12 '40 60w

"The 20 Years' Crisis analyses international relations with the same ruthlessness, and something of the same detached relish in the supremacy of things evil, which inspired Hobbes to write The Leviathan. . . In his first job of dealing with the Utopians, Professor Carr is brilliantly successful. With admirable dexterity, he picks up Professors Zimmern and Toynbee as though they were delicate butterflies, and pins them down on his board. And there, when his task is finished, is a perfect collection of the fauna of English international thought in the first quarter of the twentieth century. . . We are witnessing the birth-pangs of a new world, and in order to take part in its shaping we must get rid not only of our old Utopias but of our old realism. Professor Carr has shown the entire inadequacy of Professors Zimmern and Toynbee. Who will demonstrate the entire inadequacy of Professor Carr?" Richard Coventry

New Statesman & Nation 18:761 N 25 '39 950w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p3 F 4 '40 950w

"Professor Carr's book is a clear and temperate analysis of the main factors in the present international situation. It is especially good as a criticism of the 'harmony of interests' assumption which underlay the Utopian internationalism of a Woodrow Wilson." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 17 '40 490w

"In spite of its arrangement in the form of a treatise, the volume is really what Matthew Arnold would have called 'an essay in criticism.' The onslaught is made with a zest and gusto which must have been as enjoyable to the writer as they are to the reader, and is constantly enlivened by shrewd and well-documented thrusts at the representatives of the different varieties of 'utopian' doctrine." Alfred Zimmern

+ Spec 163:750 N 24 '39 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p650 N 11 '39 850w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). And so to murder. 280p $2 Morrow 40-7588

Detective story.

Booklist 36:430 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p15 My 12 '40 260w

"A sprightly affair, for it involves black-outs with repeated murder attempts. Happily, the solution is one which will upset no one. The accompanying love affair is neatly handled." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 50w

"The book is both amusing and mysterious, and it has a strong love interest, but as a detective story it falls short of the ideal in that important information is withheld from the reader long after it is known to Sir Henry." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p22 My 12 '40 180w

"Very fine dish for mystery epicures, and one of Mr. Dickson's best."

+ New Yorker 16:100 My 11 '40 50w

"Customarily excellent Dicksonian opus—not too serious in this instance—with plenty of thrills and a solution you'd never guess. Grade A."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 11 '40 40w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). The department of queer complaints. 241p $2 Morrow [7s 6d Heinemann] 40-36102

Collection of detective and ghost stories.

"Carter Dickson, as some one has said, is 'the brilliant master of the logical solution of the improbable situation,' and in this volume of eleven mystery tales you have him living up to his publicity in a lighter and more frolicsome way than is usual with him." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 22 '40 200w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 D 10 '40 220w

"If any one hopes for a galaxy of subtle devices he will be disappointed. The stories are readable but never brilliant, and the level of invention, singularly low for an author with such a fertile imagination. The ghost story will not make your flesh creep." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:391 O 19 '40 50w

"All are excellent examples of short-story technique. Our choice for the best tale of the entire collection is 'The Other Hangman,' which happens also to be the only one which does not have an English background." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p7 D 22 '40 180w

"An excellent if motley assortment of short stories. Most concern themselves with the fascinating Colonel March, who is positively Holmesesque in his methods of solution."

+ New Yorker 16:88 D 21 '40 60w

"Puzzle pieces that will stump the six best guessers—with solutions that are ridiculously simple. Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 30w

"His Department of Queer Complaints, a hypothetical department in New Scotland Yard devoted to the elucidation of problems outside the routine scope of the police, is an excellent notion. But it cries out for the hand of G. K. Chesterton; and Mr. Dickson, though he has the Chestertonian legerdemain, lacks the poetic patter which made the Father Brown stories minor works of art. Still, there are some arresting problems here for Colonel March to solve, not least that of the pair of white gloves which fired a shot that killed a man who had died years before." Nicholas Blake

— + Spec 165:424 O 25 '40 70w

Time 37:60 Ja 6 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 O 26 '40 170w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). The man who could not shudder. 313p $2 Harper 40-9588

Detective story.

Booklist 36:413 Jl 1 '40

Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"The clutching hand and the thud in the night lead straight to one of the strangest shootings in history, a lot of all but insoluble problems, and a solution you'll probably swallow with delight in spite of its complicated nature. Dr. Fell, vast, beaming, is just the man to handle Mr. Carr's jigsaw and explain the whys and wherefores of murder. . . The ghostly element, of course, provides extra thrills for those who are skeered of spirits or rumors thereof." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 My 26 '40 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 90w

"Never before did John Dickson Carr so thoroughly demonstrate his ability to bamboozle his readers." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 My 26 '40 220w

New Yorker 16:96 My 25 '40 50w

"Regular Chinese Box puzzle, getting intricater and intricater and more and more sinister as it proceeds to double reverse English finish. Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:26 My 25 '40 40w

"Mr. Carr opens with his usual effervescence, but his story fizzes out some way before it ends." Nicholas Blake

Spec 166:44 Ja 10 '41 50w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Nine—and death makes ten. 280p $2 Morrow (W) 40-31176

Detective story.

"Grade A puzzlement." Will Cuppy

+ Books p19 O 13 '40 200w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p24 O 13 '40 180w

"Customarily excellent Dickson example of turning the incredible into cold fact. Story runs a bit thin, but tops its class as baffler."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:28 O 19 '40 50w

Time 36:84 N 4 '40 40w

CARR, MRS LORRAINE. Mother of the Smiths. 296p $2.50 Macmillan (W) 40-27205

Taos, New Mexico, before the gringos took over, is the scene of this novel. Sabe Smith, a valiant pioneer, comes from Texas with her worthless husband, and a small load of household affairs. Thru her own strength and ingenuity she builds a house, raises four of her sons to maturity, and sees her oldest son become a doctor.

Booklist 36:283 Mr 15 '40

CARR, LORRAINE—Continued

"'Mother of the Smiths' is a most promising first novel. Although its melodrama may become breathless, the rare good humor, the simple Mexicans and the wonderful 'young 'uns' contribute to make a highly readable story." M. G. Lehman

+ — Books p12 Mr 10 '40 370w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 6 '40 250w

Christian Century 57:322 Mr 6 '40 50w

"A delightfully human story." Bertine Weston

+ Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 100w

"Not much of a novel, but the heroine is presented with enough earthiness and good temper to keep her human as well as heroic."

New Repub 102:449 Ap 1 '40 50w

"The novel is not particularly well written; neither in action nor in speech do these people seem entirely natural. Nevertheless, one finishes the story of a strong woman fighting against all odds, because this kind of story always has a powerful sentimental appeal. As for the minor characters, they are not fully realized. Only Sabe lives." E. L. Walton

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 10 '40 550w

Sat R of Lit 22:21 Je 1 '40 360w

"There is plenty of humor in the book. The young Smiths were as resourceful as their mother in the inevitable squabbles with other children and parents; and in spite of the meanness inherent in various neighbors and their offspring, the story is written in a major key."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 240w

Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

CARR, LOWELL JUILLIARD; VALENTINE, MILDRED AILEEN, and LEVY, MARSHALL H. Integrating the camp, the community and social work. 220p $2 Assn. press

362.74 Camps. Juvenile delinquency

39-27970

Record of a community project, begun in 1935 at Ann Arbor, Michigan, to study the cases of approximately 100 maladjusted boys. This report covers three years of the experimental stage of the project. Selected bibliography. Index.

"Here is a contribution to social research as well as to social work, which incidentally includes the sociological ingredient missing from many social work studies." D. K. Bruner

Am Soc R 5:307 Ap '40 150w

Booklist 36:126 D 1 '39

"Case workers, group workers, camp directors, educators, indeed all who are interested in a radical realignment of specialties on an integrated community basis in the service of whole persons, will find in this volume a clear and commanding chronicle of an inspiring social inquiry." C. E. Hendry

+ Survey 76:147 Ap '40 360w

CARR, MARY JANE. Young Mac of Fort Vancouver; il. by Richard Holberg. 238p $2 Crowell

(W) 40-31385

Story of a boy's life in the 1830's at the Hudson's Bay company trading post at Fort Vancouver, opposite the present site of Portland, Ore. on the Columbia river.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p14 N 10 '40 240w

"Young Mac's adventures are taut with vigor and interest. Convincing incidents involve him in the ways and traditions of both the white settlers and the Indians, so that out of his year's experiences he emerges ready for independent decisions, making him belong to the civilized world that was his heritage." M. A. Whitney

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 26 '40 400w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 30w

Social Studies 31:379 D '40 20w

CARSEL, WILFRED. A history of the Chicago ladies' garment workers' union. 324p il $2.50 Black Cat

331.88 International ladies' garment workers' union. Chicago locals. Clothing trade

40-27137

"The history of the efforts of workers in a large Chicago industry toward effective organization from 1886 to 1939, and of their agitation for an adequate wage, shorter hours, and more democracy. Extensive bibliography, lists of officers and statistics in appendixes." Booklist

---

"Dr. Carsel narrates clearly and directly the historical development of the various aspects of union activity. The story is at times sad, a story of almost constantly militant endeavor. The author's sympathy with the events with which he deals is apparent. He has made good use of a wide range of sources including letters, journals, official documents, newspapers, and periodicals. The usefulness of the book would be enhanced, however, if he had at times correlated union activities more closely with the general conditions of the city with which the union was primarily concerned." B. L. Pierce

+ — Am Hist R 46:489 Ja '41 280w

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p19 Je 2 '40 60w

CARSON, KATHARINE. Nice lady. 346p $2.50 Putnam

(W) 40-8313

Character study of a designing, self-centered woman, Medora Prather, whose career of cadging her way to social success began in a little town in Oklahoma territory, in the early nineteen hundreds.

Booklist 36:398 Je 15 '40

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p10 My 12 '40 550w

"Although Mrs. Carson's inability to dramatize characters and incidents with sufficient force, makes this novel fall short of excellency, it is extremely readable, and, I believe, discloses a coming author." R. G. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 260w

"'Nice Lady' is definitely depressing. It is a nice measure of the book's effectiveness to say that most readers would probably give a pretty penny to see Medora get her come-uppance. As an impartial study of an unsympathetic character, and as a vivid re-creation of the early twentieth century atmosphere, 'Nice Lady' is a thoroughly competent job." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p18 My 19 '40 650w

CARTER, ALBERT CHARLES ROBINSON. Let me tell you. 328p il 16s Hutchinson [English publication]

708 Paintings—Prices [40-32248]

"For more than fifty years Mr. Carter has edited 'The Year's Art,' a compendium commemorating all that happens in the arts in Great Britain. He has also, since 1901, been allied with 'The Daily Telegraph,' commenting upon artistic things. Throughout this long career he has been especially observant of the ups and downs of the auction room and has come to be regarded as the most authoritative oracle of the art market. It is as such an oracle that he chiefly writes in 'Let Me Tell You,' touching on many themes but returning again and again to the financial status of masterpieces at different periods." Books

---

"All of these chapters are extremely readable. Mr. Carter is a veritable Autolycus in the snapping up of odd and interesting trifles, and he is discriminating into the bargain. He introduces us to many an engaging personality and altogether functions as a lively, friendly, dependable oracle." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p16 Ag 25 '40 1050w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '40 370w

"Mr. Carter describes a recurring dream of his which 'proceeds to develop into a nightmare of auction arithmetic.' The phrase exactly describes this book, which might perhaps have some slight statistical value if it were arranged in the right order. Industry, most definitely, is not enough." Charles Surface

— Spec 164:294 Mr 1 '40 80w

"Even those who care nothing about auction figures and the trade in works of art may trust themselves safely to Mr. Carter for instruction and amusement. They will find themselves now in King Street, St. James's, now on the field of Balaclava, now in Westminster Abbey, now in Bohemia, now at a public dinner, learning from King Arthur's Champion how to make a speech, and now (with a sudden catch in the breath) at a child's funeral. They will read a great many queer things about a great many people. But is there anything in the whole book queerer than this—that the original of Mr. Wackford Squeers should have been named Dove?"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p49 Ja 27 '40 950w

CARTER, HELENE. Smoky and Pinocchio; pictures by [the author]. [36p] $1 Lippincott 40-32067

Smoky was a lonely Persian cat; Pinocchio was the little wooden puppet who could be brought to life when someone spoke his name affectionately. This story for five-year-olds is of their adventures during a long afternoon when Smoky had given Pinocchio the required affection.

"The book is not a footnote to the moving picture; it has a life of its own though its chief character is derivative—and this character has taken on so much life one may be permitted to take a few liberties with it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 10 '40 200w

"Small lovers of Pinocchio will chuckle over his adventures with a lovely Persian cat with its delightful pictures." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:375 D '40 20w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow

Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 90w

"Illustrations colorful and story good."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:40 D 7 '40 40w

CARTER, HERBERT DYSON. Sea of destiny; the story of Hudson bay—our undefended back door. 236p il maps $3 Greenberg

971.2 Hudson bay. Hudson's Bay company. U.S.—Defenses 40-9198

Altho several chapters are devoted to the past history of Hudson bay, the main theme of this book is the role the Bay may play in the near future. The author contends that while North America is well defended on the south, west and east, it is open to attack from the north—that Canada cannot or will not look to the Hudson bay defenses and that it thereby devolves on the United States to do so. Bibliography.

"This book is a very timely, readable, fascinating account of a vast area which very well may be a 'Sea of Destiny.'" Russ Nixon

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 410w

"Such undocumented and alarmist assertions one is tempted to criticize in the identical manner of H. L. Mencken's famous terse book review—'Bosh.' But though Mr. Carter loves exclamation points, there is more to this book than words. He has presented in this volume valuable and interesting statistical and historical data about one of the world's least known and largest seas. Had he been content to leave it at this and to sketch with some degree of conservatism the actual strategical importance of Hudson Bay, rather than to paint it upon a distorted canvas, 'Sea of Destiny' would have been a far better book." H. W. Baldwin

— + N Y Times p16 Ag 25 '40 300w

Springf'd Republican p12 Ag 23 '40 850w

CARTER, JOHN FRANKLIN (JAY FRANKLIN, DIPLOMAT, pseuds). 1940. 319p $2.75 Viking

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. —Economic policy (W) 40-27028

A Washington columnist and New Dealer, believing that 1940 will be a "year of momentous decision for the American people," discusses the men, measures and tendencies of today and makes bold to forecast the political outline of tomorrow.

Booklist 36:212 F 1 '40

"John Franklin Carter, statesman-journalist, prolific author of seventeen works of fiction and non-fiction under varied pen names including, 'The Unofficial Observer,' 'Diplomat,' 'Jay Franklin,' 'John Carter' and even 'John Franklin Carter,' now comes out boldly in his eighteenth opus and nominates Franklin Delano Roosevelt for a third term as President of the United States. . . The highly literate Jay Franklin operates along the journalistic fringes of the government. . . His book is provocative, but not always accurate." Joseph Driscoll

Books p6 Ja 14 '40 1600w

"Mr. Franklin is brilliant, cynical, occasionally cockeyed, and always exciting. . . You may not like Mr. Franklin's solutions, but you cannot escape his problems. They are the real, instead of the verbal, problems, the solution of which should be decisive issues in the campaign." H. M. Jones

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ja 13 '40 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"It all sounds a little too easy—almost a little glib. Possibly if he hadn't attempted to cover so much ground—economics, political philosophy, government—he could have written a much more effective book. What this department is preaching is not agnosticism but a clearer statement of the problem itself. In government, as in medicine, there is no cure-all. What we can expect—and this is half the battle won—is a sound and accurate diagnosis." Norman Cousins

— + Current Hist 51:1 F '40 1000w

Foreign Affairs 18:753 Jl '40 20w

New Repub 102:189 F 5 '40 40w

"Mr. Franklin writes easily, is easy to read, is well informed, and makes many telling points. His main arguments the reader may take or leave. Mr. Franklin won't sweep any one off his feet who is not ready to be swept. He begs just enough questions, makes just enough hasty assumptions, to give any one who wishes it a way of escape. . . Much of Mr. Franklin's analysis of what has happened will amuse and edify. . . He should be useful in jiggling a good many minds out of their accustomed ruts." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p2 Ja 7 '40 1350w

"Read it even though it may be bad for your blood pressure."

New Yorker 15:62 Ja 6 '40 50w

CARTER, J. F.—Continued

"To outline, however sketchily, the political scene of tomorrow as it will be played in these United States requires either sublime courage or an almost complete recklessness for the consequences of inaccuracy. Undoubtedly it was courage, and a firm conviction in his political faith, that prompted Jay Franklin to hazard his reputation as an acute commentator of current events, and for that he is to be admired. His predictions for the year 1940, as well as his interpretation of the various trends in national affairs, are not quite so praiseworthy." J. H. Smyth

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:12 Ja 6 '40 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 28 '40 500w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:193 Mr '40 370w

CARTER, REGINALD. He and his. 460p $2.50 Reynal [10s 6d Cape, J] [40-7116]

Tale of village life in Victorian England. Henry Wroth, squire of the village of Fray, a radical in views but an extremely able and kindly man, has two sons. The older, Harry, was possibly born out of wedlock; the younger, Norman, altho born in wedlock was not Henry Wroth's son. The climax of the story comes when a blackmailer learns these facts.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p14 S 29 '40 500w

"This is a novel that is far and away above the average, and I have read none to equal it for a long time." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 27 '40 410w

"Occasionally bogus, as if a sound museum piece of furniture had been ineptly restored, the whole has nevertheless the feel of genuineness, and first to last the Shelleyan character of the masterful Henry holds this novel together." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 13 '40 240w

"This might almost be a minor Trollope but for a few modern touches."

Nation 151:310 O 5 '40 50w

New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 40w

N Y Times p28 N 17 '40 650w

"A Victorian novel of manners, remarkable for its recreation of a period. Shrewd, carefully observed, full of interesting and believable persons. A clever and amusing imitation of the best early-nineteenth-century novelists."

+ New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 40w

"The author writes as if he were a guest in the household—one with absolutely no concerns of his own, whom nothing escapes and nothing upsets, even murder and suicide. In its smoothness, his style serves as a perfect background for the pungency of his observation. In its quality of ironical urbanity, it is as tickling to one's membranes as the prelude to a sneeze." Charlton Ogburn, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 N 30 '40 400w

"He and His is an intricate story, always dramatic, lavishly peopled with a wide range of characters, and rising to several big scenes where the formal and shrewdly calculated dialogue enhances the effect. In trying to praise Mr. Carter adequately it is tempting to overpraise him, but wild comparisons with Jane Austen can only prejudice the reader. Mr. Carter is inclined to be theatrical and occasionally lapses into a crude melodrama. The characterisation is over-simplified, and on two occasions the complexity of the plot leads the author into plain errors. Nevertheless, He and His is a work of uncommon distinction, particularly if—as it appears to be—it is a first novel. It certainly stands head and shoulders above the general run of current fiction." Desmond Hawkins

+ — Spec 164:260 F 23 '40 430w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 10 '40 800w

CARTER, WILLIAM HARRISON, and DODGE, RICHARD ELWOOD. Economic geography. 564p il maps $3.75 Doubleday

330.9 Geography, Commercial 39-24462

"The authors have devoted two sections of this book to those basic factors which are used by economists and geographers in interpreting economic conditions and tendencies. Part I deals with those physical factors a knowledge of which is essential to an understanding of the potential productive power of different regions of the world; Part II is a study of underlying economic principles and of institutional factors affecting production; and Part III is a study of commodities and of industries. In this third part of the book an effort is made to relate regional distribution of commodity production to the principles discussed in Parts I and II." (Pref) Index.

"A readable, clear, and withal a good introductory text in economic geography." A. B. Hollingshead

+ Am J Soc 46:112 Jl '40 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:54 O '39

CARTWRIGHT, HERBERT MILLS. Photogravure; a text book on the machine and hand-printed processes. 2d ed rev and enl 202p il $3.50 Am. photographic pub.

777 Photogravure 39-25454

"Describes in considerable detail the methods of intaglio etching on copper plates or cylinders from which impressions are printed by hand or mechanical means. Developments in technique since the publication of the first edition (1930) [Book Review Digest, 1930] notably in the application of exact methods of control to both monochrome and color work, have necessitated the rewriting of most of the book." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 36:113 N 15 '39

N Y New Tech Bks 24:60 O '39

CASE, FRANK. Do not disturb; il. by O. Soglow. 326p $3 Stokes

B or 92 Algonquin hotel, New York 40-36206

The author of Tales of a Wayward Inn (Book Review Digest, 1938) writes a second installment of stories and sayings of his friends and his guests at the Hotel Algonquin. Included are reminiscences of Mr Case's youth in the Black Rock section of Buffalo, in the days when Lord Fauntleroy suits were in style. Index.

"It is when Mr. Case is patently sincere, telling about his hotel, and about people, without affectation or attempts at wisecracking, that he is at his best. When he attempts to dress up an old anecdote (and some of the yarns in this book are of great age), and when he cuts too many capers, it doesn't always come off." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p17 N 3 '40 550w

"Frank Case is the best-loved boniface in New York today, and one of this talk-rich town's best talkers. You can hear him talk as you turn his pages; and Soglow's illustrations add spice to it. But when a book, 320 pages of it, sounds like a stenographic record of unedited conversations, even the best conversation begins to seem amiably long-winded." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 N 6 '40 340w

Commonweal 33:286 Ja 3 '41 60w

"This is a book to which the somewhat overworked adjective 'enjoyable' can be specifically and generally applied: the reader who doesn't enjoy it must be a bit crabbed or else very seriously preoccupied. And Soglow's drawings are thirty-seven further reasons for pleasure."

+ N Y Times p3 N 3 '40 1000w

"Witty, and goes like a breeze."

New Yorker 16:103 N 16 '40 50w

"Although the conversation is not quite so lively, nor the recollections so random as in Mr. Case's earlier book, he has again provided a liberal supply of anecdotes in which Names are named, and has shown himself better than able to match wits with his customers." F. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 23 '40 270w

"There are so many quotable stories in every chapter that one may open the book at random and at once become absorbed in it. And it will bear a second reading, if only to get these closeups of our transient race so fixed in mind that the reader may become a purveyor himself of Frank Case's stories."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 14 '40 300w

CASSON, STANLEY. The discovery of man; the story of the inquiry into human origins. 339p il map $3 Harper [12s 6d Hamilton, H]

573.2 Archeology. Anthropology. Man

39-32805

Called by its author "an outline, not a history," this work traces the development of the twin studies of archeology and anthropology from ancient times to the present. Index.

"Mr Casson writes so well that in spite of the favorable reviews which have greeted the appearance of this book, in spite of its undoubted merits, this reviewer confesses to a mild irritation that just a little more care was not exercised in its composition, and just a little less facility. . . But the evidences of hasty writing to be found in a few grammatical slips, a few small errors of fact would be trivial cause for complaint if they did not suggest what is apparent from other indications; namely, a certain haste in composition, a rush to get on over material less interesting to the author, even at the cost of superficial treatment. Luckily Mr. Casson's vast knowledge of classical archaeology carries him well through the better portion of his book, even to a memorable chapter in his Great Discoveries. Yet for a work supposedly of some breadth of range his last chapter is hopelessly mediocre, and for a man of Casson's talents needlessly so." L. C. Eiseley

+ — Am Anthropol 43:112 Ja '41 750w

Booklist 36:377 Je 1 '40

"Casson has woven a fine tale, hitherto 'off the record' even for archaeologists. This book is certainly recommended reading." J. H. Gaul

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 650w

Reviewed by Regina Flannery

Commonweal 32:135 My 31 '40 230w

"It is a fascinating story, in which the most fascinating feature is that the tale of discovery is not yet ended." E. N. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 21 '39 300w

Nature 145:809 My 25 '40 320w

Reviewed by L. W. Doob

New Repub 103:251 Ag 19 '40 500w

"The book belongs to that rare class: a popular scientific work which is neither superficial nor one-sided, nor difficult for anyone to understand. In it Mr. Casson has written a perfectly balanced and well-proportioned record of man's readiness (or, perhaps it would be truer to say, his reluctance) to study his own past in a spirit of detached inquiry." David Garnett

+ New Statesman & Nation 17:939 Je 17 '39 1600w

"Mr. Casson's style cannot be called brilliant, but it is extremely clear and exceedingly readable; moreover, it is touched here and there by glints of humor. Obviously, too, Mr. Casson's reading in the fields of archaeological and anthropological history is very wide, albeit sometimes not as wide as one could wish in certain directions. . . That it leaves the reader a trifle breathless because of its speed and the immensity of the terrain covered is a defect that is far out-weighed by the highly stimulating nature of the narrative, which is such as to lead the reader into making a long list of points to be studied further in other books." P. A. Means

+ — N Y Times p9 Je 16 '40 1050w

"Readable and apparently sound popularization."

+ New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 30w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 My '40 400w

"Mr. Casson is a pleasant writer and his book is easy to read. . . His outline, upon the whole, is commendable. The first part of the book, where he writes upon the early stages of the investigation, is admirably constructed. . . In the second half of his book Mr. Casson is less happy. We have to complain of omission, and also, I fear, of a few lapses." C. E. Vulliamy

+ — Spec 162:1100 Je 23 '39 750w

Time 35:92 Je 17 '40 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Je 17 '39 950w

CATHER, WILLA SIBERT. Sapphira and the slave girl. 295p $2.50 Knopf

(W) 40-34421

Character sketch of a Virginia lady, Sapphira Dodderidge Colbert, of the Loudoun county Dodderidges, who was considered to have married beneath her. Her husband ran the mill in the frontier town where they went to live, and was the only member of his family who became a thoroly good citizen. The story begins in 1856, when Sapphira, once a very active person, has become practically a housebound invalid. The conflict of wills between Sapphira and her husband over the beautiful slave girl, Nancy, against whom Mrs Colbert harbors an unfounded jealousy, provides the action of the story. The outcome is told in a final chapter, in time many years after the deaths of the Colberts.

"A cameo novel whose brevity is misleading, since it will not be taken in by the quick glance. Outwardly it lacks the tumult and temptation of The Lost Lady—the surface is unruffled, the conflict suppressed. But the antagonisms, the loyalities are there, sensitive and perceptible beneath the surface. . . In the beauty of line and the almost perfect selection of detail this novel does Miss Cather proud." E. W.

+ Atlantic F '41 80w

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"In 'Sapphira and the Slave Girl' Willa Cather again shows the beauty and distinction that long since gave her a pre-eminent place among contemporary novelists. In this, her first novel in five years, there is once more the grace, the clear, luminous perspective, the measured emotion and the perfection of carefully chosen detail for which thousands of readers have looked eagerly year after year." Mary Ross

+ Books p1 D 8 '40 1600w

"The one flaw in this delightful book is the Epilogue; it could so well have been devoted to a satisfying completion of the exceptionally well-drawn characters. Instead, Miss Cather confuses her readers and leaves them greatly exasperated. The beautiful format of Sapphira and the Slave Girl makes it even easier to read Miss Cather's beautiful prose."

+ — Cath World 152:634 F '41 270w

"To some of her readers at least, 'Sapphira and the Slave Girl' will prove strangely disappointing. It will leave them baffled and disillusioned. For little remains, upon closing this book other than a sense of sadness, of defeat, of the savor of slow decay. That, together with the penetrating melancholy of the scene and of characters set before Miss Cather's readers by a skill which is masterly." M. W.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 D 28 '40 550w

CATHER (kăth'ẽr)

CATHER, W. S.—Continued

"'Sapphira and the Slave Girl' ranks, I believe, with 'Death Comes for the Archbishop,' 'My Antonia' and 'A Lost Lady.' It is several notches above 'Shadows on the Rock.' Which means that all amateurs of her writing will consider the book a 'must.'" H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 33:306 Ja 10 '41 650w

"It is a small book, unimportant if compared to My Antonia, but the narrative is compact and written in Miss Cather's flawless style. Will be sure of a demand and is a worth while item." I. M. Turner
+ Library J 65:982 N 15 '40 140w

"'Sapphira,' by recovering the gravity and lyric ease of her best work and by avoiding the flat prettification of history that nullified 'Shadows on the Rock,' is Miss Cather's best book in thirteen years and one of the five best of her production. It shows in its central character the tangible passion and struggle, in its secondary characters the honest virtue and credible humility, and in its general atmosphere of fear and obsession a dramatic force that lift the tale out of its exaggerated moralism and dramatic simplicity into its own kind of truth and power. Its people rise above the flat dimensions of moral humors, and there are passages . . . that remind us how much integrity of word and effect is required to justify the hairbreadth compromises with melodrama and sentiment which Miss Cather risks and how she is one of the two or three masters who remain to us in this kind of art." M. D. Zabel
+ Nation 151:574 D 7 '40 1250w

"It is because Miss Cather makes the quality of sturdy integrity so apparent in drawing her picture of Colbert that it becomes difficult to accept her resolution of the conflict between [Colbert and his wife] upon which the story hinges. And that is why, although the elements in the situation are subtly presented, the final impression with regard to its outcome is an unsatisfying one." J. D. Adams
+ — N Y Times p4 D 8 '40 700w

"Willa Cather bucks the trend, swims upstream, walks by herself, and does very nicely, thank you. 'Sapphira and the Slave Girl' (a peach of a title, by the way) is about as remote from the main stream of current fiction as you can well conceive. For one thing, it's brief. . . Her work is spare, even austere. . . Accuracy rather than richness of imagination is her hallmark. She has another quality shared by few of her contemporaries. Most writers, some of them greater than Miss Cather, make up their stories; she seems to remember hers. . . Out of this book, designedly minor in tone and content, is exhaled a flavor rare nowadays, when the rhetoricians seem to dominate—a flavor of cool, almost austere gravity." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:121 D 7 '40 1050w

"It is a pleasure for a reviewer who has long followed American fiction with interest to find in this novel that delicate yet powerful art of brief and significant narrative, where all that is needed is included, and all that is needless is left out. There is much to be said for a novel made long by the very profusion of life,—but very little in praise of the skill of the hundreds of contemporary novelists who take nine hundred pages to accomplish what Miss Cather, with great craftsmanship, does in less than three hundred. It is the French art of the nouvelle, in which Voltaire triumphed, and the Russian Turgeniev excelled. Miss Cather has triumphed in it also." H. S. Canby
+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 D 14 '40 800w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 500w

"Willa Cather could not possibly write a bad novel; but Sapphira and the Slave Girl bears witness that she can write a dull one. This dullness, though, is the sum of many honest virtues: a nicely formed story, characters drawn with delicate authority, sharp, evocative vignettes of Virginia living & landscape. The whole work has the well-made, healthful, sober clarity of a Dutch interior. And like many unexceptionable people who inspire neither more nor less than respect, Sapphira is not too dull to be pleasant reading."
+ — Time 36:88 D 9 '40 300w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:x winter '41 160w

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA. Vital problems of Catholic education in the United States; ed. by Roy J. Deferrari. 231p $2.75 The university

377.8273 Catholic church in the U.S.—Education 39-32251

Lectures arranged for presentation at regular intervals during the summer session of 1939 under the general title of Jubilee lectures on Catholic education. Contents: Catholic education and non-Catholic philosophies, by Geoffrey O'Connell; Catholic education and the approving agencies, by R. J. Deferrari; Catholic education and the National Catholic welfare conference, by J. E. Cummings; Catholic education and the elementary school, by J. R. Hagan; The Catholic church and secondary education, by George Johnson; The Catholic contribution to the American college, by J. M. Campbell; Catholic education and the graduate school, by M. R. P. McGuire; Catholic education and theology, by J. M. Cooper; Can we improve our teaching of religion? by F. M. Kirsch; Catholic education and psychology, by W. D. Commins; Catholic education and science, by K. W. Herzfeld; Catholic education and the social sciences, by F. J. Haas; Catholic education and professional nursing, by Sister M. Olivia; Catholic education and law, by B. F. Brown. Bibliographies.

Reviewed by D. M. O'Connell
America 62:361 Ja 6 '40 130w

"Because the acknowledgment of weaknesses, the appraisal of difficulties and the recognitions of assets is the first step in the solution of any problem, this book is encouraging. In it the writers are concerned with really serious and vital matters which they discuss in an intelligently frank manner." Ruth Byrns
+ Commonweal 31:328 F 2 '40 190w

Reviewed by David Snedden
School & Society 52:78 Ag 3 '40 190w

CATO, pseud. Guilty men; with an American introduction by Philip Wittenberg. 144p $1.50 Stokes [2s 6d Gollancz]

942.08 Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Foreign relations. European war, 1939—Great Britain. Statesmen, British (W) 40-31249

A review of British politics, international relations, and rearmament since 1929, showing how each of the fifteen men the author labels "guilty" failed in his duty to prepare England against Hitler. The men thus accused include Mr Neville Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, Sir Samuel Hoare, Mr Ramsay MacDonald, Lord Baldwin and Lord Halifax.

"Americans may well read the book. We have our own 'guilty men'—some in the Administration perhaps, rather more outside it; we have blunder and blindness in face of a crisis much more clear and imminent than that which advanced on Baldwin's government; and we have our own deep issues being met by evasion. 'Cato's' is a sprightly as well as a bitter record which is worth looking at." Walter Millis
+ Atlantic O '40 550w

"This witty, clever and forceful book, written with a pen dipped in venom but written also with utmost conviction, should be read . . . by every Senator and Congressman in this country, as well as by everybody who is interested in the truth and wants to know why Europe is in the present mess." M. W. Fodor
+ Books p6 S 22 '40 800w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 S 26 '40 70w

"This book does not contain new material, nevertheless it affords a useful reading for Americans who are only too prone to imitate all the most glaring English mistakes. It is a caustic book, well written and dramatic." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 140w

Commonweal 32:515 O 11 '40 60w

"'Guilty Men' is no meretricious and inexpert warming-over of old facts and fables. . . By and large, it is a terrible indictment. The facts are not new. But here are the chief appeasers, and the culprits upon whom must fall most onerously the responsibility for Britain's lack of sufficient army material, fighters and bombers." Lamar Middleton

+ Living Age 359:191 O '40 500w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

Nation 151:249 S 21 '40 600w

New Repub 103:457 S 30 '40 30w

New Yorker 16:82 S 21 '40 50w

"'Cato's' indictment of the politicians . . . makes lively reading and is fortified by many quotations that the speakers would probably wish us to forget. He is unfair in attributing to his victims the misfortunes of the B.E.F. in Flanders, and his personal comments on the men whom he attacks are often in poor taste. But there is, of course, all too much truth in 'Cato's' main contention that successive Ministries were deceived by Hitler and did not, when awakened to realities, apply themselves with vigour to the task of restoring our defences."

+ — Spec 165:44 Jl 12 '40 150w

Time 36:76 S 30 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p346 Jl 20 '40 480w

CATTON, JOSEPH. Behind the scenes of murder. 355p $3 Norton

132 Psychology, Pathological. Murder 40-30898

The author, a psychiatrist, has frequently during the last twenty years been called on as an expert to declare whether a man or woman accused of murder is, or was at the time of the crime, insane. His book of case histories, popularly written, includes also his observations on the various psychological reasons for murder. Index.

"Dr. Joseph Catton is an interesting and authoritative guide. . . His book provides for the layman a satisfying bird's-eye view of medicolegal problems, presented with generous amounts of the material crime fanciers are always craving, inside stuff about famous trials and sketches of criminals amounting, in some instances, to case-histories." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 Ag 25 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 170w

New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 50w

"'Behind the Scenes of Murder' is largely a book of cases. That each one is an example of some particular type of murder or question of causation adds earnest lasting value to criminological narratives that are gripping reading in themselves. . . Perhaps the outstanding feature of this excellent work is in the skill and sincerity with which it first appeals to the normal human interest in criminal archives and then turns that interest to sober thought." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p18 D 1 '40 1050w

"Fascinating stuff."

+ New Yorker 16:63 Ag 10 '40 50w

"Dr. Catton makes no pretense at style: he lets the content provide its own interest. At the end, the reader is left much enriched by factual information and with an awareness of the general and specific problems that are still unsolved." B. D. L.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ja 25 '41 270w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 22 '40 350w

CECIL, LORD DAVID, ed. The Oxford book of Christian verse. 560p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

821.08 Religious poetry. English poetry—Collections [40-27661]

Anthology of Christian devotional poetry, ranging in time from Chaucer, with the exception of a few thirteenth and fourteenth century songs or poems, to T. S. Eliot. The arrangement is chronological with indexes to authors and first lines.

Booklist 37:32 O 1 '40

Bookmark 2:6 Ja '41

"The selection is richly made, with a delicate, demanding taste."

+ Books p22 S 15 '40 420w

"One of the most distinguished books of poetry of the season, and of many seasons." John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 7 '40 250w

"This anthology, admirably chosen, comes opportunely, for its faith, hope, and beauty lift up the heart of the believer and challenge the attention of all to whom great poetry speaks." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 152:369 D '40 430w

Christian Century 57:1555 D 11 '40 210w

"Lord David Cecil had no easy task; but he has shown an exceptionally balanced judgment, and his choice will, I think, be generally approved." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 20 '40 170w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley

Churchman 154:17 D 15 '40 40w

Commonweal 32:495 O 4 '40 60w

"This is a rich anthology of particular value to those nurtured in the Christian tradition and worthy to stand with the other Oxford collections." John Knox

+ J Religion 21:97 Ja '41 120w

"Made by Lord David Cecil, this is of course an excellent anthology. Some of the poems are more representative than good, but it is right that we should have some reminders of the many religiously arid stretches in the road from the Middle Ages to the present day." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 22 '40 250w

Reviewed by Sherman Conrad

Nation 151:278 S 28 '40 600w

New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 30w

"The anthology contains nothing by Bishop King, whose Exequy is one of the loveliest Christian poems. I wish that Lord David had included a few notes, and modernised the spelling less drastically. . . But the book aims, I expect, rather at converting Christians to poetry than at converting poetry-lovers to Christianity. I am not qualified to judge the editor's erudition, but I may venture to applaud gratefully the sureness of his taste." Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:730 Je 8 '40 1650w

New Yorker 16:84 S 21 '40 90w

Spec 164:812 Je 14 '40 1000w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 11 '40 400w

"Even with the limitations imposed upon his choice in an anthology devoted exclusively to Christian verse Lord David's task as editor, in deciding what to include, cannot have been easy, and he is to be congratulated in erring, if at all, rather on the side of strictness than laxity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p338 Jl 13 '40 2650w

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, and MORIARTY, HENRY CURRAN, eds. The bedside book of famous British stories; with an introd. by Bliss Perry. 1233p $3 Random house

(W) 40-13734

"[Eighty] stories by the best British authors from Chaucer to the present day. There are stories of London, past and present, of the

CECIL (sĕs'ĭl)

CERF, B. A., and MORIARTY, H. C., eds.
—Continued
English, Scotch and Irish countryside, of the farthest-flung reaches of the British Empire. There are love stories, detective stories, ghost stories, and there are stories of the sea." (Publisher's note) Biographical notes.

Booklist 37:12 S '40

"While not all are widely famous, I have noted only two names that were unfamiliar to me. For the most part, the writers included were more or less unavoidable choices, and their stories are their best known ones. The purpose of the anthology, I take it, was to assemble stories which many possible readers already know they like. This useful purpose is carried out very well, and I expect a large and deserved success of this second bedside book."
+ Books p14 Jl 21 '40 270w

"For the average reader the menu is pleasantly varied. Love, adventure, crime, sea and ghost stories sort well with the publishers' earlier companion volume of American stories. But aside from their entertainment quotient, these tales throw an interpretive light on contemporary thought. More than that the collection is a record of individual minds." J. C. Skinner
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 27 '40 700w
Christian Century 57:977 Ag 7 '40 70w

"It seems as if every British prose writer of note of the last hundred years is represented, together with William Butler Yeats, James Stephens, James Joyce and Liam O'Flaherty, and a few others who shouldn't mind the national label under which they here appear. Though physically cumbersome for the average bedside, this new volume would make a compact addition to many a private library." Edward Skillin, Jr.
+ Commonweal 32:312 Ag 2 '40 550w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 50w

CHACE, LYNWOOD M. Look at life! [224p] il $3.50 Knopf

779 Photography of animals 40-31173

Collection of photographs disclosing the lives of small American wild animals, birds, and insects. Each one has a short paragraph, giving some facts about the illustration.

"Any one who has ever known the fascination of the out-of-doors, will find pleasure in this book. And after he has turned the leaves to his favorite pictures again and again, he is likely to seek the open fields to look at life, himself." E. W. Teale
+ Books p6 S 15 '40 380w
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 19 '40 120w

"The pictures are very well taken technically and many of them are beautiful, especially if you don't think unnaturally close examinations of bugs and reptiles and eggs are sometimes gruesome. The most unusual accomplishment is managing to get some of the wild subjects posed without being dead."
+ Commonweal 32:474 S 27 '40 70w

"It is a beautiful and extraordinary collection, drawing curtains for a moment upon natural life that is quite close to us but in general almost unknown."
+ N Y Times p9 S 15 '40 480w

"The studies of the family of raccoons and of the young foxes should prove especially engaging, while the photograph of the chimney swifts captures the personality of that bird as it has never perhaps been caught before by the camera. But the book as a whole, like so many popularizations of natural history, suffers from not knowing really what it is driving at. It looks at life with too random an eye, like the museum of a generation ago." C. O., Jr.
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:22 D 28 '40 210w

CHAFFEE, MRS GRACE (EARHART). Modern marriage. See Jung, M., ed.

CHAKHOTIN, SERGEI. The rape of the masses; the psychology of totalitarian political propaganda; tr. by E. W. Dickes. 310p $3 Alliance bk. [7s 6d Routledge]

301.1523 Propaganda. Dictators. Social psychology 40-35183

"A study of the technique of mass political propaganda. . . The author, apparently a pupil of Pavlov and at one time a collaborator with him, finds a principal clue to contemporary social psychology in general, and to the psychology of propaganda in the totalitarian State in particular, in the theory of conditioned reflexes. . . The book does not attempt to analyse in detail the technique of the actual propagandist policies of the dictatorships. It states a case for the application of Pavlov's theory to the study of political propaganda; then, after a review of the history of propaganda, from the monster meetings at Byzantium to the symbols of the French Revolution, proceeds to discuss propagandist aim and method in Nazi Germany and, to a lesser extent, in Bolshevist Russia and Fascist Italy." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by B. J. Stern
Ann Am Acad 213:200 Ja '41 600w

Reviewed by R. E. K. Pemberton
Canadian Forum 20:156 Ag '40 360w

"Although this work is written in a scientific jargon that most laymen will find difficult, it is a fine exposition of the technique of dictators." L. B. Bloch
+ Living Age 359:188 O '40 100w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Nation 151:342 O 12 '40 250w

"Much of what Mr. Chakotin says has been said before. Some has been waiting to be said. It is a pity that it couldn't have been done in a more readable way." Shepard Stone
+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 5 '41 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p238 My 18 '40 850w

CHALLIS, GEORGE, pseud. Golden knight [il. by Steele Savage]. reprint 350p $2 Greystone

Richard I, king of England—Fiction (W) 40-7854

"A stirring tale of Richard the Lion-heart and the troubadour Blondel. . . In this juvenile edition of a 1936 book [Book Review Digest, 1937], there are some omissions and changes. Cruelty, true of the torture chambers of that period, still remains to hinder the book's use with more sensitive readers. Attractive decorations and illustrations by Steele Savage have been added." Library J

"The story will keep almost any older person and practically every boy reading straight through without stopping; it is a juvenile only as 'Ivanhoe' is, and like that most depends for its personal appeal upon high vitality, feats of physical prowess, and unabashed romance. It has the same robust fun, but more of it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 My 5 '40 380w

"Readers fourteen to seventeen and older who like historical adventures should enjoy the chivalrous daring of these two famous friends." Alice Martin
+ — Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 110w

CHALMERS, BRUCE. The physical examination of metals; v 1, Optical methods. 181p il $4 Longmans [14s Arnold, E. & co]

669 Metallography. Light (40-9944)

"As the author states in his preface 'certain physical methods of examining metals have become such ordinary part of the metallurgist's technique that they have come to be regarded as metallurgical rather than physical methods.' However, there are still a great number of physical methods being explored and investigated, which the metallurgist with little training in physics is hardly prepared to use. For these people, this book has been destined.

Geometrical optics, interference, diffraction, polarization and light-sources are discussed. These latter lead to spectrographic analysis and are dealt with in five chapters in simple language and illustrated with numerous clear sketches." Chem & Met Eng

---

"A useful service has been performed in assembling these physical methods, some of which have appeared only in original papers. But it must be admitted that, in spite of the elementary approach, the reader, especially if he is a practical metallurgist, will find himself in a state of confusion largely on account of a somewhat disjointed organization of the subject matter."

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:166 F 25 '40 650w

"This little book offers a well rounded and clear picture of the optical methods available for the investigation of metals. This has been done so successfully that one can but look forward to a second volume dealing with other physical methods used in the metallurgical field." G. L. Clark

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:133 F '40 250w

"One need not be an atomic physicist to be able to read the book. A layman or the average scientist can profit considerably by studying this volume and applying the fundamental concepts of light to his own problems so as to extend his particular branch of science. The author points the way for the use of many of these methods in practice. The book is written systematically in a clear and concise manner and is well indexed. Dr. Chalmers has accomplished a good job and is to be congratulated." R. L. Dowdell

+ J Phys Chem 44:831 Je '40 360w

Nature 145:660 Ap 27 '40 260w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:24 Ap '40

"While the present book is limited to a single experimental field, it is very well written, it is useful and interesting, and thus it will be taken as a welcome and unique addition to scientific literature." R. F. Mehl

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:326 O '40 550w

CHALMERS, PATRICK REGINALD. Last muster; a selection from the drawings of Cecil Aldin; with accompanying text. 127p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Eyre]

828 Dogs—Legends and stories. Dogs—Pictures, illustrations, etc. [40-11171]

"Here is the last offering of hitherto unpublished dog studies by the English artist, Cecil Aldin. Unusual and intensely interesting verselets and short stories by Mr. Chalmers, who accompanied the artist in other publishing forays, provide the reading matter." Boston Transcript

---

Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 100w

"It was a happy inspiration on their part to call upon Mr. Patrick Chalmers, who collaborated often enough with Aldin in his lifetime, to collaborate once more with him, by means of short stories and verses, after his death. All the old skill and humour is to be found in the drawings, and the stories are very good reading, notably perhaps 'Silas (The dog who used his head).' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup sup xiv N 18 '39 70w

CHAMBERLAIN, JOHN, 1554?-1628. Letters; ed. with an introd. by Norman Egbert McClure. (Memoirs of the Am. philosophical soc) 2v il $7.50 Am. philosophical soc.

942.055 Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Great Britain—History—James I, 1603-1625. Great Britain—Social life and customs 40-5508

"John Chamberlain was a well-to-do Londoner whose life-span coincided almost exactly with the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. . . Lacking personal ambition, he was a cool and dispassionate observer of the society of his day. He had many acquaintances among the lesser aristocracy and the business men of London, and through them he collected gossip about the court, the government, and the town. This gossip he passed on to two friends in the diplomatic service, Sir Ralph Winwood and Sir Dudley Carleton. The long series of letters to these men, covering the period 1597-1627, gives us a good idea of the interests and ideas of a well-educated, middle-class Englishman of the early seventeenth century." Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Hartley Simpson

Am Hist R 46:391 Ja '41 700w

Reviewed by J. R. Strayer

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 3 '40 480w

"Chamberlain is in the first class of letter writers, for he was interested in everyone; and he has a terse, caustic, epigrammatic style. He was, by choice and temperament, an onlooker, seldom profoundly stirred by events, but always fascinated. His letters are the best footnotes to history in a great age, and are well known to every student of the Elizabethan and Jacobean period. Hitherto no complete edition has been available."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p342 Jl 13 '40 1250w

"Mr. McClure's editing of the letters appears well done. . . I wish the editor had chosen to put the text into modern spelling. The old spelling adds little and frightens away laymen. The footnotes are good but repetitious, perhaps necessarily so. The introduction deals with Chamberlain and is written with understanding and restraint." Wallace Notestein

+ Yale R n s 30:188 autumn '40 1450w

CHAMBERLAIN, JOHN, 1903-. The American stakes. 320p $2.75 Carrick

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. —Economic policy (W) 40-27206

Series of rewritten articles, most of them previously published in magazine form. The chapters are devoted to current problems, political and economic, which are confronting the United States at the present time. Among the problems discussed are: isolationists; the third term; consumers' cooperatives; and unemployed youth. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Landman

Ann Am Acad 211:212 S '40 470w

Booklist 36:276 Mr 15 '40

Bookmark p23 N '40

"Mr. Chamberlain belongs to a generation which is preoccupied with thoughts about politics and economics, to the considerable exclusion of esthetic, sporting, and other concerns, as perhaps no generation of Americans has been since 1775. If only because they are under forty, the near future of our country lies in their hands, and the significance of Mr. Chamberlain's book is that it expresses, generally speaking, the attitude of the thinking members of his generation to the contemporary world." Lewis Galantiere

+ Books p6 Mr 24 '40 2300w

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 21 '40 320w

"All in all, Mr. Chamberlain has triumphed over his background and written a reasonable, interesting book. There are extremely penetrating chapters on the Democratic Party, FDR and LaGuardia, and US foreign policy. In fact, it ill behooves us to be so patronizing. We sincerely hope Mr. Chamberlain keeps up the good work and converts all the remaining Marxists to at least partial sanity." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 31:496 Mr 29 '40 460w

Foreign Affairs 18:752 Jl '40 40w

Reviewed by Quincy Howe

Forum 103:264 My '40 650w

CHAMBERLAIN, JOHN, 1903-.—Continued
"The style is journalistic. The book should interest those who watch contemporary politics and current affairs." F. L. D. Goodrich
Library J 65:256 Mr 15 '40 130w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch
Living Age 358:289 My '40 500w

Reviewed by I. F. Stone
Nation 150:395 Mr 23 '40 1400w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 102:477 Ap 8 '40 2450w

"The book might be described as a job of ground-clearing. Mr. Chamberlain gets some tall trees, mostly afflicted with the chestnut blight or the Dutch elm disease, out of the way, in a really admirable attempt to let us see the woods. An old and well-worn adjective will have to be used to describe the effect, it is stimulating." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p2 Mr 17 '40 1000w

"This octet of essays, discussing our political present and possible political future, dares to be unmelodramatic. Worse, it dares to be clear. Still worse, it dares to be good-tempered. Mr. Chamberlain stands guilty of all the sins decried by strict evangelists of Left and Right: meliorism, optimism, compromise-ism, reformism. He refuses to deal only in fatalities and he doesn't hate half enough those who disagree with him. Mark you, he hath not a lean and hungry look. Such men are dangerous." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:105 Mr 16 '40 650w
Pratt p22 Autumn '40

"Mr. Chamberlain has not pretended to write a profound treatise, but simply a livre de circonstance. Some will admire his uncommon ability in stating his views clearly more than the views themselves. He has a gift for homely and forceful phrases. On occasion the rapid sweep of his style makes it difficult for the reader to spot gaps in the reasoning, to note that most of the 'economists' who are cited are not eminent, and to see that some of the statistics are insufficiently digested." Lindsay Rogers
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:5 Ap 6 '40 2650w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 27 '40 900w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
Survey G 29:298 My '40 300w
Time 35:72 Ap 1 '40 460w
Wis Lib Bul 36:95 My '40

Reviewed by M. W. Childs
Yale R n s 29:812 summer '40 700w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Nantucket; a camera impression. (Am. landmarks ser) 73p il $1.25 Hastings house

917.449 Nantucket, Massachusetts—Description 39-24399

Photographic impressions of Nantucket, each photograph accompanied by a short descriptive note.

+ Books p12 Jl 7 '40 90w

"The appearance of another book by Samuel Chamberlain is always a cause for rejoicing by lovers of the New England scene. 'Nantucket,' his latest, is a fit companion to those others which have preceded it." H. B. Kane
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 23 '39 390w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. New England doorways. 101p il $2 Hastings house

729.38 Doorways. Architecture, Domestic—New England 40-4414

"More than 200 captioned photographs of highly individual 'carpenter classic' doorways, including the best of Bulfinch and McIntyre." New Yorker

Booklist 36:366 My 15 '40
Books p13 Je 30 '40 100w

"New England's doorways are famous. Mr. Chamberlain's beautiful photographs do them full justice, and together with his brief but illuminating interpretations constitute a valuable addition to our historical records. What Edward Weston is doing for the Far West, Samuel Chamberlain is doing for New England —and in some quarters this is considered high praise indeed." H. B. Kane
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 17 '40 90w

"Lovely stuff."
+ New Yorker 15:72 Ja 20 '40 20w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Old Marblehead; a camera impression. (Am. landmarks ser) 73p $1.25 Hastings house

917.445 Marblehead, Massachusetts—Description 40-13104

Brief text and many photographs showing exteriors and interiors of Marblehead houses and churches, winter and summer street and waterfront scenes, and boats of all sizes.

Booklist 37:15 S '40

Reviewed by H. B. Kane
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 170w

"Mr Chamberlain has an understanding eye for architecture, and this constitutes one of the great merits of his photographs. Yet one would hesitate to say that these pictures are strictly architectural studies. Mr Chamberlain aims to capture the beauty or individuality of a building in its setting and it is the composite scene rather than the house or church in itself that he brings before the reader. . . But with his natural sympathy with architectural beauty, he manages to let the buildings speak for themselves, and where there is particularly noted detail, as of a doorway, hall, fireplace or even wallpaper, he pauses to provide a picture of it."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 320w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Portsmouth, New Hampshire; a camera impression. (Am. landmarks ser) 73p $1.25 Hastings house

917.426 Portsmouth, New Hampshire—Description 40-14453

Photographs of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, showing its colonial houses and churches, with some doorways and interior views. Short explanatory descriptive notes accompany the photographs.

Booklist 37:15 S '40

Reviewed by H. B. Kane
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 17 '40 170w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 320w

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM HENRY. The confessions of an individualist. 320p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27480

Autobiography of the Christian Science Monitor correspondent whose dispatches for the last fifteen years have been from Russia and Japan, and who recently represented the same paper in Paris. He has been an individualist in his viewpoints since childhood, "an earnest freethinker in a conservative Quaker college [Haverford], a classicist in a mechanical age, a pacifist during the World War, a sympathizer with bolshevism when that very imperfectly understood word was utterly anathema." Index.

Atlantic Jl '40 190w
Booklist 36:381 Je 1 '40

Reviewed by V. M. Dean
Books p5 Je 2 '40 1200w

"The author's analysis of the Far Eastern situation is brilliant and penetrating, and is based upon careful, intelligent study of personalities and facts. Some conclusions—such as the belief that China cannot dislodge her unwelcome visitor—will not be palatable to sentimentalists but they are buttressed by solid reasoning. As in Russia, Chamberlin was a keen observer of movements and trends, and his prime intent is to interpret events in a broad, long term sense rather than as a day by day reporter of incidents. . . A second reading of 'The Confessions of an Individualist' brings to the front a high degree of literary skill that is perhaps overlooked at first because of the reader's interest in what the author has to say." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 900w

"This book serves excellently as a background of journalistic achievement familiar to all. It is also a sane appraisal of the contemporary political world by a widely experienced and unusually privileged traveler, not willing to keep his eyes closed, his mouth shut, or his pen idle."

+ Cath World 151:638 Ag '40 240w

"William Henry Chamberlin [is] not as colorful as Gunther nor as successful in collecting news 'beats' as Stowe nor as pontifical as Edgar Mowrer, yet when one reads a dispatch in the Christian Science Monitor carrying Chamberlin's byline one can be sure of getting the relevant facts as seen through the lenses of a clear, balanced and studious mind. . . As the title of this autobiography indicates, Mr. Chamberlin believes that his career has acquired its peculiar qualities from his undeviating loyalty to the philosophy and outlook of a liberal individualist whose judgments more often than not were out of accord with those of the crowd or of the time. His record offers plenty of substantiation for this thesis." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 57:769 Je 12 '40 800w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 20 '40 550w

Foreign Affairs 19:252 O '40 40w

"Every young man who wants to go into newspaper work should read it and learn from it that real journalism is not just newsgathering, and that there is still a place for the writer of opinion." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 65:451 My 15 '40 340w

Nation 151:199 S 7 '40 50w

New Repub 102:866 Je 24 '40 60w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 Je 9 '40 1550w

"Despite the come-on title, the book is completely unsensational. . . A kind of 'Personal History' without the personal history, since ideas have been substituted for people, this book is drier (and also less important) than Mr. Sheean's, but it's unquestionably a part of the intellectual testimony of our time. I found it interesting and I found Mr. Chamberlin's mind honest and attractive." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 16:91 My 25 '40 220w

Reviewed by H. W. Nevinson

Spec 165:646 D 13 '40 550w

"Mr. Chamberlin is an informed and clear-thinking newspaperman, who sets forth his opinions in direct and challenging statement. 'The Confessions of an Individualist,' as a combination of memoirs and personal credo, is as informal as a conversational chat. It is excellent autobiography and, for the period of 18 years since 1922, it is first-hand reporting, of a capable and conscientious sort, of some of the major political and social developments of our time."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 1700w

"Among the many volumes of reminiscences published in recent years by foreign correspondents of the American Press, Mr. Chamberlin's stands out by reason of certain distinctive qualities. Its author is more than a capable descriptive reporter. He is a scholar and a thinker as well. . . As the narrative proceeds, the reader feels a growing confidence in his keenness of observation, his fairmindedness, and his sanity of judgment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 21 '40 750w

CHAMBERS, DANA, pseud. See Leffingwell, A.

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Bright star of danger. 273p $2 Doubleday

40-5218

Mystery and adventure at sea and in a criminals' hideout in southern waters.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Ja 21 '40 90w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 40w

"There is very little mystery in this story, except in the opening chapters, but there are thrills enough to satisfy any armchair adventurer." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 Ja 21 '40 230w

Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 20 '40 40w

CHAMBERS, WHITMAN. Dry Tortugas. 271p $2 Doubleday

40-30394

Murder mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 S 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 30w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

N Y Times p16 S 1 '40 190w

"Subversive plotsters, bibulous comic relief, cold blooded Cuban villain, and other double-crossing characters, give yarn considerable movement. Slap-bang."

Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 7 '40 40w

CHAMBERS'S technical dictionary; comprising terms used in pure and applied science: medicine: the chief manufacturing industries: engineering: construction: the mechanic trades; with definitions by recognized authorities; ed. by C. F. Tweney and L. E. C. Hughes. 957p $5 Macmillan [15s Chambers]

603 Technology—Dictionaries 40-30762

"The aim has been 'to present a full and representative cross-section of the language of science and technology today,' and, for instance, sufficient attention seems to have been paid to the terminology of psychoanalysis, cinematography, and printing—to mention only three subjects among the hundred and more dealt with. . . The explanations are brief but pithy." Manchester Guardian

"The book is well printed, entries stand out so that they are easily found, errors are very rare, the binding is good and the volume is of a handy size. It would be of use to any student of science." R. L. Tichenor

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:2890 O '40 180w

Booklist 37:112 N 15 '40

Boston Transcript p1 S 14 '40 60w

"A dictionary, like a handbook, should be used for some time before a critical review can be attempted. However, to follow that course in the present case would unnecessarily delay the recommendation that those who have difficulty in finding technical words and terms in the ordinary dictionary will find here a compilation of the greatest help. . . The book is well printed on good paper, suitably bound, and, notwithstanding its more than 900 pages, opens well and is easy to handle. It is difficult to think any reader could well forego ready access to this volume."

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:777 S 10 '40 460w

Chem & Met Eng 47:807 N '40 170w

+ Manchester Guardian p6 Ag 30 '40 140w

CHAMBRUN, RENE, comte de. I saw France fall; will she rise again? 216p $2.50 Morrow

940.548 European war, 1939—Personal narratives. European war, 1939—France. France—Politics and government
(W) 40-27723

The author is a French officer who saw service both at the front and behind the lines where his political connections—he is the son-in-law of Pierre Laval—enabled him to see more than the usual soldier. His book records his personal experiences and his conclusions as to why France fell.

Atlantic N '40 330w

Booklist 37:87 N 1 '40

"Here is legend in the making. . . Why did France fall? Socialists, Communists, workers, pacifists, politicians, Nazi agents and the German military machine share the blame, according to this eyewitness. But the real trouble, he reports, was something very like what used to be called the virtues of republican democracy. . . The chief agent of evil in this legend is, of course, the Front Populaire. . . His story of his actual experiences is fast-paced, light in touch and full of color. The legend which is its setting is something else. . . This is a Nazi victory beside which the taking of Paris was a mere skirmish." Joseph Barnes

Books p5 O 20 '40 550w

Discussion by G. Z. Stone
Books p41 N 10 '40 400w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 O 18 '40 200w

"All this is told with amazing vividness and sensitivity by one of the actors who played his part in the biggest drama the world has ever witnessed. All these pages are excellent, deeply moving, and often extremely revealing, and, it must be admitted, absolutely objective." Pierre Lazoneff

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:5 N 7 '40 700w

"Chambrun is committed to the Pétain government. He is a remote descendant of Lafayette; but he is also the son-in-law of Pierre Laval, that sturdy son of the soil who by the sweat of his honest brow rose from a petty Socialist politician to a multimillionaire. His bias is unmistakable, but it is artfully camouflaged. A fair sample of his method is his reference to the Salengro case. It is so worded that, in a literal sense, it is true: Salengro was accused of desertion. What Chambrun fails to add is that the charge was proved baseless by a military commission. Salengro was hounded to death with a palpable calumny, by men who were not merely unscrupulous but in true Nazi fashion sadistic as well. Such suppressio veri et suggestio falsi is more in harmony with the cleverness of Laval than with the naive chivalry of Lafayette." Albert Guerard

Nation 151:367 O 19 '40 500w

"All those who want to read a clear first-hand account of what happened in France between the outbreak of the war and the collapse of the army and the regime will find it in Captain René de Chambrun's book 'I Saw France Fall.' His claim to have seen it all is no overstatement. From beginning to end he writes of what he knew of his own personal knowledge and at the same time the personal pronoun and critical comment are both kept strictly under control." P. J. Philip

+ N Y Times p9 O 27 '40 850w

New Yorker 16:111 O 19 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 20 '40 1000w

Reviewed by H. B. Kranz
Sat R of Lit 23:13 O 26 '40 320w

"Where Captain de Chambrun describes his war experiences, he writes like a gallant patriot and a humane gentleman, a worthy descendant of his remote ancestor Lafayette. Unfortunately, however, he does not stop with excellent and vivid firsthand narrative of the war. . . The soldier strays into the field of political analysis and appraisal. And he surveys the scene with the eyes of the loyal and devoted son-in-law of Pierre Laval. The villains of the piece to him are the men of the Popular Front, the men who unleashed class warfare, who nullified the efforts of national defense, who rejected—of all things—the advice of Pétain and Weygand for an offensive campaign." Leo Gershoy

+ — Yale R n s 30:403 winter '41 110w

CHAMIER, JACQUES DANIEL. Dubious tale of the diamond necklace. 294p il $4.50 Longmans [12s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

B or 92 Diamond necklace affair. Rohan-Guémené, Louis René Edouard, prince de. Marie Antoinette, consort of Louis XVI, king of France. La Motte, Jeanne de Saint-Rémy de Valois, comtesse de [40-1344]

Another attempt to retell the story of the affair of the Queen's necklace—which was one of the mysterious preludes to the French revolution—and to work out some solution of its mystery.

"This solution is absorbingly interesting and completely unsatisfactory; so was that of Dumas, and so will be the next, and the next. For as long as dubious doings in high places continue to interest the general reader, as long as the mysteries of human conduct continue to fascinate the student of mankind, so long romance and history—sometimes, as here, joining forces—will go on trying to straighten out the incredible muddle of the diamond necklace." M. L. Becker

Books p7 Jl 9 '39 490w

Reviewed by R. A. Chace
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 5 '39 290w

"Mr. Chamier must be congratulated on his cleverness. He is an excellent pleader and can make a perfectly splendid mountain out of a molehill." Herbert Gorman

N Y Times p35 D 10 '39 1050w

"This book is an exercise in deductive logic and not primarily history. It simply employs what history has so munificently provided, and applies to history's plot the dissective method fashionable in detective stories. You can, of course, take it as authoritative exposition of a historical problem, if it seems to you to vanquish all the difficulties, but its author is far too wise to claim for it any such importance. He has frankly enjoyed exercising his own ingenuity, and presents the results of his cleverness as a possible but not necessarily an exact explanation of what really happened." C. D. Abbott

Sat R of Lit 20:6 Jl 29 '39 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p220 Ap 15 '39 500w

CHAMIER, JACQUES DANIEL. A world to make; a survey of post-war England. 327p $4.50 Longmans [12s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

914.2 Great Britain—Civilization [40-12699]

Survey of the spiritual and industrial resources of England during the last twenty years, in which the author studies the possibilities for a future development of the country. He maintains that "they will escape 'barbarism,' or the repressions of a totalitarian regime, yet not fall into 'decadence,' the near-anarchy wherein the common good lacks power to control the impulses of the people." (Survey G) Index.

"To a great charm of style and ironic good humor, Daniel Chamier adds a kind of Socratic method of questioning everything, and comes out with a good deal of common sense hopefulness about the English people and democracy." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 29:355 Je '40 350w

"As a Tract for the Times Mr. Chamier's book has two principal enticements. In so far as it is a survey of present tendencies, opinions, social services and trade and industry the choice of documents and figures is made with excellent discretion. This is the first attraction. The second attraction lies in the personal element, the author's point of view, which is well assimilated with his informative matter. Mr. Chamier shows a humane, rather fatherly solicitude for mankind, and confesses to a number of honest prejudices."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p60 F 3 '40 600w

CHAMPION, PAUL V. Birdhouses. 96p il $1.25 Bruce pub.
598.2 Bird houses (W) 39-29487

Step-by-step instructions for building birdhouses for different kinds of birds. The houses described are made from easily procurable materials: lemon and orange crates, flower pots, etc. Index.

Booklist 36:194 Ja 15 '40

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson
Library J 65:260 Mr 15 '40 60w
Wis Lib Bul 36:64 Ap '40

CHAND, GYAN. India's teeming millions. 374p $3.75 Norton [12s 6d Allen, G]
312.0954 India—Population. India—Economic conditions [39-25974]

Study of the population of India, by the head of the department of economics, Patna College, Patna University. Partial contents: The general theory; Growth of population; Births and deaths; The balance of births and deaths; Economic outlook; Is India overpopulated? Birth control. Index.

Foreign Affairs 18:761 Jl '40 30w

"In spite of its all too expressive title, this book is well worth reading. Compare it with the books written in English by Indians thirty years ago and you will recognise how rapidly the new India has advanced to intellectual maturity. . . The book is full of matter and good sense and the outlook is very modern. There is much hope for India if teaching of this class is common in her lecture-halls." J. T. Gwynn
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '39 460w

"Professor Chand gives, on the whole, a sensible and lucid explanation of what is meant—or may be meant—by saying that the population factor is a cause of economic distress or a barrier to economic progress. When, however, he argues that, because during the last sixty years the population of India has increased more slowly than the population of Europe, therefore the Indians are not a specially 'prolific' people and over-population cannot be a major cause of poverty, his reasoning becomes obscure. . . But even if Professor Chand's emotions have influenced his judgment of the future, his scrupulous fairness and wise caution in handling facts and figures deserve a tribute." T. H. Marshall
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:286 Ag 19 '39 650w

CHANDLER, RAYMOND. Farewell, my lovely. 275p $2 Knopf 40-14535

Detective story.

"All set to sneer loftily at another tough item, billed as 'a shocking book—and a thrilling one,' this department soon succumbed to what struck us as the real thing in wickedness and the best hard-boiled mystery in ages. . . Grade A." Will Cuppy
+ Books p25 O 6 '40 200w

" 'Farewell My Lovely' is a favourable specimen of its class. The writing is often picturesque and vivid, though often, too, incomprehensible to the mere Englishman, the plot is clever and well constructed, and Mr. Chandler does try to give some semblance of humanity even to his most brutal characters." E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p7 D 10 '40 150w

"Mr. Chandler is a neat craftsman and writes like a breeze. A good time will be had by all."
+ New Repub 103:482 O 7 '40 50w

"The story's ever-present theme is police corruption, seen in a murky variety. And several kinds of dreadfulness are handled with a grisly skill." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p29 N 17 '40 210w

"Loose-jointed in spots, but better than average."
+ — New Yorker 16:80 O 5 '40 60w

"Crooked Cal. cops psychic birds of prey, lush ladies, and gambling magnates make life torrid for practically indestructible sleuth. Swift and savage."
Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 50w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake
Spec 165:558 N 22 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 140w

CHANDRUANG, KUMUT. My boyhood in Siam. 226p $2 Day
B or 92 Siam—Social life and customs (W) 40-27837

The author, a twenty-four-year-old native of Siam, who is one of the few Siamese students in the United States, describes his childhood and youth in his own country.

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

"This is a book for real Americans who, loving their own country, rejoice to discover that other peoples are like themselves, admirable and not so admirable, but always human. The reader lays it down feeling that he has made a new and charming acquaintance." P. W. Harrison
+ Books p26 N 17 '40 320w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p11 N 19 '40 400w

"A book on Siam is of special interest at present because that part of the world is so much in the news. I feel that both adult and adolescent readers will enjoy the book." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 200w

"This is apparently the first book about Siam (Thailand) to be written in English by a Siamese without the aid of a professional ghost. It is a naive story, clumsy in the use of our alien language, but none the less it portrays, at times divertingly, the pleasure and pathos of life in an upper-class Siamese home."
Nation 152:108 Ja 25 '41 110w

"A quaint directness and naïveté give real charm, as well as an unusualness, to this book of Siamese memories."
+ N Y Times p9 N 17 '40 500w

"A likable and colorful book, in which the author manages to be rather witty at the expense of his own ingenuousness."
+ New Yorker 16:101 N 16 '40 80w

"For older children who are delighted by strange lands, 'My Boyhood in Siam' should prove interesting and illuminating. . . Mr. Chandruang writes like an American. With quiet humor he reveals the too-little known customs of Siam, the nation now known as Thailand." F. G. Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 N 16 '40 60w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 3 '41 1050w

CHANSLOR, TORREY. Our first murder. 314p $2 Stokes 40-13519

Detective story.

"Quaint but funny." Will Cuppy
Books p10 Je 23 '40 150w

"The Misses Beagle (what a name for detectives!) are charming, especially Lutie, who has stepped up to the head of the list of my favorite detectives. These two women greatly enhance what would be, anyway, a very neat case of hidden identity." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 80w

CHANSLOR, TORREY—Continued

"The final explanation of what actually happened and of how Lutie arrived at the correct solution of the problem is a little too long, but one can forgive that for the privilege of meeting two such delightful spinsters as Amanda and Lutie." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 23 '40 200w

"Has its moments, but amiable ditherings of the three elderly ladies get a little bit tiresome. Flighty."

— + Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 29 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

CHAPIN, HENRY. West walking Yankee. 256p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

811 Frontier and pioneer life—Poetry 40-30793

A long, narrative poem in which the author celebrates the deeds—and the spirit—of the westward moving pioneers of America from the time of the Elizabethan voyages to the days of the California gold rush.

"This 'narrative poem of the American frontier,' as its subtitle describes it, deserves warm praise for both conception and execution. There is nothing poetry needs more today than to return to saga- or ballad-making, the celebration of that which is memorable in history."

+ Atlantic N '40 290w

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"The material is interesting and well-organized, and it took ten years to prepare the book, but the poetry is so close to the level of prose in its rhythms that there is no pleasure for the ear; the reader's satisfaction will be in the story." John Holmes

+ — Boston Transcript p11 S 23 '40 70w

" 'West Walking Yankee' is not an epic. In part this is the poet's fault, for though he has noted the motives that impelled the pioneers westward, he has not dramatized them. But in part, it must be admitted, failure is implicit in the material. It contains too many anticlimaxes." J. P. Bishop

Nation 151:339 O 12 '40 460w

"On the whole, it is a narrative that needed to be written, and probably in this form. Even if the verse could at times be more vivid, Mr Chapin has produced a volume of unusual literary craftsmanship in bringing to life this stirring panorama in the development of this country. A map would be of considerable assistance in tracing the wanderings of these courageous souls from the pages of history." A. M. J.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e D 29 '40 900w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 30:383 winter '41 270w

CHAPMAN, CHANLER ARMSTRONG. The wrong attitude; a bad boy at a good school. 153p il $1.50 Putnam

B or 92 Concord, New Hampshire. St Paul's school 40-13879

Reminiscences of the author's four years at a New England boarding school.

"For all its limitation, this piece of recollection is almost perfect in its discernment. As an editor I take pleasure in sentences so alive and accurate." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic S '40 250w

"This little book . . . gives a discriminating and convincing picture of men and boys as they dealt with each other in the school. Here are subtle humor and irony, gentle for the most part, but nippy enough for those who prefer sourballs to nougats." Oscar McPherson

+ Books p11 Ag 25 '40 400w

Nation 151:373 O 19 '40 130w

"Chanler Chapman's book will not do. It is all right as far as it goes, but it goes such a short way. He may suggest what a silly idea it is to want to be a Christian Gentleman, but that is just what he himself has become. And no Christian Gentleman can write the real thing on boarding school. How good that real thing may be is italicized by the knowledge of how important its subject already is." Dunstan Thompson

— + New Repub 103:360 S 9 '40 550w

Reviewed by Drake DeKay

N Y Times p2 Ag 18 '40 750w

CHAPMAN, JOHN MARTIN, and others. Commercial banks and consumer instalment credit. 318p $3 Nat. bur. of economic research

332.7 Banks and banking. Instalment plan 40-12556

The third volume in a series of studies in consumer instalment financing, made with funds supplied by the Association of Reserve city bankers and the Rockefeller foundation. The present volume is a study of commercial banks as agencies of consumer instalment credit. Index.

Reviewed by J. G. Smith

Am Econ R 30:887 D '40 850w

"This study and the series of which it is a part illustrate the value of institutional research. The busy reader will find the pertinent facts well summarized in the first twenty pages. Although the words 'Consumer Instalment Credit' appear in the title, the book is better classified as an addition to the literature of banking practice than to consumer economics." L. J. Gordon

+ — Ann Am Acad 212:262 N '40 550w

CHAPMAN, MARISTAN, pseud. of MARY and STANTON CHAPMAN. Glen Hazard cowboys; il. by James McKell. 260p $2 Appleton-Century

40-4719

The Glen Hazard troop make amends for the automobile accident caused by their dog, Rock Bottom, by driving the unfortunate victims to their Arizona ranch and helping with the work after the arrival.

"As usual, the speech of the Tennessee mountains helps to make dialogue easy to the ear and removes it from the commonplace. Life will be fearfully dull to Glen Hazard young folks when they grow up and settle; they have not had a quiet minute since the Chapman combination spotted them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 14 '40 310w

Reviewed by Ruth Page

Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 20w

"This story, a little slow in working up to the main excitement, does not have quite the same immediate punch as some of its predecessors, but there is still the same savor of humor, and the writing is as picturesque and effective as ever." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 My 26 '40 270w

CHAPMAN, MARISTAN, pseud. of MARY and STANTON CHAPMAN. Mill Creek mystery; il. by Edward Shenton. 233p $2 Appleton-Century

40-30534

Mystery story for young readers.

"Though the girls of these later Glen Hazard stories are less carefully developed than the boys of the first stories, they are nevertheless real individuals. As always, the authors are restrained and skillful in the matter of dialect, their use of the mountain speech giving flavor to the dialogue without confusing the young reader." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 26 '41 360w

"Pleasant inglenook reading for rainy days." Gladys Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 23:25 N 16 '40 30w

CHAPMAN, PERCY ADDISON. The spirit of Molière; an interpretation; ed. by Jean-Albert Bédé; with an introd. by Christian Gauss. 250p $3.50 Princeton univ. press

842 Molière, Jean Baptiste Poquelin 41-341

Discussion of the work of Molière, analyzing his plays as comedies of character, not of manners, in which he foretold the liberalism of the eighteenth century and democracy. The author was an American scholar who died in 1937, and his manuscript was turned over to Jean-Albert Bédé, associate professor of French at Columbia, who prepared the work for publication. Bibliographical note.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books p31 D 8 '40 200w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien
N Y Times p8 F 2 '41 650w

"'The Spirit of Molière' contains much wise reflection on that admirable playwright, too little understood outside France. Structurally, it suffers greatly from Chapman's premature death: it tails off towards the end, there are several inconsistencies and dropped threads, and there ought certainly to have been an index. But these faults do not spoil the wealth of the book: it is full of rich ore and unsuspected treasures—the best memorial to its author, and to Molière himself." Gilbert Highet
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:17 O 5 '40 600w

CHAPMAN, SYDNEY, and COWLING, THOMAS GEORGE. The mathematical theory of non-uniform gases. 404p $7.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge]

533.7 Gases, Kinetic theory of [40-7117]

"In a short introductory chapter the reader is lead through the molecular hypothesis of gases, the kinetic theory of heat, the three states of aggregation and the theory of gases. Details are given explaining why statistical mechanics are the basis for all deductions and calculations. . . The next few sections are devoted to vector and tensor calculus, definitions and theorems, to Maxwell and Boltzmann's well known equations and the Maxwell function of velocity distribution. Expressions for non-uniform states for simple gases and mixtures of gases are derived and special examples cited. Experimental data on viscosity, thermal conductivity and diffusion show the checking of experiments against theory. Chapters on dense gases, quantum theory and transport and electromagnetic phenomena in ionized gases conclude the book." Chem & Met Eng

"Besides its usefulness as a definitive statement of lengthy calculations, the book should be valuable as a collection of information about existing theoretical formulas for the coefficients of viscosity, heat conductivity, diffusion, and thermal diffusion, and their comparison with available experimental information. This material is very conveniently presented in the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth chapters. Each of these chapters begins with a compilation of formulas, so that it is unnecessary to look for them scattered among the calculations. A special index is provided which lists all the gases and gas mixtures for which numerical data are quoted." W. H. Furry + Am Chem Soc J 62:1885 Jl '40 500w

"There are two outstanding characteristics of the book, namely painstaking accuracy and mathematical elegance. To find both of them in a text on theoretical physics is as admirable as it is rare." F. C. Nachod
+ Chem & Met Eng 47:133 F '40 300w

Reviewed by R. H. Fowler
Nature 144:993 D 16 '39 2100w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:22 Ap '40

CHARANIS, PETER. Church and state in the later Roman empire. 102p $1.50 Univ. of Wis. press

949.501 Anastasius I, emperor of the East. Church and state in the Byzantine empire. Byzantine empire—Church history 39-28852

A study of the religious policy of the Roman emperor, Anastasius the First, who ruled from 491 to 518. Bibliography. Index.

"From students concerned with the controversies that troubled the eastern churches in the fifth and sixth centuries the present monograph will receive a hearty welcome. It is a piece of intensive and accurate research." S. J. Case
+ Christian Century 57:181 F 7 '40 600w

"By concentrating on [a] relatively short period and treating it exhaustively on the basis of what appears to be the entire corpus of pertinent literature, the author has produced a very valuable monograph. The work was done in a scholarly, accurate manner and will serve for some time as the definitive study of this subject." Matthew Spinka
+ Class Philol 36:102 Ja '41 320w

Reviewed by M. H. Shepherd, Jr.
J Religion 20:409 O '40 350w

CHAROL, MICHAEL (MICHAEL PRAVDIN, pseud). The Mongol empire; its rise and legacy; tr. by Eden and Cedar Paul. 581p maps $5 Macmillan [21s Allen, G]

951.7 Mongols. Jenghis Khan [40-34222]

A history of the rise of the widespread empire of Jenghis Khan, an empire which reached from the Black Sea to the Pacific, from India to Siberia. Following the detailed story of Jenghis Khan, there comes the story of his successors and then the story of the decay of the empire. A final chapter or two deals with the place of Mongolia today—and possibly tomorrow. Bibliography. Index.

"The concluding chapters are, I take it, those which Prawdin took most seriously, as giving him his best claim to rank as a philosophical historian. They show how the 'pax tatarica' which for some generations made profitable contact between Europe and remotest Asia possible, stimulated every kind of creative work in Europe, and how, when confusion once more succeeded order in Asia, the closing of the old trade routes forced a Europe that would no longer be confined to taking in its own washing to step out and discover America and the sea routes to the Indies and Cathay. It concludes with the argument that Mongolia is still the key to Asia's destiny and that Europe's destiny and Asia's are inextricably interwoven. This is all very interesting and suggestive, but it is not likely to make as wide an appeal as the author's very well told story of the Mongols and their heirs—just as a story." Rodney Gilbert
+ Books p24 O 6 '40 1050w

"Mr. Prawdin, vividly as he writes, has nowhere enlarged unduly upon the horrors. He gives us the background, makes us see the daily life on the steppes, and if he allows himself occasionally some imaginative license, he never jars, and never loses his grip on us." Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 7 '40 650w

"A scholarly but readable history."
+ Living Age 359:392 D '40 240w

"This is a finely written, dramatic story, carrying its narrative across continents with a fine sweep, and not without lessons for to-day." A. J. P. T.
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 16 '40 130w

CHAROL, MICHAEL—Continued

"The author is a skilful populariser rather than an historian . . . and the student will be irritated to distraction by a book composed in the worst tradition of romanticised history, in which it is never possible to check the source of any statement and in which epic, serious history and the imagination of the author are in one red burial blent. This sort of history cup bears the same relation to history as claret cup to claret. As to the reader who likes an exciting story, he will find a good many longueurs to be skipped, especially in the first part, and may find the continual blare as of trumpets tedious after a while. Not that the book is without merit, for there are good pages of straightforward narrative and others in which Marco Polo and contemporary writers have been well used to sketch in a background." Eileen Power

— + New Statesman & Nation 20:168 Ag 17 '40 750w

"Sound, absorbing history of the Mongols."

+ New Yorker 16:83 S 21 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Ag 24 '40 1000w

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. The Saint in Miami. 299p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-33929

Simon Templar goes after some fifth columnists down in Florida. Simon's beautiful companion, Patricia Holm, and his bodyguard, Hoppy Uniatz, are among the characters.

"Simon Templar, alias the Saint, is back again with a full-length grade A performance." Will Cuppy

+ Books p30 D 8 '40 160w

"Simon Templar, alias the Saint, has earned the undying gratitude of England, the United States and the rest of the civilized world. Read all about it!" Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 D 8 '40 150w

"Triple-X thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 40w

Time 37:60 Ja 6 '41 30w

CHASE, ARTHUR MINTURN. No outlet. 244p $2 Dodd

40-5393

Detective story.

"A rather light story, good for killing time." Will Cuppy

Books p16 Mr 10 '40 100w

"While the solution to the crime is really not very obscure, the conclusion is exciting enough to make even the most exacting reader overlook the fact that he expected things to turn out that way." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 100w

"This mystery novel has no particular distinction, but the dénouement will probably bring a satisfactory surprise." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 150w

"Country house full of interesting red herrings—including servants—scene of much action, and a slightly foregone conclusion. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Mr 9 '40 30w

CHASE, STUART. Idle money, idle men. 252p $2 Harcourt

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Economic policy (W) 40-30706

Confronting once again the problem of waste from the premise that waste of money is not so great an evil as waste of man power, economist Stuart Chase denounces over-saving and calls for a system of taxation that encourages rapid spending. He sets before our current presidential candidates six practical proposals for a solution of the idle money-idle men situation. Index of names.

"Mr. Chase's faculty of self-expression is excellent; he always knows what he means, and always states it clearly and forcefully; hence his work is always interesting even where it is least convincing."

+ Atlantic O '40 150w

Booklist 37:29 O 1 '40

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

Books p3 Ag 25 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 24 '40 800w

Reviewed by Russ Nixon

Boston Transcript p1 S 21 '40 360w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 154:16 O 1 '40 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

Commonweal 32:432 S 13 '40 440w

"A convincing and (on the whole) lucid statement of what is required to put our present impasse of idle men vs. idle money into motion again, to the inevitable advantage of both. Understandable, provided one is willing to use elementary accounting-sense, depart from the hidebound and time-honored dicta of the classic economists, and do some straight thinking." L. N. Feipel

+ Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 170w

Reviewed by Eliot Janeway

Nation 151:157 Ag 24 '40 1200w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

New Repub 103:306 S 2 '40 1450w

"It is a timely handbook for the more serious Democratic campaign orators, since it provides ammunition that some will need to meet Republican attacks upon New Deal policies." Francis Brown

N Y Times p10 S 1 '40 1050w

"Exciting popularization and vista-opening in Mr. Chase's familiar manner."

+ New Yorker 16:67 Ag 24 '40 60w

"Mr. Chase's style is as muscular and red-blooded as usual. In the midst of a hot presidential campaign, his book deserves to be widely read. It should lower the false heat which politics often engenders." P. H. Douglas

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 Ag 24 '40 550w

Reviewed by Joseph Dorfman

Survey G 29:623 D '40 300w

Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

CHEMIST at work, by Roy I. Grady and John W. Chittum, and others. 454p il $3 Journal of chemical educ, 20th & Northampton sts, Easton, Pa.

660 Chemists. Women as scientists

40-11227

"This book is made up of 53 articles which have appeared in the Journal of Chemical Education. . . The object of the book is to acquaint prospective students with the work of chemists by having members of the profession discuss their own jobs. Several chapters deal with the place of women in chemistry." Chem & Chem Eng N

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

"Probably the chief weakness of the book is that chemical engineering is mentioned often enough to arouse curiosity but not to inform adequately. . . There is also no clear definition of the term 'technician.' . . These faults are relatively minor in comparison with the splendid impressions which a student will get of the varied and interesting work of chemists." W. T. Read

+ — Chem & Chem Eng N 18:559 Je 20 '40 240w

"Probably the best use to which this little book will be put is the guidance of girls and boys who must make their own plans and decisions concerning a profession. When these young people know something of what the chemists are doing, they can decide whether or not they would be fitted for work along similar lines. Among the authors, such well known names as Snell, Ellis, Sherman, Landis and others compel respect for the opinions expressed."

+ — Chem & Met Eng 47:447 Je '40 410w

CHERNE, LEO M. Adjusting your business to war; foreword by Louis Johnson. 238p $6.50 Tax research inst. of Am, inc, 292 Madison av, N.Y.

355.21 War—Economic aspects 39-14487

"The complicated details of the drastic controls to be thrown around American business and individual activity in the event of war, either European or domestic, are treated in this study, written before the outbreak of the present European conflict. Mr. Cherne examines the relationship between war and business and between the mechanism of national defense and private enterprise. Statutory prohibitions upon peace-time trade when war occurs outside the United States, procurement planning for war, the industrial mobilization plan, the effect of war on prices and trade, manpower mobilization, and the cost of war to business and the individual are among the problems scrutinized." Management R

"As a realistic analysis of national defense, this book is worthless; as a blueprint for fascism, it has merit. The thesis that this country could be defended with a strong navy and a small but mobile army, without totalitarianism, is completely ignored. We are not told whom we are to fight or what we are to fight for. We are not told how this Leviathan, once established, could ever be demobilized. It won't be." H. M. Gray

Ann Am Acad 209:200 My '40 600w

Management R 29:160 Ap '40 120w

CHERNE, LEO M. M day and what it means to you. 103p pa $1 Simon & Schuster

355.21 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Industries and resources. War (W) 40-13501

In question and answer form the author, executive secretary of the Research Institute of America, describes what measures the government would take to regulate the human, material, and business resources of this country in the event of war.

Bookmark p19 N '40

"In the spirit of a White Paper, Mr. Cherne's treatment is calm, with concrete answers to specific questions." R. F. Crandell

+ Books p4 Jl 21 '40 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

Commonweal 32:335 Ag 9 '40 140w

"Mr. Cherne's is more serious [than Mr Keyhoe's] and probably more enduring, since he states his case soberly, using the question-and-answer method, after the manner so long made celebrated by Simon & Schuster." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 18 '40 600w

"A great deal more informative than Mr. Keyhoe's treatment of the same subject."

New Yorker 16:56 Ag 3 '40 40w

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell

Sat R of Lit 22:17 Ag 31 '40 200w

"In its frank and cold-blooded appraisal of the situation in this country, 'if war comes,' Mr Cherne has really written what, in another time, might be regarded as antiwar propaganda."

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 12 '40 200w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. The end of the armistice. 224p $2 (6s) Sheed

940.5 Europe—Politics. Germany—Foreign relations. Germany—Nazi movement 40-9581

Altho G. K. Chesterton died in 1936, he evidently foresaw many complications of present world history, especially as regards Germany. In looking over some of his papers the editor of this book discovered the fact and has gathered together these essays showing Chesterton's ideas. One prophetic statement was: "The Prussian patriot may plaster himself all over with eagles and crosses, but he will be found in practice side by side with the Red Flag. The Prussian and the Russian will agree about everything; especially about Poland."

Cath World 151:497 Jl '40 700w

"This book sharply and powerfully proves what practically all the vast bulk of his work implicitly suggests to discerning readers: the fact, namely, that Chesterton as a journalist was a practical Christian mystic. . . [The essays] were written at various dates, without order, without relation to any future book. But they were unified because of the unity in his own mind. What has happened since his death only confirms in the most gruesome and blazing fashion the validity of his judgment of Germany. Mr. Sheed has performed a great service in editing and publishing this book." Michael Williams

+ Commonweal 32:17 Ap 26 '40 1550w

"Starting his syllogism with a conclusion nobody now denies, shifting the middle term unobtrusively, casually alluding to a questionable premise as though it were an established link in an accepted argument, the author gives us what must be the best bad logic since the original sophists."

— Nation 150:661 My 25 '40 80w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 19:508 Ap 13 '40 800w

"What is important in this posthumous collection of essays is not, of course, these prophecies themselves. It is the thought and spirit behind them: the study of the movement of history, and of the mind of man."

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 21 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 40w

Sat R of Lit 22:20 My 11 '40 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 600w

Time 35:94 Je 10 '40 300w

"There is much chaff for a few grains of the purest Chestertonian corn. They would have been the more valuable if the compiler had taken care to give the dates of the first appearance of the articles. He chose instead to weave them into a book. That this method is nearly successful says much for the coherence of Chesterton's thought, but true unity was not possible. The occasional character of the essays cannot be, and ought not to be, disguised."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 24 '40 600w

CHEYNEY, EDWARD POTTS. History of the University of Pennsylvania, 1740-1940. 461p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

378 Pennsylvania. University 40-32494

History of the development of the university thru its two hundred years. Beginning as a combined academy and charity school for children, it became the first American college "to start free of religious bias," and also the first "to break away from the mediaeval pattern of the arrangement of courses," and "to call itself a university." Index.

"A contribution of outstanding merit."

+ School & Society 52:128 Ag 24 '40 60w

Social Studies 31:378 D '40 20w

"An impartial and entertaining narrative of a great university." E. N. Jenckes

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 14 '40 1350w

CHIANG, MEI-LING (SUNG) (MME CHIANG KAI-SHEK). This is our China. [Eng title: China in peace and war]. 312p il $3 Harper [16s Hurst]

915.1 China—Civilization. China—Social conditions (W) 40-27431

A volume of miscellaneous articles by the American educated wife of China's gen-

CHIANG (chĕăng)

CHIANG, M.-L.—Continued
eralissimo. "This volume is a more rounded expression of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek than anything that has yet been published here. It ranges from a declaration of religious faith through impressions of her travels in China to passionate polemics against Japan and a statement of the principles of China's reconstruction after the war, which incidentally she unshakenly believes China will win." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by H. F. MacNair
Ann Am Acad 212:236 N '40 650w
Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40
Bookmark p9 My '40

"Because of her ability to put her personality on paper in the English tongue the reader of this book will have an opportunity to get on really intimate terms with the most remarkable woman that modern China has produced and will surely find the experience a pleasant one." Rodney Gilbert
+ Books p4 Ap 21 '40 1450w

"The volume is not of the essence of China and cannot compare in interest and importance with the writings of Lin Yutang, Agnes Smedley, Edgar Snow or many others. It is simply a collection of words and thoughts, highly colored by Occidental influence, of a charming and intelligent woman of the world." P. J. Searles
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 350w

Reviewed by M. H. Bro
Christian Century 57:734 Je 5 '40 800w

Reviewed by A. L. Jewett
Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 190w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 19 '40 600w

"Mme. Chiang is most eloquent and moving when she writes about the present war. . . She is moving, too, and without recrimination about what all Chinese consider the desertion of the democracies. . . What she says makes uncomfortable reading for Americans, the more so because of its dignity and restraint." Nathaniel Peffer
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 21 '40 550w

"It seems hard to deny that this collection of propaganda articles makes rather a dull book, but the personality of Madame comes clearly through it, and that is an object of historical interest; both because she can make important decisions and because there are plenty of Chinese women like her. . . She is a very rousing and trustworthy figure." William Empson
Spec 164:386 Mr 15 '40 500w

Reviewed by L. C. Rich
Springf'd Republican p7e My 5 '40 1450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 6 '40 550w
Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

CHIBNALL, ALBERT CHARLES. Protein metabolism in the plant. 306p il $4 Yale univ. press [18s Oxford]

581.13 Plants—Metabolism. Proteins 39-14462

The first four chapters discuss the question of protein metabolism in seedlings; the remaining chapters deal mostly with the proteins of leaves and their metabolism. Bibliography. Index.

"The spirit of these lectures is that of the experimentalist thoroughly familiar with the pitfalls of the field, and a number of unpublished experiments from the author's laboratory are included throughout the book. This close contact with the laboratory gives life to all the discussion. In his critical synthesis of miscellaneous facts, garnered from a scattered literature, into a presentation of the subject as a closely interwoven whole, Professor Chibnall has done a great service not only to those in the field but to physiologists and biological chemists in general." K. V. Thimann
+ Am Chem Soc J 61:3599 D '39 500w

"The present volume, by a professor of biochemistry in the Imperial College of Science and Technology of the University of London, will be of particular interest to students of both biochemistry and plant physiology."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 10:4 Ag '39 100w

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Laboratory schools. Science instruction in elementary and high-school grades, by members of the faculty. 232p pa $1.75 Univ. of Chicago. Dept. of educ.

507 Science—Study and teaching 40-2667

"This book gives a comprehensive and detailed account of the program of instruction in natural science developed in the Laboratory Schools of the University of Chicago. In that organization the units are a two-year kindergarten, a six-grade elementary school, a four-year secondary school, and a four-year college. The plan presented provides for instruction in science at all levels from kindergarten up. In the kindergarten and the first three grades the teaching is done by the regular classroom teacher. Thereafter science is taught by special teachers. The instructional plan is essentially Morrisonian, with modifications according to experience and need of the different groups." School R

"A valuable contribution to the field of science and instructional programs." H. F. Spitzer + El School J 40:470 F '40 800w

"The report is an interesting and stimulating document and a notable contribution to the literature of science-teaching. Those responsible for it should be congratulated on the progress made and should be encouraged to continue." V. H. Noll
+ — School R 48:234 Mr '40 700w

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Library institute. The practice of book selection; ed. with an introd. by Louis R. Wilson. (Studies in lib. science) 368p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

025.2 Book selection (library science) (W) 40-29249

"Papers presented before the Library Institute at the University of Chicago, July 31 to August 13, 1939." (Subtitle) Contents: Theories of book selection for public libraries, by C. B. Roden; Community analysis and the practice of book selection, by Leon Carnovsky; Important books of the last one hundred years—political science, economics, and sociology, by Max Lerner; Evaluation of contemporary fiction and nonfiction, by George Stevens; Literature as propaganda, by Henry Hazlitt; The evaluation of historical writings, by Louis Gottschalk; Popularizing science, by Waldemar Kaempffert; Selecting books for a technical department, by E. H. McClelland; Book selection and self-therapy, by Mandel Sherman; In the language of the people, by James Clarke; Organization of internal processes in book selection for public libraries, by L. E. Adams; Publishing children's books, by B. L. Gunterman; Book selection in a modern high school, by F. M. Heller; Book selection in a liberal arts college, by Carter Davidson; Aesthetic aspects of book production, by H. L. Gage; The publisher as a factor in popular reading, by F. G. Melcher; A great bookstore in action, by Adolph Kroch; The teaching of book selection in the one-year library school, by A. C. Hansen. Selected reading list. Index.

Booklist 36:275 Mr 15 '40
Christian Century 57:321 Mr 6 '40 120w

"The information is, of course, a valuable addition to the knowledge of book selection, and librarians will gleefully claim the book as a 'tool,' but it merits a larger patronage than that. Anyone interested in writing, publishing, selling, and in literary criticism and literature in general will enjoy dipping into its pages." D. M. Cooper
+ Library J 65:446 My 15 '40 1000w

"This collection of the papers presented at the fourth Library Institute at the University of Chicago is a valuable addition to the growing volume of important and useful literature in the field of book selection. For the most part the ideas and opinions set forth in these discussions represent the thinking of liberal-minded, forward-looking librarians, bookmen, and other educators concerned with problems of reading and book distribution. Though some unevenness is inevitable in a series covering so wide a range of topics and expressing the views of eighteen different individuals, the general level is satisfyingly high. The experienced librarian, the newcomer to the library profession, and the library-school instructor should all find here much that is suggestive, practical, and stimulating. This is also an excellent volume to recommend to the library trustee and to other intelligent and interested laymen seeking information about fundamental library objectives and problems." M. D. Tompkins

+ Library Q 10:419 Jl '40 1450w

New Repub 102:513 Ap 15 '40 20w

N Y Times p24 Mr 3 '40 500w

"Part of a series of studies on library science, this book offers to librarians a new and helpful approach to the problem of how best to choose books for that elusive creature, the general public." H. M. Lydenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 Je 15 '40 350w

"Although The Practice of Book Selection is designed primarily for the librarian, it contains a wealth of material, over and above the items already mentioned, which is of significance to all serious users of libraries and persons interested in the production and the evaluation of the varied literature which pours daily from our busy printing presses." L. F. Fargo

+ School R 48:793 D '40 1100w

"To the layman, interested in the publication, design, distribution, and criticism of books, quite as much as to the librarian upon whom rests the frequently baffling task of choosing books for libraries in a world of increased complexity and curtailed budgets, The Practice of Book Selection will prove both valuable and entertaining." E. B. Meigs

+ Social Forces 19:295 D '40 850w

"The papers on 'The Practice of Book Selection' read before the Library Institute offer unexpected delight even to the layman. For these wise realists, the librarians, invited brilliant men of special competence to tell what each thought of the books in his field. . . Even the selection of books for a technical department inspires E. H. McClelland to an essay of humanistic charm." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 29:297 My '40 340w

CHILD, CLIFTON JAMES. The German-Americans in politics, 1914-1917. 193p il $2 Univ. of Wis. press

940.3163 Germans in the U.S. National German-American alliance. European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 40-3173

Study of the German-American activities during the years of the World war, with special emphasis on the German-American alliance. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Child's story of this particular German-American organization is a thoughtful and fair treatment—a worthwhile addition to the history of the period. It must not be taken, however, to be the complete story of German-Americans in the World War or even in the election of 1916." H. C. Peterson

+ — Am Hist R 45:931 Jl '40 500w

"The story of the German-American Alliance is told clearly and fairly, a remarkable feat for one whose nation went to war again with Germany a month after he wrote his preface. . . Perhaps the lesson that we learned during the heyday of the German-American Alliance has left us more strongly united in the pursuance of the common welfare, but it has also left us hard-boiled and selfish. From this point of view, Child's book will become in time a priceless memorandum on the romantic period in American foreign relations." R. V. Peel

Am Pol Sci R 34:162 F '40 350w

"Mr. Child has written a most valuable and interesting monograph on a very important subject. . . Despite its title it confines its attention too exclusively to the German-American alliance. The result is to give a rather one-sided view of the problem, and the problem itself is never stated. Because many silly and slanderous attacks were made on German-Americans and on the alliance, it does not follow that, from the point of view of the United States, their activities were not a subject of legitimate concern." D. W. B.

+ — Eng Hist R 55:349 Ap '40 650w

Foreign Affairs 18:567 Ap '40 20w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith

Social Forces 19:282 D '40 460w

Wis Lib Bul 36:25 F '40

CHILD, ERNEST. The tools of the chemist; their ancestry and American evolution. 220p il $3.50 Reinhold

542.2 Chemical apparatus 40-6714

"A chance remark by chemistry's leading historian, Dr. Charles A. Browne, led to the writing of this little book. In a brief footnote to an article published in 1932, Dr. Browne mentioned that the story of the early development of chemical apparatus 'deserves to be written up as a part of the history of chemical education in America.' That challenge was accepted by Ernest Child, president of H. Reeve Angel & Co. . . What resulted was an intensely interesting history of the men whose names will always be associated with the chemical laboratory. Liebig for his original condenser, Hempel for his gas analysis apparatus, Kjeldahl for nitrogen determination, Kipp for gas generator, Buchner and his funnel, Geissler and the Sprengel-Geissler pump that was used by Edison in evacuating the first electric light bulb—behind each of these is a personality and a story that the author has told with rare brilliance." Chem & Met Eng

"This is probably the first recording of the history of chemical apparatus. The book is one that will be widely read and kept in up-to-date libraries for ready reference. The illustrations are well chosen; a very complete index facilitates reference to the host of pertinent information in this book." C. G. Fisher

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:418 My 10 '40 440w

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:374 My '40 300w

"A delightful book." E. F. Armstrong

+ Nature 146:604 N 9 '40 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

"Really excellent book." E. C. Watson

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:321 O '40 700w

CHILDCRAFT; ed. by S. Edgar Farquhar and others. 5th ed 14v il col pl map $44.90 c1939 Quarrie corp, 35 E. Wacker drive, Chicago

808.8 Children's literature—Collections 40-5240

"Childcraft, reviewed in detail in the Subscription Bulletin for October 1935 [Book Review Digest, 1935] has been revised and expanded from a six-volume set with guide and spiral bound pasteboard covered art book to the 14 volumes of the present set, retaining the original plan of having two series, one for home use, the other for school use. The following volumes are identical in both series as to number and content: 1, Poems of early childhood; 2, Narrative poems and creative verse; 3, Experience stories and animal friends; 4, Tales and legends; 5, Our own country and foreign lands; 6, Holidays and famous people; 10, Nature excursions; 13, Art and music; 14,

CHILDCRAFT—Continued
Science and industry. In the Parent series there are these individual volumes: 7, The growing child; 8, Guidance and development; 9, Ways to learning; 11, Play activities; 12, Parent guide-index. The Teacher series includes as special volumes; 7, Fundamentals of teaching; 8, Guidance of the child; 9, The school subjects; 11, Units of experience; 12, Teachers manual-index." Subscription Bks Bul

"Although there is no general index to either set as a whole, there are indexes to different groups of volumes which make the contents readily available; volume 2 indexes by author, title, and first line, poems in volumes 1 and 2; volume 6 indexes by author and title the prose selections in volumes 3-6; the Guide (v.12) indexes volumes 7-14. . . The set is recommended for home use and for those public libraries and schools where more adequate sources are not readily available."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:28 Jl '40 1150w

CHILDS, FRANCES SERGEANT. French refugee life in the United States, 1790-1800; an American chapter of the French revolution. (Institut français de Washington. Hist. documents) 229p il $3 Johns Hopkins
325.244 French in the U.S. France—History—Revolution 40-9339

"This scholarly book recounts the refugees' life here through the decade of the greatest migration. Who they were, why they came, how they lived when they got here, what their relations were with American officialdom and French diplomatic representation—it is a picturesque story, carefully delved for in old records, and now well told." N Y Times

"In the selection and arrangement of material, the author reflects credit on her academic training; in the presentation of her story she employs an unaffected and readable style; and the anecdotes which she includes from time to time—just often enough to illustrate without confusing her central theme—make one hope that at some later date she may construct another lighter volume of tales and traditions." J. McS.
+ Cath World 151:370 Je '40 420w

"The Institut Français de Washington, which has many valuable historical publications to its credit, deserves new thanks for its latest book."
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 21 '40 480w

CHILDS, HARWOOD LAWRENCE. An introduction to public opinion. 151p $1.75 Wiley
301.154 Public opinion. Propaganda 40-9847

An analysis and discussion of public opinion and the methods by which it is formed. the nature and technique of propaganda, and the relation of propaganda to dictatorship and democracy. List of selected references. Name and subject indexes.

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard
Am Pol Sci R 34:1212 D '40 850w

"On the whole the book is well done, and those interested in studying public opinion will not want to ignore it." Jerome Davis
Am Soc R 5:969 D '40 380w

"For anyone interested in public relations, Dr. Childs's book should be required reading. . . This is not to say that the book as a book is without faults. Two other recent books in the field—those written by Albig and Smith—are much more comprehensive. Further, much of the material in Dr. Childs's book was presented as a series of lectures to business men under the auspices of the American Council on Public Relations, and it has been published as presented. This means that the emphasis necessary to a good lecture degenerates at times into verbosity and redundancy in a book. Though this is occasionally annoying, it in no way impairs the value of the book." W. C. Clark
+ — Ann Am Acad 211:217 S '40 310w
Christian Century 57:825 Je 26 '40 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

Reviewed by Elmer Ellis
Social Educ 4:525 N '40 410w

"Prof Childs's chapters, which grew out of a series of lectures, mingle perception and reasoning ability with commonplaceness and repetition. One can learn much from the material despite occasional crudity of presentation." E. N. Jenckes
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Je 29 '40 1150w

CHIN P'ING MEI. Chin p'ing mei; the adventurous history of Hsi Men and his six wives; with an introd. by Arthur Waley [English version by Bernard Miall, being a tr. of the German version by Franz Kuhn]. 2v $5 Putnam [25s Lane]
40-8266

"The great colloquial novels of China, like those of European countries, can be counted on ten fingers, and Chin P'ing Mei, as a realistic record of domestic life in sixteenth-century China, is one of the most important of these 'unacknowledged classics.' . . The title, a synthesis of the names of three feminine protagonists, could be translated: A Golden (Chin) Vase (P'ing) of Plum-blossom (Mei). Golden Lotus (P'an Chin-lien) dominates the whole story, even when she is not there: a Chinese Nana, viciously feline, jealous, passionate, revengeful, definitely criminal and completely irresistible. Le Bonheur dans le Crime is the motif of her relationship with Hsi-mên Ch'ing." New Statesman & Nation

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Books p6 Je 30 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 500w

Reviewed by E. W. Mead
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 23 '40 40w

"The reader to do justice to this novel must approach it in a mood of detached curiosity. Thus approached it will reveal a picture at once lively and full of interest for the fireside traveler into another country. If one can accept the fact that at least half the world is accustomed to polygamy one can accept this novel as a realistic and even at times humorous picture of six women trying to maintain marriage with one man." P. S. Buck
New Repub 102:647 My 13 '40 650w

"No less a scholar than Cordier has said of Chin P'ing Mei, 'the translation of such a book would render superfluous any other book upon the manners of the Chinese.' In my opinion, Hung Lou Mêng or 'The Dream of the Red Chamber' is an incomparably finer work of art, but Chin P'ing Mei preceded it by two hundred years, and is, therefore, the first great Chinese novel of domestic life. Giles remarked that the translator would need 'the nerve of a Burton.' Mr. Miall's version omits the scabrous passages and still manages to retain much of the original flavour. When we consider the length of the book, the multiplicity of its characters and episodes, it is a conspicuous achievement." Harold Acton
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:22 Ja 6 '40 650w

Reviewed by H. J. Forman
N Y Times p6 Je 23 '40 1250w

"It cannot stand comparison with 'All Men Are Brothers,' and to the non-Oriental and not especially excitable reader may seem rather long-winded. The introduction by Arthur Waley is scholarly but not too helpful."
New Yorker 16:97 My 11 '40 60w

"The present translation is extremely good and brings over in glowing Chinese idiom much of the original brilliance. With more than a modicum of truth if applied to a restricted group, the French sinologue, Henri Cordier, could remark: 'The translation of such a book would render superfluous any other book upon the manners of the Chinese.' " Florence Ayscough

+ Sat R of Lit 22:13 My 18 '40 500w

Time 35:99 My 13 '40 330w

"Some weeks ago a translation of the Chin P'ing Mei by Mr. Clement Egerton under the title of 'The Golden Lotus,' was reviewed in these columns; and no more need be said here about the vividness, the over-flowing abundance, the story-telling gift and the complete frankness which make this long novel so remarkable. . . Like Mr. Egerton's, this translation is written in easy and vigorous English. It has the advantage of a learned and interesting introduction by Mr. Arthur Waley."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p753 D 30 '39 300w

CHRIST-JANER, ALBERT WILLIAM. George Caleb Bingham of Missouri; the story of an artist; with pref. by Thomas Hart Benton; il. in color and in black and white. 171p $5 Dodd

B or 92 Bingham, George Caleb 40-7789

Biographical study of an American painter, who was born in Virginia, in 1811, and died in 1879. "In this volume I have attempted to fulfill three objectives: to analyze and clarify the genre work of George Caleb Bingham by presenting some hitherto unpublished drawings; to throw new light upon the personality and the work of the artist by including a series of recently discovered letters; and to correct some mistaken material heretofore published upon this subject and to amplify, with information gleaned from new sources, the history of the Missouri artist." (Introd) Chronology. Selected bibliography.

Booklist 36:381 Je 1 '40

"Mr. Christ-Janer's critical judgments are admirably free from the current art jargon and the windy pretensions of those who, of late, have ostentatiously climbed into the regionalist band-wagon. He is perhaps a little too modest and reserved in his estimate of Bingham's importance as a painter, regarding with commendable suspicion the extravagant praise of climbing artists and opportunists. He is quite right, I think, in assuming that Bingham's position is permanently established and more than right in his opinion that the old Missouri master is more useful to students as an example of self-determination than as an influence to further technical developments." Thomas Craven

+ Books p6 Ap 28 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 Ap 23 '40 210w

Reviewed by Wilhelmina Van Ingen

Boston Transcript p7 My 11 '40 470w

"In spite of new detail and obviously sincere intentions this biography remains unsatisfactory. Backgrounds are essential for an understanding of Bingham, but here they are only haltingly touched upon and never evoked. The main characters fail to come alive."

— + Nation 151:158 Ag 24 '40 100w

"Bingham's famed series of election paintings are reproduced in color from plates used by Life magazine in a pictorial essay on the artist. . . These canvases and sketches Christ-Janer, examines rather laboriously, with a resultant lapse from smooth writing and reading. . . Aside from this, however, the book is an excellent compilation of heretofore scattered material, presented with commendable detachment and sense of balance. It is eminently interesting and informative reading." Frank Caspers

+ — N Y Times p4 My 12 '40 850w

Reviewed by Oliver Larkin

Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 3 '40 550w

Time 35:91 My 6 '40 90w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). And then there were none [Eng title: Ten little niggers]. 264p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins]

40-6132

Detective story.

Atlantic My '40 50w

Booklist 36:346 My 1 '40

"There is no doubt, probably, that this is a highly ingenious jigsaw by a master of puzzling, but don't try to believe it, or you'll be sunk at the half-way mark. Hercule Poirot does not appear. Nor any other detective, for that matter." Will Cuppy

Books p14 F 25 '40 200w

"For absolute horror and complete bafflement Agatha Christie's 'And Then There Were None' takes all prizes." Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p3 F 24 '40 60w

"We seek unsuccessfully among the guests for the invisible 'host,' of this house-to-morgue party. Scotland Yard is unsuccessful in a brief epilogue; a manuscript found in a bottle gives posthumous declaration from one of the ten. It is Agatha Christie run wild." M. L. Prevost

— Library J 65:117 F 1 '40 160w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p3 F 9 '40 300w

"Apart from one little dubious proceeding there is no cheating; the reader is just bamboozled in a straightforward way from first to last. . . If it were not for that iota of hanky-panky [the book] would be the most colossal achievement of a colossal career. As it is the book must rank with Mrs. Christie's previous best, alongside Roger Ackroyd, Lord Edgware, Styles, The Man in the Brown Suit, and Death on the Nile, on the top notch of detection." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:726 N 18 '39 290w

"The whole thing is utterly impossible and utterly fascinating. It is the most baffling mystery that Agatha Christie has ever written, and if any other writer has ever surpassed it for sheer puzzlement the name escapes our memory. We are referring, of course, to mysteries that have logical explanations, as this one has. It is a tall story, to be sure, but it could have happened." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p15 F 25 '40 210w

"Slick, tricky idea which somehow doesn't quite come off, probably because of a forced emphasis on a group of manufactured people. Smart as anything, though, and you'll have to hand it to Miss Christie."

+ — New Yorker 16:64 Mr 2 '40 30w

"Hair-raising and completely inexplicable build-up not matched by rather fantastic explanation—but most readers won't mind that. Spectacular."

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 24 '40 40w

"Agatha Christie's masterpiece." Rupert Hart-Davis

+ Spec 163:878 D 15 '39 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 240w

"One of the most ingenious thrillers in many a day."

Time 35:76 Mr 4 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p658 N 11 '39 190w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Sad cypress. 270p $2 Dodd [8s 3d Collins]

(W) 40-30880

Detective story.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

" 'Sad Cypress' may not be Mrs. Christie's best opus, but it gets by easily in the current market." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 S 15 '40 190w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 50w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA—Continued

"The story is told with all and even more of Mrs. Christie's accustomed skill and economy of effect, but it is a pity that the plot turns upon a legal point familiar to all and yet so misconceived that many readers will feel the tale is deprived of plausibility." E. R. Punshon

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 2 '40 130w

"Sad Cypress would be a most admirable piece of detection—by any other writer. The blue-print of the plot indicates the supreme architect; only the actual edifice has been hastily run up. In the narrative we miss the polish, and above all the faultless concentration on essentials which we expect in Mrs. Christie's finest work." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:314 Mr 9 '40 320w

"'Sad Cypress' is not the best of the Christie achievements, but it is better than the average thriller on every count." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p19 S 15 '40 220w

"Fine reading, although the end may annoy the precisionists."

+ — New Yorker 16:84 S 21 '40 30w

"Long sans-Poirot preamble may be slow for some, but French sleuth has rarely done his stuff so admirably. Good—as usual."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 14 '40 40w

"Mrs. Christie wastes no words, and her timing is accurate. Here is the modern English detective story in its most agreeable form." Rupert Hart-Davis

+ Spec 164:340 Mr 8 '40 120w

Time 36:88 O 7 '40 30w

"Like all Mrs. Christie's work, it is economically written, the clues are placed before the reader with impeccable fairness, the red herrings are deftly laid and the solution will cause many readers to kick themselves."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 9 '40 380w

CHRYSTIE, FRANCES NICHOLSON, comp. Riddle me this; pictures by Elizabeth B. Ripley. unp 50c Oxford

793.73 Riddles (W)

Collection of riddles for young readers. The questions are in black, the answers in red, and the illustrations are humorous line drawings.

"Has enough classics to inspire confidence and enough new ones to give the owner prestige. Also all the riddles are respectable, something people stipulate when they ask me to recommend a book like this." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 22 '40 90w

Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:36 Ja '41 50w

"At last we have a new riddle book. Riddle Me This is an attractive, well printed little book which will delight the younger children." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 20w

CHUBB, THOMAS CALDECOT. Aretino, scourge of princes. 478p il $3.50 Reynal

B or 92 Aretino, Pietro 40-27260

This biography of Pietro Aretino, "the first blackmailer, the first journalist, and the first publicity man," is written against the rich background of Renaissance Italy at its most lush period. Bibliography. Index.

"The book has some historical value, and it gets a certain faint attractiveness from the fact that Mr. Chubb knows his subject thoroughly and is deeply interested in it. He communicates his knowledge freely to his readers, and one is grateful for that, but unfortunately he can communicate very little of his interest."

+ — Atlantic Ap '40 140w

Booklist 36:305 Ap 1 '40

"Mr. Chubb has succeeded in his aim; his story is very vivid and at its high points (such as the controversy with Francis I or the attack on Michaelangelo) intensely interesting. The 'fiction' is confined almost wholly to imaginary conversations; these some readers may find irritating, but in the opinion of others they will make the book more true to life. The general exuberance of the style is in keeping with the subject and the period. There are several well chosen illustrations." S. C. Chew

+ — Books p4 Mr 10 '40 900w

Reviewed by O. J. Campbell

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 420w

"Mr. Chubb, author of 'The Life of Giovanni Boccaccio,' knows a great deal about the Italian Renaissance, but he seems occasionally to supply details from memory and always writes in the style of a mail-order advertisement. This does not prevent the book from being interesting."

— + Nation 150:286 F 24 '40 80w

"Unfortunately Mr. Chubb's flair for picaresque writing can hardly do justice to this imposing ruffian. Mr. Chubb is the sort of biographer who cannot bring his hero to Rome without interpolating a short history of the papacy, or tell you that Titian was his friend without distilling the juiciest anecdotes from Vasari. His style at best is briskly pedestrian (but it does progress)." Edgar Johnson

— + New Repub 102:352 Mr 11 '40 700w

"Just a decade intervenes between the 'Aretino' which Thomas Caldecot Chubb publishes today and his 'Boccaccio' of 1930. One notes in his 'Aretino' the same color, warmth and understanding that one remembers from that earlier biography. Where Mr. Chubb has gone forward in great strides is in his storytelling." Arthur Livingston

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 10 '40 1300w

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 20w

"Thomas Caldecot Chubb is an American poet whose verses too few people have enjoyed. He is also by way of becoming a first-rate Renaissance scholar. To this biography he has brought a warm knowledge of the books in which Aretino's life is recorded and the places where it was lived, a wit and gusto worthy of the subject, and a very deft hand with words. It is easy for him to persuade us to follow with interest Aretino's checkered story." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 21:5 Mr 9 '40 750w

"Mr Chubb is a journalist and writes vividly. It follows that this is not a 'life and times' in the older two-volume sense: but it would be wrong to say that it is not a social history as well as a life-story. It is informally written but need not on that account be suspicioned of fictionizing: there is no necessity of invention in retelling the career of Aretino." F. G. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 900w

Time 35:92 Mr 18 '40 750w

CHURCH, ALBERT COOK. American fishermen; with text by James B. Connolly. 192p il $3.75 Norton

639.22 Fisheries. Ships (W) 41-753

Reproductions of some 260 photographs of American fishing boats, both completed and in process of building on the New England coast, and of fishermen and their catches. Short descriptive text accompanies each photograph. An introductory chapter on American fishing is included, and diagrams of some types of vessels are given.

"No one with the love of the sea in his heart and the feeling of sailing ships in his blood can fail to be thrilled by these magnificent pictures by Albert Cook Church of Gloucester schooners in all their glory. 'American Fishermen' is a book for seamen to sit and dream over; the lift of the sea is everywhere in it, the straining of sails, the thrust of the helm, the rush and scend of grand ships proudly sailing." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p3 D 22 '40 1150w

"For some of the older photographs, when lenses and emulsions were much slower, the reproduction seems a little bit too soft, but this is the sole fault to be found in an unusually satisfactory and well-organized book." E. B. Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 550w

"Albert Cook Church has made thousands of marine photographs, over two hundred and fifty of which are here reproduced; and as the name of James B. Connolly is too well known to require comment, the value of the book as recorded maritime history is obvious. . . And Mr. Church has done a fine job of preserving the old while casting a bridge across to the new." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 5 '41 500w

CHURCHILL, ALLEN, ed. All in fun; an omnibus of humor. 586p il $3 McBride
808.87 Humor 40-35856

Selections from the works of forty authors of humorous works. Among them are two novels: My Man Godfrey, by Eric Hatch, and The Big Town, by Ring Lardner. Partial list of authors: Frank Sullivan; James Thurber; Leonard Q. Ross; Robert Benchley; Ogden Nash; Burton Rascoe; John Collier; Irwin Shaw; Milton MacKaye; Thorne Smith; Ellis Parker Butler; Bill Nye; Mark Twain; Lewis Carroll; Charles Dickens.

"The choice is well made, for the work of the more antic, post-war irresponsibles is omitted in favor of humor that is of the perdurable variety, amusing to the majority in any age in spite of evanescent current styles." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p39 D 8 '40 110w
New Yorker 16:88 O 26 '40 50w

"Mr Churchill has done, on the whole, an excellent job of compiling, for pure entertainment. . . 'All in Fun' is a good book for the whole family to read and should stimulate younger readers to investigate more fully the capacious storehouse of native humor that is always available to them."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 7 '40 650w

CHURCHILL, WINSTON. The uncharted way; the psychology of the gospel doctrine. 266p $2 Dorrance
201 Psychology, Religious. Christianity 40-9468

"The book is an examination, chiefly through the Old Testament prophets and the parables of Jesus, of the roots of religion, individualism, science, human conduct, human hope. . . [It is his thesis that] the essence of the prophets' perception was a form of creative, evolutionary energy, through which an individual might free himself from fear, desire, moral death. This form of energy is described in the Gospels, Churchill believes, by the Greek word agape: non-possessive rather than possessive love. This was and is, he believes, perhaps as actual a force as electricity." Time

"In the two decades in which Mr. Churchill has been silent, he seems to have lost his literary touch, or else is here altogether outside his appointed field, for it must be confessed that this late product of his pen is a muddled and muddy piece of work. . . Mr. Churchill has some ideas, but is like the untrained musical composer who has some tunes but doesn't know what to do with them." J. H. Holmes
— + Books p8 Jl 14 '40 550w
Christian Century 57:706 My 29 '40 100w
Churchman 154:35 S 15 '40 120w
Time 35:88 Je 17 '40 550w

CHUTE, B. J. Shattuck cadet; pictures by Raymond Lufkin. 244p $2 Macmillan 40-7523

Story of life in a boys' military academy in Minnesota, for readers in the teens. The motivating factor is the rivalry and final reconciliation of two senior boys, one inclined to rigid discipline, and the other wildly scornful of it.

"Lively and lifelike story." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Jl 7 '40 350w

"The main characters serve but to introduce the exciting life at Shattuck. It's the people you meet and the things you see that make this book fine rainy-day weather reading. Mr. Chute's writing is light and amusing."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '40 230w
Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 25 '40 220w

"Attention is entirely on personal relations of a few students rather than the background of military school life, but a wholesome attitude toward sportsmanship is developed, which partly makes up for lack of atmosphere. . . Better than the usual run of school and sports stories in which pranks predominate and personal rivalries are melodramatically intense." Maude Adams
+ Library J 65:543 Je 15 '40 100w

" 'Shattuck Cadet' is that rare thing, a school story written with genuine characterization and with humor. . . A school story much above the average and one to be recommended. For boys and girls from 12 to 14." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 14 '40 370w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 260w

CIARDI, JOHN. Homeward to America. 62p $1.50 Holt
811 40-3997

Volume of poems by the 1939 winner of the Avery Hopwood poetry prize of the University of Michigan. "Evidently of immigrant family, Ciardi searches out for himself the meaning of America for his own generation." (N Y Times)

Booklist 36:279 Mr 15 '40

"There are no false heroics in Mr. Ciardi's deeply felt contemplation upon the events of his time, no passionate rebellions that are more romantic than the 'romancing' he decries. He looks at disaster calmly and squarely. His ability to get beneath the surface, to find purpose and meaning under 'the scattering fact of incident,' his efforts to fit these into ordered patterns of evaluation, are rare in the work of a young poet." Ruth Lechlitner
+ — Books p13 My 26 '40 750w

"There is the assurance of youth, of poetry, in a world we make. That perhaps is the substance of Mr. Ciardi's theme. It serves him as it has served poets before and will serve them again. On the debit side Mr. Ciardi's control is not always even; he is too sure of himself in the wrong way. Sometimes the poem is lost in words, a little blurred in transition. But this does not dim a vigor and beauty wholly American." John Ritchey
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 My 4 '40 360w
Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
New Repub 103:36 Jl 1 '40 320w

"His poetry, which is a clear and condensed exposition of youth's sensibility to the modern scene, rises now and then to an image which projects the emotion more violently than can the terse statement. . . He can write (as in 'Valediction') the symbolic lyric—and beautifully. But for his purposes—the precise representation of the American scene without utopian thinking, and of the growing psychology of general apprehension—his poetry of statement rather more than that of song or of violent image is successful. He is haunted by the sense of a possibly dangerous future for himself and his generation." E. L. Walton
+ N Y Times p5 F 25 '40 450w

CIARDI, JOHN—Continued

"John Ciardi's book is informed with 'social criticism.' He is gifted, and in one poem, 'Night Freight, Michigan,' he shows a rare kind of poetic observation which, if developed, should take him far." Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 15:62 Ja 27 '40 60w

Reviewed by Frajam Taylor
Poetry 56:337 S '40 650w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 30 '40 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '40 300w

Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

"Although his values are native values and his gift is indubitable even in this first volume, Mr. Ciardi is still uncertain of his material, unsure of himself." Louis Untermeyer
+ — Yale R n s 29:603 spring '40 150w

CINCINNATI. PUBLIC LIBRARY. Readers' bureau. Books for adult beginners; comp. by the staff of the Bureau: Pauline J. Fihe, Margaret Egan, Helen H. MacLean. 64p pa 65c A.L.A.

028 Education of adults. Books and reading 39-29437

Revision of a graded and annotated list of books for the adult illiterate or near-illiterate reader. The book was originally issued in 1935 in mimeographed form. Reading difficulty does not go beyond sixth grade. Books are grouped according to their difficulty and subject.

Booklist 36:167 Ja 1 '40

"A valuable tool for all those concerned with adult education at this level. The list has been built up over a period of years through close co-operation with teachers of WPA classes in adult elementary education, so that it is the fruit of practical experience. . . Excellent annotations describe the exact difficulty of the material, its probable appeal, and in most cases format and type size." Sigrid Edge
+ Library J 65:342 Ap 15 '40 700w

"The list begins with basic texts for class use, arranging the titles in the order of popularity. It then proceeds to list books for supplementary reading by school grades. These are classified under such subjects as recreation, history, social sciences, the arts, etiquette, etc. Following these groupings are books of subject-matter interest to Negroes, books on selecting and getting a job, transitional novels, and introductions to adult books. To any librarian who has faced and struggled with these problems the order and information included will seem logical and useful. The omission of an index is much to be regretted in what is otherwise a very satisfactory tool. Recognition of the differentiation called for in meeting the beginning needs of the native-born adult and the foreign-born reader with a type of experience not basically comparable adds to the usefulness of the list. This pamphlet is another milestone on the difficult road toward 'the readable book' and as such is to be much commended." J. M. Flexner
+ Library Q 10:445 Jl '40 700w

CLAGGETT, RALPH PALMER. Dramatic moments in the life of Jesus; for groups interested in imaginative ventures into the life and times of Jesus of Nazareth. 168p $1 Abingdon

232.9 Jesus Christ 40-9104

"Studies in sixteen high episodes in the life of Jesus, prepared as a guide for leaders of discussion groups. Several of the episodes are treated in dramatic form. Some are somewhat imaginary, such as the death of 'his father,' Joseph." Christian Century

Reviewed by C. H. Kopf
Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '40 80w
Christian Century 57:547 Ap 24 '40 40w

CLAPP, ELSIE RIPLEY. Community schools in action. 429p il $3.75 Viking

379.173 Rural schools. Community life. Roger Clark Ballard memorial school, Jefferson county, Kentucky. Arthurdale, West Virginia. School 40-27029

"A case study of the operation of two experimental rural schools in their relations with the community." (Publisher's note) The experiments were carried out in a rural district in Kentucky, and in Arthurdale, West Virginia. Index.

Booklist 36:207 F 1 '40

"The volume is one of the most complete documents of vitalized rural education now available. . . Urban as well as rural educators may well read this book to gain new insights about the relation of vital education to community resources." J. W. Wrightstone
+ El School J 40:789 Je '40 850w

Reviewed by Howard Cummings
Social Educ 4:369 My '40 950w
Wis Lib Bul 36:63 Ap '40

CLARK, ALAN. Firewall. 221p $2 Random house 40-14184

Story of a New England town in which each year a motorcycle race is held, its climax being the crash thru a firewall. But while the race serves as the background, the foreground is occupied by the members of two families, the Fletchers and the Adamses, descendants of early settlers, whose early friendship has gradually grown into an ill-defined enmity.

"'Fire Wall' is a forceful but erratic performance, a curious mixture of staccato realism and hard-boiled symbolism." George Conrad
Books p8 Ag 18 '40 370w

"Clark's characters are tied down by the machine, strangled, and the old standards are dead. The author brings this out pretty well, and his characters seem real. At times he is vague: he suggests too much and says too little. But he has exciting story-stuff here, and a taut, realistic way of bringing it out. 'Firewall' could be improved a lot, but as it stands it's still a first-rate first try." E. J. Bartnett
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 360w

"From the style of writing, which is nervous, elliptical, it is hard to know who is doing which and with what and to whom."
New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 30w

"I found Mr. Clark's hard writing awfully hard reading. His method of writing his tale, first to the length of 'Gone With the Wind' and then boiling it down to its present pint size, may have been carried to excess, or it may not have been carried far enough. However that may be, Mr. Clark's writing shows individuality and promise. He will write better novels." F. T. M.
N Y Times p7 Ag 11 '40 600w

"A tough-sentimental tale of the James M. Cain variety, seeming strangely old-fashioned today. Mr. Clark contributes some interesting details and his plot is dramatic enough, but he tries too hard to make his novel significant in a big way."
+ — New Yorker 16:62 Ag 10 '40 50w

"The thing does not hang together—it is a good fifty pages before one begins to discover the relationships obtaining between the characters, the catalogue of the first paragraph notwithstanding, and there is a certain jerkiness even where the author climbs down from the pulpit. However, Mr. Clark is more than likely to write something of the first class." P. S.
— + Sat R of Lit 22:21 S 7 '40 300w

CLARK, ALEXANDER FREDERICK BRUCE. Jean Racine. 354p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [15s Oxford]

B or 92 Racine, Jean Baptiste 40-3883

"Professor Clark has written the first complete book in English which presents the facts of Racine's life as they are known to date and combines this biographical recital with critical analysis of his work. In doing so he has brought us at the same time a beckoning glimpse of French society during the reign of Louis XIV, an outline and appraisal of French tragic drama, and a picture of the conflicts of what we can best call Puritanism in one man's mind." N Y Times

Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

"Any literate person with a taste for literature would find in 'Jean Racine' human and esthetic problems of the deepest import and not limited to the field of French classicism." Albert Guerard

+ Books p18 Mr 31 '40 900w

Reviewed by J. S. Will

Canadian Forum 20:23 Ap '40 800w

"This biographer has gone at his subject with enthusiasm and he writes with an attractive vigor and aptness of phrase." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 21 '40 1100w

"A revealing portrayal of the character and the plays of Jean Racine. We know less and understand less about this classic French dramatist than about any other man of equal stature in European literature. If any approach could wean us from our ignorance, it would be the one which Mr. Clark uses, building up the period in which Racine lived and his personal relation to the life of his times, and especially to the life of the court which dominated his times, as a background for Racine's playwriting, and following this with a perceptive analysis of the dramas themselves. In all of this the author has done an excellent job. And if, in the end, Racine remains as distant as ever from our minds and hearts, the fault is not in his newest biographer."

+ Theatre Arts 24:613 Ag '40 330w

CLARK, BARRETT HARPER, and JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, comps. A world of stories for children. 844p il $5 Bobbs

808.8 Children's literature—Collections. Fairy tales 40-32980

"A one-volume library of the great fairy, folk tales and legends of the world from the earliest times to the late nineteenth century, for the use of parents, teachers and young people, collected, with notes, reading lists and bibliographies." Subtitle

"The big book opens with ease and stays open: it is called a one-volume library and goes far toward being one. The difficulty of illustrating so many short stories has been avoided by scattering large pictures through the book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 O 27 '40 240w

"The editors, [who are] experts, include only such work as has been accepted by a wide public over a considerable period of time."

+ Cath World 152:383 D '40 100w

"For a bulky volume of 844 pages, it is remarkably satisfactory in format—clear large type, good paper, adequate margins. The full-page spread for each section adds little to a book which will be essentially for the reference use of teachers and librarians. For school and public libraries and for home purchase where one volume must take the place of a well selected bookshelf of similar material." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 65:925 N 1 '40 400w

CLARK, COLIN. Conditions of economic progress. 504p $5 (25s) Macmillan

330 Economics

"This book consists in essence of a comparative study of the investigations which have been made in all the principal countries into national income, and economic factors bearing upon national income. But instead of a series of monographs, country by country, on the results of studies of very varying value and scope, it was deemed to be more useful to subdivide the work by subjects. On the absolute levels of real income per head, on the extent of unused productive capacity, on the rates of growth of real income, and a series of other subjects, comparative data are therefore brought together for all the countries for which they are available, the results discussed, and some conclusions drawn." (Introd) Index.

"The wealth of nations still remains as the central topic and the supreme mystery of economics. Mr Colin Clark, in a very important new book, has done well to return to this study."

+ — Economist 139:362 S 21 '40 1500w

"The deficiencies in the national statistics of the various countries, and their lack of comparability without an immense amount of manipulation, make the task which Mr. Clark has set himself very difficult indeed; and beyond all this there is the doubt whether comparative measurements can have more than the most elementary meanings between civilisations as different as those of the West European countries on the one hand, and, say, India or China on the other. Nevertheless, the attempt was well worth making, and the achievement of this book is remarkable." G. D. H. Cole

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:676 My 25 '40 700w

Reviewed by Guenter Reimann

Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ja 11 '41 500w

"It is likely to be used more as a work of reference than as consecutive reading matter; but however used, it is obviously destined to be a standard source as indispensable to all students of social and economic affairs as National Income and Outlay itself." Honor Croome

+ Spec 164:662 My 10 '40 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Ap 20 '40 170w

CLARK, DOROTHY. Little Joe; pictures by Leonard Weisgard. [31p] $1 Lothrop

40-34536

Picture-story book about a little Bermudan pony. Little Joe decided to run away instead of proceeding in orderly fashion to a picnic on the beach, but it turned out quite satisfactorily after all.

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:846 O 15 '40 20w

"An entertaining story which will fascinate the little folks who like stories of action, humor, and repetition. The illustrations match the text and are among the best done by Leonard Weisgard." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:1091 D 15 '40 90w

"The ending flattens out a little, but the main part of the narrative is swift with fun and action, and the pictures emphasize the holiday mood." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p34 N 10 '40 180w

"Simple but gay." Katharine Scherman

Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 120w

CLARK, DOROTHY. See also McMeekin, C., pseud.

CLARK, FRED GEORGE. Magnificent delusion. (Whittlesey house publication) 152p $1 McGraw

309.173 Social problems. U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy 40-11195

Analysis of present economic and social ills in America, based on the thesis that we are in danger of losing our democracy thru overinsistence on humanitarianism, the idea that the government owes all a living.

CLARK, F. G.—Continued
"Mr. Clark has made an effective case. His book should be widely read, as only by understanding the nature of the crisis that now besets us is there any hope of coming out of it with democracy still intact." Nicholas Roosevelt
+ Books p5 Je 23 '40 600w

"This little treatise is not particularly logical and not even so well-informed as it ought to be. But its points are sometimes tersely expressed and it is patently sincere."
+ — N Y Times p13 Je 23 '40 400w

CLARK, GORDON HADDON, comp. Selections from Hellenistic philosophy. 267p $1.25 Crofts

180.822 Philosophy, Ancient 40-31306

Textbook containing selections from the works of some Greek philosophers of the Hellenistic age. Contents: Epicureanism; The Stoics; Plutarch; Philo Judaeus; Hermes Trismegistus; Plotinus. Passages illustrating their logic, cosmology and psychology, but not their ethical teachings, are included. Each section has a short historical introduction.

"Mr. Clark's little book is very welcome in its unwillingness to sacrifice technical accuracy and clarity for sonorous prose. . . In the field of logic the Stoics made advances over Aristotle that are still not generally recognized. I'm not sure that even Clark's selections and comments give them full credit here. But on the whole, the volume should be an excellent means of making familiar some of the philosophy of the Hellenistic period." Albert Wohlstetter
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 280w

"The translations are quite reliable as a whole, although there may be disagreement on some details. The addition of bibliographical notes would have increased the value of the book. It will be very welcome to teachers of philosophy, because it facilitates the study of a rather neglected period in the history of ancient thought." P. O. K.
+ J Philos 38:26 Ja 2 '41 210w

CLARK, MARY ELIZABETH. Peter Porcupine in America; the career of William Cobbett, 1792-1800. 193p pa $2 C. S. McIver, 6 S. Brighton av, Upper Darby, Pa.

B or 92 Cobbett, William (Peter Porcupine, pseud) 39-30402

"Cobbett's biographers have found considerable difficulty in dealing with his career as bookseller, journalist, and teacher in the United States during the closing years of the eighteenth century. The general outline of his activities and entanglements has been clear enough; but it has been difficult to follow from this side of the Atlantic either the details of his private life or the complications in which he involved himself with the American courts of law. Miss Mary Elizabeth Clark's thesis throws much new light on these aspects of his sojourn in the United States, especially in relation to his prolonged legal battles with Dr. Rush and Chief Justice M'Kean. Of his private life she has comparatively little to say." Eng Hist R

"The expectation that the author would analyze the literary skill and technique of Cobbett is somewhat disappointed, and the best parts of her work are historical in the usual sense. Some of the details might well have been omitted to present more boldly the significance of his career in America and the climate of opinion in which he worked. . . It is to be hoped that the author will expand her study." F. J. Klingberg
+ — Am Hist R 45:972 Jl '40 270w

"In general, Miss Clark's treatment of the matters which she does discuss is competent without being inspired. . . Future biographers of Cobbett will make use of Miss Clark's work chiefly for the sake of the information contained in it concerning Cobbett's journalistic ventures, especially Porcupine's Gazette, and for its account of the intricacies of the Rush and M'Kean trials." G. D. H. C.
Eng Hist R 55:166 Ja '40 490w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMER. The east coast of South America. 315p il maps $3 Prentice-Hall

918 South America—Description and travel (W) 40-8767

Chatty, informal guidebook for North American travelers to Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and Argentina. Includes personal and historical anecdotes, hints on what to wear, see, and eat, details as to costs and methods of travel. Index.

Booklist 36:396 Je 15 '40

"The book is too rhapsodic for general reading; and the author has much too much to say about his chosen steamship line; but it is a usable practical guide for tourists, by a man who knows a great deal about travel guidance. The illustrations are profuse and well selected."
+ — Books p14 Je 16 '40 130w

"If you have never been to South America, you had better lock up your check book before reading this alluring book—otherwise you will certainly be starting off at once towards these sunny lands. The 45 beautiful photographs provide additional allure." E-M. van Slyke
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 250w

"We have had a spate of books on Latin America in recent years, ranging from very good to very bad. This is certainly not one of the good ones, but neither is it the worst we have seen. In its lush way it is a real guide book for the tourist on a holiday cruise."
+ — N Y Times p10 Je 23 '40 250w

"A gay, enthusiastic, and sophisticated travel guide to the East Coast states of South America. . . As a guide-book this will be invaluable; as a primer it records a kind of concrete, common-sense information that makes cities real and people come alive." Leon Whipple
+ Survey G 29:442 Ag '40 130w

CLARK, WALTER VAN TILBURG. Ox-bow incident. 309p $2 Random house

(W) 40-33213

The scene of this first novel is the cattle country of Wyoming or Nevada in the 1880's. Two cowboys ride into town to celebrate and find the talk is all of cattle rustlers and a man who has been killed. They join the posse which rides out to settle matters, and a lynching follows. The whole action takes place in one day, and the story is told as it appears to Art Croft, one of the cowboys.

"A first book of marked ability. . . From first to last this is a study in male psychology: the women in it matter less than the oil painting in the saloon. Croft and Gil, Tetley the Confederate, Canby the bartender, Smith the drunkard—they have been drawn with vivid, powerful strokes. The talk is tough, the action fast, the writing terse and skillful in its suspense. Only when Mr. Clark overworks his philosopher—Davies, the storekeeper—am I conscious of the author. The beauty of the novel lies in its naturalness and its excitement." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic O '40 270w
Booklist 37:116 N 15 '40
Bookmark 2:11 Ja '41

"Walter Van Tilburg Clark has written a new version of an old style Western lynching bee. There is the required amount of excitement in this tale with a familiar theme but it stands by itself for its high grade of psychological insight and expert craftsmanship." G. G. Stevens
+ Books p8 O 6 '40 700w

"Walter Van Tilburg Clark was born in Maine, but he grew up and went through college in Reno, where his father was president of the State university. He knows that desolately beautiful country; he knows his old-time Western he-men. And he can write. This isn't a one-flash-in-the-pan autobiographical semi-novel. I'll be watching for Clark's next novel." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p13 O 9 '40 750w

"The book is noteworthy for its restraint, its deliberately subdued sense of drama, which, like much of his style, Mr. Clark obviously owes to Hemingway. A 'Western' in which the people are real people and not just appendages to shooting-irons, 'The Ox-Bow Incident' is an adventure story without a hero, a genuine psychological study in a horse-opera setting, with significant overtones drawn from the complex ethics of human justice." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 151:344 O 12 '40 330w

"More than anything else, it can fairly be said, 'The Ox-Bow Incident' is a triumph of restraint and workmanship. Except for brief lapses, and an unhinged scene or two that clutter the otherwise well paced narrative, this is a novel that repays study. The tenseness that builds and eddies and comes back stronger is beautifully geared to the temper of each central character and the shifting emotions of the mob, as doubt, anger, stubbornness, physical cold, pity and revulsion hold them in turn. There is not a completely drawn character in the book; there is only enough of each one to satisfy the needs of this particular situation. But as you read it, it seems to be sufficient." Max Gissen

+ New Repub 103:764 D 2 '40 480w

"A first novel of maturity and virtuosity, Mr. Clark's interpretation of the Ox-Bow Incident is distinctly a special item on a season's list. The reviewer cannot agree, however, that it represents a new voice to be called to the attention of readers interested in contemporary developments of the novel—as advance publicity, sincerely put forth, has suggested. A fresh voice talks a fresh language. And it seems to me that Mr Clark has attempted to adapt the manner of Hemingway to the manner of somebody like Joseph Conrad. But the result is an extraordinary, very interesting and intelligent hybrid." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p6 O 13 '40 800w

N Y Times p2 O 20 '40 440w

"Walter Van Tilburg Clark's 'The Ox-Bow Incident' is your correspondent's unwavering choice for the year's finest first novel. It has many of the elements of an old-fashioned horse opera—monosyllabic cowpunchers, cattle rustlers, a Mae Western lady, barroom brawls, shootings, lynchings, a villainous Mexican. But it bears about the same relation to an ordinary Western that 'The Maltese Falcon' does to a hack detective story. Not to put too fine a point on it, I think it's sort of what you might call a masterpiece." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:100 O 12 '40 550w

"A sinewy, masculine tale that progressively tightens its grip on the reader's interest and emotions. Mr. Clark writes well, without flourishes, and with no studied or unconscious mannerisms, in a style that is noticeably innocent of echoes." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 O 26 '40 700w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:x winter '41 60w

CLARK, WESLEY C. Murder goes to bank night. 212p $2 Hale

Detective story.

"If you can laugh off the first chapter and overlook some careless wordage, you might get into the spirit of the thing. Even imperfect puzzles, you know, can keep you guessing about the details as you go along." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 D 29 '40 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '40 200w

"Considerable amount of good material carelessly hurled around, with leading character's blithe humor redeeming story to appreciable extent. Fair."

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 D 21 '40 50w

CLARKE, DONALD HENDERSON. Murderer's holiday. 304p $2 Vanguard

40-33061

"Talented but foot-loose son of ex-underworld potentate mixes it up with choice mob of thugs and killers, male and female. Rollicking and Rabelaisian yarn of uninhibited ladies and gents, who shoot and succumb at drop of hat—and many do." Sat R of Lit

"'Murderer's Holiday' is rowdy in talk and action, filled with high spirits and surprise, and specifically not recommended by the publishers for gentlemen who cling to the old-fashioned nightshirt." Lisle Bell

Books p24 O 27 '40 160w

"In the jacket copy the publishers warn sourpusses to keep away from this book, but this reader thinks it might be a fine prescription for the wry and crotchety. It has plenty of laughs and excitement, and the plot, while far from credible, is spun out with such plausible skill that you don't notice the impossibilities much while reading." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 N 3 '40 390w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 N 2 '40 40w

CLARKE, FRANCES ELIZABETH, comp. Great wings and small; bird stories of our day. 332p il $2.50 Macmillan

598.2 Birds (W) 40-27566

Collection of thirty stories and articles about birds. Partial contents: Our new neighbors at Ponkapog, by T. B. Aldrich; Argus pheasants, by William Beebe; The return of the birds, by John Burroughs; The mystery of migration, by Alan Devoe; Bird music, by W. H. Hudson; The island of penguins, by Cherry Kearton; Baby birds, by O. T. Miller; Our model Canada goose, by Jack Miner; A paradise of birds, by John Muir; The raven, by G. S. Porter; Will America save its waterfowl? by E. A. Preble; Wild gallantry, by Archibald Rutledge; Wild swan, by H. R. Sass; Silverspot, by E. T. Seton.

Booklist 36:425 Jl 15 '40

"In 'Great Wings and Small' Miss Clarke shows herself to be sensitive to the dramatic and alive to the tastes of the lay reader and needs of the school teacher, but she does not reveal herself as much of an ornithologist."

+ — Books p20 S 8 '40 210w

Christian Century 57:825 Je 26 '40 70w

"All in all, it is a volume which one takes up for a period of recreation, and lays down with a sense of having been both entertained and instructed." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 3 '40 500w

CLARKE, HELEN ISABEL. Social legislation; American laws dealing with family, child, and dependent. 655p $4.50 (18s) Appleton-Century

360.973 Domestic relations. Social problems. Charity laws and legislation—U.S. Legislation—U.S. 40-12209

"With the exception of Mary Callcott's Principles of Social Legislation, and June Purcell Guild's Living With the Law, both of which deal briefly with some of the subjects discussed in this book, no survey of the law pertaining to the family and the poor and adapted to the needs of the undergraduate social science student has appeared. . . This book summarizes American legislation on selected subjects, makes frequent reference to judicial decisions, and attempts to set both legislation and judicial opinion in an historical matrix. . . Although this book involves a discussion of legislation and judicial decision, it is not the writer's intent to teach the law on any subject. . . Instead, the purpose is to show the complexities of legal procedure, the way courts reason, the involved social problems to be met by legal resources, and the interrelations of law, the social sciences, and social work." (Pref) Table of cases. Index.

CLARKE, H. I.—Continued

"Whether subject-matter of this kind can best be taught as a specialized course by sociologists or as a part of a general course in legislation by political scientists, is of course a debatable question. But doubtless everyone will agree that undergraduate students of sociology must in the course of their studies receive special instruction in the governmental aspects of modern social problems. This need is met in part by this book. No student after reading it can fail to grasp the importance of governmental action in the social welfare field and the vital significance of the underlying issues which are now at stake." P. T. Stafford
Am Pol Sci R 34:1205 D '40 500w

"The author makes no attempt to teach the law on any of the subjects discussed, nor does she appraise either the law or its judicial interpretation. The book is a clear, factual analysis of the history and present status of such legislative and judicial action, and their effect upon social welfare. It not only marks a long step forward in the professional development of social workers, but is a distinct contribution to the social science field." F. J. Brown
+ Ann Am Acad 213:216 Ja '41 370w

"As a textbook for serious students or a guidebook for investigators in this field, this should be a highly useful volume. . . With reference to recent social legislation, the treatment is factual rather than controversial."
Christian Century 57:857 Jl 3 '40 70w

CLARKE, JAMES. Picture of health; il. by Guy Rowe. (People's lib) 125p 60c; pa 25c Macmillan

613 Hygiene. Physiology (W) 40-27251

Describes in short chapters and simple language how the human body works, and how to keep it running smoothly.

Booklist 36:286 Mr 15 '40

"Mr. Clarke uses simple and readable language, and indeed makes another worthwhile contribution to the rapidly increasing Macmillan's Peoples Library."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 60w

"A very readable little book."
+ Christian Century 57:251 F 21 '40 30w
J Home Econ 32:396 Je '40 60w

"The real value of such easy popular presentation lies, of course, in its possibilities of helpful guidance through practical understanding. And here this book fulfills its purpose with undogmatic common sense. Like other small volumes in the People's Library, 'Picture of Health' is to be recommended for its simplicity and comprehensiveness."
+ N Y Times p18 F 18 '40 250w
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 24 '40 250w

"The information in 'Picture of Health' is reliable, and the book is interesting and easy to read. It should be useful to readers from highschool age on who are looking for an introduction to the story of health." M. L. McWilliams
+ Survey 76:213 Je '40 300w
Wis Lib Bul 36:45 Mr '40

CLARKE, R. W. B. The economic effort of war. 251p $2.25 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

940.53 European war, 1939—Economic aspects. Great Britain—Economic policy 40-13786

Survey of the economic strength of the warring countries, particularly that of Great Britain. Tho the author concludes that economically the Allies are stronger, he criticizes England's economic policies during the early months of the war. The preface of the work is dated November, 1939. Index.

"Mr. Clarke's two chapters on Government control and the first six weeks of the War are among the most valuable in his book and should be of special interest to scientific workers. Their constructive criticism affords one of the best presentations of the argument for Cabinet reconstruction and the necessity of a Ministry of Economic Planning with its appropriate General Staff that has yet appeared. Both these books [Economic Effort of War, and Einzig's Economic Warfare] should, in fact, be widely and appreciatively read, and should assist in that educational work indispensable in our war effort, which the Government itself has largely neglected." R. Brightman
+ Nature 145:724 My 11 '40 600w

"Of the two books Mr. Clarke's is the more thorough, and its arguments are well illustrated by statistics. . . Mr. Einzig's essay, Economic Warfare, is innocent of statistics; it is perhaps the better written of the two—but Mr. Einzig has tried to cover too much ground in far too short a space, with the result that much of his argument only skims the surface of the subject. The two books supplement each other and should be read by those who would understand alike the difficulties and problems that lie ahead and why we are going to win the war if all is done as it should be."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 20 '40 500w

CLARKE, THOMAS WOOD. The bloody Mohawk. 372p il maps $3.50 Macmillan

974.7 Mohawk valley. Iroquois Indians
40-7305

Maintaining that the Mohawk valley and the Iroquois living there held the key to English westward expansion, the author has written this history of the Valley up to the end of the Revolution. The book is a popular history and goes beyond the confines of the Mohawk valley to include the stories of some of the border wars of the time. Bibliography. Index.

"The most valuable portions of the book are the sympathetic interpretations of the history of the Iroquois and of the Loyalists. . . The development of schools, churches, and social and economic institutions is given scant attention. The style is exciting, the organization is rather illogical, the presentation is perhaps too forceful, little new material is introduced, and some of the conclusions are open to question. The numerous maps are a valuable contribution and help to clarify the text." A. C. Flick
+ — Am Hist R 46:481 Ja '41 160w

"Here is a moving story, plainly and effectively told. The man who reads it, as he makes his way through one of the very loveliest of American valleys, can hardly fail to have a new respect, a new admiration for that countryside. Dr. Clarke has done his full part for the upstate saga. A neat volume, not too long in the telling, and filled with helpful maps and illustration, this is a book well worth its place in the library of any man who really cherishes upstate lore" Edward Hungerford
+ Books p3 My 19 '40 850w

"Except for occasional lapses of rather naive emphasis, the book is competently written. Its author has picked his way carefully among conflicting sources, French and English, tory and patriot, in his endeavor to write an 'unbiased' history." C. T. Miller
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 450w

"It is an exciting story, thoroughly studied and well told."
+ Christian Century 57:547 Ap 24 '40 130w
Nation 150:605 My 11 '40 70w

"The Bloody Mohawk suffers somewhat from the author's too-earnest style, and from such sentences as 'With such a bone of contention, the dogs of war could not be kept long on the leash.' The photographs by the author are sometimes blurred and flat, but his maps and his bibliography are excellent." Codman Hislop

+ — New Eng Q 13:572 S '40 950w

" 'The Bloody Mohawk' is more concerned with details than with broad interpretations. To some extent its flavor is more antiquarian than historical. Synthesis is also lacking—witness the compilation of biographical sketches that is tacked onto the study as a whole. Yet these reservations are not as serious as might at first seem. 'The Bloody Mohawk' is readable, the story by necessity has dramatic qualities, and as popular history Dr. Clarke's volume does not miss its mark." Francis Brown

+ — N Y Times p4 My 12 '40 900w

New Yorker 16:92 Ap 6 '40 30w

Pratt p22 autumn '40

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 22:4 My 25 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 25 '40 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p571 N 9 '40 120w

CLARKSON, MRS ROSETTA E. Green enchantment; the magic spell of gardens; il. from early gardening books and herbals. 328p $3 Macmillan

635.7 Herbs. Gardens 40-33840

Chapters on the herbalists and the books they wrote from the middle ages on into the sixteenth century. Partial contents: In a monastery garden; Beginnings of the flower garden; Herbs of beauty; Some creeping thymes and fragrant mints; Early gardening tools; Flowers in food; Flowers in medicine; The modern role of ancient herbs; Garden designs. Indexes.

"Midway in this book, embedded like a plum in a pudding, lies one of the most interesting chapters on the history of gardening tools I have ever encountered—a chapter well to read in these days when plowshares are being beaten into swords and pruning hooks into spears. This chapter, as well as the other fifteen, is generously illustrated from old documents that prove how long the green enchantment has held enthralled the heart of man." Richardson Wright

+ Books p2 Ja 5 '41 500w

"Although written principally for the spirit and charm, the book is an excellently illustrated and descriptive bibliography and encyclopedia of horticulturists covering the period up to Linnaeus."

+ Commonweal 33:157 N 29 '40 60w

" 'Green Enchantment' is copiously illustrated with old drawings, herb and gardening book frontispieces from the 16th to 19th centuries, and garden designs from medieval monasteries and large English and French estates. A useful index completes a fascinating work." C. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 1150w

CLASON, CLYDE B. Poison jasmine. 277p $2 Doubleday

40-7855

Detective story.

Booklist 36:430 Jl 15 '40

"Mr. Clason certainly fooled this department about the love interest—we were all wrong about who was 'sympathetic' and who was not. Ingenious puzzle and surprising answer, dramatically announced." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 My 26 '40 190w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 60w

"This story seems to us to be not quite up to the Westborough standard." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 My 26 '40 150w

"Some odd antics with toxic plants, profuse details of perfume biz., clever sleuthing and wind-up with wallop. Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 1 '40 40w

CLELAND, MABEL ROSS. See Widdemer, M.

CLEMENS, CYRIL. A chat with Robert Frost; introd. by Hamlin Garland. 16p $1 Int. Mark Twain soc.

B or 92 Frost, Robert

"Nine pages and a picture make up this slender volume reporting an interview with the poet." Christian Century

"The pamphlet is a trivial item for anyone interested in Frost, but not without value." John Holmes

Boston Transcript p11 Jl 15 '40 290w

Christian Century 57:826 Je 26 '40 20w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Mark Twain in eruption; hitherto unpublished pages about men and events, by Mark Twain; ed. and with an introd. by Bernard DeVoto. 402p $3.75 Harper

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-36019

"Mark Twain's Autobiography, published in 1924 by Albert Bigelow Paine, used less than half of the material which Twain had brought together for his memoirs. This book uses about half of the remainder, and is selected, rearranged, and edited by Bernard De Voto as an agent of the Mark Twain Estate and of Harper and Brothers. It contains all of the material which, in the opinion of the editor, should see print. Much is additional material on incidents already introduced in the Paine edition. Some incidents printed herein appear now for the first time because of a time element imposed by Twain, to avoid offense." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 37:240 F 1 '41

"What we have here are four hundred pages of Mark Twain's talk—some of it good, some of it dull, some of it hilarious, some of it charming and sentimental, some of it wonderfully feline." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p3 D 1 '40 1650w

"This is a salutary book; and, for all its eruptivity, a sane and honest one."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '41 400w

"Readers will rejoice that Twain left this material behind and rejoice even more that it found its way into the hands of Bernard DeVoto; his footnotes are as good as the introduction and his arrangement of disjointed and episodical matter is first-rate." Herschel Brickell

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:4 Ja 10 '41 430w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 150w

"More than half of 'Mark Twain in Eruption' contains milder material, and nowhere does the content suggest a volcano. But everything in it is interesting to those who admire his work." M. R. Werner

+ New Repub 103:805 D 9 '40 850w

"It is not too much to say that the heart of a perishing America beats in these pages; here is the Dream That Died, the Hope That Was Cast Away. There is absurdity, there is triviality, but there are heights of insight too beyond which Americans have not yet climbed. And over all is the lovely radiance of a great, rough, violent, bitter, angry, gloriously tender soul, the soul of a man who if he could know what we have made of his America would be glad he is dead." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p1 D 1 '40 1700w

"All in all, a valuable book, readable in itself and indispensable for the new light it throws on the author. Mr. DeVoto's industry, taste, and knowledge of his subject have combined to produce a volume in which Mark Twain's voice speaks unmistakably, though from the grave. It is not that this is the 'real' Mark Twain. It is merely a part of the Mark Twain that was not permitted to appear, except very indirectly, in his published works." Clifton Fadiman

CLEMENS, S. L.—Continued

+ New Yorker 16:86 N 30 '40 1000w

"Broad previous hinting by Mr. DeVoto had promised much. If the volume disappoints, it is not on its own terms, as a continuation of the 'Autobiography,' but on grounds which Mr. DeVoto admits in his preface: that the 'Autobiography' is hardly the most significant of Twain's writing, and that the real history of Samuel Clemens is not to be found there but in the more symbolical accounts of his 'Huckleberry Finn,' and 'The Mysterious Stranger.' Mr. DeVoto has, however, given us much to be grateful for." N. H. Pearson

Sat R of Lit 23:5 D 7 '40 1250w

Time 36:80 D 2 '40 950w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Mark Twain's Travels with Mr Brown; coll. and ed. with an introd. by Franklin Walker and G. Ezra Dane. ltd ed 296p $5 Knopf

817 40-33312

"Being heretofore uncollected sketches written . . . for the San Francisco Alta California in 1866 & 1867, describing the adventures of the author and his irrepressible companion in Nicaragua, Hannibal, New York, and other spots on their way to Europe." Subtitle

Reviewed by Bernard De Voto
Books p3 D 29 '40 900w

"They occupy a place in Mark Twain's history as an author between the recently edited Sandwich Island letters and 'The Innocents Abroad.' For the most part, however, they are not particularly interesting in themselves."
Nation 151:540 N 30 '40 120w

Reviewed by M. R. Werner
New Repub 103:805 D 9 '40 300w

New Yorker 16:86 O 26 '40 90w

"'Mark Twain's Travels with Mr Brown' has high spirits, for Mark Twain could not go anywhere without being interested in things he saw, but there is no sense of freshness or youth about his adventures in this country. He is describing a New York he has already seen, and his object in writing is to correct the fading memories of a visit he made thirteen years before; he goes to Hannibal, Missouri, and there, too, brings his memories up-to-date. The picture he gives in 'Travels with Mr. Brown.' is always that of a nation in change, and the change is not agreeable to him." William Ruff

Yale R n s 30:423 winter '41 650w

CLEMENTS, EILEEN HELEN. Let him die. 284p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hodder]

40-13550

Mystery story.

"Recommended for its sufficiently sinister plot and more especially for its lifelike characters." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 4 '40 180w

"It is a shame to label this 'A Mystery Novel,' for it is a story lots of people who have no use for mysteries will enjoy thoroughly." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 110w

"Since the solution of the mystery comes by chance, this is not a crime puzzle of the conventional pattern. It is, however, a fine novel and a keen study of the reaction of sinister events and circumstances upon a group of fundamentally admirable persons."

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 4 '40 310w

"[A] recommended item, which is more novel than mystery. The locale is London, but there is very little talk of war and all that."

+ New Yorker 16:56 Ag 3 '40 30w

"Character study rather than mystery—tho' that's good enough. Capital conversation and pre-war London background also enhance yarn. Worthwhile."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 17 '40 40w

CLINTON, DANIEL JOSEPH (THOMAS ROURKE, pseud). Man of glory; Simón Bolívar. 385p il map $3.50 Morrow [15s Joseph, M]

B or 92 Bolívar, Simón 39-30361

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by M. W. Williams
Am Hist R 46:237 O '40 340w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 10 '40 500w

"Man of Glory deserves a wide reading, because such a book cannot help but lead to a more sympathetic and intelligent understanding of Latin America." Freer Stalnaker

+ Living Age 357:595 F '40 600w

"'History,' remarks Mr. Thomas Rourke in the early pages of his life of the Liberator of South America, 'has a way of going pompous on us.' But not if Mr. Rourke can help it. Allowing for moments of breeziness this is an attractive biography, with an eye for the picture of incident and a good hand at rapid narrative." V. S. Pritchett

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:441 Mr 30 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec 164:384 Mr 15 '40 850w

"To write a biography of Simón Bolívar has never been an easy task, for it demands from the author an appreciation of so many different values. Although Mr. Rourke has written a very satisfactory book, there is something incomplete about it. He has produced what will no doubt prove to be a very popular biography. The restless and energetic soldier is there, the man of charm is there and the frustrated politician is there, but the man of thought is missing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 9 '40 650w

CLOETE, STUART. Yesterday is dead. 267p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

940.5314 European war, 1939—Influence and results. Civilization (W) 40-35484

The author, an English novelist and an officer in the last war, is now resident in this country. In his introduction he says: "This book was written to clarify my own mind, to try to create some kind of order, to find some kind of sequence in the events of the last few years." Partial contents: World sickness; The doubtful mind; The dominion of fear; Radio is king; Total war; Oh Israel. . ; The liberators; "The American way"; "The shape of things to come"; "The prophets."

"Mr. Cloete's vivid and colorful analysis of our times is a powerful, warning searchlight in which we may all learn to study ourselves, while we wait, as he says, 'aghast, facing tomorrow.'" Lorine Pruette

+ Books p2 D 8 '40 900w

"Written with simplicity, dignity, and force, this essay without being startling, contains germs of real profundity."

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:2 Ja 23 '41 200w

Living Age 359:491 Ja '41 270w

"This book is written quickly to be read at once. Breathless but brilliant, it can hardly fail to appeal to the public. People will ask each other what they think of it, and will be at a loss how to answer the question.

CLOETE (clewty)

For the book is an explosion, and it hurls ideas hither and thither. A correct style has been adapted to a supreme emergency. The sentences are short. They stab at truth, and words sometimes fail the man of words. At intervals, showers of asterisks, like friendly comets, strike Mr. Cloete speechless, and he is content with the unsaid." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p9 D 8 '40 1450w

"[Mr Cloete] writes as Jehu drove, with fury and sometimes with beauty. He picks up subject after subject, states an opinion with vividness and color—and then lays it down. . . I have been unable to extract from the book a single consistent line of ideas, except that Mr. Cloete is against reason as the centrally human factor. . . There is much wisdom in this book—as there is in Marx. There is beauty in many passages and vividness of writing. But Mr. Cloete's vigorous attack on fascism seems to me to accept far too much of the mood and philosophic presuppositions of its opponent for my peace of mind. It will be a popular book that will attract many—but it will attract especially those who have already betrayed the citadel of reason in their minds and are, even if unconsciously, half-fascist." George Catlin

Sat R of Lit 23:14 D 14 '40 1350w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 15 '41 1050w

CLOWER, JAMES IRA. Lubricants and lubrication. 464p il map $5 (30s) McGraw

621.89 Lubrication and lubricants 39-22555

A practical book for buyers, sellers, and users of lubricants and for those who design and operate machinery. The first eleven chapters are devoted to the fundamentals of lubricants and lubrication. The next five chapters cover in detail the lubrication of steam turbines, steam engines, air compressors, refrigerating machines, and all types of internal-combustion engines. The concluding chapter deals with the storing and handling of lubricants. Index.

Booklist 36:105 N 15 '39

"Not only is the book practical and useful to any plant engineer concerned with lubrication, but it is arranged for academic use as well. The lubrication engineers of tomorrow will not have to ferret out the required background knowledge by dint of much labor and experience as those of today did. They can find much of it here in a single volume. Chemical engineers will find this book rich in information and highly practical even though it contains little information on the specialized lubricating problems of chemical industry." M. E. Clark

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:200 Mr '40 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:56 O '39

Pratt p10 winter '40

CLUGSTON, WILLIAM GEORGE. Rascals in democracy. 336p $2.50 Smith, Richard R.

978.1 Kansas—Politics and government. Politics, Practical. U.S.—Politics and government 40-9199

A political history of Kansas in which the author pays particular attention to Kansans who have attained national prominence, Alfred M. Landon, Senator Capper, William Allen White, Henry J. Allen, the former Secretary of War Woodring, John Hamilton, and others.

"Mr. Clugston makes out a highly plausible case, but the suspicion will not down that it is not the whole story. In many instances he is extraordinarily effective, as when he examines the methods by which Kansas puritanism has been used as a sort of smoke screen to obscure the most revolting skulduggery in the political and economic management of the state." Stanley Walker

+ — Books p19 Ag 25 '40 360w

"It is not necessary to agree with the ideas set forth in this book in order to enjoy it as an interesting and fairly accurate history of Kansas politics. But it is a local story and leaves the reader amused rather than alarmed over the fate of democracy." F. S. Ambrose

Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 260w

"Most of the things Mr. Clugston writes—accurate or distorted—are well known to informed Kansans. Their concentration into one book provides, however, a more depressing record of Kansas corruption and activity which borders on corruption than has hitherto been offered." Dwight Pennington

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 27 '40 500w

New Repub 103:533 O 14 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p12 S 20 '40 400w

CLUNE, HENRY W. Monkey on a stick. 314p $2 Morrow

40-7009

Satiric story of modern radio. An insignificant little man with an excellent radio voice is taken up and exploited by some high powered managers. Success crowns all their efforts; Chester is even nominated for the presidency. Just at the peak of their career a blackmailing blonde, with fire in her eye and a handful of notes, comes to puncture their inflated egos.

"Mr. Clune has excellent structural sense and a deft sense of contemporary humor. His 'Monkey On a Stick' should make a highly entertaining picture where the contrast of the Mickey Mouse little man and the Clark Gable voice could be even more effectively presented than on the printed page." Dawn Powell

+ Books p9 My 19 '40 750w

"Mr. Clune knows his radio patter, embroiders ingeniously a swift-moving yarn, and has a keen eye for soundly vulgar American comedy. If he had only been a little surer-footed in his ending, 'Monkey On A Stick' would be first-rate American satire. As it is, it provides a chuckle-full evening." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 650w

New Repub 103:62 Jl 8 '40 90w

"This is a circus—but not for the kiddies. Still, it's reasonably clean fun, a good-tempered satire; the devastation it wreaks is not to be taken with open-eyed literalness. . . A hilarious story that cracks and crackles and cackles its way along." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p31 My 12 '40 550w

"Entertaining satire."

+ New Yorker 16:98 My 11 '40 40w

CLYDE, PAUL HIBBERT, ed. United States policy toward China. 321p map $3.50 Duke univ. [21s Cambridge]

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—U.S. 40-12994

"A selection of public and diplomatic documents [1839-1939]. . . Here are the texts of every treaty concluded between the United States and China; descriptions of the China found by American ministers sent to Canton, Shanghai, and Peking in the 19th century; outstanding official declarations of American policy toward China such as the open door notes of John Hay, statements on the integrity of China; diplomatic exchanges which trace the origins of the so-called Stimson non-recognition doctrine; and, finally, the notes of Secretary of State Hull to Japan setting forth specific violations of American rights in China." Springf'd Republican

"The book keeps within the range of materials indicated . . . and within the limits set the selection is almost uniformly satisfactory. One exception that may be noted is the portrayal of the Taft-Knox policy exclusively through the medium of the neutralization note. Omissions, and consequent faulty interpreta-

CLYDE, P. H., ed.—Continued.
tions, are inevitable, however, in a book of readings such as this, and the number of them here is exceedingly limited." H. M. Vinacke
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1047 O '40 130w

Reviewed by Boyd Carpenter
Ann Am Acad 213:191 Ja '41 230w

"An extremely useful collection, of considerable interest even to the layman, and invaluable to the student."
+ Canadian Forum 20:253 N '40 160w

"Collections of documents do not usually excite the interest of other than specialists in the field they cover. This set of American state papers on China, spanning the century since 1839, is an agreeable exception to the general rule. For one thing, it gains life and color by including a wide selection of Despatches from Ministers in China and Instructions sent out from Washington by the State Department. For another, two-thirds of the documents cover the 1839-1899 era, and these again are mainly concentrated on the last four 'forgotten' decades of the century, which are fresher and more interesting because they have been so generally ignored." T. A. Bisson
+ Pacific Affairs 13:487 D '40 420w

"The volume does not advocate any specific course of action. It is meant to be a guide and a comprehensive work of reference for those who would formulate their own judgments as to what American policy should be today."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 330w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). The Fair American; pictures by Helen Sewell. 132p map $2 Macmillan
(W) 40-30714

"The Sally and Andrew of Away Goes Sally and Five Bushel Farm [Book Review Digest, 1934, 1939] voyage to France on the ship of Andrew's father, 'The Fair American.' But the story is Pierre's, the sole survivor of his aristocratic family in the French Revolution. His escape with an old servant in the night, the tramping along country roads in disguise, slipping on board 'The Fair American' as a cabin boy, and the near capture on the high seas are all sympathetically and realistically told." Library J

Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

"This is the third of the admired 'Sally' books. There is no perhaps about its being the best of them. Like the others, it presents early American life and history through a poet's vision, with a lovable little girl at the center of the action and a lively boy also concerned." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 O 27 '40 300w

Cath World 152:378 D '40 80w

"We cannot but feel the timeliness of this book of America's yesterday, in which a child finds refuge from the storm in his home land, for today children are again coming overseas to America for shelter in a war-torn world." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 31 '40 330w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 30w

"Sally is the same impulsive little girl we have met before, warm and generous in her sympathies, quick and resourceful in an emergency. Her many friends will be glad to read of her kindness to the lonely French boy, Pierre, and of her days in sunshine and storm on shipboard. Helen Sewell's soft drawings add beauty to the book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:348 S '40 110w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 16:340 S '40 90w

Reviewed by Miriam Snow
Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 130w

"Written with the same skill and beauty of Elizabeth Coatsworth's other stories of early America, there is here the poignance of a child finding in America refuge from the storm in his native land." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 30w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 50w

"A fine American story that will please boys and girls from 9 to 12. Helen Sewell's soft, lovely drawings add to the charm and atmosphere of the book." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '40 220w

New Yorker 16:127 D 7 '40 50w

"'The Fair American' is all that anyone could ask in literary craftsmanship, and the entire format of the book is appealing."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 360w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). The littlest house; il. by Marguerite Davis. 152p $1.50 Macmillan
(W) 40-27309

Three small children discover a tiny house in the Massachusetts coast town where they live and fall in love with it. The kindly owner of the house allows them to use it as a super play house. The story is of their summer's adventures, and ends with the party when the littlest house has a hundredth birthday.

Booklist 36:330 Ap 15 '40

"Here is Miss Coatsworth's most companionable story for children. It has the poetic quality of all she writes . . . but the poetic aloofness which has given to some of her books an appeal chiefly to gifted children, has here been put aside. This is any child's book, for every one of them has had the dream—and a few fortunate ones the experience—of a house scarcely larger than Snow White's or Peter Pan's, yet a working house, all one's own." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Mr 24 '40 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 29 '40 180w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:169 My '40 120w

"A lovely, natural story. This story, unspoiled by the rush of the modern world, will appeal to girls of eight to eleven years. It is illustrated by Marguerite Davis with sketches that are quite in keeping with life in this old Massachusetts town." R. W. Stewart
+ Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 30w

"[The children] are real children whom the reader leaves behind with regret after sharing the Summer's adventures with them. These adventures are natural, homely, never strained and completely absorbing. . . As always, Miss Coatsworth tells her tale as a poet, and following each chapter are verses in which, like an imprisoned fragrance, we find hints of the ocean, fields and woods surrounding this little seaside town." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '40 550w

New Yorker 16:97 My 18 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 140w

Wis Lib Bul 36:71 Ap '40

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). A toast to the king; with il. by Forrest Orr. 159p $1.50 Coward-McCann
(W) 40-35992

A New England Christmas story beginning at the time of the Revolution. The three orphaned Willard sisters were staunch Tories, and even though their loyalty to the king cost two of them their lovers, they remained true to their father's principles. When the youngest sister rescued a British officer they all risked their lives to save him. Ever after that at Christmas time came presents for the sisters, and fifty years after that first year came a letter from the King!

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"An exquisite, delicately wrought tale, fragrant with the rosemary of long, long ago." Page Cooper

+ Books p16 N 17 '40 200w

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 21 '40 500w

"For unusual literary style and crystal-clear characterization A Toast to the King merits attention." M. C. Scoggin

+ Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 120w

"The story is well written, with many delicately drawn pen-pictures of the New England Winter. . . The more dramatic incidents are told with spirit, and the plot deftly developed, without the mawkishness of the average Christmas tale." L. M. F.

+ N Y Times p26 N 17 '40 550w

"Slight, but fairly well done."

Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 390w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. Four useful pups; photographs by M. U. Blumenthal. [34p] 50c Rand McNally

Dogs—Juvenile literature. Dogs—Pictures, illustrations, etc. 40-10377

"This is a photographic account of the growth and training of animals. The four pups in this book are together in a pet shop at the beginning, but their careers develop very differently. Buck, the St. Bernard, is trained for the movies; Lance, a Doberman pinscher, becomes a 'protection dog'; the fox terrier, Spoof, performs tricks in a circus; and the fourth, Bravo, becomes a sheep dog." Library J

"It is unusual to find, in so small a space—and at so small a price—so much information about dogs and their ways of life that will be new to city small boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 11 '40 240w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 65:543 Je 15 '40 120w

COCKROFT, GRACE AMELIA. The public life of George Chalmers. 233p $2.75 Columbia univ. press [11s King]

B or 92 Chalmers, George 39-20153

Monograph on the life and writings of George Chalmers, British historian and antiquary, who was born in Scotland in 1742 and died in London, 1825. Ten years of his life were spent as a colonist in Maryland, but his career was ruined by the American revolution and he returned to England. Bibliography. Index.

"This modest volume is a valuable contribution to the knowledge of an important period of history. The bibliography alone would entitle it to consideration. In addition to forty-seven published works of George Chalmers there are also listed extensive collections of his manuscript papers and letters, a surprising number of which are in America. Archive materials are carefully classified, many contemporary and later publications listed, and notations and citations skillfully used. . . In using this multitudinous material the author has shown rare discernment; there is judicious evaluation without overemphasis." A. L. Lingelbach

+ Am Hist R 45:640 Ap '40 600w

"The history of colonial government following the American Revolution has been fairly well explored, but Miss Cockroft provides further useful information on the membership, as well as on the labours, of the new Committee for Trade. Her studies of the Minutes re-inforce the findings of other writers, that the primary concern of the Committee was always the navy. . . George Chalmers was a minor official, whose varied life was well worth writing, and Miss Cockroft has summarized a unique career with discrimination and excellent judgment." G. S. Graham

+ Canadian Hist R 21:331 S '40 400w

"This is a sober and useful study."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 N 11 '39 100w

CODE, JOSEPH BERNARD. Dictionary of the American hierarchy; with an introd. by Amleto Giovanni Cicognani. 425p $3.75 Longmans

922 Roman Catholics in the U.S. 40-10032

This volume contains "the principal facts in the lives of more than 500 bishops who make up the past and present [Catholic] hierarchy of the United States of America." (Introd) The arrangement is alphabetical

"Dr. Code has done a masterly piece of work." Henry Watts

+ America 63:387 Jl 13 '40 160w

Am Hist R 46:478 Ja '41 80w

"Dr. Code's well deserved reputation as one of the outstanding historians of the Catholic Church in America is unquestionably established." V. F. H.

+ Cath World 151:627 Ag '40 380w

COE, URLING CAMPBELL. Frontier doctor [foreword by William Duncan Cheney]. 264p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Frontier and pioneer life—Oregon 40-4050

Reminiscences of his experiences on the Oregon frontier, where the author went to practice medicine in 1905. He worked under all sorts of primitive conditions, he witnessed range wars and epidemics, and learned to go on all his calls equipped for emergencies. Doctor Coe is not in favor of socialized medicine.

Booklist 36:281 Mr 15 '40

"Those enjoying adventures of this sort will relish 'Frontier Doctor.' Dr. Coe has literally seen life in the raw and besides recounting many tales has some pertinent comments to make on human nature. One can hardly blame him for a touch of acid in his evaluations." Rose Feld

+ Books p12 Mr 17 '40 550w

"Those who find a bedside view of human nature inadequate to the subject will not be greatly interested in Dr. Coe's observations. Those who like medical anecdotes, and a point of view firmly rooted in physiology, will be pleased. Either reader will find Dr. Coe a forthright, honest, straight-shooting fellow, with abundant courage, and with admirable skill in his frontier practice." M. E. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 24 '40 250w

New Repub 102:254 F 19 '40 40w

"'Frontier Doctor' is written so simply, is so lacking in apparent artifice, that one is more than usually reluctant to suspect in it the slick professional hand of the ghost writer. It has, to be sure, a few of the faults of simplicity. The writing sometimes is rather bare and the chronology difficult to follow. These failings are trivial beside its feeling of unquestionable veracity." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p3 F 11 '40 400w

"Another doctor's book, but an interesting one."

+ New Yorker 15:80 F 10 '40 20w

"If some of [Dr. Coe's] stories almost threaten our credulity, we nevertheless will take his word for them. His style may have more breeziness than literary distinction, but he tells his story with full-flavored gusto, and it should appeal especially to all lovers of Westerns as well as to those who like to read of 'cases.'" M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 10 '40 250w

Reviewed by Mabel Skinner

Survey 76:212 Je '40 320w

COFFIN, HENRY SLOANE. Religion yesterday and today. 183p $1.75 Cokesbury press
204 U.S.—Religion (W) 40-27567

Six lectures delivered at New York university and Emory university, on the subject of the changing religious beliefs and problems in America during the last fifty years. Contents: Evolutionary science; The divine immanence; Biblical criticism; Religious experience; The social conscience; The church.

Booklist 36:423 Jl 15 '40

"Dr. Coffin is president of the Union Theological Seminary, a brilliant preacher, able theologian and voluminous author. This is his latest book, but not his best. A series of lectures originally delivered at New York University, it is a tired piece of work. It looks backward rather than forward, seeks recovery of old ideas rather than discovery of new, and conveys even a note of satisfaction that the best religious thought of two generations gone by is tumbling today to ruins. One might accuse this book of cynicism were it not for that ringing conviction of the Christian faith which has always been Dr. Coffin's most attractive and potent characteristic." J. H. Holmes

+ — Books p14 S 15 '40 450w

"It is, on the whole, a very readable and compelling statement. It will be found to be stimulating and provocative at many points. Unrepentant liberals will not be too happy about some parts of it. Perhaps it will serve to them as a challenge to make liberalism more meaningful and compelling than Dr. Coffin seems to find it." C. S. Braden

+ — Christian Century 57:1513 D 4 '40 450w

"Dr. Coffin provides a volume of value to the strict religionist in furnishing a highly informative résumé of the changes in Christian thought during the last two generations. He renders a real service to all who are concerned with the problem of the Church in its relation to present social conditions, and its obligation to evangelize mankind." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 21 '40 1200w

"Here is a very valuable book. . . It is well documented and rings true to the memory of those who have lived through this period." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 154:20 Ag '40 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 17:299 O '40 270w

"Six admirably lucid and comprehensive lectures."

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 12 '41 430w

COFFIN, JOSEPH. Our American money; a collector's story. 153p il $1.75 Coward-McCann
737 Coins. Money—U.S. (W) 40-27138

Chronological account of American money, at first planned for collectors. Describes how money is made, discusses recent events in our currency, and has a chapter on emergency money and tokens. Chronological table of important and interesting events in connection with United States money. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

N Y Times p14 Ja 21 '40 290w

COFFIN, MARIAN CRUGER. Trees and shrubs for landscape effects. 169p il $3 Scribner
712 Landscape gardening. Trees. Shrubs (W) 40-7537

An experienced landscape gardener writes on the use, proper placing and cultivation of trees and shrubs both in informal and formal grounds. Contents: Gardening with trees; Approaching the house; The house and its setting; Lawn and terrace treatment; Backgrounds and ground covers; Walks formal and informal; Woodland; Green and other gardens; Planting fundamentals. Each chapter concludes with a list of trees and shrubs; there are many photographs illustrating points in the text, and an index.

"Here is clear-thinking, well judged and discriminating advice on fine plant material finely used in the best ways and places. . . A 'must' volume for every true and discerning gardener from Massachusetts to Delaware." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p13 Je 16 '40 140w

Cath World 151:639 Ag '40 190w

"An able and authoritative work on the use of woody plants. . . The many fine photographic illustrations should help to make America tree and shrub conscious—for we are far behind England in this type of gardening, perhaps because we still have so much native plant material that we fail to appreciate its landscape possibilities when correctly used in the planting plan of home grounds." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 3 '40 450w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 16 '40 1500w

COHEN, HELEN LOUISE (MRS WILLIAM STOCKWELL), ed. Milestones of the drama. 566p $2.50; text ed $1.75 Harcourt
808.82 Dramas—Collections (W) 40-27139

Seven plays chosen to show the evolution of the drama. Each play is introduced by an essay giving background, stage history, and significance. Contents: Oedipus, King of Thebes, by Sophocles; Everyman; Doctor Faustus, by Christopher Marlowe; The School for Scandal, by R. B. Sheridan; A Doll's House, by Henrik Ibsen; Cyrano de Bergerac, by Edmond Rostand; The Emperor Jones, by Eugene O'Neill. Index.

Booklist 36:261 Mr 1 '40

Boston Transcript p2 F 24 '40 20w

Wis Lib Bul 36:27 F '40

COHEN, MILTON BRONNER, and COHEN, JUNE B. Your allergy and what to do about it [il. by Robert S. Robison]. 177p $1.50 Lippincott
616 Allergia (W) 40-13021

Explanation of allergies, their origins, symptoms, treatment, and effect upon general health, written for the layman. Includes case histories. Partial contents: Life history of the allergic individual; How allergy disturbs health; The diagnosis of allergy; Allergic rhinitis, hives, eczema and other allergic conditions; Serum reactions; The future of allergy. Glossary.

Booklist 37:7 S '40

"In the coming season doctors will be well advised to note this book and recommend it to their patients. Not only is its information sound, well-organized, and easily understood, but it will gain from the patient added and more intelligent coöperation. The sprightly drawings that head each chapter may even serve to alleviate for a moment his lugubrious feelings." M. S. U.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 13 '40 410w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Romance in crimson. 277p $2 Appleton-Century 40-7350

A combination of murder and romance, the dénouement of which takes place in a smart hunt club community in the South.

"It's an intricate and well paced yarn, with a climax exciting enough to make you exclaim —as Gregg said to the girl—'Phew!' " Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 Ap 21 '40 260w

"Octavus Roy Cohen should stick to 'darky' stories. Certainly the affairs of the colored people are more interesting than those of the whites in 'Romance in Crimson.' . . The main plot is one of love, anyway, and the mystery is as transparent as gauze." Marian Wiggin
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 50w

"The whole entanglement is unwound in a series of court room scenes. The romance is moderately warm but the mystery is considerably cooled by too many protestations from the suspected girl that she is in honor bound to offer no explanations. It's an entertaining book if read at a pretty rapid pace." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 28 '40 220w

"O. K."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 20 '40 40w

COHN, DAVID LEWIS. The good old days; with an introd. by Sinclair Lewis. 597p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. Sears, Roebuck & company (W) 40-27261

A half-serious, half-humorous survey of the contents of the Sears, Roebuck catalogs from 1905 to 1939, as source books for a history of American morals and manners. Index.

"Mr. Cohn . . . has an excellent wit and a still more excellent humor; his book is long, but we have not detected an overwritten paragraph, an overpressed conclusion, or a dull line in it. His obiter dicta are wise, and often they are uncommonly acute."
+ Atlantic Je '40 650w
Booklist 36:300 Ap 1 '40

"In the bright lexicon of merchandizing they have a saying that 'styles percolate downward.' Styles and sports and cultural interests and human vanity and methods of getting along in life all filter from the upper crust down to the various planes of people below, broadening out as they descend. Mr. Cohn, student of economic percolation, uses the mail-order catalogue for his drip pot, and the brew is stimulating, palatable and generous." Richardson Wright
+ Books p1 Mr 24 '40 1250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '40

"If books were classified as movies are, 'The Good Old Days' would be marked, 'unobjectionable for adults,' Class B. It is an amazing book, an amusing book, a quotable book, but withal a book to be taken seriously." Johanna Doniat
+ — Commonweal 32:25 Ap 26 '40 430w
J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 60w
Management R 29:267 Jl '40 290w

Reviewed by Slater Brown
New Repub 102:544 Ap 22 '40 700w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:23 Ap '40

"Mr. Cohn has done an enthralling book, to which one should add that the illustrations are almost incredibly fascinating. The only complaint the present reviewer feels like making is that Mr. Cohn sometimes works too hard to be funny. He didn't need to." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 31 '40 2400w

" 'The Good Old Days' is hereby recommended, first as the nostalgia book to end all nostalgia books, and second as an entertaining and instructive picture of American morals and manners. . . This is a job that for years has been crying to be done, and Mr. Cohn, who used to work for Sears, has done it with humor, sympathy, and intelligence, if too talkatively." Clifton Fadiman
+ New Yorker 16:83 Mr 23 '40 700w

" 'The Good Old Days' is an important contribution to the history of the immediate past. At times Mr. Cohn seems to wander somewhat far from the pages of the Sears, Roebuck catalogues and to offer too many observations, perhaps, on the political and economic problems of the era about which he writes. In the main, though, his excursions are illuminating. He has written a thoughtful, intelligent, and also an amusing book." H. F. Pringle
+ Sat R of Lit 21:3 Ap 6 '40 1900w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 24 '40 1100w
Time 35:100 Ap 22 '40 80w

Reviewed by Dixon Wecter
Yale R n s 29:829 summer '40 550w

COHON, BERYL DAVID. The prophets, their personalities and teachings. 232p $2 Scribner

224 Bible. Old Testament—Prophetical books. Prophets 39-33157

"A book on the Prophets by a rabbi of note, now at Temple Sinai, Boston, and on the faculty of Boston University." Living Church

"Mr. Cohon's concern is with the prophets as moral and religious teachers. He describes the historical background, without which many prophecies are unintelligible. Unfortunately we do not always know what the background is, because we do not know the date of many prophecies. For the most part Mr. Cohon accepts what might be called the conservative critical position. It will be clear then that this book will be of most service to those who are not concerned with critical questions, but with the prophets as a force in the development of the life of the Hebrew nation." L. W. Batten
Churchman 154:20 Je 1 '40 200w

Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 17:138 Ap '40 90w

"This is a rather good popular treatment, embellished with a free use of quotation from the biblical text. It is heavily dependent, however, on secondary sources and unfortunately these are not of the latest available." W. A. Irwin
J Religion 20:207 Ap '40 80w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McCracken
+ Living Church 101:6 D 6 '39 50w

COLBOURNE, MAURICE DALE. The real Bernard Shaw. 253p il $2.75 Dodd [8s 6d Dent]

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard [40-10818]

Both an informal biography, written by an ardent admirer, and an attempt to interpret the man and discover the essence of his teachings set forth in his works. Index.

"Mr. Colbourne's work is conspicuously thorough, objective, sympathetic, and in unfailing good taste. His exposition of what he calls the New Economics is manifestly lugged in by the ears; it strikes us as sheer nonsense; but that is a matter of only half-a-dozen pages, and is easily got over. On the whole, it would not suprise us if Mr. Colbourne's estimate of Mr. Shaw turned out to be pretty nearly definitive."
+ Atlantic S '40 150w

"The book is readable and pleasant, but not profound. . . The book is illustrated with interesting and unusual shots of the subject, and contains a complete list and description of the fifty plays. But the study of Shaw which analyses his style in relation to his ideas and purpose, and the theater of his day (and ours), and which traces his 'reality' through his influence, is yet to be written. Perhaps it is too soon to try." W. P. Eaton
+ — Books p13 Je 2 '40 320w

"Colbourne is not a close friend of Shaw, but he has gone to his work as some people go to the Bible to prove his points concerning the essence of Shaw's thoughts. His own words in digest reveal his meanings often obscured by brilliant garrulity. His career as a critic, dramatist, debater, world figure is summed up in a gigantic desire to 'breed virtue.' Recommended highly." George Freedley
+ Library J 65:396 My 1 '40 120w

"Mr. Colbourne denies interpretation: he merely claims to be boiling down. That assumes that Mr. Shaw's doctrine is an unwieldy, un-

COLBOURNE, M. D.—Continued
manageable lump. If the reader agrees to that he will appreciate Mr. Colbourne's services. For the 'potting' of 'G. B. S.' has been efficiently done and the dramatist's philosophy is well summarised in the two brief words 'breed virtue.' Moreover, the biographical element of the book is lively and well written." Ivor Brown

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 28 '39 260w

"The only drawback to Mr. Colbourne's pioneer attempt is that he overdoes the simplicity, and in trying to woo his readers, makes too many concessions about his subject. This may in fact account for his contradicting himself on important points. . . Moreover, although Mr. Colbourne has read an enormous amount of Shaw—he is often able to expound his author in a sort of echo of Shaw's own words—he has not read or remembered quite enough. . . But these limitations do not hold a large enough place in the present work to mar it. It remains in spite of them a beautifully balanced biography of a mind." Jacques Barzun

+ — Nation 150:761 Je 22 '40 500w

"It is true that [Shaw's] life and work seem now to belong definitely to the past, and that this book would have had a far more pertinent appeal even as late as a year ago. But it is nevertheless well worth a wide reading, both as an excellent biography and because it is clearly thought and brilliantly written, with some trenchant comment on the drama in general and particular, and with a far from unimportant social substance of its own." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p12 Je 2 '40 1000w

New Yorker 16:96 Ap 20 '40 40w

"Eloquent, well-arranged and often acute (as in his analysis of Shaw's economics) as Mr. Colbourne is, his book is doomed at the start because he holds hard to the conviction that Shaw 'is not a dramatist first and foremost, but a preacher and a teacher. . . It is indeed almost true to say that Shaw is a dramatist only by accident.' Nothing could be further from the truth than that: it is indeed amazing that Mr. Colbourne, holding such an opinion, should have contrived to produce so intelligent a study." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:12 My 11 '40 900w

Theatre Arts 24:613 Ag '40 250w

"The first third of The Real Bernard Shaw is biography; the rest is mainly comment and interpretation. The book is no world-beater in either respect. But thanks to abundant quotation from Shaw, who is almost as gifted a phrasemaker as Shakespeare, and to a graceful supporting performance by the author, it has its pleasant uses in both."

Time 35:86 Ap 8 '40 380w

"The author as a producer, actor, writer and member of the public is a whole-hearted admirer of Shaw's. One feels that he has hitched his wagon to the Shavian star and nothing will induce him to let go. It is not that he is entirely uncritical but that his criticisms are rather of the kind of which Shaw himself would approve."

Times [London] Lit Sup p672 N 18 '39 600w

COLBY, FRANCES BAINBRIDGE. The black winds blow. 369p $2.50 Harrison-Hilton 40-4727

"The story of a young Bostonian, a victim of tradition, who brings back home with him to meet the blandest kind of cruelty a girl whom he has met in Ireland." N Y Times

---

"So pronounced are Miss Colby's sympathies and antipathies that the reader is left with little choice in loyalties. He can do nothing but despise John, condemn his mother and deplore the obvious machinations of the girl John had formerly been engaged to. In spite of this weakness, 'The Black Winds Blow' tells a moving story and portrays an interesting picture of the conflict inherent in family relationships." Rose Feld

+ — Books p16 Mr 3 '40 500w

"There are pieces of nice writing in this ambitious novel; it is, unfortunately, true neither to reality nor to fiction." C. B.

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 200w

"This is a book by a new novelist, one who will undoubtedly be heard from in the future. Miss Colby has the true gift of the novelist, the ability to create character. She has also a delicate poetic feeling, and the power to project atmosphere. Had the second part of her book been equal to the first it would have been a novel not only of promise but of complete attainment." Grenville Vernon

+ — Commonweal 31:557 Ap 19 '40 160w

"This new novelist is a member of a distinguished writing family, and this first novel shows unusual promise. . . Miss Colby . . . does not succeed in convincing this reviewer of Professor Lemos' aliveness. . . Nor does Miss Colby improve her book—but rather cheapens it—by so melodramatic a closing. Barring these unevening factors, The Black Winds Blow remains a novel of distinction, owing to its lyrical prose. Its author will bear watching." E. V. A.

+ — Forum 103:329 Je '40 370w

"Sensitive and clever first novel. . . When it comes to winding up her story, it seems to me that Miss Colby errs, and that her ending is too harsh and too arbitrary. Here, I think, she shows her inexperience as a novelist. In attempting to avoid the banal, she contrives a tragic climax for which one is not emotionally prepared. In the same way she sometimes sins through excess." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 3 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:63 Mr 2 '40 50w

"It is in its non-fictional elements rather than as a novel that Miss Colby's book succeeds. Among its chief glories are the description of two parties: one in shabby, lively, easy, brilliant Dublin; and one in Boston. . . But the triumph of the book is Miss Colby's portrait of that guardian of the Boston pattern, the Boston matriarch, flat-shoed, flat-footed demon of mental and physical energy, merciless and unscrupulous, who carries realism to the point of brutality, under cover of an idealism carried to the point of fantasy. No one can have lived in Boston and not have met this matriarch." Katharine Simonds

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:15 Mr 9 '40 490w

COLBY, MERLE ESTES. Handbook for youth. 316p $2.50 Duell

362.7 Youth. Profession, Choice of

(W) 40-12563

"This book tells you about the various kinds of help you can get free or at little cost from various peace-time agencies of our federal government, both in Washington and in the place where you live. . . It describes about 80 organizations in America that have a majority of young people as members, and lists the names and addresses of several hundred more non-governmental organizations which serve youth in one way or another." (Pref) Contains a list of youth-serving organizations, and an index.

Booklist 37:6 S '40

"This is a useful volume of timely information for young people. . . We don't know just what good it would do young people to read some of the brief paragraphs on education, for example. On the other hand the information on youth organizations and the job material are both very fine. A 'must' for school libraries and boys' clubs, and worth individual ownership by anyone dealing with young people."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 27 '40 200w

COLE, ARTHUR CHARLES. A hundred years of Mount Holyoke college; the evolution of an educational ideal; pub. for Mount Holyoke college. 426p il $4 Yale univ. press

378 Mount Holyoke college. Lyon, Mary. Woolley, Mary Emma 40-27310

Centennial history of Mount Holyoke college, showing the gradual development of the "female seminary" of 1837 into the famous woman's college of the present. The author is professor of history at Western Reserve University. Index.

"The volume falls roughly into three sections. . . The first of these constitutes an outstanding contribution to our knowledge of American educational aims and achievements. . . The succeeding sections are less satisfying. . . A more painstaking endeavor to evaluate Mount Holyoke's place in the general scheme of American higher education could have detracted little from the appeal of this history to the Mount Holyoke alumnae. This criticism upon emphasis notwithstanding, the wealth of factual data brought together and the careful use of extensive primary sources make this book a valuable addition to the literature upon American education." C. M. Green

+ — Am Hist R 46:436 Ja '41 550w

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

"Mr. Cole's history is a splendid contribution to the story of American education."

+ Christian Century 57:283 F 28 '40 90w

"Professor Cole has written a big book—literally as well as figuratively. It is a good but ponderous-looking volume. Never mind. Once inside the cover the reader moves on so rapidly that he is glad there are 343 pages. Notes are relegated to a convenient appendix, and the book is well indexed. It serves, therefore, not only for reading but for reference and is a real contribution to the history of the American educational scene." M. H. McAfee

+ New Eng Q 13:532 S '40 1450w

N Y Times p3 Jl 7 '40 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 1100w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE). Greek tragedy. 260p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins] 40-27169

Detective story.

"Complete with Greek trimmings, political sidelights, superior tourists, some quiet fun, and young love in moderation. One of the Coles' best." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 F 25 '40 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 50w

Christian Century 57:250 F 21 '40 40w

"The interest of the book lies less with murder and mystery than with the amusing description of the tour and the tourists." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 9 '40 140w

"The Coles run as true to form as Father Knox. Nazis may be liquidated, but the Coles will always put up alibis for the Communists. Superintendent Wilson manages to solve one of the Coles' best crimes in spite of his inadequate knowledge of modern Greek." Ralph Partridge

+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:936 D 23 '39 110w

"The story is fairly good but by no means up to the standard set by the Coles in some of their earlier mystery tales." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p15 F 25 '40 170w

"Culchaw and crime neatly mixed. Reminiscent of Oliver Optic stories, which we bet few now alive remember. Slow but sure."

Sat R of Lit 21:19 Mr 2 '40 30w

"Mr. and Mrs. Cole have chosen an excellent setting for their latest mystery story and found an admirable title. . . A good tale, even if it tails off."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p719 D 9 '39 170w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE). The murder at the munition works. 326p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins] 40-13520

Detective story.

"This struck us as an average Coles tale, bogged down in spots with the most ungodly amount of politico-economic material you ever ran across in your search for entertainment. Still and all, it's a timely yarn." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p9 Jl 28 '40 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 80w

Christian Century 57:903 Jl 17 '40 40w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '40 170w

"The scenes of strikes and labour-meetings are well and intimately described, but the Coles' bias to the Left will lead the reader straight to the solution." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:143 Ag 10 '40 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 Ag 11 '40 200w

Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 3 '40 40w

"The characters are perfunctorily drawn, and the investigation, though exhaustive, remains flat." Nicholas Blake

— Spec 165:198 Ag 23 '40 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 28 '40 50w

Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 40w

"The mystery is not very mysterious. Had the inevitable question on page 273 been asked by the local police the story would not have run to novel length at all. What mystifies a reviewer, and possibly some ordinary readers, has to do not with fiction but real life. How is it that two experienced authors, whose past records show blameless pages of print, should be responsible for sentences which set up a ghostly, yet wracking, toothache?"

— Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Ag 3 '40 250w

COLE, JACKSON, pseud. Lone Star terror. 256p $2 Mill 40-6707

Western story.

"Not a quiet moment in this hell-for-leather affair, and plenty of engaging Western lingo." Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ap 7 '40 70w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 30w

"A slapdash, bang-up yarn of wild adventure and clever detective work, told with all the vim and gusto that have marked Jackson Cole's other tall tales of the exploits of Jim Hatfield and his horse Goldy." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 31 '40 200w

COLE, MRS NATALIE ROBINSON. Arts in the classroom; with phot. by C. K. Eaton. 137p $1.75 Day

707 Art—Study and teaching. Children as artists. Child study 40-30771

Sets forth the author's deductions and conclusions after teaching the arts to a group of fourth and fifth graders in a Los Angeles school where Mexican, Chinese and Japanese children mingled with Americans. The book is divided into sections dealing with painting,

COLE, N. R.—Continued
clay work, design and block printing, dancing and writing. It is illustrated with photographs of the children's work in these arts.

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40
School & Society 52:112 Ag 17 '40 20w

COLE, STEWART GRANT. Liberal education in a democracy; a charter for the American college. 309p $3 Harper

378 Colleges and universities. Education, Higher 40-12094

A survey of the past and present of the American college of liberal arts and suggestions for its improvement as a vital factor in the democratic life. Index of names. Subject index.

Booklist 37:6 S '40

"Dr. Cole's book is so exceptionally high-minded and searching that one hesitates to risk captiousness for the sake of criticism. The fact of the matter is, however, that a good deal of his discourse is syrup rather than sugar. One does not feel that his thought has quite crystallized, or that the fine particles of truth rub against his fingers (or the reader's) as the exposition unfolds." G. N. Shuster
+ — Books p16 Ag 11 '40 1100w

"Liberal Education in a Democracy is a book of questions. Some of them are answered, and in the answering others are raised. It is a stirring and a stimulating book. It renews faith in the educative process; it arouses an eagerness to be doing. At least one educator is indebted to Dr. Cole and is happy to recognize that debt." K. I. Brown
+ Christian Century 58:189 F 5 '41 1300w

"The author does much better than do some of the growing bloc of vociferous education critics, for he builds up a substitute plan, one that compels attention and challenges thought." C. H. Brewer
+ — Churchman 154:19 S 1 '40 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

Reviewed by James Feibleman
Ethics 51:112 O '40 900w

"The chief value of the discussion lies in the fact that it goes beyond criticism to the proposal of a constructive solution, and although it does not suggest specific programmatic procedures, it does provide an exploratory analysis of the problem and lay the foundation for numerous research problems that must be answered before the issues involved can be resolved. The text is well documented." W. C. Bower
+ J Religion 21:98 Ja '41 430w

Reviewed by Theodore Brameld
New Repub 103:877 D 23 '40 290w

COLEMAN, ELLIOTT. An American in Augustland [and other poems]. 82p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

811 40-11363

The title poem in this volume by an American poet, pictures England in August, 1939, before the outbreak of war but with the shadow of war lying over the countryside. The remainder of the volume consists of short poems on a variety of subjects.

"The poem is a commentary built on good visual imagery, metrically varied, better in its strictly formal lyric sections than in its looser free verse statements. It reflects the impact of a vivid experience on a young, sensitive mind; but it lacks the detachment, the depth of reflection and interpretation that a more mature poet with a grasp of historical perspective might bring to it. A section of shorter lyrics in the book have such a high measure of technical accomplishment that one may expect a good deal in Mr. Coleman's future as a poet."
+ — Books p12 D 15 '40 150w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 5 '40 70w

Reviewed by John Ritchey
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 12 '40 110w

"Mr. Coleman's verse is a pretty study in paradox. Its style, as well as its subject matter, is a contradiction of influences. . . Mr. Coleman's technique shows the same wavering between the expected cadence and the brusque dissonance. There is definite skill here, considerable awareness, and no little imagination. But Mr. Coleman has still to combine a sense of timeliness with whatever may be his particular tone." Louis Untermeyer
Sat R of Lit 22:7 Jl 6 '40 220w

"Because Mr. Coleman has unusually keen powers of observation, something like those possessed by an excellent journalist, this poem communicates a good deal of the confusion, the courage, the tragedy, and the nervous inebriation that must have attended those unhappy months around September, 1939. . . Yet 'An American in Augustland' is not a good poem. The author has a coarseness of poetic taste that prevents him from enduing his observations with the vitality of true poetic expression." R. W. Short
— + Yale R n s 30:213 autumn '40 190w

COLEMAN, JOHN WINSTON. Slavery times in Kentucky. 351p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

326.9769 Slavery in the U.S.—Kentucky. Kentucky—Social life and customs 40-31785

"Much of the material for this book, hitherto unpublished, has been found in the yellowing court records which played an important role in directing life and labor in ante-bellum Kentucky. It is largely from these records, which took cognizance of the lowly as well as the well-to-do, that [the author has] drawn to present an account of the life, manners and customs of the 'peculiar institution' as it existed in the Bluegrass State." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Coleman has tried to tell a full and fair story; to do justice both to the Kentucky slaveholders and to the unfortunate race which served them. He has used a large and varied quantity of materials. He has not, however, been able to distinguish clearly between propaganda and sound historical documents. 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' 'Slavery as It Is,' and many other distorting products of the abolition crusade are accepted as historical evidence of equal value to the Court Records and the contemporary documents which the slave business itself produced. Unconsciously the author's values are those of the abolitionists; his approach is that of the post-war generation." Avery Craven
Books p29 N 17 '40 1150w

"Although primarily for specialists the volume is a particularly readable example of the valuable regional historical studies emanating from Chapel Hill. Photographs, old prints, and facsimiles of old handbills and other documents add both to its charm and to its value."
+ Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 100w

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS NARRONA (BARTON), and THORN, ALICE GREEN. The little singing time; a book of songs for the nursery; il. by Charlotte Becker. 40p $1.50 Day

784 Children's songs (W) 40-27262

Short songs with simple music to be sung to very small children. They are suggestive of the various aspects of the little child's day.

Booklist 36:308 Ap 1 '40

"Strongly recommended to young mothers for its music, this book will be loved by little children for its pictures, which are of babies and very small folks in beguiling attitudes. Its feature is the shortness and simplicity of its tunes, usually no more than a few notes, but so fitting the purpose that they practically sing themselves." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 5 '40 240w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 16:170 My '40 100w

"We have no other song book just like this one. It is particularly recommended both for private and public libraries and for nursery schools." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 65:354 Ap 15 '40 120w

"The authors out of their musical knowledge and affectionate understanding of children have performed a very real service in giving us this unique and charming book." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p9 Je 23 '40 400w

COLGRAVE, BERTRAM, ed. and tr. Two lives of Saint Cuthbert; a life by an anonymous monk of Lindisfarne and Bede's prose life; texts, translation, and notes. 375p $5.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge]

B or 92 Cuthbert, Saint [40-35359]

"The two prose Lives have already been edited more than once by the Bollandists and others, but without sufficient collation of manuscripts and with errors of reading which tend to pass uncorrected from edition to edition. A new edition of these important texts based upon a critical study of the manuscripts was much to be desired, and this Mr. Colgrave has given us. He provides a careful description of the manuscripts of the two Lives, a judicious edition of the Latin texts and an admirable translation into English. A commentary deals with many points of hagiological and historical interest." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by M. L. W. Laistner

Am Hist R 46:379 Ja '41 700w

"The introduction and notes are not written with medieval, or even orthodox Faith, perhaps, but the viewpoint appears more genuinely scientific than simply skeptical, and the author's liking for Saint Cuthbert and the chroniclers is thoroughly genuine. The lives themselves are altogether charming and invigorating." P. B.

+ Commonweal 32:450 S 20 '40 330w

"The book is a valuable addition to the material for the study of the great age of Northumbrian culture."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p294 Je 15 '40 330w

COLLIN DELAVAUD, MARIE (MOREAL DE BREVANS) (MARIE COLMONT, pseud). Along the coast; with lithographs in ten colors by Alexandra Exter; adapted by Margaret T. Parker. [20p] $1.50 Harper

39-34162

"An oversize picture book containing a simply written factual text telling of the effect of the wind and waves on the coastline, something of the purpose of lighthouses, and the need for harbors. The information given is for older children than the format would indicate. Five double-spread lithographs in 10 colors make this a striking book. Not a small library item." Booklist

Booklist 36:240 F 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ap 21 '40 110w

"A lavishly and stunningly illustrated book." Ruth Page

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 9 '39 30w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 64:849 N 1 '39 70w

"Book is not childlike in tone but would be fine for the child with an inquiring mind whose parents had patience to answer all the questions which would undoubtedly be asked." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 65:172 F 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 My 5 '40 130w

COLLIN DELAVAUD, MARIE (MOREAL DE BREVANS) (MARIE COLMONT, pseud). Down the river; with lithographs in ten colors by Alexandra Exter; adapted by Margaret T. Parker. [24p] $1.50 Harper

Rivers—Juvenile literature 40-27375

Brief text and colored pictures show the water cycle from cloud, brook, and mountain stream, to the river and the sea, with some information about bridges, boats, and power plants.

Booklist 36:347 My 1 '40

"Parents or teachers should find the books an excellent introduction to geography for children from five to eight years old." Marian Herr

+ Library J 65:456 My 15 '40 50w

"The makers of the books do not seem to have been entirely clear in their own minds about what they wanted to do and the audience to whom they wished to appeal. The many double-spreads, the lavish use of color in the lithographs and the briefness of the text suggest that the books are to be used as picture books; but for the child of picture-book age there is not much in the pictures besides the bright colors to satisfy him. . . On the other hand, as factual books for boys and girls old enough to be interested in subject-matter they do not give sufficiently full and detailed information." A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 My 5 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:155 N '40

COLLIN DELAVAUD, MARIE (MOREAL DE BREVANS) (MARIE COLMONT, pseud). Up the mountain; with lithographs in ten colors by Alexandra Exter; adapted by Margaret T. Parker. [24p] $1.50 Harper

Mountains—Juvenile literature 40-27376

Brief text and colored pictures describe the mountains, their formation, and the animals and plants that live upon them, with some material on mountain sports and the work of those who live on the mountain farms.

Booklist 36:347 My 1 '40

Reviewed by Marian Herr

Library J 65:456 My 15 '40 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 My 5 '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:155 N '40

COLLINGWOOD, ROBIN GEORGE. Essay on metaphysics. 364p $6 (18s) Oxford

110 Metaphysics

"Formally stated, the main thesis of the book is not only that metaphysics qua ontology must be viewed as a damnosa hereditas from Aristotle . . . but that Aristotle's further definition of metaphysics as 'wisdom' (i.e., the goal of philosophy) and 'theology' remains profoundly true in the sense that there is an essential science of metaphysics, i.e., the historical science of laying bare the 'absolute presuppositions' which lie at the root of natural science and philosophy, comparing them genetically by the skilled and laborious scrutiny of the words and works of their hierophants, and detecting the strains and stresses which have been operative in the secular processes attending their gradual and subtle modifications." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by John Goheen

J Philos 38:48 Ja 16 '41 800w

COLLINGWOOD, R. G.—Continued

"This is not just a readable and interesting book; it is one of the important philosophical works of our generation and one that shows that reason is not yet extinct." A. D. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 6 '40 350w

Reviewed by B. M. Baldwin

+ Nature 147:7 Ja 4 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler

N Y Times p47 D 1 '40 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p240 My 18 '40 380w

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Gardening for fun, health and money. 297p il $2 Appleton-Century

635 Gardening (W) 40-4934

Practical book describing the various steps in both vegetable and flower gardening. Partial contents: The environment of plants; Making your vegetable garden; About seed, seedlings, bulbs, and cuttings; Vegetables for your garden; A vegetable garden without soil; Making your flower garden; Flowers for your garden; The rock garden and water garden. Index.

"To the present reviewer there seems little justification for the publication of this book, for its writing is stilted, its practical advice superficial and largely unexplained and many of its references and statements are open to question, at least." R. S. Lemmon

— Books p13 Je 16 '40 100w

Boston Transcript p13 Ap 11 '40 160w

Churchman 154:16 My 1 '40 40w

"A 'how' book for the beginner, and a pretty good one."

+ New Repub 102:321 Mr 4 '40 40w

"The present volume is packed full of information, and whether that knowledge be the result of personal experience or of theoretical study, it makes an impressive appearance in print." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 3 '40 280w

Wis Lib Bul 36:64 Ap '40

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Science on parade. 314p il $3 Appleton-Century

500 Science (W) 40-29556

"This book explains to the layman the outstanding recent developments in the following fields: astronomy, aviation, chemistry, electricity, health, light, music, photography, radio facsimile, synthetic speech, and television. . . Specifically the book discusses the new 200-inch telescope, the Atlantic superclippers, the new synthetic chemistry, man-made lightning, the sterilamp and its death ray, the new cool-light lamps, the electronic piano, the three-color photographic process, the Voder talking machine, and the new developments in television." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 37:265 F 15 '41

"Mr. Collins gives detailed drawings describing the clipper planes, artificial lightning, [etc]. . . His book is easy reading and good information for the users of these products. A serious criticism is his use of trade-marked names, often those of a single competitor, without mentioning the competing trade-marks of other companies who make and sell the same material or device." Gerald Wendt

Books p19 D 15 '40 360w

"The value of the book lies not in its use as reference material by the student, but in the new scientific vistas it will open up for the lay reader." Claire Nolte

Library J 65:1093 D 15 '40 130w

COLLINS, GERALD. Round the world in industry. 180p il $2 Chemical pub. co. [5s Newnes]

604 Industry. Occupations 40-26829

"This book gives graphic descriptions of the routine lives of men engaged in many kinds of work in many parts of the earth—on jobs involving constant danger and demanding long and special training and experience, steady nerves and ever-ready resource. Mr. Collins first takes his reader on an imaginary journey by the 'millionaires' train' from New York to Chicago—960 miles in 945 minutes, with five stops—and afterwards describes the building of a Cunard liner, life on a Newfoundland sealing ship, cattle-raising and bronco-busting in Australia, prospecting for gold, diamonds, and oil in various countries, cable-laying on the bed of the Atlantic, [etc]." Times [London] Lit Sup

N Y New Tech Bks 25:35 Jl '40

"All these exciting topics are treated with sufficient zest and journalistic skill to maintain the reader's interest from start to finish. Some of the author's 'explanations' of the processes involved in these activities are not above criticism, but the lapses will not seriously detract from the general reader's enjoyment of the book. There are sixteen admirable full-page plates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 20 '40 200w

COLLINS, NORMAN. Gold for my bride [Eng title: I shall not want]. 435p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Gollancz]

40-13261

This story tells how John Marco fell into sin—secret sin—how he was forced into a loveless marriage, how he built up a huge business and how in the end his sin demanded retribution and he died in poverty and disgrace.

Booklist 37:12 S '40

Reviewed by Iris Barry

Books p6 Jl 28 '40 750w

"Norman Collins's eighth novel is a big and ambitious one. It has much to recommend it in architecture and in substance. Built on solid Victorian lines, it preaches that the wages of sin are death. Yet it is written with so much astute observation and with such gay humor that it never becomes boring. As fulsome as a suite of overstuffed parlor furniture, it is nevertheless so firmly and surely built, and pounded together so energetically, that most readers will go on to the end absorbed. Sometimes one may wonder why the dickens one does." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 550w

Reviewed by W. J. Grace

Commonweal 32:353 Ag 16 '40 420w

"John began as a weakly good young man who succumbed to sudden temptation, and the forced marriage did the rest. Gradually his religion left him, gradually cracks appeared in his morality, and in its management of gradualness this best of Mr. Collins's novels earns high marks. Doubtless the ghost of Arnold Bennett smilingly approves." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p5 Mr 12 '40 420w

"The morality is soundly Victorian about the corrupting power of money, the consequences of loveless marriage are rammed home, and the characters have a delightfully bad time. However, after page 252 they start all over again having a bad time for the same reasons and the plot is complicated by an elaborate anecdote concerning the development of a big shop, which is singularly unconvincing, a great pity for the first half of the book is very enjoyable." Anthony West

— + New Statesman & Nation 19:372 Mr 16 '40 220w

"'Gold for My Bride' is frankly in the thriller class. As a study of a soul in torment it is not to be taken too seriously, but as a lively baroque yarn it is tops. Or at least it is tops until the latter part of the story, which flags a little in comparison with the admirable first half. . . Magic and freshness of invention are, indeed, Mr. Collins's prime assets. They redeem what might otherwise be a merely melodramatic book. As it is, although 'Gold for My Bride' is full of shrewd tricks, they are tricks which enthrall one and make one ready to be fooled. That is the test of the successful magician." E. A. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 28 '40 950w

"It's the stuff our grandparents fed on with serious absorption and it is a tribute to Mr. Collins' skill as a story-teller that we can read his period piece with even a little of the fascination they must have felt for its originals. You don't 'believe' in these monofacial characters and this grim intensifying of the guilt-and-remorse theme any more than you 'believe' in a perfect reproduction of a Rembrandt. But you have to admit that the man who did the reproduction is clever. So is Mr. Collins." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:66 Jl 27 '40 410w

"Norman Collins has succeeded where many novelists have failed: he has written an interesting, almost exciting, novel about extremely dull people. . . 'Gold for My Bride' could well be shortened by a curtailment of the elaborate study of a shop. One wishes, too, that the novelist were not so stingy with his humor. . . But a reviewer should be ashamed of quibbling, 'Gold for My Bride' is a powerful novel, rich in incident and characterization." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:10 Jl 27 '40 500w

"This novel has, to a valuable degree, the story-telling gift, the Midas touch of melodrama, combined with excellent realism, the moral certitude. There is much to be said, at all times, for the inevitability of gradualness." John Marks
Spec 164:424 Mr 22 '40 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 23 '40 430w
Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

COLLIS, MAURICE. Sanda Mala. 328p $2.50 Carrick [7s 6d Faber]
40-27140

"An unknown painter who in youth, funnily enough, used to dream about a half-visible Burmese girl, is summoned suddenly to Burma, all expenses paid, and with a good commission to paint the portraits of an aristocratic, not to say royal, Burmese family. Thereafter, with a great deal of light comedy and picturesqueness, and with a few little ups and downs to give body to an idle dream, he woos and wins the hitherto half-invisible Burmese girl." Spec

"This is not only a competent book; it has interest and meaning and beauty."
+ Atlantic Je '40 120w
Booklist 36:264 Mr 1 '40

"The story as a story is labored and artificial, but it is interesting not only for its scene and atmosphere but especially as it exemplifies the freedom and courage of British self-criticism, even in questions of colonial administration and racial attitude." John Patton
+ — Books p8 F 18 '40 600w

Reviewed by John Bovey
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 210w

"Mr. Collis has given us another of his highly coloured, highly spiced Burmese romances, but it is not one of his best. . . The story is something too artificial and improbable, but Mr. Collis knows his Burma." J. D. Beresford
— + Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '39 190w
New Repub 102:286 F 26 '40 50w

"This light and readable story is ideal escape reading; it has something of the virtue which belongs to Lord Dunsany's best work—the creation of a still, golden atmosphere in which magic seems as probable as tramways. If it has a defect it is in the stress placed on the Irish charm of the Burmese." Anthony West
+ — New Statesman & Nation 18:622 O 28 '39 230w

"Though in the early part of the book Mr. Collis's style is dry, and the romance would seem one destined to result in more misery than happiness if either of the young people were a real person, the pictures of Burma and the characters of Dellahooke and Sanda Mala give the novel life and plenty of color." L. M. Field
+ — N Y Times p7 F 18 '40 500w
New Yorker 16:82 F 17 '40 50w

"In spite of technical defects and its conventional pattern, the story has charm and distinction." I. A. R. Wylie
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:12 F 17 '40 200w

"Sanda Mala is light reading of the easiest kind—a very brightly coloured fairy tale. . . Scenery and character are gracefully touched in." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 163:630 N 3 '39 140w
Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 300w

"Sanda Mala—the Garland of the Moon—a Shan princess, is a gorgeous character to whom Mr. Collis has done full justice. He is to be congratulated on having written an attractive story, with a meaning for those who look for it, against a background which gives full play for his power of lucid and arresting description."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p671 N 18 '39 300w

COLMONT, MARIE, pseud. See Collin Delavaud, M.

COLUM, PADRAIC. Where the winds never blew and the cocks never crew; il. by Richard Bennett. 96p $1.50 Macmillan
(W) 40-33523

The adventures of some wandering animals in a never, never land where nobody ever died or ever was born. For young readers.

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 29 '40 240w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk M 16:429 N '40 60w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:31 Ja '41 110w

"Only an Irish poet could make this story of wandering barnyard animals at once so convincing and so magical." Lena Barksdale
+ Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 20w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
N Y Times p10 Ja 12 '41 300w

"Charming." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 20w

"This folk story combines the magic of make-believe land with animal life familiar to all children and is an interesting interpretation of myths and fairy stories, presented in the author's characteristic manner."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 22 '40 290w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). When there is love. 265p $2 Macrae Smith co.
(W) 40-13625

On her wedding day Dorrine left the party to go riding with an impetuous ex-suitor, Barry, in order to break the news that she was married. The news proved such a shock that he wrecked the car. From that inauspicious beginning the early days of her marriage were filled with jolts, until a final one which proved to her husband that he was the one Dorrine really loved.

Booklist 37:37 O 1 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 Ag 25 '40 110w

"The jealousy theme is worked pretty hard and some of the plot is as complicated as life itself, but on the whole the book is better than average light fiction." Beatrice Sherman
+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 18 '40 190w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Where the heart goes. 278p $2 Dodd

39-25962

Romantic story of a girl who met her future husband during the hurricane of 1938, when they spent several hours on the roof of a ruined house. The course of their marriage did not run smoothly at first, but after the girl had gone to Madagascar and nearly lost her life the outcome promised to be peaceful.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p20 O 29 '39 270w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 3 '40 200w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS), and BIRDSALL, MRS HELEN MARIE (BRANT). Dream within her hand; the life of Dr Cornelia Chase Brant. 313p il $2.75 Macrae Smith co.

B or 92 Brant, Mrs Cornelia (Chase) (W) 40-27377

Biography of an American woman doctor, Cornelia Chase Brant. When her mother died, the future doctor was fourteen. She and a younger brother made their home with three Quaker aunts who kept a private school in Newark, New Jersey, and kept their minds actively interested in woman's place in the world. At thirty-six Cornelia Brant, a married woman with three children, determined to study medicine. The book contains the story of her life from the Newark days to the present. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:343 My 1 '40

"The best part of the book describes [the] Newark life. When the authors come nearer to the present they encounter the difficulties of all those who write biographies of living friends. They never really come to grips with Dr. Brant's medical career, beyond recording some of its triumphs. . . But if the authors are sketchy in their handling of their 'heroine's' professional career, they never forget their main theme, the maintenance of the delicate equilibrium of a happy married life, and although they err on the side of sentimentality, they have various interesting things to say about this difficult and rewarding art." A. B. Parsons
+ — Books p10 Ap 28 '40 500w

"The friend of Mrs. Brant's daughter from college days and long intimate with the Brant household, Mrs. Colver has given her book, with Helen Brant Birdsall's help, the ease and fullness of a novel; and its facts are indeed as interesting. From changing times and burning questions and difficult problems she has isolated a human story of extraordinary force and significance, and has told it with warmth, vigor and charm."
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 28 '40 700w
Sat R of Lit 22:20 My 11 '40 240w

COMBS, WILLIAM HOBART, and COLE, WILLIAM EARLE. Tennessee, a political study. 353p maps $2 Univ. of Tenn.

342.768 Tennessee—Politics and government 40-30007

"This volume is the joint product of two social scientists, one of whom was, and the other of whom still is, a member of the faculty at the University of Tennessee. One is a political scientist, the other a sociologist. The book is written with two major ends in view: to bring together in a single volume pertinent information with regard to the structure and functioning of the state and local governments, and to 'improve the administration of governmental practices and the scope of intelligent understanding relative to government within Tennessee.' The work is divided into fourteen chapters, followed by a selective bibliography and index." Ann Am Acad

"The volume should be of much value both to scholars in the field and to students of government and citizenship in Tennessee." D. W. Knepper
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1233 D '40 240w

"The material is well organized, the scholarship is sound, and the presentation is clear and interesting." W. B. Graves
+ Ann Am Acad 213:240 Ja '41 800w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE, ed. Documents of American history. 2d ed 2v in 1 450,642p $4 Crofts

973 U.S.—History—Sources (W) 40-32281

"This is an enlarged rather than a revised edition; it now includes important legislation and judicial interpretations of the New deal, treaties, party platforms and presidential addresses." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1934.

Booklist 37:118 N 15 '40
Social Studies 31:379 D '40 20w

COMPTON, ARTHUR HOLLY. The human meaning of science. 88p $1 Univ. of N.C. press

501 Science—Philosophy. Religion and science (W) 40-27065

The book is based on three lectures delivered at the University of North Carolina in November, 1939. Contents: Science, religion, and human growth; Human freedom and physical law; The need for God in an age of science.

Booklist 36:233 F 15 '40

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 30 '40 950w

"It is easy to read, for the clarity of expression in so small a compass is remarkable; every page has its quotable sentences. But it is not glib; it requires effort; an effort that is amply repaid. Is it possible that such men of science as Dr. Compton will lead us out of our wilderness? We give it four stars." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 154:16 My 15 '40 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

"These lectures are lucidly written and brilliantly illustrated. They give impressive testimony to the concern felt by scientists for the human significance of the world and the world-view which science has helped to create. . . Professor Compton's principal theses will leave many still unconvinced. It is difficult to deal with his first proposition that 'it is primarily through the growth of science and technology that man has acquired those attributes which distinguish him from the animals, which have indeed made it possible for him to become human,' for he does not maintain it consistently." D. D. Williams
+ — J Religion 20:305 Jl '40 750w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:39 Jl '40

"The author, an eminent physicist, deals ably with various points of contact between science and religion. In particular he resolves many apparent conflicts between the scientific and religious views of life, showing them to arise from misinterpretation of opposing viewpoints." G. R. H.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Mr 16 '40 70w
Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Ja '40 190w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg
Survey 76:277 S '40 250w

COMPTON, RALPH THEODORE. Social security payroll taxes. 446p $5 Commerce clearing house

331.254 Old age pensions. Insurance, Unemployment

"The Social Security Payroll Taxes deals extensively with the provisions regulating the filing of payroll tax returns and the requirements to be met when claiming benefits under the various titles of the Federal Social Security Act." (Harvard Business R) Index.

Am Econ R 30:648 S '40 40w
Reviewed by P. H. Wueller
Harvard Business R 19:259 winter '41 70w

COMPTON'S PICTURED ENCYCLOPEDIA. War supplement. 102p il maps $1.50 c1939 Compton

940.53 European war, 1939- (W) 40-14290

"An alphabetical reference book of the European war: persons, places, and events; armies, navies, air forces, and economic resources; weapons, tactics, and strategy, illustrated with photographs, drawings, and special maps completely indexed." Subscription Bks Bul

"This is no book for babes, but by the time a child is old enough to ask a question about headline or radio news from the front, this is a book for him." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 F 25 '40 220w
Social Studies 31:144 Mr '40 20w

"Although the book could not possibly keep abreast of events it does serve as a temporary war handbook defining new terms, new uses of World war expressions, and giving biographies of individuals recently in world news. Its value lies not in its comprehensiveness but rather in its consideration of a field where little information is available. It is recommended for use in home, school and library."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:23 Ap '40 430w
Reviewed by Read Bain
Survey 76:117 Mr '40 320w

COMSTOCK, MRS HARRIET THERESA (SMITH). Doctor Hargreave's assistant. 270p $2 Doubleday 40-8546

When young Kenneth Dane became Dr Hargreave's assistant he was reputed to be indifferent to women. But Dr Hargreave had two pretty daughters and tho Kenneth fell in love with quiet, sensible Diane, it was lovely, mercurial Mimsie who married him and made them all unhappy for years.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 7 '40 160w

"A pleasantly entertaining story in which love, science and duty vie for top honors." B. S.
+ N Y Times p7 My 26 '40 230w

CONCISE Oxford dictionary of English literature. 567p $2.50 (6s) Oxford

820.3 English literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. (W) 40-27031

This work is based upon Sir Paul Harvey's Oxford Companion to English Literature which, first published in 1932 (Book Review Digest, 1932) has established itself as a standard reference work. The present volume is an abridgment of the original, eliminating a considerable amount of detail, and containing also some additional matter dealing with contemporary writers. The dictionary arranges in alphabetical order authors and titles, characters from books and plays, mythological and historical entries, etc.

Booklist 36:211 F '40

"The book offers a very great usefulness. . . Writers and readers alike should find it invaluable."
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '40 320w

"The conciseness of definition and description is excellent, the choice of topics careful. The items of American literary history reflect critical judgments sometimes a little out of date; yet, on the whole, it would be difficult to find a more satisfactory handbook."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 13 '40 90w

"In these days of 'Information, Please!' here is a handbook of the kinds of information that many seem pleased to have. The material does not concern English (or English and American) literature alone." E. N. Jenckes
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 13 '40 1200w

"Sir Paul Harvey's 'Oxford Companion to English Literature' has been so successful that there ought to be a demand for this abridgment of it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p582 O 7 '39 80w

CONDLIFFE, JOHN BELL. The reconstruction of world trade; a survey of international economic relations. 427p $3.75 Norton

337 Economic policy. Commercial policy. World politics 40-29409

"This book is a survey of international economic relations. It takes into account the fundamental conflict in the modern world between political and economic forces. It is concerned with the barriers to world trade that may be counted as a cause of the present war and that remain to be dealt with when peace comes. The aim of the author has been to present as clearly as possible the fundamental issues that must be faced in [post-war political and economic] reconstruction." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41
Reviewed by J. A. D. Haas
Harvard Business R 19:247 winter '41 500w

"Professor Condliffe's description of the symptoms of world trade pathology is admirable. Perhaps his diagnosis is, in places, somewhat over-simplified and, as he intimates, the forecasts must be tentative at this stage of world events. Nevertheless, the whole picture he paints is exceptionally interesting and clear-sighted." E. G. Draper
+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 Ja 18 '41 800w

CONGDON, HERBERT WHEATON. Old Vermont houses; the architecture of a resourceful people; il. by the author. 190p $3 Daye

720.9743 Architecture—Vermont. Vermont—Historic houses, etc. 40-27378

Over a hundred photographs illustrate this volume on the historical wooden, stone and brick houses and churches of Vermont. Some items of Vermont history are contained in the course of the study. Index.

Booklist 36:340 My 1 '40

"The book should be in any library, public or private, that has at heart the preservation of American ideals. For, as the title makes clear, this is the architecture of a resourceful people."
+ Books p10 Jl 28 '40 320w

"This is a humanized book, sharpened by Yankee curiosity and humor. The author looks at his houses with an eye to their setting, and he tells about them clearly, appreciatively and specifically."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 100w

"A richly informative, as well as beautifully illustrated book. . . In addition to its historic and pictorial interest the book offers suggestive pointers to the reader who is planning to build or restore a house in the country."
+ N Y Times p21 My 26 '40 300w
New Yorker 16:100 Ap 13 '40 30w

"'Old Vermont Houses' is not merely a book of regional interest or 'promotion'; it is a contribution to American architectural history as recorded in photography and analysis. Moreover, Mr Congdon sometimes—as in the chapter on doorways—keeps in mind the person who may seek suggestions for houses being built today. The text includes some local traditions, which, though admittedly not verified, have entertainment value and usually elucidate the book's purpose."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 31 '40 900w

CONGER, GEORGE PERRIGO. The ideologies of religion [a spectrum study]. 271p $2.50 Round table

201 Religion—Philosophy 40-33408

"An analysis of the various systems which have contributed to man's religious development—Occultism, Mysticism, Supernaturalism, Idealism, Pragmatism, Evolutionism, Naturalism, Humanism, and Economic Nationalism. The tendencies, the weaknesses, and the abiding influences of each are discussed as well as their alliance with religion. . . The concluding chapter is on the source of origin of religion." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Christian Century 57:1554 D 11 '40 1000w

"The book is a candid examination, and should provoke thought and discussion." E. L. Pennington
+ Churchman 155:19 Ja 1 '41 160w

CONKLIN, GROFF. All about houses. 194p il $2 Messner

690 Building. Dwellings 40-27032

Describes how a simple small house is made, the trades which are involved in its making, the skills needed for its design, construction, and equipment, and the tools and materials required to put it together. Illustrated with many photographs. Glossarial index.

Booklist 36:216 F '40

"It should be valuable to the home carpenter or to anyone planning to let contracts for a house, since it calls attention to principles as well as methods of modern construction (for example, in building a fireplace). End papers are blueprints of the particular house described. Useful in the vocational collection and not too technical for a twelve-year-old. Unfortunately, all the illustrations are bled on the page and narrow inner margins make it impractical for rebinding." Maude Adams
+ Library J 65:38 Ja 1 '40 110w

CONNELY, WILLARD. The reign of Beau Brummell. 296p $2.75 Greystone [10s 6d Cassell]

B or 92 Brummell, George Bryan 40-33520

A full-length, sympathetic biography of the greatest of the English dandies, who died in a French hospital for the insane, just one hundred years ago. Index.

Atlantic N '40 240w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker
Books p28 N 24 '40 450w

"This is a splendid character study, filled with anecdotes interesting and amusing and inclined to be superficial. There is no mention of the epoch of dandyism and its theories of which Brummell was the great exponent. The author knows his subject thoroughly and has written a very enjoyable book." F. S. Ambrose
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '41 250w

"The whole is a readable narrative, with the glamour of Brummell's sartorial brilliance, his wit and extravagance, and his downfall depicted with confident ease and liveliness." B. I. Evans
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 29 '40 250w

"Mr. Connely's book is really less the story of a reign than of an individual human being. The Beau in his decline is even more interesting than in his glory. The picture of the period is the natural background to the portrait of the man. And the whole biography is written with a delightful verve and a richly imaginative approximation of its amazing time, place and characters."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 12 '41 600w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 23:17 O 26 '40 320w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 164:445 Mr 29 '40 1500w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 19 '40 410w

Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 30 '40 3050w

CONNETT, EUGENE VIRGINIUS. Random casts; il. by Ralph L. Boyer and Milton C. Weiler. ltd ed 195p $7.50 Derrydale

799.1755 Trout fishing. Trout. Flies, Artificial 39-15387

"[This volume] is directed to the angler who already knows something about trout fishing, but who wants to know more—particularly, more about taking difficult trout from heavily fished-over waters. . . [It] is divided into two parts. The first is written from the point of view of the angler, with attention to angling methods, tackle, flies, fly-tying materials, etc. . . The second part is a consideration of the trout itself—trout instincts and feeding habits, and the trout's point of view." Books

"The author may not be the best wet-fly fisherman in America, but he is certainly the best of those who are articulate on the subject. In addition, he is a skilled hand with dry-fly and nymph. This proficiency at several methods especially qualifies him to instruct. His style makes him easy to read." Cyril Coggins
+ Books p22 My 12 '40 260w

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 8 '39 230w

CONNINGTON, J. J., pseud. See Stewart, A. W.

CONNOLLY, JAMES BRENDAN. Port of Gloucester; with etchings by Max Kuehne. (Seaport ser) 333p $3 Doubleday

974.45 Gloucester, Massachusetts (W) 40-30613

Anecdotal and historical account of the famous Massachusetts seaport town, settled by the English in 1623. Fishermen, privateers, Grand Bankers, and their share in the history of the town are featured in this first book in the Doubleday Doran Seaport series. Index.

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

"This stirring and informative volume, a rare combination of romance and fact, inaugurates a new publishing series which ought to go far in the public esteem if it is carried forward with the same happy choice of authorship in succeeding issues. . . 'The Port of Gloucester' is a book that fulfills its romantic opportunities, a book that satisfies the case from cover to cover." Lincoln Colcord
+ Books p6 O 20 '40 1150w

New Repub 104:94 Ja 20 '41 60w

"'Port of Gloucester' is the sort of book that was just crying to be done, a narrative which should tie together a multitude of strings. There is an élan to Jim's pages. His veins don't run blood, they run Gloucester. His book is the indelible, authentic and lasting thing." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p10 O 6 '40 1400w

"Journalistic style, and swift reading."
New Yorker 16:79 O 5 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p8 O 15 '40 900w

CONNOLLY, VERA LEONA. Judy Grant: editor; with a pref. by Eleanor Carroll. 301p $2 Dodd

40-7709

At twenty-one Judy Grant becomes editor of a famous Woman's magazine, all in the course of a year. In addition the story of the breaking up of a large narcotic smuggling ring becomes a factor in her life. The author of this story for older girls is a magazine editor.

"Miss Connolly's own work on 'The Delineator' is outlined on the jacket; it makes her heroine's seem more reasonable, for her own career was a rush from contest letters to full charge of the front of the book. But her book about Judy Grant belongs to the older type of vocational fiction which relied on extraneous thrills to carry its facts, rather than to the more sober 'career stories' of today." M. L. Becker

Books p7 Jl 7 '40 370w

"Judy so believes in her work that she makes us believe it is all very worth while. . . Girls of the teen age will enjoy this book." E. M. Mack

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 60w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 27 '40 310w

"Since much of this seems based on the author's own experiences, it may be a case of truth stranger than fiction. It simply makes a rather too eventful whole. The editorial background is so good that we wish Judy had gained her experience while living in the typical girls' club or one-room apartment, with leisure hours less exciting but more representative of the average girl seeking her fortune in New York. It will be popular with girls thirteen to fifteen." Eleanor Kidder

+ — Library J 65:543 Je 15 '40 180w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Letters to Marguerite Poradowska, 1890-1920; tr. from the French and ed. with an introd, notes, and appendices by John A. Gee and Paul J. Sturm. 147p $2.75 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Poradowska, Marguerite (Gachet) 41-475

Collection of Joseph Conrad's letters to a distant cousin, Madame Poradowska, a Polish novelist, who at one time was Conrad's closest friend. The bulk of the letters were written from 1890 to 1895, but there are a few covering the period 1900 to 1920. Bibliography. Index.

"'Aunt' Marguerite must have enjoyed receiving these letters, so full of love and earnestness; even the reader of the present day is moved by the charm they reveal and the creative struggle they describe. This is the first edition of the letters to appear in any language. Conrad's French, while generally adequate, has none of the beauty of his English as we know it from the novels, and the undistinguished style of the present translation appears to be only appropriate. The editing is informative, complete with all the paraphernalia of the most up-to date scholarship." Francis Steegmuller

+ Books p12 F 2 '41 310w

Reviewed by Charles Kerby-Miller

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 490w

"The editorial work is done with great care and with a full knowledge of all previously available Conradiana."

+ Christian Century 57:1451 N 20 '40 70w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

New Repub 103:873 D 23 '40 900w

CONSIDINE, JOHN JOSEPH. When the sorghum was high. 177p il $2 Longmans

B or 92 Donovan, Gerard Aloysius. Missions—Manchuria 40-33351

A biography of Father Gerard Donovan, the Roman Catholic missionary who was slain by bandits in Manchukuo in 1938.

Reviewed by Felton O'Toole

America 64:51 O 19 '40 160w

Cath World 152:250 N '40 240w

"The background of Chinese life, the incidental pictures of a Maryknoll missioner's ambitions and ideals, are sensitively and vividly sketched by Father Considine. Even the final torture is described with charm and glory; you read through to the last page at one reading, and close the book with exultation and tears. And between the lines you read the admiration and perhaps the envy of a confrère for a life that could compress so much of service and modest heroism into so few years." Johanna Doniat

+ Commonweal 32:515 O 11 '40 150w

CONSIGNY, JEAN-MARIE, and PALMER, CHARLES. Gardening for fun in California; il. by Lynette Arouni. 249p $2.50 Putnam, George P.

635.9 Gardening 40-9297

Chapters on the planning, planting, care, and difficulties of California gardens, with a section devoted to the gardener's budget. Much of the advice can be applied to gardens in other parts of the United States. Contains a color calendar and a chore calendar for California, and a list of plants mentioned in the book, with their botanical names.

"Rather sketchy, and with a decided tendency to hit the high spots and let the low ones shift for themselves, this book for perplexed beginners is nevertheless stimulating and at times amusing." R. S. Lemmon

+ — Books p13 Je 16 '40 180w

"Even dwellers in less sunny States will enjoy reading of 'California's outdoor design for living.' The author, who is a botanist and a practicing landscape architect, offers all sorts of interesting information in a sophisticated and casual style." F. F. Rockwell

+ N Y Times p5 Je 9 '40 170w

CONWAY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Micro-diffusion analysis and volumetric error. 306p il $6 Van Nostrand [25s Lockwood, C]

545.8 Volumetric analysis. Microchemistry [40-13595]

"In the following chapters an account is given of the diffusion principle in analysis, and the applications which have so far been adequately tested in practice both here and in other laboratories." (Pref) Part one deals with apparatus and principles; part two with standard absorption apparatus; and part three with errors in micro-volumetric technique. The author is professor of biochemistry in University college, Dublin. Indexes.

"Throughout the book the thoroughness of study and treatment is conspicuous. This is especially noticeable in the third part dealing with volumetric error. It would indeed be difficult to find a more complete and systematic treatment of the subject. The fact that all conclusions are dependent on, and expressed in terms of statistical considerations will lessen the value to chemists not versed in this subject, though this may be an argument in favor of wider study of statistics by chemists rather than a criticism of this type of treatment." P. L. Kirk

+ — Am Chem Soc J 62:3525 D '40 500w

"The book impresses the reader as being based upon very careful and painstaking experimental work. The errors are few and relatively unimportant. American readers must, of course, note the different meanings the author gives to such terms as 'constant' and 'variable' errors from those commonly accepted in this country. However, since the author is careful to define these terms, no difficulty should be experienced. The book constitutes a valuable addition to the literature of microvolumetric analysis." Frank Schneider

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:166 F 25 '40 230w

"The volume is well indexed, and contains a number of diagrams, pictures and a selected list of references. It is a worthwhile addition to the literature of analytical chemistry." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:375 My '40 330w

Reviewed by J. H. Quastel

Nature 146:113 Jl 27 '40 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 24:53 O '39

CONWAY, JOHN GREGORY. Flowers; their arrangement; phot. by Will Connell. 139p $2.50 Knopf

635.9663 Floral decoration 40-30110

After an introductory chapter on the principles of flower arrangement the body of this book is made up of over 100 plates in black and white with brief accompanying notes of a more or less technical character.

Booklist 37:112 N 15 '40

"The various schools, rules, periods, principles and practices whereby flower arranging ladies live and move and have their being are set forth with brevity and a welcome absence of verbal fog." R. S. Lemmon

Books p13 S 15 '40 170w

COOK, REGINALD LANSING. Concord saunterer; comp. by Viola C. White. 91p maps $1.25 Middlebury college press, Middlebury, Vt.

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David. Thoreau, Henry David—Bibliography 40-11181

"This little volume contains an informal essay on Thoreau, a group of Thoreau manuscripts, some of them printed here for the first time, and a checklist of Thoreau items in The Abernethy Library, at Middlebury." New Eng Q

"In a rich and thoughtful essay Professor Cook analyzes Thoreau's intense and intimate relationship with nature. The result is a stimulating new portrait of the 'God-propped' nature mystic who felt, and saw, and thought so much as he made his way across the New England countryside."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 80w

"Mr. Cook's essay on Thoreau's nature mysticism is pleasant but not forceful, emphasizing the picturesque rather than the intellectual. As a whole the book falls somewhat short of the standards which ordinarily determine publication." F. I. C.

+ — New Eng Q 13:581 S '40 130w

" 'The Concord Saunterer' contains Professor Reginald L. Cook's provocative, interesting essay on 'The Nature Mysticism of Thoreau,' in the course of which he retraces the Sage of Walden's favorite tramps through the valley bottom lands and upland clearings of Concord with an enthusiasm and insight that are contagious." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p33 O 27 '40 210w

COOKE, DENNIS HARGROVE. Administering the teaching personnel. 348p il $2.40 Sanborn

371.1 School administration and organization. Teachers 39-17060

"One needs but look at the Table of Contents of Cooke's interesting book to find that it deals with problems which are eternally old and yet always new. . . The author's general plan of treatment is to give a chapter to each major problem. He discusses the problem briefly, divides it into its subsidiary problems, marshals the research that is available bearing on each, presents a selected bibliography, and outlines one or two topics for further study. Where the evidence warrants, he recommends a desirable procedure for boards of education to adopt." El School J

"Administering the Teaching Personnel is a book that every superintendent will want on his shelf for immediate reference. It makes readily available to him all the research and the essence of the experience of boards of education and superintendents throughout the United States in dealing with any of the varied issues involved in administering wisely a teaching personnel." J. C. Morrison

+ El School J 40:629 Ap '40 850w

Reviewed by P. W. Hutson

School R 48:149 F '40 130w

COOKE, DONALD EDWIN. The Firebird; il. by [the author]. 144p $2 Winston

39-25563

Allegorical tale of the adventures of the Red Prince who with the aid of the magic Firebird overcame the evil Black Prince, and won the hand of the Princess Marya. Based on the same source as Stravinsky's Firebird.

Booklist 36:347 My 1 '40

"Here is beauty of deep, dark woods, beauty in an enchanted forest and in the bright wings of the firebird ever encouraging the ambitious young prince and leading him on to his heart's desire. . . The author has illustrated the book with decorations reminiscent of Artzybasheff and with black and white knights and castles similar to those of Howard Pyle. His colored illustrations, too, add to the general attractiveness." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 65:37 Ja 1 '40 160w

COOKE, MORRIS LLEWELLYN, and MURRAY, PHILIP. Organized labor and production; next steps in industrial democracy [ed. by Baker Brownell]. 277p $2.50 Harper

331.88 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes. Industrial management 40-27142

Discussion of the historical development of American economics and their effects on the labor movement. The theme of the book is the binding together of unions and management in order to further a more complete democracy. Mr Cooke is a consulting engineer and expert in the field of scientific management; Mr Murray is John L. Lewis's right hand man in the C.I.O. Index.

Reviewed by C. R. Daugherty

Am Econ R 30:634 S '40 290w

Reviewed by F. J. Roethlisberger

Ann Am Acad 211:230 S '40 450w

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

"Messrs. Cooke & Murray, symbolically at least at loggerheads, pull together very well on the smooth road of reason. Their verbal harmony is a pleasure to read, and an eye-opener. . . On the whole it would be hard to find a more thorough and detached summing up of the problems of labor than 'Organization and Labor in Production.' It was a most important task that Cooke & Murray set themselves, and they have done a first-rate job." E. B. Garside

+ Boston Transcript p11 F 8 '40 500w

"As a sketch of labor's gains and obstacles, as well as its obligations, the book makes interesting reading. It is only on the deeper question of labor's participation in regulating production that it proves a disappointment." J. G. H.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 F 20 '40 350w

"If you desire further evidence of the flowering in our day of the theory of common interests in employer-employee relations as opposed to that of conflict, you will find it here. . . I like the chapter on Wage Systems, hours of work and operating control. I recommend it to teachers of labor economics in our Catholic Labor schools. But the discussion of collective bargaining in ten pages is unusually fresh and would seem to be a worthy supplement to Sydney Webb's analysis of the same subject, made forty years ago. Nothing is said by the authors about some essential state services to the cause of ideal management-union relations. . . More serious is the failure to tap the papal labor encyclicals for their rich and pertinent material. There is a disappointing reliance on the natural order as if man knew no other." J. P. Boland

+ — Commonweal 31:389 F 23 '40 300w

"The authors have such an intimate knowledge of industrial processes and they write in such practical terms that the book is blessed with a strain of realism that is not always found in books of a similar nature. Further, they make some extremely telling points about the relations of workers with foremen which may prove enlightening to executives."

+ Management R 29:268 Jl '40 410w

"This whole book is calm, thorough and sane. Indeed, the good gray style of The Survey Graphic lies thick on it, often dulling the edge of its best ideas." J. K. Jessup

+ — New Repub 102:512 Ap 15 '40 450w

Reviewed by Bernhard Ostrolenk

N Y Times p4 Mr 17 '40 750w

Pratt p6 autumn '40

Reviewed by J. A. Fitch

Survey G 29:298 My '40 320w

Wis Lib Bul 36:63 Ap '40

COOKE, ROBERT LOCKE. Philosophy, education, and certainty; with a foreword by William H. Wrighton. 392p $2.75 Zondervan

370.1 Education—Philosophy 40-35144

"Another indication of the growing interest in philosophies of education is this book which presents a survey of historical and contemporary schools of educational theory and the philosophical systems underlying them. . . Although the author's treatment throughout is eminently fair, his conclusion in the last paragraph of the book clearly states his own position. '. . . Christianity is posited as the only and the perfect solution to educational confusion, and the challenge [is] issued to the educator to test the matter for himself and so terminate the quest for certainty.' " School & Society

---

"An able and scholarly exposition."

+ Christian Century 57:1587 D 18 '40 100w

School & Society 52:376 O 19 '40 90w

"In spite of its near four hundred pages, the book covers such a vast terrain that it fails, or is unable, to give a thorough treatment of numerous difficulties to be found along the way. It particularly does not deal with the difficulties incident to differences of opinion about what is revealed truth. Nor does the author show in any but the sketchiest way what the significance of his thesis would imply for curriculum, method, motivation and kindred problems of the teacher. Nevertheless the book will probably be a contribution in the field if for no other reason than that it explicitly states a fundamentalist Protestant point of view on educational problems." J. S. Brubacher

+ — School & Society 53:58 Ja 11 '41 440w

Social Studies 32:48 Ja '41 20w

COOLIDGE, DANE. Bloody Head. 254p $2 Dutton

40-12733

Western story.

Booklist 37:14 S '40

"Dane Coolidge continues to lead the Western field by a comfortable margin. We're a side-winding rattler if this isn't the grandest outdoor yarn since 'Yaqui Drums,' by the same author, and that could be compared only to others of the same make." Will Cuppy

+ Books p8 Jl 14 '40 160w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 30w

"A lively, swift, realistic, tersely written tale." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '40 240w

COOLIDGE, DANE. Yaqui drums. 250p $2 Dutton

40-6296

Western story.

Booklist 36:346 My 1 '40

"Here is one of Dane Coolidge's best Western tales, than which there are no better, plumb full of heroism, treachery, color, love and what not, with plenty of actual thrills." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 Mr 17 '40 120w

"Dane Coolidge always has a good story to tell. He always tells it exceptionally well. And quite as noteworthy as the excellence of his stirring tales is the variety of their content. . . Written in Mr. Coolidge's lean, sinewy, straightforward, vivid style, it is a pretty grim and stark narrative for the most part; yet it has its flashes of humor and its thread of wholesome romance and it makes grand reading for those who relish tales of bravery and derring-do." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 10 '40 300w

COON, HORACE. 101 American vacations from $25 to $250; a budgeted guide for holiday spending; il. with photographs. 265p $1.98 Doubleday

917.3 Travel. U.S.—Description and travel. Vacations (W) 40-27379

Budgeted guide for vacations in America. The budgets start at $25 and go as high as $250. The suggestions extend from a short bicycle trip in New England to a lengthier one to Alaska. Each vacation is listed in outline form, including itineraries, prices and other useful information. While most of the vacations start from New York or Chicago, there are others leaving from many large American cities.

Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40

"[The book's] usefulness will not end with summer; there is plenty of information on winter tours, and what the book tells will outlast one year at least, being of a basic nature."

+ Books p14 Ag 25 '40 130w

"Mr. Coon is most explicit and accounts for every cent and every hour of each of the vacations he has drawn up. It all sounds most encouraging."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 70w

"All the information is clear, comprehensive, practical and inviting, and there are vacation suggestions for all seasons and all tastes."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 14 '40 380w

Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

COOPER, PARR. Not at home. 407p $2.50 Morrow [9s 6d Allen, G]

40-30881

Novel of life in a British army post. Mary Blake, a bride of six months and her husband, an older member of the colony, are the chief characters.

Reviewed by Muriel Chatain

Books p10 S 8 '40 490w

"To say that Not at Home is written with sympathy and understanding for the Indian Army wives and to add that its author has obviously experience of Indian Army life is probably to condemn it out of hand. It is, whether or not one would wish to live in its setting and know its characters, an interesting and amusing novel. The descriptive writing is good, but it is in dialogue that this new author excels; the nuances of the clique slang—it is an uneasy marriage of the old Army talk and the faded smarty talk of those splendid years when Mr. Coward was known as The Master—are brilliantly handled, and the distinction is nicely drawn between its use by the older people who are being rather daring and up to date and its use by the young characters who think it is the English language." Anthony West

+ New Statesman & Nation 18:622 O 28 '39 650w

"Most of the book is dialogue distinguished both for unflagging entertainment and for its characterization value. 'Not at Home' would be very much at home in a theatre." J. S. Southron

COOPER, PARR—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:69 S 7 '40 50w

"There are occasional characters and touches in the book which encourage one to hope for something above the ordinary. . . But the book as a whole is as depressing as the dreary round of artificial life which it depicts."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p671 N 18 '39 300w

COPERNICUS, NICOLAUS. Three Copernican treatises; the Commentariolus of Copernicus, the Letter against Werner, the Narratio prima of Rheticus; tr. with introd. and notes by Edward Rosen. 211p $3 Columbia univ. press [15s Oxford]

520 Astronomy. Werner, Johannes. Rhäticus, Georg Joachim 40-2669

"Believing that Copernicus's Commentariolus and the explanatory volume Narratio Prima of Rheticus are better suited to the comprehension of the general reader than the subsequent and more complicated De Revolutionibus Orbium Caelestium, Mr. Rosen has done these translations and for good measure has included the Letter Against Werner, which throws much light on the development of Copernicus's thought. In his explanatory introduction of 53 pages he includes brief biographies of Copernicus and Rheticus." N Y New Tech Bks

"The Copernicus literature is voluminous, but Mr. Rosen's well edited volume furnishes the closest contact with the original material that is available in English."

+ Christian Century 57:146 Ja 31 '40 340w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:3 Ja '40

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Mr and Mrs Meigs. 278p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 40-27595

This chapter in the life of Mrs Meigs takes place in Cream City in the 1880s. Mrs Meigs (She Was Carrie Eaton, Book Review Digest, 1938) aged forty, has been married to Richard for more than ten years and has three little girls. She is the same sprightly individual of the author's other stories about her, and seldom loses her sense of proportion, even tho she has a troublesome mother-in-law, loses her adored father, an old suitor provides difficulties, and she herself becomes the mother of a son.

Booklist 37:12 S '40

"Miss Corbett gives the flavor of the years of which she writes. One enjoys the period touches so deftly and yet unobtrusively managed, the genuineness of the conversation, the universal appeal of various episodes—the in-law problem, the old suitor, the misfit cousin. Every family has its quota of such matrimonial by-products, and Miss Corbett makes capital of them without resorting to caricature or cynicism." Lisle Bell

+ Books p17 S 8 '40 250w

"As in all the Cream City stories, there is dispensed an enormous amount of satisfaction, pleasure, and nostalgia for the security, comfort, and comparative serenity of bygone days." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 21 '40 700w

"The story is a simple, homey, sympathetic record of family life in the Eighteen Eighties, reminiscent in its more placid way of 'Life with Father.' Little girls who loved the Elsie Dinsmore and the Prudy books should enjoy the Mrs. Meigs series, experiencing a nostalgic pang for the prissy little girls and rejoicing that Carrie Meigs is a far more human and engaging character." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p18 S 29 '40 260w

"'Mr. and Mrs. Meigs' is meant for entertainment and Elizabeth Corbett knows the exact measurements for wit and sympathy, for tragedy and comedy to produce a novel for pleasant evening escape from radio and newspaper." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 320w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. The queen's holiday. 282p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 40-5184

A Graustarkian romance. Queen Elsa, last of the royal house of Leucadia, is taken to America by a gruff guardian to save her from the consequences of the revolution. A young real estate man comes to the rescue when Elsa is in difficulty and stays to be her protector.

"'The Queen's Holiday' is unblushingly escapist and Elizabeth Corbett doesn't pretend otherwise." Lisle Bell

Books p14 Mr 10 '40 180w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 200w

"The Leucadian adventures seem remote and fantastic, as they doubtless should, and the American high jinks are entertainingly improbable." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p28 Mr 10 '40 110w

CORBIN, JOHN. Two frontiers of freedom. 420p $3.50 Scribner

973 U.S.—Constitutional history. U.S.—Constitution. U.S.—Politics and government. Democracy. Totalitarianism (W) 40-12410

The author of this book holds that the Founding Fathers established in the United States a republic and not a democracy (which they feared would lead to dictatorship) and moreover, that the conflict between the ideals of republicanism and democracy which followed has been the cause of many of our social and economic ills. In defense of this thesis the author reviews our constitutional history from the Revolution down to the present. His final section deals with the present international situation. Index.

Reviewed by E. A. Weber

Am Pol Sci R 34:1048 O '40 430w

"Mr. Corbin's headlong assault on what he calls 'democracy,' meaning, of course, demagogy, is not to be dismissed as merely a brilliant display of verbal pyrotechnics. It is that, but it is much more. It is the effort of an observer who is shrewd and, in the main, sincere, to 'rede the riddle' presented by the collapse of political liberty in western Europe and the plain threat of a similar collapse in this country. If Mr. Corbin's effort is not wholly successful, whose is? At least his effort is not wholly a failure, and in view of the paramount importance of the task he undertook, even a partial success deserves not respect only, but vigorous applause." G. W. Johnson

+ — Books p4 Jl 14 '40 1600w

"Beginning with a restatement of the most vital and distinctive principle of American political faith, 'Two Frontiers of Freedom' is more than timely; it is overdue. For a century that principle has been steadily obscured and denied; yet the result of its neglect proves its necessity. It is simply that the United States was not designed as a democracy. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Corbin does not bring out clearly either the philosophical axiom in question or the substantial basis on which it was put in effect. He dwells on the method of checks and balances, but apparently without observing that a mechanism is significant only by its prime purpose." Isabel Paterson

+ — Boston Transcript p11 Jl 19 '40 650w

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 950w

"It is a provocative book written with conviction. . . Unfortunately Corbin's handling of his thesis often lacks clarity. Only by examining the whole book may readers understand his central concepts of democracy and republic, of individual and collective liberty." Garland Downum
— + Christian Century 57:1481 N 27 '40 800w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins
Library J 65:651 Ag '40 190w

New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 70w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Times p5 Jl 21 '40 2050w

Discussion by the author
N Y Times p2 S 15 '40 800w

"A bit intemperate, but the account of early political debates is interesting."
New Yorker 16:63 Jl 20 '40 60w

"To readers who, like the reviewer, adhere to 'the democratic dogma,' which to us signifies rather a democratic tradition and growth, many of the attitudes expressed in this book toward the people and their participation in government will be irritating and stimulative of argument. Nevertheless, there is a good deal of truth, perhaps too much, in what the author has to say about the imperfections and shortcomings of democracy." R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 31 '40 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 1100w

"We have here an excellently outspoken argument for today by a veteran writer, protagonist of numerous good causes, and ardent in the historic American faith of liberalism. . . The learning and scholarship, familiar to those who have profited by Mr. Corbin's works, is abundantly poured out to build an American historical structure for the thesis." W. L. Whittlesey
+ Survey G 30:95 F '41 300w

COREY, PAUL. The road returns. 457p $2.50 Bobbs

40-31517

A sequel to Three Miles Square (Book Review Digest, 1939) in which the author continues the story of Widow Mantz and her children thru the years of the Great war and the early nineteen twenties.

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"While the novel centers about the lives of the Widow Mantz and her children, the picture is larger. It is like a painting of Pieter Breughel. In every part of it there are people and there are things going on—bitter, sad, comic and even ludicrous things. It is a picture of a whole community, a whole world in which every character, however small or unimportant, is alive and fully realized. It is one of the most honest books I have ever read. Its importance is not only that of a good novel but of a document." Louis Bromfield
+ Books p2 N 3 '40 750w

"A fine, warm-hearted story, written with kindliness and feeling about genuine people."
+ New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 60w

"Some seasons ago Paul Corey published a fine, solid novel called 'Three Miles Square,' which dealt with an Iowa farm family, the Mantzes. 'The Road Returns' continues this family's story, but it is a better book, even, than its predecessor and its scope and implications are wider." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p6 O 20 '40 900w

"A readable and sincere farm novel, with earnest folks in it doing everyday things."
+ New Yorker 16:110 O 19 '40 40w

" 'The Road Returns' is not brilliantly written, but Corey's quiet style, homely and vernacular, is just right for his comédie rurale." R. A. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 280w

CORKEY, ROBERT. War, pacifism and peace; a study in ultimate war aims, for peace-lovers in Britain and America. 171p $1.25 Macmillan [4s S.P.C.K.]

172.4 War and religion. Peace [40-9541]

"Mr. Corkey, who is professor of Christian Ethics in the Presbyterian College, Belfast, discusses the position of the Protestant Churches with regard to war in general and the present war in particular. He feels that the Church should formulate her teaching concerning the way to peace and he deplores the fact that there is dissension within the Church —the struggle between the absolute pacifists and those who condone war as the lesser of two evils. Mr. Corkey's own position is that of an adherent to the policy of Collective Security, and he is strongly opposed to absolute pacifism as expounded by men like Canon Sheppard and Mr. Lansbury." Books

Books p14 Ap 7 '40 360w

Christian Century 57:386 Mr 20 '40 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p79 F 10 '40 180w

CORLE, EDWIN. Solitaire. 351p $2.50 Dutton

Story of Virginia, a well-brought-up but lonely little girl, and a gentle, elderly tramp, who lives in a hobo settlement not far from Virginia's prosperous home in Pasadena. Virginia's friendship with the harmless tramp becomes very important in her life, and when there is a plan on foot to burn the tramps out, precipitates a scandal.

"Though the tone of the book is serious, it has a good deal of humor. . . 'Solitaire' is a readable, interesting book, whether it is considered as a study of the conflict between two very different ways of life, or as a sensitive interpretation of a child's mind." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p3 F 18 '40 650w

"This is a charming and moving story. . . The character of Virginia is sharp and clear, and her dilemma at the end of the book is made very moving and real. The other characters, however, and especially Ben, are not fully realized."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 9 '40 200w

Cath World 151:508 Jl '40 60w

"Readers allergic to whimsy and to children thinking out loud had better skip this. The others will find a touching little tale of a child who tries to run her life by simple goodness, and fails."
+ — New Repub 102:321 Mr 4 '40 40w

"Probably the most successful presentation in the book is the picture, given entirely by indirection, of the loneliness of the only child in a modern home without pets, without brothers and sisters, without any sort of daily tasks or family interests. Mr. Corle has also felt keenly, and described accurately, the frightening gulf between a child and her parents. This sense of loneliness, and the injustice of the world to something it does not understand may stay hauntingly in the mind long after the book itself is forgotten." Adeline Rumsey
+ N Y Times p25 F 18 '40 600w

"Mr. Corle is a gifted writer, but he hasn't yet hit on a subject big enough for him. This one, which describes the friendship of a little girl, a tramp, and a pet rat, has overtones reminiscent of Robert Nathan, but more edge. It is told with great delicacy, almost no whimsy, and considerable dramatic suspense."
+ — New Yorker 16:78 F 24 '40 60w

"Mr. Corle's picture of suburban life is accurate, lively, and ironic. . . Virginia's family set-up goes with almost every two-car, one-child house in Massachusetts as well as California. But the misunderstanding and neglect from which both Virginia and Ben suffer are not made important enough to carry a full-length novel." K. S.
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 24 '40 120w

CORLE, EDWIN—Continued

Springf'd Republican p7e F 25 '40 100w

Wis Lib Bul 36:48 Mr '40

CORLISS, MRS ALLENE. Walk with me tomorrow. 302p $2 Farrar

40-30096

A group of young New Yorkers, prosperous, good-looking, leading gay and carefree lives, get into a bad tangle in their matrimonial affairs which only some bad heartbreaks can finally set straight.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
— Books p11 Ag 18 '40 120w

"In the end it is gratifying to find that the likable people get what they want—even if this means that some of the disagreeable ones get either a good deal more or less than they deserve. The novel is a smooth and accurate picture of a sliver of New York." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p14 Ag 18 '40 270w

CORMACK, MARIBELLE, and ALEXANDER, WILLIAM PRINDLE. Last clash of claymores. 304p il $2 Appleton-Century

(W) 40-32076

Retelling of the romantic story of Bonnie Prince Charlie for young people from twelve to fifteen. The events of the '45 are chronicled from the time when the prince left France, accompanied by the young Cameron messenger, to the field of Culloden and the rout of Moy.

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

"So far as history goes, the Stuart star set long ago. But there are certain lost causes that have, like sunset, an afterglow more beautiful than their own glory. Of these lost causes, the Jacobite still holds romantic beauty, living in literature and song. To that literature belongs this story, to which are added the best-loved Jacobite songs, not only the words but the music, on which many an American was brought up." M. L. Becker
+ Books p22 N 10 '40 400w

"Gallant Lady Ann of Moy Castle, Flora MacDonald, old Cluny and Young Lochiel all come to life in these really stirring pages." E. V. W.
+ Cath World 152:377 D '40 110w

"Bonnie Prince Charlie's adventures, have been told by many but few have succeeded in recapturing the personal qualities and appeal, the courage and loyalty of this youthful leader or of telling the story of his struggles in a more vital and appealing story than have Maribelle Cormack and William P. Alexander in 'Last Clash of Claymores.'" F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 14 '40 90w

"The Horn Book has not seen so thrilling a Jacobite romance for a long time. . . More than the fighting itself, the well-drawn characters hold us, especially the figure of Lochiel, so sorely torn by his love and loyalty to the Prince and his foreboding of the disaster to come. The Stuart, himself, with his fine virtues and his headstrong rashness that brooked no opposition, stands in clear outline, calling for high devotion to a lost cause." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:442 N '40 150w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:857 O 15 '40 30w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kidder
Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 150w

"This is not a great book; it lacks a certain vitality, perhaps because we see Charles only second hand through the eyes of his followers, but its portrayal of the Scottish people in their last stand for freedom gives it breadth and stature, and its sweep of action will commend it to young people of the most robust tastes." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p44 N 10 '40 160w

CORNFORD, FRANCIS MACDONALD, ed. and tr. See Parmenides Eleates. Plato and Parmenides

CORNISH, DOROTHY HELEN. These were the Brontës. 491p $2.50 Macmillan

Brontë family—Fiction 40-3027

A frankly fictional picture of the family of geniuses that lived in Haworth parsonage on the Yorkshire moors. Tho the lives of all the family are woven into the story, the center of interest is Charlotte and her growth into freedom.

"This is frankly and most agreeably a novel, which is written as if no one had ever written about the Brontës before, and which offers the author's own solution for the various riddles of Haworth in a fictional form that keeps 'interpretation' undogmatic precisely as it leaves it free. In her interpretation, moreover, Dorothy Cornish has not only told a genuinely living story, but has paid genius the rare tribute of accepting it as genius, without seeking to explain it in some other terms." Katherine Woods
+ Books p10 F 11 '40 1000w

"Dorothy Helen Cornish, out of study fired with enthusiasm, and with color and verve befitting an admirer of Charlotte Brontë, has written a novel called 'These Were the Brontës.' By putting her material in the form of fiction she escapes some of the rigors of criticism as regards factual matters, but she cannot hope—probably does not wish—to have her interpretation of character and her literary evaluations taken any less seriously on that account." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 17 '40 800w

"Seldom does Miss Cornish get beneath the surface of her characters. . . [She] seems to have taken the outlines of previous biographies and to have tried to fill them in with dialogue. . . The biographer is everywhere apparent; the story-teller seldom." J. E. Tobin
— + Commonweal 31:388 F 23 '40 450w

"Charlotte Brontë becomes something of a solid figure and the painful growth of her imagination is conscientiously portrayed, but on the whole this is a project that doesn't quite come off."
— + New Repub 102:222 F 12 '40 50w

"Let it be said immediately that Miss Cornish is not a great novelist, that much is begged in her book and that the latter portion of it appears to be hurried, and that the bare bones of biography (plus the dissertations on 'Shirley' and 'Villette') thrust awkwardly through the sparing flesh of fiction; but, with all her limitations . . . she does give the reader a picture that is much more than ordinarily entertaining. At least, Charlotte lives in the book. So does Monsieur Héger and so do all the minor characters." Herbert Gorman
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 28 '40 1150w

"The result is a good, imaginative book upon the Brontës—not so good as a careful biography, and not so exciting as a novel might be that is not bound to the earth by facts. . . The imagination must be allowed some scope in a book that is called a novel; it must be restrained by probabilities, or at least by possibilities, when the subjects are historical characters. It is my impression that Miss Cornish has generally succeeded in her task of navigating these difficult straits." W. C. De Vane
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:12 F 17 '40 750w

"An uninterrupted two hours with the Brontes brings a decided numbness to the mind of the average person. Such intelligence as he possesses is decidedly befogged by the time Branwell's death occurs. Perhaps only the very introspective, or those especially interested in psychopathy, will endure to read the book through at one sitting."
Springf'd Republican p8 F 21 '40 550w

CORWIN, EDWARD SAMUEL. The president: office and powers; history and analysis of practice and opinion. 476p $5 N.Y. univ. press

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Constitutional law 40-32729

"The work is a detailed historical account of the position of the President in America. . . The bulk of Prof Corwin's study is given over to a discussion of the four principal activities of the chief executive—as head of the administration, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy in times of national emergency, as a factor in foreign relations, and as the political leader of the people. The study is factual, and well documented." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 104:90 Ja 20 '41 1500w

"Although the volume is well made and the typography is attractive, it is extremely difficult to read. Three hundred and sixty pages of text are followed by more than one hundred pages of footnotes in exceedingly fine print, and it is a task of more than a moment to find the footnote reference to a particular statement in the text. This arrangement, however, permits everything to be put down and the ground which Mr. Corwin has ploughed need hardly be ploughed again—at least for some years." Lindsay Rogers
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 N 9 '40 850w

"Prof Corwin's volume is easily the most comprehensive study of the sort so far written. Elections come and go, but the historical facts remain the same, and they have never been more solidly represented." D. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 29 '40 750w

Reviewed by P. H. Odegard
Survey G 29:621 D '40 490w

"Professor Corwin more than maintains his reputation in the profession as the most useful teacher of constitutional law to his colleagues. Though mainly concerned with the law, his book is enriched with the lore of practice and opinion, much of it painstakingly gathered from such sources as the Congressional Record and the New York Times, and set out at length in notes that fill nearly a third of the volume. The work is an unmatched annotation of Article II of the Constitution." H. C. Mansfield
+ Yale Law J 50:533 Ja '41 600w

COST, MARCH, pseud. See Morrison, P.

COTT, HUGH B. Adaptive coloration in animals; with an introd. by Julian S. Huxley. 540p il $8.50 Oxford [40s Methuen]

591.157 Color of animals

"The author, lecturer in zoology and Strickland curator at Cambridge University, states that he has intentionally confined himself to a special study of the various manifestations and functions of coloration in the interspecific relations of animals—that is to say, in the relations between predator and prey. He has divided the work into parts devoted respectively to questions of concealment, of advertisement, and of disguise, and has been less concerned with the origin of adaptive coloration than with its various manifestations and uses." Scientific Bk Club R

"This excellent work, eagerly awaited for many years, will be most welcome to naturalists, even, we may hope, to the few who have hitherto rejected the Darwinian interpretation which the author has here supported by a mass of additional evidence based on his own observations, and those of very many others." E. B. Poulton
+ Nature 146:144 Ag 3 '40 1300w

"One cannot recommend too highly a book of this type. Although monumental in concept and length, it is more than a textbook or a manual for reference. It makes engrossing reading not only for those interested by training in the subject but to all 'who have learned to see in the wild things of nature something to be loved, something to be wondered at, something to be reverenced.' "
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Ag '40 350w

"Though the book is of particular value to specialists, and a notable contribution to the literature of the subject with which it deals, it can and should be read with interest and advantage by the student of human affairs. Dr. Cott, using a dignified and lucid prose, has the power of explaining technical matters in such a way that they may be clearly grasped by the uninitiated. . . Copiously illustrated by first-class photographs and drawings by the author, this book must, to the serious student of Natural History in its broadest sense and widest application, be unreservedly recommended."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p355 Jl 20 '40 360w

COTTRELL, MRS DOROTHY (WILKINSON). Wilderness orphan; lithographs by Howard Simon. 96p $1.50 Messner [2s 6d Angus]

Kangaroos—Legends and stories 40-32612

This is the life story of a red kangaroo. Orphaned when hunters shot his mother, he was carried home by one of them and became a family pet. But with maturity came real trials when he was sold to the owner of an animal show. Chut killed his man and escaped and eventually found peace in his native West.

"A story that made magazine history, taking a million or so of us by storm, has been put between covers and given pictures dramatic and sympathetic as the text. It makes a book for adults who can take it. There is tragedy, for it is the story of a dumb animal who is a good fellow, and men treat such a creature accordingly as they are or are not good fellows themselves. Yet it does not end on a tragic note." M. L. Becker
+ Books p16 O 27 '40 240w

"Mrs. Cottrell writes with sympathy, in prose of unusual quality, with a touch of sentimentality where her human characters are concerned, but the animals are treated on their own terms. There is evocative magic in her calling up of the atmosphere of the Australian country, with its great distances, dry soil and brown, leaf-stained streams. . . In regional literature, as well as in studies of nature, she has won a place of her own." A. M.
+ N Y Times p34 N 17 '40 600w

"To American eyes this environment, this jumping hero of Mrs. Cottrell's, will shine dewy fresh. The author, who now lives in America, spent her girlhood in Australia and she is almost certainly recounting an experience based upon life. She knows her country; she knows kangaroos, and by the time you have finished you will know something about them too, and all mistaken ideas about their being vicious and at the same time ridiculous animals will be quite blown away. Not to have a kangaroo for a friend and pet is almost more than I can stand, after reading Mrs. Cottrell's story." D. C. Peattie
+ Sat R of Lit 23:23 N 16 '40 250w

COTTRELL, WILLIAM FREDERICK. The railroader. 145p $2 Stanford univ. press [9s Oxford]

331.7656 Railroads—Employees 40-9425

Study of the effects of railroading as a livelihood upon the railroad man and his family. The author was "born into a railroad family," and hence bases his work upon personal experience. Glossary. Index.

Am Econ R 30:651 S '40 20w

COTTRELL, W. F.—Continued
"The book is unencumbered as far as footnotes and bibliographical references are concerned. It is straight writing and good. There is a useful glossary of railroad terms at the close." Nels Anderson
+ Ann Am Acad 211:234 S '40 600w
Booklist 37:6 S '40

COUPER, WILLIAM. One hundred years at V.M.I.; with a foreword by George C. Marshall. 4v v 1-2 360;345p il $6 Garrett
355.07 Virginia military institute (39-33994)

The first two volumes of a four-volume work, outlining the history of Virginia Military Institute. Volume one begins with the organization of Rockbridge county in 1777, and follows the development of the school up to 1859. Volume two carries the story thru the years of the Civil war, to the battle of New Market in 1864.

"These volumes comprise the first half of a valuable work. Volumes III and IV are announced for publication this year. If they measure up to the standard of the first two, Colonel Couper will have produced a distinct contribution to the history of education in the United States, to the history of the South, and to the history of the Civil War." M. L. Bonham, Jr.
+ Am Hist R 45:987 Jl '40 320w

"Col Couper shows ability to combine careful narrative with colorful details." E. N. Jenckes
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 20 '40 1050w

COURLANDER, HAROLD. Caballero. 443p map $2.50 Farrar 40-31518

"The setting is a West Indian island called Puerto Negro which is divided between the Spanish-speaking mestizo republic of San Sebastian and the French-speaking black republic of M'Bassa (transparent fictional disguises for Santo Domingo and Haiti), and its central figure is a young Sebastiano, Rafael Constanza. . . Though his great-grandfather had been the last of the royal Spanish governors and his mother could boast a French marquis forebear, the boy knew that he was but one of thousands in the island who could lay claim to a noble pedigree marked by the bar sinister. . . For all his efforts to posture to himself and the world as a great caballero Rafael never rises above the moral plane of a racketeer, a shrewdly capable and ruthless egotist." N Y Times

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

"It is a superior, three-dimensional novel, a narrative based on historical and biographical facts in form, it is true, but sweeping them along in a tale that has emotional vigor and story-telling effectiveness." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p4 D 29 '40 750w

Reviewed by E. J. Bartnett
Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 410w

"A very good idea of the mixed forces and bloods in this part of the world; a faltering grip on character and straight-out narrative."
+ — New Repub 103:458 S 30 '40 60w

"Mr. Courlander, though a man of imagination and poetic feeling, has not chosen to write a romantic novel, but one which combines characteristics of the action story and the novel of manners. . . Mr. Courlander's treatment of his theme indicates sensitivity to color and atmosphere, his style varying between clean-cut realism and the poetic approach. He has produced a book which contains many more elements of broad human interest than the run of contemporary novels and one which is also timely at a moment when American expansion in the Caribbean area is receiving a new impetus." Drake de Kay
+ N Y Times p14 S 22 '40 550w

"Parts of it are excellent. . . The trouble is, as it so often is in serious satire, with the characters. . . One doubts that Dominican peasants habitually talk about the dignity of labor, the brotherhood and comradeship of toil, the restorative virtues of the land. . . One may even doubt that a person like the hero of this novel could rise so easily to be president of any republic; perhaps being a notorious scoundrel would not hinder him, but he'd have to have some other qualities. From Mr. Courlander's portrait one cannot understand how his 'caballero' came to be even a successful bandit." Garrett Mattingly
— + Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ja 4 '41 470w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Curtain calls. 651p $3.50 Doubleday
822 (W) 40-5257

Omnibus volume containing four three-act plays and several one-act plays. Contents: Tonight at 8:30 [nine short plays]; Conversation Piece; Easy Virtue; Point Valaine; "This Was a Man."

Booklist 36:328 Ap 15 '40
Books p26 Mr 17 '40 350w

COWLEY, JOHN DUNCAN. Bibliographical description and cataloguing. 256p map 12s 6d Grafton & co. [English publication]
010 Bibliography. Cataloging 39-22435

"There exist excellent guides to library cataloging and to the bibliographical description of special kinds of older works, such as manuscripts and incunabula. This book takes up the slack in those 'aspects of printing and publishing methods of all periods about which the general textbooks are silent.' . . Two concluding chapters deserve special attention. . . Chapter xiii is a remarkable synoptic list of dicta on description in general, transcription of titles, imprints and colophons, format and signatures, and annotation. . . Chapter xiv is 'A list of reference works,' well-selected and well-arranged." (Library Q) Index.

"Dr. Cowley's work, though using examples more commonly met with in England than here, is of the greatest value for all American librarians who retain an interest in books. . . This book has value for all in its wise emphasis on the relationship of bibliographical description to library cataloging and in its attention to arrangement and editing for publication of both bibliographies and catalogs. . . It is not a fair criticism from an American reader to the English author that the chief examples used are early English printed books (as in McKerrow). One may point out, however, that important works of and on bibliography and book production by Americans have been omitted: none of George Parker Winship's work is mentioned, and Lawrence C. Wroth's basic contribution to the meaning of 'format' in The Dolphin I has not been used, although the annual itself is cited. . . Bibliographical Description and Cataloguing should be in the working library of every American collector, cataloger, bibliographer, and librarian who works with books. It is a sensible and imaginative book that every careful user will wish he had been able to write." Sidney Kramer
+ — Library Q 11:114 Ja '41 600w

"The amateur or the semi-professional bibliographer may or may not have made respectful acquaintance with the definitions and rulings on bibliographical principles and practice which they owe to Pollard and Madan, to McKerrow and Greg. To those who have, Mr. Cowley's synthesis will, we believe, seem judicious and sensibly expressed. To those many others who have been terrified and perplexed by the complexity of the subject and the learning of the doctors, his book will be warmly welcome. His exposition admirably combines lucidity and common sense. He is particularly good in the distinction of the different objects—and hence the different types—of bibliography."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 28 '39 270w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. The glass triangle. 279p $2 Knopf 40-11490

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p8 Jl 14 '40 180w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 90w

"This is one of the best of Mr. Coxe's stories about Kent Murdock, newspaper photographer and part-time sleuth." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 14 '40 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 250w

Time 36:72 Ag 5 '40 40w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. The lady is afraid. 287p $2 Knopf 40-2691

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p9 D 31 '39 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 30w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 19:808 Je 29 '40 60w

"The array of odd characters, each with something to conceal, makes this mystery particularly difficult to fathom." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 180w

New Yorker 15:63 Ja 6 '40 60w

"Pretty much same pattern as its admirable predecessors, which means copious action, tough situations, and camera-eye sleuthing. Custom-built."
Sat R of Lit 21:24 D 30 '39 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 170w

— Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Ag 3 '40 160w

COXE, HOWARD. The stranger in the house; a life of Caroline of Brunswick. 288p il $2.50 Greystone [10s 6d Chatto]

B or 92 Caroline Amelia Elizabeth, consort of George IV, king of Great Britain 40-8319

Biography of Caroline of Brunswick, the ridiculous, but pathetic wife of George IV of England. The book is written in a racy colloquial style. Bibliography.

"This book has neither tail nor head. Unfortunately it also has no heart. The one person in it for whom it shows the least liking is Caroline's daughter; the book takes on fire and drive only when Princess Charlotte comes on—or leaves—the scene. Otherwise it offers examples of the way the kind heart of England's 'common people' always sides with an underdog, even a female one, and of the extent to which hatred can be pushed if it starts, not with love subsequently turned inside out, but with sheer physical aversion." M. L. Becker
— Books p11 Je 2 '40 600w

"Vulgarly clever and insipidly brilliant, the story remains stagnant." W. J. Grace
— Commonweal 32:254 Jl 12 '40 220w

"For those who like intimate and highly spiced biographies this book should prove good reading. The style is sometimes rather tiresome . . . and the nickname 'Prinney' used throughout the book for George IV certainly jars. Mr. Coxe does not trouble his readers with dates or authorities, but writes a slight, lively, straightforward, and entertaining account of the adventures of the unfortunate princess, of whom he justly says 'her life was one of absolute and unmitigated waste.' " Barbara Hammond
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 16 '39 380w

New Repub 103:310 S 2 '40 40w

N Y Times p15 My 26 '40 750w

"A charming, Strachey-style biography."
+ New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 30w

"Mr. Coxe has relished telling the whole scabrous story. He has neither diminished its grotesqueries nor developed its moral implications. Comedy it was, and comedy he makes it, though on Caroline herself he bestows more kindliness than historians have usually recorded. The gaiety of his attack and the absurdity of his material provide rich entertainment, which is only slightly marred by the forced vivacity of his style." E. D. Abbott
+ Sat R of Lit 22:11 Ag 3 '40 600w

"Borrowing many of the forms of the novelist, Mr. Coxe has written a flippant work upon a subject worn threadbare by endless repetition. . . Mr. Coxe's work is neither informative as a history nor entertaining as a fiction."
— Spec 163:304 Ag 25 '39 300w

"The book will amuse many, and, what is more, it will awaken sympathy for Caroline of Brunswick. . . The book does not aim to be a complete history of Caroline. Rather it presents the high lights of her life and character, and the reader gets a clearer portrait of her than many pages of detailed biography might give."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 20 '40 700w

"Author Coxe's sympathy and well-oiled wit make his biography of much-abused Caroline a pleasant addition to Regency history."
+ Time 35:91 Je 10 '40 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p282 My 13 '39 700w

COXON, MURIEL (HINE) (MRS SIDNEY COXON). Man of the house. 316p $2 Appleton-Century [9s Hodder] 40-7351

The "man of the house" is really Averil Stanraer, who had undertaken when her father died, to shoulder the responsibility of her delicate mother, Lady Stanraer, and her younger brother Gervase. Gervase fell into the clutches of an adventuress, and it took a complicated conspiracy to remove him from danger, in the course of which Averil found that she need no longer be the family mainstay.

Booklist 36:430 Jl 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 Ap 21 '40 340w

"Miss Hine never nudges the reader with her easy information, and she does tell a good, lively and farcical story. It is all very English. . . Less than halfway through the book one can guess the outcome, but Miss Hine's adroit characterization and excellent dialogue should keep you reading to the end." C. D.
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 21 '40 180w

"Miss Muriel Hine has spoilt a good story by the exaggeration of one of the characters. Valerie Dalmaine is so unpleasant in every way that it is difficult to believe in the infatuation of Gervase Stanraer, stupid young man though he is. Otherwise 'Man of the House' is a readable tale, full of incident, and with a pleasant English country atmosphere."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 2 '40 60w

COYLE, MRS KATHLEEN. Brittany summer; pictures by Richard Floethe. 240p $2 Harper

Children in France 40-33791

Records the experiences of an English family during a summer spent on the Ile aux Moines, in the Morbihan Sea, off the Breton coast. Toward the end of summer the Lawless family made a pilgrimage to the Pardon of St Anne, where their Breton friends had gone to pray for the safe return of the father of the family. The day their prayers were answered was the happiest of the whole happy summer.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

"Pure happiness breathes from every day on this island of Brittany. . . The duty of hope—so needed now—and the deadly peril of despair were never more persuasively shown to children than in this story. This is a beautifully made book: decorative colored drawings maintain a humorous tone, and the print is well-spaced and clear." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 10 '40 290w

"Told by Kathleen Coyle with the enthusiasm of someone who has herself lived in a fisherman's family on the Isle des Moines near Morbihan." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:379 D '40 90w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 30w

"This story of lively boys and girls holds all the gaiety of holiday on a lovely island of Brittany, and it is also full of warmth, friendliness and the sympathetic interest of the visitors in the problems of their friends among the villagers." Lena Barksdale

+ Horn Bk M 17:59 Ja '41 100w

"Richard Floethe, the illustrator of the Streatfeild books, catches the lightness of the story with his rose and blue and white pictures. For the book does somehow lack an intensity. There are too many peculiarly named characters to care very much about any one and there is always an adult on hand with a perplexing sense of humor. The format is one suitable for the eight to ten age group." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale

Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 10w

"Few writers of adult books can capture in entirety the core of childhood, and this book is no exception. There are many gay and truly amusing incidents which 8 to 12 year-olds can enjoy wholeheartedly as they will the fullness of peasant life, but there are tenuous passages and a good deal of the humor springs from an adult knowledge of human nature. Yet uneven as it is, the book is memorable for the touch with which it illumines those moments of realization of beauty and awareness which are the best of life." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 F 2 '41 360w

"It is written with humor and a novelist's gift of characterization and concerns as amusing a group of people . . . as any one could ask for."

+ New Yorker 16:129 D 7 '40 60w

"Almost poetic. Beautiful local color." Katharine Scherman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 40w

COYLE, MRS KATHLEEN. Who dwell with wonder. 279p $2.50 Dutton

40-30525

A story of three sisters, their relationships to each other and to the men who loved them, but particularly their feelings for their mother. The mother's serious illness brings them all together—one from India, another from Russia, to join the youngest still at home. During the few days they are together various important decisions are reached.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

"[Mrs] Coyle's work has sometimes been compared, for somewhat obvious reasons, to that of Katherine Mansfield. In this book there is also a wisdom akin to that in Virginia Woolf's 'Mrs. Dalloway.' There is no need, however, to adduce comparisons, however illustrious, to praise Kathleen Coyle's writing, which has an individuality and a distinction quite its own. 'Who Dwell With Wonder' has the quality of good poetry, in that it has been cleared of the non-essential and left a statement of thought and emotions which none but the foolish or foolhardy can ignore. Its lovely prose and haunting portraits of four women are likely to remain in your memory long after many a more pretentious book has been forgotten." Mary Ross

+ Books p3 O 6 '40 750w

"Written with distinction and skill. Though this is a tale of today or yesterday—it is a novel that librarians will welcome and use for those who seek some romance and some reality which is not too brutal." J. M. Flexner

+ Library J 65:808 O 1 '40 120w

New Repub 103:638 N 4 '40 50w

"'Who Dwell With Wonder' explores the cross currents of emotions of the four women during the period of their reunion. The effect is like a masterpiece in chamber music, four players carrying their individual scores, sometimes alone, sometimes in harmony or counterpoint. The end is good if not completely happy for all of them. And therein [Mrs] Coyle shows the clarity of her understanding of the heart of a woman. For the end can be good without happiness. Readers who found pleasure in 'Immortal Ease' will like this one no less." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 O 6 '40 850w

"The plot is mostly static and subjective, but the book is remarkable, nonetheless, for its style, which is fresh and beautiful, and for its presentation of a strong family attachment."

+ New Yorker 16:102 O 12 '40 50w

"An intensely emotional novel, but written with delicacy of feeling, with a tender appreciation of mother love, and a deep sense of tragedy. . . It is a book which impels one to think deeply, to ponder over situations, even if at times the emotions are so intense that they approach the abnormal. One cannot agree always with the thoughts and emotions expressed, but they inspire the reader to some lively thoughts of his own—which is a satisfaction to any reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 27 '40 490w

Wis Lib Bul 36:167 D '40

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. Ask me tomorrow. 338p $2.50 Harcourt

(W) 40-11104

Character study of a young American in Europe, who wants to be a writer but is forced by lack of means to take a position as tutor-companion to the son of a wealthy American widow.

Atlantic Ag '40 180w

"In 'Ask Me To-Morrow' Mr. Cozzens seems blood brother to Norman Douglas of 'South Wind' fame, and this means rare pleasure for his readers. Seemingly light, the book stays longer with you than a ponderous volume on the eternal verities. For like Douglas, Cozzens knows the importance of the trivial and explores it with the fine hand of the practiced artist." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Je 16 '40 800w

"I hope that 'Ask Me Tomorrow' is James Gould Cozzens's goodbye to all that. Either it is a very young novel dug out of Mr. Cozzens's past and rewritten with distaste, or it is the 37-year-old writer's embittered report upon the 23-year-old novelist he was or another whom he knew. In either case, for those who remember that seven years ago Mr. Cozzens could write so lusty and full-blooded

COZZENS (kŭz'ĕnz)

a novel as 'The Last Adam,' it is an anticlimax." Lewis Gannett
— + Boston Transcript p3 Je 22 '40 650w

"Mr. Cozzens has a real talent, as is evidenced in Men and Brethren and The Lost Adam—but this time his subject of a misfit in love and the trivialities of the life lived in the de luxe hotels of Italy and Switzerland seems somehow very inconsequential." E. W. M.
— Churchman 154:35 Jl 1 '40 50w

"Mr. Cozzens's young hero—by no means unique as a representative of the frank and disillusioned generation—distinguishes himself by turning his frankness upon himself. The result is not always pleasant, but it wins our sympathy. There is something sound and delicate in Francis Ellery's very distaste for himself. Even the somewhat adolescent indecency of some of his reflections is a species of exorcism of preoccupations to which he does not lightly abandon himself. The result is a study of a certain type of young man that not only convinces, but wins the reader's sympathy." H. C. White
+ — Commonweal 32:294 Jl 26 '40 240w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 65:591 Jl '40 90w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins
New Statesman & Nation 20:450 N 2 '40 550w

"There is something curiously footless and trivial about 'Ask Me Tomorrow.' Even, there is something a little boring. For all its humor and irony, for all the slickness of its technique, there seems to me to be nothing about this book which could hold any one very seriously." E. H. Walton
— + N Y Times p7 Je 16 '40 700w

"'Ask Me Tomorrow' is the sort of thing we usually get too little of—civilized satire, not particularly subsurface, on the order of the early Norman Douglas or Compton Mackenzie. . . It's all done gracefully enough. Ordinarily one would say so, recommend the book as non-insulting light reading, and let it go at that. . . It's simply bad luck that Mr. Cozzens' book about part of Europe's corpse should appear at this particular moment and that reviewers should find it hard to judge his work calmly and objectively. You can't read Mr. Cozzens at the moment without an odd feeling of guilt, as if you were evading something, ducking something large and unpleasant." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:113 Je 15 '40 250w

"Perhaps Ellery might have been lost anywhere. He has tragic flaws a-plenty. But in this flawlessly written story, he seems against the rootless American company in the lost Europe, a lost American also, educated without self-confidence, talented without ardor, in love without the headlong heart. . . Though the scene in which Mr. Cozzens has described him with so much wisdom and skill may be history now, Ellery's armed but ineffectual youth has been with us a long time and, I think, Mr. Cozzens's picture of it will be true and disturbing beyond this movement of armies and more to come." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 22:11 Je 29 '40 650w

"The day-to-day dilemmas of honesty, restlessness, and feeling are presented with care, and the damned, romantic, resigned quality of Francis's dreaming is unmistakably 'period' and realistic. The book is gentler, and has more justice than its kind suggests—and is saved from sentimentality, I think, by the impartiality of its bitterness." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 165:508 N 15 '40 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 220w

Time 35:88 Je 17 '40 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p541 O 26 '40 390w

"James Gould Cozzens is a novelist with considerable ability, but even more uncertainty as to what to do with it. . . Why anyone as able as he should choose to write, especially in these times, a book like Ask Me Tomorrow, is hard to understand, unless he is getting something off his chest. Forgetting the headlines, and forcing oneself back into a decade when brilliant anatomies of worthless people seemed to have their place, Ask Me Tomorrow is worth mentioning as an amusing study in tortured, self-conscious emptiness of soul." Robert Littell
— + Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 120w

CRAIN, MAURICE. Rulers of the world; il. by Louise Costello. 335p $2.50 Crowell

923.2 Dictators. Kings and rulers. Statesmen (W) 40-27482

Biographical sketches of fourteen of the present-day rulers of the world. Contents: Winston Churchill; Franklin Delano Roosevelt; Lazaro Cardenas; Neville Chamberlain; Eamon de Valera; Benito Mussolini; Adolf Hitler; Edouard Daladier; Francisco Franco; Kemal Ataturk; Ibn Saud; Chiang Kai-shek; Mahatma Gandhi; Josef Stalin.

Booklist 36:381 Je 1 '40

"An admirable memory-jogger for those who try to guess the course of future events in terms of the lives to date of the chief actors." J. C. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 1 '40 120w

Christian Century 57:582 My 1 '40 60w

"I believe that many students of history will be thankful to Crain for providing us with a handbook which is readable, to the point, and which includes enough information about each man to make him a vivid personality. Here and there there are minor slips." J. S. Roucek
+ — Commonweal 32:64 My 10 '40 270w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:854 O 15 '40 20w

"Although manifestly Mr. Crain has had no personal contact with his rulers and therefore has relied entirely upon research for his material, his vignettes are interesting and have real value because he has recreated the early formative years of these men." Linton Wells
+ Sat R of Lit 22:14 Ag 3 '40 360w

Social Studies 31:286 O '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 8 '40 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

CRAIN, THOMAS CROWELL TAYLOR. A survey. 67p $1.50 Scribner press, 311 W. 43d st, N.Y.

277.3 U.S.—Religion. Civilization, Christian 40-8175

"A layman of unquestioning faith in Christ as presented in the Gospels, writing as a lawyer and Protestant . . . asks if it is well with the home, the school, the church, the land and with the world; discerns definite tendencies and offers thoughtful, practical suggestions such as a return to family worship and a simple, earnest, sincere preaching of the Gospel of Reconciliation by consecrated ambassadors of Christ." Churchman

Bookmark p23 N '40

Books p9 Je 30 '40 170w

+ Churchman 154:34 Je 15 '40 140w

"This modestly named 'survey' gathers together a public-spirited citizen's reflections as he regards his world. It is not a pessimistic meditation, but neither is it unduly roseate: looking from a clear vantage-point upon home and school and church and the state of the country and of civilization generally, Thomas C. T. Crain sees the need for the deeper and more constant recognition of spiritual values."
+ N Y Times p12 My 5 '40 600w

CRAM, MILDRED (MRS C. S. MCDOWELL). Kingdom of innocents. 296p $2.50 Knopf 40-32859

In 1909 an American novelist makes a brief visit to two ancient English homes and meets two children, six years of age. Returned to his own land he weaves about these children a story, half fantasy, half realistic modern psychology, following the course of their lives from the day they wish "to be always children" to the day years later when they wish "to be man and woman."

CRAM, MILDRED—Continued

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"John Morgan tried to give these two the most generous gift he could devise, that of perpetual childhood. But he saw as he followed his story through that even such a gift was useless in a world where nobody else had it. . . I do not know if this is the moral Miss Cram intended, though it is the impression she leaves. But if it is, the thought is not depressing. It is so ingenious a fancy that it tantalizes rather than distresses. You are teased into a thousand speculations. And the greatest compliment that can be paid to the author is to say that she has worked out the implications of her story so thoroughly that when it is finished there is no room for dissatisfaction." Anne Brooks
+ Books p19 N 17 '40 700w

Cath World 152:635 F '41 270w

"It is a book haunted by a phrase: 'a deathless land . . . without beginning and without end.' A book, moreover, distinguished by the ripe wisdom and spiritual insight brought to bear, not only on the story itself, but through it, on questions of ultimate human urgency." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p16 N 10 '40 700w

"The only criticism of the book as a whole, is that the beginning is slow. We are rather long in getting to the magic part. There is an involved and unnecessary frame for the story, like a long-winded preamble, before we arrive at our spell in the druidic circle. But once we are there, we escape from the sorrows of this modern world into a fine fantastic kingdom. This is an unusual book which manages to capture for grown-ups the curious unforgettable charm—that mixture of reality and unreality—which children find in fairy tales." R. C. Bénet
+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 16 '40 420w

"The story [is] fantastic, of course, but delightful, and handled in so deft a way as to make it seem quite natural and vital. Maybe only a mind that loves free play of the imagination can enjoy it to a full extent, but to such a mind it is a real pleasure." M. D.
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 850w

CRAN, MARION FREE (DUDLEY) (MRS F. S. HURD-WOOD). Gardens of character. 284p il $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Jenkins]
716 Gardens

Leisurely chapters on gardens and gardening by an English writer on garden lore. Interspersed with the gardening matters, there is much personal material, concerning the author's home life, her friends, and her family. Index.

"Good thinking and good writing, flavored with humor and rich in human understanding. By all means read it, if you are seeking relaxation and pleasure, for it is one of those restrained yet revealing books which make one say at the end, 'No wonder the English are such good gardeners.'" Robert Lemmon
+ Books p11 Je 9 '40 60w

"Through her several very distinctive garden books, Mrs. Cran has undoubtedly endeared herself to many sentimental gardeners. To such readers, the author's garden in England's Weald is probably familiar and pleasurable. . . And the book also continues the story of the author's family—in this installment returned to England from the tea plantations in Kenya. All this is very delightful—if you like it. Otherwise, the book is just another English garden book imported into America where its cultural information is largely valueless and its human interest only as warm as the reader's snobbishness allows."
— + Boston Transcript p1 Jl 13 '40 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p63 F 3 '40 50w

CRANE, DONN P. Flippy and Skippy, the two flying squirrels [il. by the author]. [48p] $1.50 Winston 40-14812

Two flying squirrels, captured when quite young, were brought home as pets by eight-year-old Peter. He made a cage for them, but they got out as often as they could, and made life exciting for Peter's whole family, until the day when they made their final escape.

Booklist 37:139 D 1 '40

"Many a small boy will wish he had Peter's luck." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 N 10 '40 170w

"A new story about a flying squirrel invites immediate comparison with Dorothy Lathrop's Hide and Go Seek. This is quite at the opposite end of the scale. . . There is no pretense at plot or literary style. The illustrations by the author, some of them in two colors, are a literal accompaniment of the text. Such a book as this could be used with retarded readers as a stepping-stone to the more subtle and artistic presentation of fact as found in the Lathrop book. Recommended where needed." M. F. Potter
Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 100w

CRANE, STEPHEN. Twenty stories; selected, with an introduction by Carl Van Doren. 507p $2.75 Knopf
(W) 40-30097

Selections from the short stories of the author of The Red Badge of Courage. Contents: Maggie: a girl of the streets; An experiment in misery; A mystery of heroism; The little regiment; Three miraculous soldiers; A grey sleeve; Ol' Bennet and the Indians; The open boat; The monster; Death and the child; Horses—one dash; The five white mice; The bride comes to Yellow Sky; The blue hotel; The price of the harness; An episode of war; Lynx-hunting; Shame; The carriage-lamps; An illusion in red and white.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40
Books p29 S 29 '40 80w

"In general the quality of the stories in this volume is very uneven, but Crane's talent and range are well represented. At his best his use of language is fresh, precise, and sharp; his approach to his material seems 'contemporary,' which is only another way of saying that it is objective and direct. Crane's work doesn't deserve the obscurity which has been the fate of almost all of it except 'The Red Badge of Courage.'" Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 151:247 S 21 '40 140w

"Short as was his life Crane has left stirring, exciting tales that are among the best written in this country. Among those included in 'Twenty Stories' none is dull, while some are superb." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p25 S 29 '40 900w

"Crane wrote so much in his brief life that not all of it can be equally good, as Mr. Van Doren observes. The minor novels are best forgotten, but these excellent short stories deserve the eminence to which Mr Van Doren has elevated them. As the editor concludes in his introduction: 'Crane is still a living writer not because he was prophetic but because he was excellent. Prophets come and go. It is excellence that is timeless.'"
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 900w

CRANFORD, CLARENCE WILLIAM. The devotional life of young people. 125p pa 60c Am. Bapt.
248 Youth—Religious life 40-7445

"The minister of Second Baptist Church, Richmond, Va., in this little book addressed directly to young people indicates the importance and the meaning of personal devotional life, tells how it may be cultivated, and gives suggestions regarding a Christian philosophy of life which will support, and be supported by, the practice of devotional living." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:547 Ap 24 '40 50w

"Pastors and others may commend the book to their young people with confidence. It is well done." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 17:242 Jl '40 70w

CRANWELL, JOHN PHILIPS, and CRANE, WILLIAM BOWERS. Men of marque. 427p il map $3.75 Norton

973.5258 U.S.—History—War of 1812. Privateering 40-6561

Narrative history of the privateers and letters of marque, especially those which operated out of Baltimore, during the War of 1812. "The authors point out a distinction between a letter-of-marque ship and a privateer. A letter-of-marque was an armed merchant vessel commissioned by the Government to attack enemy trade. A privateer was an outright marauder, a professional, so to speak. Baltimore had a large and active number of both—perhaps because it had a great number of seafarers whose normal commercial livelihood was disrupted by the war, and because Baltimore shipbuilders had a gift for turning out ships suited to this hazardous business." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"The work is well documented, admirably written, and can hardly be excelled as a stirring narrative of maritime adventure."

+ Atlantic My '40 80w

"This lively volume combines thorough research with thrilling narrative." R. G. Albion

+ Books p2 Je 30 '40 1150w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 30 '40 600w

"The 'Bibliography' is a hodge-podge of cognate treatises, sources, and authorities, and even such an egregious item as Lippincott's Complete Pronouncing Gazetteer. Useful chiefly for future reference and as presenting adequately the economic and military aspects of American privateering." L. N. Feipel

Library J 65:209 Mr 1 '40 160w

"It bears every evidence of authority; the accumulated testimony of meticulous research is almost staggering—and depressing; the book would have been twice as good if it was half as long. Its strength is at once its weakness; it is thorough and complete, but each chapter has a sameness that is boring; there is a similarity of pattern and a redundancy of episode that are perhaps inevitable in a history of this kind." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p3 My 5 '40 700w

Reviewed by Roger Shaw

Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 4 '40 480w

"Popguns roar defiance, irate officers stamp and gesture, boarders are called away and the flags flutter down on the tall ships of yesterday in this well-documented, yet diverting book." M. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 28 '40 550w

CRAWFORD, PHYLLIS. Walking on gold; drawings by Russell Sherman. 284p map $2 Messner

40-32632

The gold rush to California in 1849 forms the background of this story for ages twelve to fourteen. The hero is a boy of sixteen who joins the "Arkansas travelers," a small company which took the southern route to California. He endured many hardships and dangers before reaching the conclusion that farming would pay better than gold hunting.

"The story follows the usual pattern of the many books on this period of our country's history. While it does rise to occasional dramatic heights, the trek across the seering desert being particularly well handled, at other times the action is unnecessarily slow. There is not the freshness and exuberance in Walking on Gold that made the author's Hello, the Boat! such delightful reading. It is an acceptable picture of a journey westward, but not an outstanding or unusual one." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 160w

"There have been many stories of the Gold Rush, some more exciting, but none of them, I think, any truer in spirit than this one by the author of 'Hello, the Boat!' Its strength does not lie in melodrama, in Indian battles or extravagant plots of villainy, but just in the heroic feat of the journey itself, the endurance of desert heat, dwindling supplies, the apprehension of possible Indian raids, and in the great adventure of traversing new country." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 19 '41 400w

Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 50w

CREED, VIRGINIA. Intrude no more. 284p $2.50 Duell

40-14074

Valerie Hunt, daughter of a famous Beacon Hill doctor, is the heroine. At sixteen Valerie, who did not fit well into the Boston Brahmin pattern, had gone abroad to study dancing. After the death of her father, Valerie, already at twenty-six an internationally famous dancer, returned to Boston. The discovery of her divided heritage, however, sent her away from Beacon Hill forever.

Booklist 37:68 O 15 '40

"Miss Creed's best work in this book is in creation of mood and atmosphere. The scene of the Charity Ball where Valerie dances to please her sister Lucy is fine art and excellent satire." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 Jl 21 '40 600w

"The Boston which we have come to think of as a state of mind is depicted with a sly humor leavened by tolerance for its eccentricities and understanding for its credos. The book has swiftness of pace, tensity of interest and a ripe wisdom. . . 'Intrude No More' will delight your mind and engage your spirit." A. D. Bond

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 20 '40 650w

"The plot is constructed in workmanlike fashion, its pieces dovetailing very neatly. The meeting between Miss Carlin and Madame Sofia Nemet, the New England spinster and the great demi-mondaine who seemed so unlike and were in fact so very sympathetic is effective, and the descriptions are usually well done. Though a trifle strained at times, the novel is interesting and fairly well written." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 21 '40 650w

CREEDY, FREDERICK. Human nature writ large; with a foreword by Bronislaw Malinowski. 484p $3 Univ. of N.C. press [15s Allen, G]

301 Social psychology. Civilization 40-12342

"A social psychologic survey and Western anthropology." (Subtitle) "It is as a contribution to anthropology that I regard this book—as marking the transition from the study of man as a pastime to the science of man—as a branch of real knowledge. . . In treating our Western civilization in the anthropological spirit the author is doing a pioneering piece of work and one which is bound to stimulate thought. . . He has developed an approach which, combining sound psychology, a competent sociological point of view and a well-trained universe of philosophical discourse, promises to start a new line of anthropology in our contemporary savagery. The chapters on economics, nationalism, art, and poetry seem to me full of excellent arguments, enlivened by provocative and paradoxical sallies." (Bronislaw Malinowski in Foreword) Index.

CREEDY, FREDERICK—Continued
Reviewed by J. F. Dashiell
Am J Psychol 53:480 Jl '40 360w

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg
Ann Am Acad 209:245 My '40 800w

"Like books on 'woman' or 'the child,' a book upon all human beings who have ever existed is likely to be based upon the comparatively small number of individuals whom the author has met or read about. It is, however, worth while to apply some of the conceptions of modern psychology and modern anthropology to the English-speaking communities in the Western world. This, in fact, is what Mr. Creedy has done, with some results which are interesting and others which are astonishing. . . It is doubtful whether a larger dose of the sense of humor would not have confined the author's attention to a somewhat more restricted field than human nature. He attempts an account of the growth of Christianity, thus descending into details with regard to which it is easier to test the value of his assertions than when he speaks of men in general. But some of his statements on history are certainly wrong. . . His summary of economic beliefs is also by no means exact. But, above all, one finds it strange that, in a book upon human nature, the habits and customs of the French or the Chinese or the Bantus are not so much as mentioned. Where the author's general statements are correct, they are probably applicable only to a small number of English and American middle-class families." C. D. B.
— + Ethics 50:367 Ap '40 340w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 29 '40 600w

"This is a book that for once social theorists and social reformers can read and ponder together. Its solid content and paradoxical style will make the volume long a memory in the minds of all who read it." R. B. Vance
Social Forces 18:596 My '40 550w

"Mr. Creedy's is not a book to be accepted as a reliable outline of the social sciences. It is a spur, a challenge, a piece of magnificent cheek, not a treatise. It is as a challenge that Professor Malinowski praises it in his preface, for forcing the reader to 'move along the lines of constructive thought.' That quality is undeniable. It is unfortunate, however, that either in an effort to avoid 'trigger phrases'—the illegitimate word-magic of the mythologist—or in sheer incompetence, Mr. Creedy should have written his book in a style which, though Professor Malinowski praises it, the present reviewer can only characterise as perfectly foul." Honor Croome
— Spec 164:52 Ja 12 '40 800w

"The average reader must presumably be content to be stimulated by Mr. Creedy's ambitious range of thought and by his fresh approach to many controversial subjects; few will be in a position to criticize in detail more than one portion of his book. But it is perhaps worth picking out one curious detail at the moment. Mr. Creedy suggests that an important reason for war is that it releases the individual from a monotonous life and allows him to enjoy, vicariously and through his nation, 'emotion, excitement, adventure, and drama.' "
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Je 1 '40 600w

CRIST, GEORGE WILLIAM. Corporate suretyship. 439p $4.50 (25s) McGraw

368.81 Suretyship and guaranty. Insurance, Surety and fidelity 39-20376

"From this book the reader will derive an understanding of the whole purpose of corporate suretyship, the markets it is intended to serve and how it serves them, the major classes of bonds which it issues, the conditions which indicate the necessity for them, and the service they render to contemporary institutions. It is a simple explanation of the basic relationship between the principal and the obligee—the promisor and the beneficiary of the promise—and of how the surety secures that relationship." (Management R) Index.

"The purpose of the book is 'to serve the newcomer and others who require a broad survey rather than a highly technical training.' So, it is not the intention of the author to offer a scientific work. Therefore, the reviewer will do well not to be critical about the almost entire lack of references, and about many statements and repetitions (Chaps. I and XV) by the author, who, without doubt, is a first-class practitioner." Alfred Manes
Ann Am Acad 208:229 Mr '40 470w

"The book as a whole marks the author as a man with an accurate knowledge of his field and an intelligent understanding of its problems." John Hanna
+ Columbia Law R 40:574 Mr '40 550w
Management R 28:332 S '39 100w

CRITCHLEY, MACDONALD. The language of gesture. 128p $1.75 Longmans [5s Arnold, E. & co]

419.1 Sign language. Gesture [40-27207]

Study of sign language, showing the similarity between the signs used by deaf mutes and certain primitive tribes. Partial contents: Sign-language in religious communities; Sign-language: secret societies; Indian mythology; Occupational sign-languages: digital methods of counting; Sign-language and symbolism; Gesture in conversation: the Neapolitans and the Levantines; The art of miming and the dance; The Graeco-Roman theatre; The oriental theatre; Gesture as a precursor of speech. Index.

Booklist 36:277 Mr 15 '40

"The reference to Armenian sign language (p. 50) needs correction. The language is used exclusively by women—not by men. The descriptions of hand gestures might have been made easier; 'pronated,' 'adducted,' etc., will be unfamiliar terms to many of the wide public by whom this excellent little book should be read."
+ — Nature 145:814 My 25 '40 240w

CROCKER, CHARLOTTE; FIELDS, VICTOR ALEXANDER, and BROOMALL, WILL. Taking the stage; self development through dramatic art. 339p il $2.50 Pitman

792 Acting. Monolog. English language—Dialects 39-20513

A handbook for actors and for the individual who needs the guidance in self development which an actor's training provides. Part one, on dramatic technic, is followed by a section on the monodrama—solo acting, story-telling, monologs, impersonation, etc. Part three is devoted to foreign dialects and American folk speech used in the theater and radio. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:64 O 15 '39

"For any one who appears in public in any capacity it will prove a useful book. The dramatic teacher will find it a valuable supplement to other books on the subject and it is excellent for individual study."
+ Wis Lib Bul 36:14 Ja '40

CROCKETT, LUCY HERNDON. Capitán, the story of an army mule; il. by the author. 354p map $2 Holt

40-33796

Capitán, a United States army mule, reviews his long life and thereby gives something of a military history of the United States from the outbreak of the Spanish-American war in 1898 until after the Treaty of Versailles. His experiences include life in Cuba and Manila, the Boxer rebellion in China, the Mexican trouble after Villa's raid on New Mexico, and the first World war. For children of ten and older.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 D 8 '40 280w

"Once the boy or girl—but more particularly the boy—realizes that Capitán is the sort of mule whose adventures deserve to be told in a rather thick book, Capitán is going to be popular. But it is going to take a bit of persuasion to get the child and the mule together. . . The ending is dramatic enough to plunge people of ten to twelve years into tears, first of pity, then of a sort of nostalgic joy. Miss Crockett's own illustrations are strange and charming, as usual." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 140w

"The book is written for the 'teens, of course, but since it is by turns moving, humorous, soundly philosophic, and always interesting and graphic, a good many older readers might learn something from mules, as men have done ever since the time of a great mule ancestor owned by Mr. Balaam." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ja 4 '41 400w

CROCKETT, LUCY HERNDON. That Mario; il. by [the author]. 183p $1.50 Holt

40-7101

Mario is the older brother of Lucio, whose story was told in Lucio and His Nuong (Book Review Digest, 1939). Mario was polite and honest, but decidedly lazy. On a trip to Manila he learned two things: that it is not such a bad idea to work; and that school was not too hard either. His family gasped with surprise when on his return Mario said: "I have come back to be useful to you." For slightly older children than Lucio and His Nuong.

"Mario's reluctant experiences with work are always funny and the polite talk of these Filipinos so amusing that an older person, chuckling through the story, is likely to turn back and reread his favorite bits. This should be borne in mind, for many parents read aloud to eight-year-olds and like to find books that both parties to the proceeding can stand more than once." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 28 '40 410w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"There are many pictures throughout, and it seems regrettable that they could not have been done in color, like the book jacket. Those colors are just right for the tropical country they portray. However, Mario is well worth knowing, and boys and girls of ten to twelve will certainly enjoy him." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:454 My 15 '40 200w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 20w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

"Miss Crockett has more than fulfilled the promise of 'Lucio' in this hilarious and original tale. She writes with a fine ear for words and rhythm and from a deep feeling for the lovely country. The sliest touches of her humor may not be grasped by children, but the incidents are funny in themselves, and readers will know a great deal more about the Philippines and their courteous, easygoing people than they did when they started the tale. It is unfortunate that much of the unique quality of her illustrations has been blurred in poor reproductions." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 My 12 '40 400w

"The author of the picture book 'Lucio and His Nuong' now writes for somewhat older children an even more delightful book about Lucio's older brother. . . The Philippine background is vivid and the pictures add to the gaiety." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 16:97 My 18 '40 60w

CROFT, TERRELL WILLIAMS, ed. Practical heat; revised by R. B. Purdy. 2d ed 726p il $5 McGraw

536 Heat 39-5305

"Two thirds of the book, dealing with the theory of heat, remains practically the same as the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1923]. The remainder, covering power plants, has been revised and brought up to date in line with advances in power plant design." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 35:275 Ap 15 '39
N Y New Tech Bks 24:56 O '39

CROFT-COOKE, RUPERT. Same way home. 359p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Jarrolds]

40-1226

Psychological study of the effects of a murder committed in their midst upon the various members of a respectable upper middle-class English family.

"Considered as a crime tale, 'Same Way Home' has novelty of form. It's a good bet on general principles." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 D 31 '39 200w

"The strangest thing is that, while you may get to know the Macaulays' every thought, you never actually see them and you never believe in them as living people." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '39 70w

"Sandwiches the excitement of a thriller between some pretty heavy theorizings on the English character and world affairs."
New Repub 102:62 Ja 8 '40 40w

"In this novel Rupert Croft-Cooke reveals himself as a writer who not only has a good story to tell but something worth attention to say about this perplexing twentieth century of ours, which to so many seems uprooted and adrift." L. M. Field
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 7 '40 700w

"The psychological problems presented by Geoffrey and his family in this crisis, and the suspense aroused by the question of whether or not Geoffrey will be hanged, are plentiful material for a novel; and the author might have done better to limit himself to this. But he has in addition provided several additional problems, on which the death is supposed to act as a reagent, bringing them to their solution. . . All that is accomplished by introducing these extraneous problems is to rob Geoffrey's own situation of the tightness of suspense which it should have." Basil Davenport
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:6 Ja 20 '40 400w

"The book is keenly analytical and morbidly fascinating. One could wish to meet the author in a happier environment."
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 500w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Golden ashes. 290p $2 Dodd

40-6735

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"This is not one of those perfect British bafflers, but it's up the same street and the next thing to it." Will Cuppy
+ Books p19 Ap 14 '40 240w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 50w

Reviewed by E. R. Punshon
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 9 '40 190w

"It is one of the neatest jobs the Inspector has handled for several years; and, though never exciting, the story winds up with an eminently satisfying solution." Ralph Partridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:808 Je 29 '40 70w

CROFTS, F. W.—Continued

"It is a slow method, but a thoroughly sound one. The trouble with it—from the reader's standpoint—is that it is equally slow in the telling. That is why the Inspector French stories appeal to those who appreciate good detective work, but not to those who must have their hair-breadth escapes and their deeds of derring-do." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 21 '40 150w

New Yorker 16:96 Ap 20 '40 50w

"Superior article."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 13 '40 40w

Time 35:92 My 6 '40 20w

"There is a pleasantly leisurely and old-world air about Mr. Crofts's latest detective story 'Golden Ashes' which is welcome in these hard times. Inspector French is as thorough and conscientious as ever, and if the astute reader guesses the solution some chapters in advance of him, this does not detract from the interest of the story, it is so smoothly written and so convincingly told."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 22 '40 250w

CROGHAN, GEORGE. Journal of his trip to Detroit in 1767; with his correspondence relating thereto; now pub. for the first time from the papers of Thomas Gage in the William L. Clements library; ed. by Howard H. Peckham. 61p $1.25 Univ. of Mich. [6s Oxford]

977 Northwest, Old. Indians of North America 39-8466

"In 1767 General Gage and Sir William Johnson joined in dispatching the latter's deputy superintendent of Indian affairs, George Croghan, over wilderness trails to Detroit. He was to investigate Indian unrest, examine complaints against the commissary at Detroit, restore two Chippewa prisoners to their tribe, and assist in removing Major Robert Rogers from the command at Michilimackinac. The journal here printed is the copy sent to Gage and gives an account of Croghan's overland journey to Detroit, via Fort Pitt, and return." Am Hist R

Reviewed by A. T. Volwiler

Am Hist R 45:488 Ja '40 220w

"Croghan's journal of this mission has been discovered among the Gage papers in the Clements library, and is here published for the first time. Brief as it is, it is not without interest for students of the relations of Great Britain with the Indians." H. S. Commager

+ Books p23 Ap 14 '40 310w

"The work of the editor has been very well done, and the publication of the journal is a valuable addition to the materials for the history of British policy in the Mississippi valley." H. H. B.

+ Eng Hist R 54:756 O '39 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 24 '39 130w

CRONIN, ARCHIBALD JOSEPH. Jupiter laughs. 160p $2 Little

822 40-32676

The action of the play takes place in a private sanitarium, run by a pompous nonentity. On the staff is one real scientist who covers his profound disgust with life and humanity by a cynicism which makes him unpopular with his colleagues. Two vindictive women do their best to ruin him, but a third saves his important papers at the cost of her life. The fame which comes to the doctor means very little to him; he sneaks off to China to put his discovery into practice in his own way.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p31 D 8 '40 70w

"Dr. Cronin has as fine a theme as one could wish in the transfiguring quality of a good example but in his fear of being sentimental, he has exaggerated the sinners. Ibsen or O'Neill have often handled a plot just as crude in its colors but with more dexterous shading. Dr. Cronin's dialogue has no overtones. . . It is a pity that Dr. Cronin did not spend a little more time on the writing of Jupiter Laughs as for a first play to err on the side of too much action is as unusual as it is heartening." E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 152:89 O '40 470w (Dramatic criticism)

"One cannot help feeling that 'Jupiter Laughs' would have been more profound and provocative had it been less melodramatic. Dr. Cronin's characters are of such two-dimensional proportions as to give no real feeling of growth or development. The hero's reformation, for instance, comes as a result rather of sheer emotional reaction than of philosophical reflection. 'Jupiter Laughs' may serve the films better than it does the stage. In a film, the story could be given more variety and pace, and, in stressing the melodrama, the film could dispense with the need of a strong character theme." John Beaufort

Christian Science Monitor p2 S 10 '40 480w (Dramatic criticism)

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"Dr. Cronin seems to have mastered much too well just the sort of dramaturgy which can be learned out of textbooks. His play is therefore, like the plays of many amateurs, so theatrically sound that anyone who has ever seen a play before always knows not only what is going to happen but also just when and how it is going to be brought to pass. Every time a character leaves the stage one knows who is going to appear next; every time two persons are left alone together one knows exactly what each is going to say and do." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 151:253 S 21 '40 700w (Dramatic criticism)

"There are thrown together snatches of humor, melodrama, medical terms, pathos, bathos, fine writing and dimly incredible happenings of various kinds. Curiously, as you read it, you rather like all those people, are rather anxious to find out how it ends. The drama reviewers didn't much care, so the armchair student of the theatre has one up on them there. Dr. Cronin is their man, anyway." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p40 N 10 '40 190w

CROSBY, WILLIAM FLOWER. Racing small boats. 116p il $1.50 Macmillan

797.14 Yacht racing (W) 40-8359

"An analytical and critical review of an entire racing season." (Subtitle) "Each incident actually occurred and each chapter was written immediately after the race it describes. . . Throughout, the author speaks of the lessons that were to be learned from each particular race, and shows what improvements in rig or handling could be made to better the boat. In subsequent chapters these changes have been followed through and the results analyzed." (Introd) Glossary.

Booklist 36:378 Je 1 '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40

CROSS, REUBEN R. Fur, feathers and steel; of feathers, hackles, fishhooks and other materials used in tying trout flies. 78p il $2 Dodd

799.12 Flies, Artificial. Trout fishing 40-5527

"In these days the greatest difficulty an amateur fly-tier encounters is the proper selection of material. This new book classifies, describes, illustrates and evaluates all the materials that any sane tier needs. It also divulges many a new trick; and to top it off, it is peppered with anecdotes and fishing talk from an authority who may be found at his workbench in a sportsmen's show or poking around in his back yard in the Catskills." Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 36:409 Jl 1 '40

"It is a valuable little book, especially with the opening of the trout season but a couple of full moons away." A. T. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 130w

"Reuben Cross writes with charm and a lively humor and his new work has originality and practical value."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 15 '40 290w

CROSSMAN, RICHARD HOWARD STAFFORD. Government and the governed; a history of political ideas and political practice; foreword by H. A. L. Fisher. 306p $3 Putnam [7s 6d Christophers]

320.9 Political science. Revolutions. World politics [40-27066]

History of political thought from the Renaissance to the present, showing how the philosophies were molded by the pressure of events. Bibliography. Index.

"Government and the Governed will hold the attention of the casual reader and it will afford him much profit; and it cannot fail to delight the student of political ideas, however much he may disagree with many of the author's generalizations." O. D. Weeks

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:570 Je '40 490w

Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

"Mr. Crossman's practical interest in the problems of government is what gives vitality and animation to his survey of the course of political thought since the Renaissance and saves it from being a text-book réchauffé. Dealing with such a vast field, in three hundred pages, he can do no more than survey it in broad outline. But he brings out clearly the essential features, and never writes mere lifeless abstracts of systems of thought." M. D. C. Tait

+ Canadian Forum 19:226 O '39 450w

Economist 136:526 S 16 '39 220w

"Mr. Crossman's brilliant and attractive essay is both more and less than it purports to be. . . It is an essay, at once challenging and incisive, upon our present discontents, seen in the light of their history. Read from this angle, it is an extraordinarily interesting book, the more so because Mr. Crossman is free from that tepidity which is the curse of academic minds, and is not afraid to confront the issues before us with not only a philosophy of his own, but with a set of judgments upon men and events which are always of real and vivid significance. From this angle, the merits of his book are great. . . Naturally enough, Mr. Crossman is stronger upon some periods than upon others. He is, I think, disappointing upon the medieval background; it was at once more complex and more profound than he makes it. . . The volume contains the best brief account known to me of the background of the Nazi triumph in Germany; for this alone, had it not also much else that is admirable, the book would be well worth while." H. J. Laski

+ — New Statesman & Nation 17:942 Je 17 '39 500w

"This book is no mere cloistered academic telling-over again the oft-told tale of the development of political theory, but the work of a don who has experience of practical politics, of a writer who cares less for what Gladstone or Marx said in 1876, than for what is relevant in anything they, or anyone else, have said to our present discontents. . . If any one . . . comes to this book expecting a formal academic treatise of the familiar type, he will be, if not disappointed, at least surprised by what he reads. There is a manner, if not of positive irreverence, at least marked by an absence of formal respect for eminent persons, which will be found refreshing or distressing according to taste." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec 162:1100 Je 23 '39 450w

"This lively and challenging book catches Mr. Crossman in the very act of emergence from the academic chrysalis. It is in part a text-book and a text-book of an unusual kind. . . Not often does a book which never betrays its academic intention operate with such fine tonic effect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p337 Je 10 '39 800w

CROUSE, NELLIS MAYNARD. French pioneers in the West Indies, 1624-1664. 294p maps $3.50 Columbia univ. press

972.97 West Indies, French. France—Colonies—West Indies. French in the West Indies 40-32711

"The French possessions in the Caribbean area may draw a good deal of attention in the near future. Not much has been written about the beginnings of French occupation of the territory that England and Spain did not get. The beginnings were more ambitious than the present reduced area of French holdings would suggest, for England got the best of the struggle which began in the middle of the eighteenth century. The main theme of this . . . study is the dispossessing of the natives and the lively interludes furnished by buccaneers and privateers." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"Careful and interesting study."

+ Christian Century 57:1418 N 13 '40 70w

"Even if the French West Indies were not so much in the lime light, as they are, this spirited account of the pioneer history of the French West Indies would hold our interest. The author has known how to make the best of a record wherein endless raids by savages alternate with endless quarrels among white men. . . But Mr. Crouse has not forgotten the comic side which creeps into the tragedy. It is a relief for which the reader is thankful." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 33:187 D 6 '40 390w

CROW, CARL. Foreign devils in the Flowery Kingdom; il. by Esther Brock Bird. 340p $3 Harper

915.1 Americans in China. China—Foreign population. China—Social conditions (W) 40-35625

An informal account of the foreigner in China from Marco Polo's time to about 1937. The author, who lived in China himself for a quarter of a century, enlivens his story with personal anecdotes and shrewd observations on both Chinese and foreign customs and manners.

Booklist 37:172 Ja 1 '41

"The book must be read in full to be savored. It brings, first and foremost, capital entertainment, but beyond that a genuinely informing and thought-provocative picture of the intermingling of East and West." Mary Ross

+ Books p5 D 15 '40 450w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p11 N 19 '40 40w

"The offhand guess would be that even such a newspaperman as Carl Crow could not come across with another volume quite so piquant, so discerning, so spontaneous as 400 Million Customers. And the guess is correct. For some of the material in the new book, Mr. Crow evidently consulted the pages of history as well as the files of his own lively memory; sometimes he pads a bit to make a chapter. But if it is occasionally possible to lay the book down, it is more than probable that the reader will pick it up again, smiling the particularly contented smile reserved for a good yarn based on fact." M. H. Bro

+ — Christian Century 57:1516 D 4 '40 650w

CROW, CARL—Continued

"The author is an old China hand and proud of it. He has written with affection and genuine familiarity of that flowery kingdom which was in many ways an earthly Paradise for the Foreign Devil. . . What makes Mr. Crow's loosely strung essays and historical sketches so endearing is his wholehearted appreciation of Chinese character and Chinese life. . . When weighty historians are writing the history of the Occidental in the Orient, they will do well to consult this book for human background material." E. V. A.
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:2 D 10 '40 600w

Nation 151:641 D 21 '40 120w

"Carl Crow's entire book is marked by poise of mind and affectionate memory. It has something to say, and says it with straightforward verve and enjoyable clarity."
+ N Y Times p40 D 8 '40 900w

New Yorker 16:102 N 16 '40 80w

"It is a fascinating, vivid story, in which Chinese take their part as friendly enemies of the white man, admiring and contemptuous at the same time of the swashbuckling, freely-spending barbarians. It really is the gold-coast atmosphere, as Carl Crow says. No one else can portray it so well as he. He lived in it and was of it. Carl Crow calls himself an Old China Hand and so he is. But he is a good deal more or he could not write so well, with such balanced understanding and humor." P. S. Buck
+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 N 23 '40 750w

CROWELL, MRS GRACE (NOLL). The radiant quest. 94p $1.50 Harper 811 40-5149

Collection of poems by an American poet who now resides in Texas. Many of the poems are inspired by a love of nature.

"Here is many an insight, and always that genius which makes her poetry the enduring delight it is."
+ Christian Century 57:417 Mr 27 '40 50w
Wis Lib Bul 36:65 Ap '40

CROWELL, JOHN FRANKLIN. Personal recollections of Trinity college, North Carolina, 1887-1894; with a pref. by Charles L. Raper. (Centennial publication) 280p $3 Duke univ. [15s Cambridge]
378 Duke university, Durham, North Carolina. Trinity college 39-6833

"Doctor Crowell, at the age of 29, principal of Schuylkill Seminary, Fredericksburg, Lebanon County, Pennsylvania, and a member of the Evangelical Church, accepted the presidency of Trinity College, a Methodist school in Randolph County, N.C. He served the college 1887-1894 and moved the institution to Durham. Financial difficulties, dissensions in the faculty, in the Board of Trustees and among the leaders of the Methodist Conferences led to his resignation. The part which the young educator had in interesting the Duke family in higher education is portrayed. The small Trinity College with a single building has become the magnificent Duke University." Crozer Q

Christian Century 56:354 Mr 15 '39 30w
Reviewed by E. W. Powell
Crozer Q 17:157 Ap '40 100w
Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 4 '39 1250w

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Lone Star rising; il. by Lydia Parmelee. 338p $2 Crowell 40-32773

The struggle of Texas for independence from Mexico in 1835 to 1837 is seen thru the eyes of an American girl of fifteen, who lived thru the days of the Alamo, was captured by a Mexican spy, and was rescued by General Houston's troops. For girls twelve to fourteen.

Christian Century 57:1314 O 23 '40 20w

"The author shows the dissension and lack of central authority among the Americans particularly well. It is doubtful if the older girls for whom the book is intended will care to follow the campaign quite so closely. Much of the dialogue seems stilted. The story has its chief value in using a period and background new to readers of this age." Eleanor Kidder
+ — Library J 65:985 N 15 '40 150w

"A spirited story."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 60w
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w

CROXTON, FREDERICK EMORY, and COWDEN, DUDLEY JOHNSTONE. Applied general statistics. 957p il maps $4 Prentice-Hall
311.2 Statistics 39-30275

"This book is intended for the use of readers who are interested in the understanding of statistical methods, and in their application in various fields, especially the social sciences. Consequently, the illustrative material has been drawn mainly from the fields of economics, sociology, and business, but occasionally from others. The arrangement of the topics treated in this volume is about the same as in the authors' earlier book, Practical Business Statistics [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The present text, however, does not stress business applications of statistical methods, but does present a greatly amplified treatment of analytical methods. The extensive discussion of the description and analysis of statistical data and of the making of statistical inferences will, we hope, make it useful to a wide group of teachers emphasizing various aspects of statistics." (Pref) Index.

"It is indeed fortunate that, at last, someone has had the courage to put into one volume sufficient instructional statistical material to serve as the basis for an extended course of study and enough accessory tables to make the book worth keeping by students who have completed their training. Standard topics, including charts, distributions, significance, time series, and correlation, are presented in the order stated. . . Although nothing but algebra shows above the surface, probably it was not expected that this book would be used by those unfortunate and unhappy statistics instructors who are forced to teach courses having no mathematical prerequisities." E. B. Dade
+ Am Econ R 30:215 Mr '40 220w

"That the authors of the most popular college text in an important field have written a new book is in itself a matter of interest. Although F. E. Croxton and D. J. Cowden's new Applied General Statistics falls somewhat short of being 'general' (as indeed the authors suggest in the preface), it is nevertheless more than merely another book. It contains all the subject-matter embraced in other elementary texts in statistics for social science students—and more. . . For service as a reference manual, the comprehensive text, statistical tables, bibliography, and glossary will be a convenience. For reports of governmental activities, the illustrative matter will prove suggestive; although one could utilize for this purpose a greater variety of pictograms than Croxton and Cowden employ." J. W. Martin
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:179 F '40 130w
Reviewed by H. S. Shryock, Jr.
Am Soc R 5:453 Je '40 270w

"Each topic is handled with exceptional thoroughness and with a welcome clarity. The authors exhibit great ingenuity in their numerous teaching devices that should prove helpful to student and teacher alike." J. G. Smith
+ Ann Am Acad 208:226 Mr '40 470w
Reviewed by C. A. Bliss
Harvard Business R 18:516 summer '40 170w

"New introductory textbooks on statistical methods are justified and useful, if they incorporate recent developments in the field, describe and illustrate methods both more comprehensively and more intensively, or facilitate teaching. This book by Professors Croxton and Cowden will be welcomed by teachers of statistics, because it does all of these things." R. C. White
+ Social Forces 18:589 My '40 850w

CRUM, WILLIAM LEONARD. Corporate size and earning power. (Harvard studies in monopoly and competition) 418p $4 Harvard univ. press [17s Oxford]

338.7 Corporations. Corporations—Finance 40-615

"This work is confined to an elaborate examination of a single aspect of earning power, i. e., the relation of the rate of profits to the size of corporate enterprise. The source material being the Treasury compilations of 'Statistics of Income' prepared from tax returns for the years 1931-1936, the base is as broad as one could desire. . . The book includes general surveys and studies of eight divisions: agriculture, mining, manufacturing, construction, public utilities, trade, service and finance. Additional chapters deal with classifications within these divisions. . . The comment generally contains observations on the central topic, the time variation, the separate record of profitable and unprofitable corporations, and on special or unique characteristics of each industry or division." N Y Times

Reviewed by R. C. Epstein
Am Econ R 30:877 D '40 800w

Reviewed by H. E. Hoagland
Ann Am Acad 209:219 My '40 420w

"The statistical charts and tables are exceedingly valuable, and the book has a serviceable index. This study should be of significance to the economist, business man, investor and security analyst. Dr. Crum eschews consideration of theoretical problems and warns against the use of the data in reaching conclusions as to the existence and effects of monopoly." R. L. Weissman
+ N Y Times p20 F 11 '40 600w

CRUMBAKER, CALVIN. Organizing and financing modern business. 644p $3.75 Wiley [18s 6d Chapman]

658.1 Business. Corporations. Corporations —Finance 39-20978

"This volume deals with the problems of organizing and promoting new business concerns and combinations of old ones. The important problems treated include: the traditional types of business organization to which is added the business syndicate; the legal rights and duties and economic functions of stockholders, directors, and management under corporate laws and charters; capitalization, instruments of long-time finance, and provisions for working capital; budgeting; and finally failure and reorganization." (Am Econ R) Index.

"For the general reader, as well as for the student of business organization and finance approaching the subject from the general economic point of view, this volume fills a gap long open in the literature of the subject." J. E. Kirshman
+ Am Econ R 30:163 Mr '40 230w

"This is a long book, packed full of useful information. It is well written and easy to read. . . In the opinion of the reviewer, this book is a distinct contribution to the literature of the field of business." S. P. Farwell
+ Management R 28:451 D '39 1000w

CRUMP, IRVING. Our movie makers. 231p il $2 Dodd

791.4 Moving pictures (W) 40-7773

Informally written chapters on some of the many phases of work on the movie lots of Hollywood, and the problems faced by directors and others. There are chapters on the writing of movie plays, on the job of the property man, on the cameraman and his work, on make-up, etc. One chapter is given over to the making of cartoon movies and the final chapter is devoted to famous boy actors—and a blockhead (Charlie McCarthy).

"I like this better than most books about the pictures, because while it tells a great deal it does not tell too much." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Je 2 '40 240w

Reviewed by Maude Adams
Library J 65:545 Je 15 '40 110w

Reviewed by H. G. Percey
Special Libraries 31:175 My '40

CRUMPLER, THOMAS BIGELOW, and YOE, JOHN HOWE. Chemical computations and errors. 247p $3 Wiley

540.76 Equations. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 40-6779

"This book is intended for undergraduate students specializing in chemistry. It may be used either as a textbook for a course on chemical computations and errors or as a supplementary textbook in any one of several courses in a regular chemical curriculum. . . It is hoped that the book will also prove useful for home study to many chemistry students who do not have an opportunity to take formal courses on the topics presented, or who will use it as a reference book to review and to correlate material covered in their courses in mathematics, chemistry, and physics." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40

"At the present time many students of chemistry are graduated without adequate training in or appreciation of the thoroughly practical nature of the theory of measurements and errors. It is to be hoped that the present volume will stimulate interest in these subjects as well as serve as a useful text and elementary reference book." Robert Livingston
+ J Phys Chem 44:951 O '40 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:20 Ap '40

CRUZ, MARTIN DE LA. Badianus manuscript (Codex Barberini, Latin 241) Vatican library; an Aztec herbal of 1552; introduction, translation and annotations by Emily Walcott Emmart; with a foreword by Henry E. Sigerist. 341p 122pl $7.50 Johns Hopkins [40s Oxford]

615.32 Botany, Medical 40-12903

" 'In the archives of the Vatican Library a small manuscript, bound in sixteenth century crimson velvet, contains the earliest treatise on Mexican medicinal plants and native remedies which has thus far come down to us. It is the work of two Aztec Indians, Martinius de la Cruz, a native physician who composed the work in Aztec, and another Indian, Juannes Badianus, who translated the text into Latin.' Thus Dr. Emmart starts her book. . . Its long preface explains the purposes of the author in preparing the herbal for publication. She wanted 'first to make available to the student of the history of medicino a literal translation, supplemented with ample footnotes, and, secondly, to present as many historical facts regarding the background and origin of the manuscript as [might] be necessary to give it its rightful place in the historical and botanical literature of the sixteenth century.' " Scientific Bk Club R

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth
Books p14 Jl 14 '40 1400w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 S 14 '40 950w

"Dr. Emmart's preliminary chapters, in which she analyzes the Badianus Manuscript from every angle, makes a fascinating history of pre-Columbian Aztec medicine. Her description of the herb gardens of early Mexican days will have a wide appeal, while the notes and comments accompanying her translations are of the greatest service to botanists and pharmacologists, as well as to students of the history of early American medicine. As this is the only volume in which colored pictures of the plants appear with their Aztec names, Dr. Emmart's identification of them with their modern botanical designation is of great service to the lexicographer. There are several careful indices that do much to lighten the work of a reader with a purpose." E. L. Tinker

CRUZ, M. D. L.—Continued
+ N Y Times p8 S 8 '40 1200w

"Dr. Emmart speaks of the little pharmacopoeia as a work of great care and beauty. Surely her edition shows this same devotion to authenticity and beauty, and will prove an addition to the library of all lovers of rare books."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Jl '40 420w

CULBERTSON, ELY. The strange lives of one man; an autobiography. 693p il $3 Winston
B or 92 40-6053

Insisting that he is not one man, but seven, the author has written his story of all seven of his lives—as epicurean, idealist, child, family man, business manager, celebrity, and philosopher.

"It is a bizarre story, told with undisguised glee." Lisle Bell
+ Books p2 Ap 7 '40 1000w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '40

"A very thorough and rather fascinating story." J. H. T.
Forum 103:332 Je '40 500w
Manchester Guardian p7 N 15 '40 310w

Reviewed by Isidor Schneider
New Repub 102:616 My 6 '40 500w

Reviewed by T. R. Fyvel
New Statesman & Nation 20:522 N 23 '40 650w

"An uncommonly interesting story. It is not a story about bridge, except toward the end. It is a story of adventure and contrast. And it begins to be interesting long before its hero's birth. . . The book is too long, but where would we cut it? The card expert who wanted to be a writer holds our interest through every one of his 'strange lives.'" Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 14 '40 1150w

Reviewed by J. S. Mabon
Sat R of Lit 21:10 Ap 20 '40 650w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Grigson
Spec 165:588 N 29 '40 650w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 420w
Time 35:98 Ap 22 '40 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p568 N 9 '40 850w

CULLEN, COUNTEE. The lost zoo (a rhyme for the young, but not too young) by Christopher Cat and [the author]; with il. by Charles Sebree. 72p $2.50 Harper
(W) 40-34870

Stories in rhyme, all about the queer animals who did not get into Noah's Ark, as remembered by the author's cat, Christopher, who had the stories from his father.

"The introduction, called 'A Word About Christopher,' is a very amusing analysis of cat character and will interest all those who like and understand the curious and fascinating cat-nature. The verses are light and gay and there are dashing pictures in color by Charles Sebree. . . It is not entirely a juvenile. Rather, it will appeal to people, young or old, who like light verse about animals." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p16 D 8 '40 260w

"Rhymed nonsense with a bouncy meter. Not very funny." Katharine Scherman
Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 30w

CULLEN, MRS LUCY (POPE). Beyond the Smoke that thunders; il. by Julian Brazelton. 341p map $3 Oxford
916.894 Rhodesia. Copper mines and mining 40-34053

In 1928 the author, then Lucy Pope, went out to Rhodesia as secretary to her cousin's husband, an engineer in a copper mining company. At the end of a year Miss Pope married a South African. Her book is an informal record of her experiences during six years of living in Africa, an account of life and society in a mining community, observations on native manners and customs, and description of the veldt country which she came to love.

Atlantic D '40 70w
Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

"A reader avid for classifications and comparisons might place 'Beyond the Smoke That Thunders' somewhere in between Agnes Keith's delectable book about Borneo—'Land Below the Wind'—and the chronicles of mining life in the Andes by Alicia O'Reardon Overbeck. But any book of such experiences and discoveries must be individual if it is to be good; and this one is very good indeed, in an unpretentious fashion that is part of its charm." H. M. Shaw
+ Books p37 N 10 '40 360w

"From its first pages her book combines pleasant personal record with interesting information and keeps the spice of a bright fresh humor always on hand. It is an uncommonly rich book of its kind and it is also interestingly illustrated."
+ N Y Times p10 O 27 '40 480w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 17 '40 1000w

CULVER, MRS DOROTHY (CAMPBELL), comp. Bibliography of crime and criminal justice, 1932-1937. (Calif. Univ. Bur. of public administration) 391p price on application Wilson, H.W.
016.364 Crime and criminals—Bibliography 40-7902

Supplements the list of the same title published in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1935). The first book contained publications of the years 1927 to 1931; the present volume covers 1932 to 1937. It is an annotated and classified list, of books, yearbooks, and periodicals on crime and criminology. Index.

"In extending the bibliography another six years, the book fills a long-felt need of the law librarian, the teacher of criminal law, criminal procedure, or penology, and of all serious students of the crime problem."
+ Ann Am Acad 209:249 My '40 210w
Booklist 36:229 F 15 '40
Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 120w

CUMMING, PRIMROSE. Ben; the story of a cart-horse; with Harold Burdekin's photographs. 95p $1.50 Dutton [5s Dent]
40-3040

Old Ben was a London brewery horse. When his days of usefulness on the paved streets of London came to an end, Ben was sent to the country, where he made good as a farm horse. Illustrated with excellent photographs of Ben's life in London and on the farm.

"After the simply told, heartfelt narrative is over one turns back to the pictures to go over the tale again. It is rather for twelve-year-olds than for small children; picture book though it is, the photographs have more in them than a little child can be expected to take in. Indeed, an older person finds there the distinctive spirit of rural England." M. L. Becker
+ Books p16 My 5 '40 450w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '40 150w

"This book is extraordinarily well illustrated with photographs by Harold Burdekin. Perhaps it is hardly correct to say it is illustrated, for the photographs are as important as the text, and the two are complementary. Children from early years up to a quite mature age would like the story of Ben, it is so true, so sensible, and so cheerful." M. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 27 '39 150w

"Very British in its farm terminology but above average for a book of its kind, both in its fine photographs and in the pastoral quiet of its well-written text." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 16:97 My 18 '40 50w

"Harold Burdekin, with his excellent photographs illustrating the text, has helped to make it a book for parents and children to enjoy together. The book has a special interest at present as a portrayal of normal peacetime life and scenes in wartorn England."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 130w

CUMMINGS, HENRY I. Tennis as a hobby. 89p il $1.50 Harper
796.34 Tennis 40-27208

Practical, step-by-step advice for the beginner at tennis, or for the not too proficient player. Photographs show the various strokes.

Booklist 36:278 Mr 15 '40
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 20 '40 40w
Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

CUMMINGS, LEWIS V. Alexander the Great. 462p maps $3.75 Houghton
B or 92 Alexander the Great 40-7964

Historical study of the life and times of Alexander III, king of Macedonia in the fourth century B.C. Index.

"The author may be proud of his work. It is well organized, well documented, thoroughgoing, written in the best of good taste and in a style which has every attraction of lucid simplicity."
+ Atlantic S '40 140w
Booklist 36:411 Jl 1 '40

"This new life of Alexander is an extremely conscientious and learned book: solid qualities hardly compatible with blood-curdling melodrama." Albert Guerard
+ Books p18 My 5 '40 1250w

"The book ends without giving Alexander a well-rounded personality as a man, but it gives a perfect picture of a conquering warmachine that is very interesting to a reader today." Phyllis Gordan
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 360w

"This is a scholarly, well-built and most readable work." George De Santillana
+ Commonweal 32:131 My 31 '40 370w

"This painstaking study of the first world conqueror is made noteworthy by an unusual talent for historical geography and a vivid realization of military strategy. These qualities are not matched, however, by psychological insight or narrative gift. The style is pedestrian and repetitious."
+ — Nation 151:158 Ag 24 '40 80w

"Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Cummings for a piece of work in which he has combined the arts of history and biography with an assurance and skill which excite admiration. He has produced a vivid narrative, re-creating a remote epoch now almost legendary round a famous figure that belongs to myth as much as to history. . . It may be said without exaggeration that he has produced a fascinating book which, while scholarly, is extremely readable." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p5 My 5 '40 950w
New Yorker 16:91 My 4 '40 20w

"Mr Cummings can refer to map-making experience and extensive travels over the regions invaded by Alexander as evidence of special preparation for undertaking this task. He has dug deeply into available archives and 'with the help of three scholars absorbed the Greek, Latin and German accounts of the Alexandrian saga.' The text itself is ample evidence of his ability to write with clarity, so that the reader moves easily from page to page. In both preparation and presentation, 'Alexander the Great' has been excellently accomplished."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 1000w

CUMMINGS, RICHARD OSBORN. The American and his food; a history of food habits in the United States. 267p il $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press
641 Food. Diet (W) 41-465

Basing his material on health literature, cook books, periodicals, newspapers, and government documents, the author, assistant professor of history at Lawrence College, studies the development of American food habits from 1789 to 1940. The emphasis is upon the standards accepted and used by government agencies. Index.

Booklist 37:237 F 1 '41
J Home Econ 33:113 F '41 150w

"This is a surprisingly interesting book about food. The element of surprise is not due, of course, to any initial conception of food as an uninteresting subject, but to the fact that it is presented here from a scientific, not to say didactic, point of view, in a volume in which only nine pages are free from footnotes. In other words, this is not primarily a 'popular' exposition, in spite of the importance of its subject to the population as a whole; but it ought really to hold a good share of popular attention nevertheless, because of the interest of its material and the selectiveness, clarity and vigor with which its author has gone at his work of writing the 'history of food habits in the United States.' "
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 12 '41 500w
Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Ja '41 460w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN. Murder at the schoolhouse. 244p $2 Dutton 40-10767

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Je 2 '40 360w

"Jess's keen observation and the authenticity of the mountain people who inhabit Deer Lick make this an outstanding mystery. Even the dogs have personality." Marian Wigign
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 60w

"The locked room feature of the case will not prove much of a puzzle to the average reader, but there are other factors that are more puzzling, and Sheriff Roden deserves credit for separating the real clues from the false ones. The backwoods setting lends additional interest to the story." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p15 Je 2 '40 170w

"Simple, clear story, with a solution that's as easy as pie."
New Yorker 16:80 Je 8 '40 40w

"Writer who knows suspense value of understatement spins effective yarn of hatreds and thwarted passion in mountain community. Worthwhile."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 8 '40 40w
Time 36:72 Jl 1 '40 40w

CUNNINGHAM, EUGENE. Red range. 302p $2 Houghton 39-30545

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p26 N 26 '39 120w

CUNNINGHAM, EUGENE—Continued

"In this new novel Eugene Cunningham returns to 'The Territory,' scene of several of his earlier successes (which he unaccountably abandoned four years ago), and a host of readers will be glad. For he knows that raw and troubled section of the old Southwest and the life of the lusty fighting men it harbored as few writing men do, and he writes of it with surpassing skill and gusto." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p14 D 17 '39 270w

Wis Lib Bul 36:68 Ap '40

CUNNINGHAM, LOUIS ARTHUR. The sign of the Burning Ship. 290p $2 Penn

40-3846

"Louis Arthur Cunningham spins another of his romances in the mists and storms and sparkling sunlight of the Bay of Fundy. The narrative follows the same sequence—from mists through storms to sunlight." Books

"Mr. Cunningham handles his theme deftly, and has a good ear for seaman talk and salty philosophy." Lisle Bell

+ Books p11 Ja 28 '40 80w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p3 F 3 '40 80w

"The mystery part of the story is intricate but plausible. . . It all ties up in a fine tangle, straightened out by one stroke of fate at the end. For those who have read some of Cunningham's previous novels there will be the pleasure of meeting again the simple fishermen and farmers of the Nova Scotia coast." C. D.

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 28 '40 200w

CUNNINGHAM, WILLIAM FRANCIS. The pivotal problems of education; an introduction to the Christian philosophy of education. 588p $3 Macmillan

370.1 Roman Catholic church—Education. Education—Philosophy 40-34143

"Another addition to the many current books on the philosophy of education, this volume ably represents the neo-Scholastic school of philosophic thought which lies at the basis of the educational theories accepted by those adhering to the Roman Catholic faith." School & Society

Reviewed by Theodore Brameld

New Repub 103:877 D 23 '40 130w

School & Society 52:408 O 26 '40 70w

Reviewed by J. S. Brubacher

School & Society 53:59 Ja 11 '41 550w

CUNNINGHAM, WILLIAM JAMES. The present railroad crisis. 84p $1 Univ. of Pa. press [4s 6d Oxford]

385.13 Railroads—U.S. 39-22559

Series of lectures given at Lafayette college, on the subject of the past and present financial situation of the railroads in this country. The first section is devoted to railroads during their first century, the second considers railroads under the New Deal, and the remainder gives proposed transportation legislation and the present outlook.

"The book is outstanding among American studies of practical economic questions in that it is both short and free from any semi-legalistic padding. It will provide a useful guide to reorganization when the war is over and the tide of artificial prosperity falls back to reveal the stubborn rocks of railway depression."

+ Economist 138:1078 Je 22 '40 200w

"This book is an excellent treatment, in small compass, of the present railroad situation. It is to be recommended as particularly valuable to those who, unfamiliar with the railroad problem, desire a brief analysis of it by one who is qualified to speak authoritatively on the subject." D. P. Locklin

+ J Pol Econ 48:141 F '40 440w

Springf'd Republican p12 Je 16 '39 650w

CURIE, EVE. The price of freedom. 32p $1; pa 50c Doubleday

940.53 European war, 1939—France 40-9959

The text of Mlle Curie's address at the luncheon of the American booksellers' association and the New York Herald Tribune, on April 9, 1940. It is a statement of her love for her country.

"It is rare for an after-luncheon speech to become a classic. Yet the winged words spoken by Eve Curie before the American Booksellers Association, a few weeks ago, plunge deep into every heart. Simple, sincere, and courageous, it is as though the soul of France became for a moment articulate." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 330w

New Yorker 16:84 Je 1 '40 20w

CURRAN, DALE. Piano in the band. 261p $2 Reynal

40-11294

George Baker is the "piano in the band" which is headed by Jeff Walters. The story describes the attempts of the band members to go over the head of their autocratic leader and make the transition from jazz to swing. The climax comes in St Louis, and a woman, an ex-vaudeville singer, is the prime cause.

"'Piano in the Band' is a brilliant novel—brilliant and hard and tender. And if you want to know, intellectually and emotionally, from the inside out, what swing is about, this is your book. Written with intensity of observation and feeling and tautness of plot, 'Piano in the Band' brings to life in a vivid yet sordid world of their own the personnel of the band." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p2 Jl 21 '40 850w

"The writing is straightforward and the music sounds pretty good; it makes fair sense and enjoyable reading. As such, recommended." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 103:222 Ag 12 '40 110w

"Even if you don't like swing music, you're pretty sure to find this novel about it exciting and absorbing. 'Piano In the Band' is definitely reminiscent of 'Young Man With a Horn' [by Dorothy Baker, Book Review Digest, 1938] —it has the same throbbing enthusiasms for swing music, the same bold belief in its importance as a new art form. Both carry the banner for pioneering, and carry it high. But the angle in each case is different." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 21 '40 380w

"This is a sound story, briskly told, and, should you care about musical trade talk, full of the feverish atmosphere of that world of popular music to which everything else is alien or irrelevant. Mr. Curran has developed a neat, tight style—economical, not devoid of undertones, yet not too Hemingwayish. I'd like to see him use it on material a little less special." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:62 Jl 20 '40 170w

"The novel is probably not another 'Young Man With a Horn,' but it is fast-moving and consistently entertaining. The amount of sympathetic interest which the reader feels in the novel's fundamental problem—the musicians' struggle for what they regard as artistic integrity—must depend to some extent on whether one believes that pure jazz is a form of art or merely a technical way of making a noise. However, even those readers who have no convictions on the subject should be able to enjoy the story."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 600w

Time 36:84 Jl 22 '40 340w

"Piano in the Band . . . recalls Young Man with a Horn, yet does not have that novel's poetry and generosity of spirit. But the characters, even if they repeat themselves, are held tightly, and are sharply, obliquely drawn. And its mood of nervous excitement is well sustained." Robert Littell
+ — Yale R n s 30:x autumn '40 160w

CURRAN, HENRY HASTINGS. Magistrates court; il. by George Wright. 197p $2 Scribner

917.471 New York (city)—Social conditions. New York (city). Magistrates' courts 40-32153

Stories from the files of the chief magistrate of New York city. They are about dogs, dope fiends, bums, neighborhood feuds, and other samples of tragedy and comedy which make up a New York City magistrate's day.

"Henry H. Curran wears his judicial robes with grace. He is more interested in people than in procedure, happier as a mediator than as a symbol of the law, a man who brings all his faculties to the bench instead of merely a legal mind. Not the least of his merits is a sense of humor. All these attributes are reflected in these sketches."
+ Books p13 S 22 '40 180w

"A likable, rather slight but well told book of anecdotes."
+ New Repub 103:482 O 7 '40 50w
N Y Times p9 S 15 '40 480w

"It is not quite fair to intimate that Judge Curran is a story-teller in the Woollcott manner, although the two men share a certain feeling for New York's color, its patterns, and its people. Where Mr. Woollcott is as extravagant as Scheherezade, the Judge is economical and plain spoken. He can tell a good story, complete with every essential, in three or four hundred words. It is, as any editor would tearfully concede, a gift." J. R. P.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:19 O 5 '40 380w

CURRIN, ALTHEA MABELLE, ed. See Wilson, M. School library management

CURTIS, FRANCIS DAY; CALDWELL, OTIS WILLIAM, and SHERMAN, NINA HENRY. Everyday biology. 698p il map $1.92 Ginn

574 Biology 40-9109

"This book presents a simple and logical organization of materials which cover the scope of elementary biology. The subject is constantly related to common experiences and to the interests of pupils in everyday activities. Emphasis is given to the social aspects of biology, especially to such important interpretive understandings as health, conservation, and recreation. In short, this book is planned to teach the kinds of biological science which everybody needs to know. The general organization presented herein has grown out of many years of careful study and trial with high-school classes in biology. . . Everyday Biology has been developed from the authors' earlier Biology for Today; in addition to the distinctive elements of that book, it presents new features which have been proved to have important practical values in the classroom." (Pref) Bibliographies, glossary, and index.

Booklist 37:31 O 1 '40

"The principles of the subject are soundly presented, and there is a balanced stress on the major objectives. The book is systematically planned to stimulate the pupil and to add meaning to vocabulary and principles through illustrations and problems. Special attention is given to the vocabulary load in that the content is unencumbered with technical terms which are not fundamental to the understanding of basic biological principles at this level. An excellent and useful glossary is provided. Another commendable feature is the concluding section of the book, which is given over to biology for leisure time. This section should serve more expeditiously than do the usual textbooks to engender interests and habits by which biology can have values lasting throughout life. It may be expected that the many things which need doing will be done better by teachers who read or use textbooks such as Everyday Biology, which incorporates much of what has been found, through research and experience, to be effective." P. O. Johnson
+ School R 48:713 N '40 700w

CURTISS, JOHN SHELTON. Church and state in Russia; the last years of the empire, 1900-1917. 442p $4 Columbia univ. press

261.7 Church and state in Russia. Russia—Religion 40-14852

After an introductory chapter outlining Russian church history up to the year 1900, the book treats of the church at the beginning of the twentieth century—during the years 1900 to 1917. Partial contents: The Russian church as a state institution at the beginning of the twentieth century; The economic position of the church; Religious education and indoctrination: monopolies of the orthodox church; Liberalism and conservatism during the revolution of 1905; The sway of Rasputin. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by John LaFarge
America 63:442 Jl 27 '40 550w

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich
Am Pol Sci R 34:1239 D '40 450w

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun
Books p16 Ag 25 '40 430w

"Required reading for those who are trying to see through this time of confusion what the church is contributing or failing to contribute to the salvation of Western civilization."
+ Christian Century 57:1145 S 18 '40 220w

"This is an unprejudiced and impartial study, based on archive records and sources, and amply annotated." E. L. Pennington
+ Churchman 154:17 Je 15 '40 310w

"In view of the crisis in which the church finds itself today no one who is interested in history or religion can fail to be profited by reading this interesting and carefully authenticated story of the eclipse of the Russian Church. . . The book is impressive in its thoroughness and literary excellence. The footnotes and bibliography are comprehensive, and the index is of high order. It needs no prophet to predict that this volume will stand for many years as an authoritative account of a most critical period in the history of a great nation and a doomed Church." Rittenhouse Neisser
+ Crozer Q 17:313 O '40 440w

Reviewed by Matthew Spinka
J Religion 21:64 Ja '41 650w

"A volume that is not only excellently documented, but also fresh, vigorous and immensely enlightening. With a zeal, perseverance and intelligent insight that are a real credit to American scholarship, Dr. Curtiss has painstakingly examined and digested an almost incredible amount of factual evidence, has marshaled it with a fine sense of proportion and has made what must be regarded as an important and permanent contribution to Russian history." M. T. Florinsky
+ N Y Times p6 My 5 '40 460w
Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Ag 31 '40 130w

CUSHING, HARVEY WILLIAMS. The medical career, and other papers. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 302p $2.50 Little

610.4 Medicine—Addresses, essays, lectures. Physicians. Medicine—Biography (W) 40-27067

These posthumously published essays of the great Boston surgeon form a companion volume to his Consecratio Medici (Book Review Digest, 1929). The book consists of addresses delivered before medical gatherings and colleges, and a group of biographical sketches of physicians.

CUSHING, H. W.—Continued

"Altogether, the book is very readable and is a notable addition to the medical history of our times." M. P. Ravenel
+ Am J Pub Health 30:837 Jl '40 250w
Booklist 36:233 F 15 '40

"Here is another inimitable book by Harvey Cushing. . . His biographical sketches show both intimate knowledge of the characters portrayed and rare ability to put them in their proper setting. His pen picture 'The Doctors Welch of Norfolk' enable those of us who knew the late William Henry Welch to get him into the perspective which many of us felt must have been there but which in our ignorance, we could not see. His picture 'William Beaumont's Rendezvous with Fame' compresses in artful fashion a long and complicated story into a few clear pages." Hugh Cabot, M.D.
+ Books p6 F 4 '40 1100w

"These essays cannot fail to interest the laymen as well as members of the profession. Those of us who studied under Dr. Cushing and have stored up memories of the most stimulating of all our teachers will cherish this book among the most loved that we will ever have on our book shelves." Dr. C. C. Lund
+ Boston Transcript p11 F 2 '40 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '40

"Dr. Cushing could write—well enough to be remembered for his literary talent quite aside from his greatness in medicine—but these pieces are not Cushing with something to say. There is a certain atmosphere of atheneum about all of them, a mid-Victorian self-consciousness in the prose which may be only the effect of the essay form in the twentieth century but which, in any case, doesn't sound like the Cushing who founded a new school of neurosurgery." E. M. Matsner
— Forum 103:200 Ap '40 90w

Reviewed by R. S. Morison
New Eng Q 13:344 Je '40 900w
New Repub 102:190 F 5 '40 60w

"The collection may be regarded as one of the interesting minor productions of a very great man. . . The vigorous and informative style is well adapted to American history, but also appears to advantage in the essay on Albrecht von Haller of Berne, the prodigious eighteenth-century physiologist and scholar. . . 'The Medical Career,' like its predecessor, 'Consecratio Medici,' is a book for seriour or scholarly readers, not necessarily physicians." Saul Jarcho, M.D.
+ N Y Times p9 F 11 '40 950w
New Yorker 15:71 F 3 '40 30w

"All in all this is not a very 'important' book, but it is a very nice one—the work of a scholar and a gentleman who viewed life with civilized detachment but with the greatest friendliness. Its subject-matter will necessarily limit its appeal to persons specially interested in medical topics and to those who share the author's enthusiasm for the fascinating history of his profession." M. S. Ulrich
+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 F 17 '40 450w
Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Mr '40 180w

CUSHMAN, MRS CLARISSA (FAIRCHILD). I wanted to murder. 306p $2 Farrar

Mystery story. (W) 40-31111

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40

"This blue-ribbon story in a likable and familiar tradition should do well in fandom. It never drops a stitch." Will Cuppy
+ Books p26 N 24 '40 160w

"This is the winning novel in the first Mary Roberts Rinehart Mystery Contest, and it richly deserves that honor and the emoluments that go with it. Mrs. Cushman has written several other books, but this is her first mystery. It is to be hoped that her publishers will not permit it to be her last." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p32 N 24 '40 170w

"Purists may object to certain slurred-over details, and characters all talk too much, but suspense holds up very well. Pretty good."
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:46 D 7 '40 40w

CUSHMAN, FRANK. Training procedure. 230p $2 Wiley

331.86 Employees, Training of 40-4740

"A discussion of the problems encountered in planning, organizing, operating, and maintaining efficient training programs in industrial, business, and public service organizations." (Subtitle) Appendixes include outlines of an instructor-training course and a conference-leader training course. Selected references. Index.

Booklist 36:319 Ap 15 '40

"The text should be a valuable reference or handbook for any executive or personnel administrator who is responsible for in-service training. As the author points out, complete detail could not be given in a text of this length. The treatment of the subject is thorough enough, however, to be of value to any executive who wishes to explore the field and to any personnel administrator who has a program under way or who contemplates the establishment of such a program." A. B. Gates
+ Management R 29:269 Jl '40 550w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). See Baldwin, F.

CUTRIGHT, PAUL RUSSELL. The great naturalists explore South America. 340p il map $3.50 Macmillan

591.98 Zoology—South America. Naturalists (W) 40-27068

"The volume is divided into two parts. The first is a résumé of the travels and experiences of the great naturalists, such as Alexander von Humboldt, Charles Darwin, Alfred Russel Wallace, and W. H. Hudson, who explored and wrote of South America during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The second part is a series of chapters on several of the mammals, birds, reptiles, fish, and insects indigenous to South America." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:233 F 15 '40
Bookmark 2:5 Ja '41

"All in all an outstanding Scientific Book Club selection." H. M. Parshley
+ Books p8 F 4 '40 1300w

"Here is good reading for your winter cruise to South America, or if you must stay at home, tuck it under your arm on your next visit to the zoo." G. M. Allen
+ Boston Transcript p13 Ja 19 '40 400w
Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '40
New Repub 102:125 Ja 22 '40 60w

"This is the kind of a book which will stimulate people to visit the zoological parks. It is the kind of a book which excites the layman as well as the student. I recommend it unreservedly, for Dr. Cutright imparts an amazing amount of information in an informal and dramatic way." James Mandel
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 28 '40 850w

"Absorbing material, though rather unhandily written."
+ — New Yorker 15:71 Ja 20 '40 40w

"The account suffers, to some extent, from being wholly academic. Never having explored South America himself, Dr. Cutright is hampered in discriminating between conflicting reports and estimating plausibility. But in one sense this sort of second-hand presentation of the old material is more needed than any exploration for new material, since a popular summary has been so long overdue. Here is probably the only single general and popular account of the animals of South America now available." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:16 Ja 27 '40 550w

" 'The Great Naturalists,' in spite of its tabulated arrangement, is much more than a reference book. When writers and lecturers tell us almost daily what to do to improve our relations with South American countries, this book might well serve to bring about a special interest in one great phase of life among our southern neighbors." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 Ja '40 800w

"A great part of the animal life described in the book is illustrated by excellent half-tone plates. But a large number of the photos show the animals as unhappy zoo captives against iron bars. It would have been better if the author had procured a few natural 'shots.' A map of the South America faunal zones together with temperature and elevation areas plotted out would be of immeasurable help, as would also small maps showing the range of the different animal species. A selected bibliography and detailed index complete this original popular contribution on South American wild life." C. B. M.

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 Ja 16 '40 650w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams

Survey G 29:257 Ap '40 100w

Time 35:84 Ja 22 '40 140w

CUTTEN, GEORGE BARTON. Instincts and religion. 151p $1.50 Harper

201 Psychology, Religious. Instinct 40-7906

"More than thirty years ago President Cutten (of Colgate) wrote a good book on Psychological Phenomena of Christianity, which was standard for a long time. Now he considers the non-rational factors in religion and morality. Not deterred by the fact that 'instinct' is a slippery term, carrying various meanings and often under suspicion by psychologists and sociologists, he boldly faces the fact that man is not moved wholly by reason and that the appeal of religion must include other than purely intellectual factors." Christian Century

---

"Dr. Cutten's several chapters on intelligence, morals, religion, sin, modern theology and hymnology, in the development and illustration of his proposition, are written with the piquancy and briskness of journalism. They will appeal to the minister in his business of 'selling' religion, but neither the psychologist nor the theologian will find the studies entirely satisfying. The former will say that the author has not done much recent work in the field of psychology, and the latter will be quite impatient with what seems a disdainful skimming of metaphysical ideas." A. C. Dieffenbach

+ — Books p14 Jl 7 '40 360w

Reviewed by Philip Guiles

Boston Transcript p9 My 18 '40 550w

Christian Century 57:387 Mr 20 '40 90w

Churchman 154:38 My 15 '40 160w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 17:311 O '40 360w

"This book by the president of Colgate University is an interesting attempt to emphasize the fact that much modern religion lacks fundamental drives. He feels that the campus especially needs a religion that is vital, one that grips life with a strong emotional as well as intellectual appeal. The reviewer sympathizes with the end point desired but believes that the author would have done better to cast his argument in another mold." E. J. Chave

+ — J Religion 20:410 O '40 250w

"The book is readable, provocative, and timely." J. H. Lathrop

+ Survey 76:277 S '40 250w

CUTTING, SUYDAM. The fire ox, and other years. 393p il map $5 Scribner

915 Voyages and travels. Asia—Description and travel. Ethiopia—Description and travel. Galapagos islands 40-32514

Account of the author's travels into various nearly inaccessible parts of the earth, central Asia, the Galapagos, Ethiopia, etc. Contents: Green paradise in Turkestan; The head-hunters of Assam; China's southwest back door; Royal jubilee in Nepal; Cheetah hunting; Forbidden cities of Tibet; The Andaman islands; Celebes and the elusive Anoa; Inhospitable Galápagos; The Alps of upper Burma; Ethiopia: southern journey; Ethiopia: northern journey. Indexes.

Booklist 37:151 D 15 '40

Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"Suydam Cutting has produced a colorful well balanced presentation of life and reality in the few sane parts of the world left to us. I give it a welcome two inches of space on my shelves of good travel books." William Beebe

+ Books p5 N 10 '40 900w

Reviewed by Lowell Thomas

Current Hist & Forum 52:1 Ja 10 '41 480w

Nation 151:641 D 21 '40 140w

"There are certain books of which I enjoy every sentence and word-picture, rolling them over on my literary palate like rare old wine. Such a book I found in Suydam Cutting's 'The Fire Ox and Other Years.' . . [The book] is a notable contribution to travel literature." R. C. Andrews

+ N Y Times p6 D 22 '40 1350w

New Yorker 16:91 N 30 '40 50w

"The writing of the book is by no means sprightly, and the subject matter is of unequal interest—the chapter on Galapagos could be spared—but as a record of what the author terms 'creative travel' it will be found a veritable encyclopedia of thoroughly adult adventure." Hassoldt Davis

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:11 N 2 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 10 '40 1050w

D

D'AGOSTINO, GUIDO. Olives on the apple tree. 302p $2.50 Doubleday

40-33214

A story of Italian immigrants in America—of some who seek for success and wealth, of others who forget old ways of living but do not acquire better ways, and finally of Marco who sees what the immigrant should do and be to become a real American.

Booklist 37:216 Ja 15 '41

" 'Olives on the Apple Tree' has both charm and vigor. It gives, in the exciting terms of real and interesting people, a fresh picture of the immigrant in America, with sympathy and humor and without sentimental palaver." Mary Ross

+ Books p10 N 3 '40 800w

"Marco preaches perhaps a bit too much for the good of Mr. d'Agostino's novel. Dr. Emilic is perhaps a little too thoroughly poisoned by his effort to forget that he is Italian. What makes this book glow are a dozen sharply-etched flesh-and-blood characters. . . You compare Guido d'Agostino, inevitably, with Pietro di Donato and John Fante, two other Italian-Americans who wrote remarkable first novels. I suspect he is older than they, and more at home in America. His writing has, perhaps, less individuality; his outlook on life is richer and mellower." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p9 N 5 '40 500w

D'AGOSTINO (däg'ŏs-tēn-ō)

D'AGOSTINO, GUIDO—Continued

"The characterization is good except in the case of the hero-hobo, Marco, who is just too, too noble, and Mr. D'Agostino has a fine ear for Italian-American dialect; but the book for all its accuracy, leaves no impact. I think that one reason is that the author has confused objectivity with lack of passion." Harry Sylvester

+ — Commonweal 33:234 D 20 '40 210w

"The novel is simply written, with none of that poetic lyricism which many have found annoying in Di Donato's work. One gets, too, that fine feeling for earth and weather, food and drink, and the atmosphere of a family at dinner, that many of these Italian authors such as Pagano, Fante and Di Donato have in common." Muriel Burns

+ New Repub 104:29 Ja 6 '41 600w

"The American part of the story is not particularly well done, but the book has so much freshness and interest in its sympathetic presentation of the 'Olives on the Apple Tree' and their difficulties, that its defects seem relatively of very small importance." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p7 N 10 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:86 N 2 '40 100w

"Today when the definition of Americanism is taking a beating from friends and enemies alike, it is heartening to get a fresh, vigorous, thoroughly sincere statement of it. Best of all, it issues from a writer who speaks for, and to, one of the peoples who sent great waves of emigrants to this country." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 D 14 '40 240w

DAICHES, DAVID. The novel and the modern world. 228p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge]

823 English fiction—History and criticism 39-29488

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"This volume leaves one with two quite separate hopes: (1) to be granted an honesty, however discomforting, that shall equal Mr. Daiches'; and (2) that Mr. Daiches will next turn his critical faculties upon that group of lesser artists who have already begun trying to orient themselves to the civilization not yet born." J. H. Foster

Library Q 10:458 Jl '40 1200w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 1 '40 250w

"With all its faults this book does pierce to the centre of the problem of serious fiction; and that problem consists in the fact that greatness, in a novel, does not necessarily mean artistic perfection. . . Mr. Daiches' book shows a profound knowledge of fictional methods and a real insight into what novelists are after. If only he had given himself a little more space (the essays are far too short for all the author evidently has to say), this book might have taken its place beside those of Edmund Wilson, among the most distinguished pieces of criticism that America has sent us for a long time." Edward Sackville West

+ — New Statesman & Nation 19:280 Mr 2 '40 1100w

Pratt p18 autumn '40

Reviewed by H. B. Mallalieu

Spec 164:534 Ap 12 '40 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 700w

"This interesting book is, doubtless, a compilation from lectures given by the author in the English faculty at Chicago University. In general, it has a serious and professional gait which is more suitable for the lecture-room than for the attraction of what Mrs. Woolf has called the 'common reader.' The bulk of the book is devoted to the consideration of six specific authors, the study of whose work is very soberly and justly conducted. . . Mr. Daiches's praise is judiciously bestowed, but it is cold and impersonal. If there were some evidence that he had felt a thrill, the book would have been better, and his readers' confidence greater."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p162 Mr 30 '40 850w

DAICHES, DAVID. Poetry and the modern world. 247p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. Poets, English (W) 40-35669

"A study of poetry in England between 1900 and 1939." (Subtitle) Beginning with a chapter on The legacy of Victorianism: poetry at the end of the nineteenth century, the author takes up in turn: Thomas Hardy; A. E. Housman; Gerard Manley Hopkins; Georgian poetry; War poetry; The imagists; Post-war satire; The Sitwells; T. E. Hulme and T. S. Eliot; W. B. Yeats; Poetry in the 1930's; Cecil Day Lewis; W. H. Auden and Stephen Spender. It is his thesis that "the several trends in modern poetry represent so many ways of responding to the problem of a disintegrating tradition." (Books) Index.

Booklist 37:239 F 1 '41

"Mr. Daiches brings unusual penetration to bear upon his analysis of the situation, he organizes his material with uncommon skill and he salts his scholarship with a wit that sparkles on page after page. . . Mr. Daiches takes insufficient account of the personal problems of both Housman and Hopkins and tends to overestimate Owen. It would seem, too, that C. Day Lewis, though a representative figure, does not merit a chapter to himself. But these are minor flaws in a work as notable for its clarity as for its acuity, for the simple distinction of its style as for the significance of its substance." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books p34 D 1 '40 700w

"Mr. Daiches' book is highly to be recommended; independent in judgment, informed, integrated and shrewd, it is the most sensible account of the major modern poets of England that has yet appeared." Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 20:325 Ja '41 490w

"This book is written with lilt and tang; its cadences sing, its wit flashes sudden vistas of blossomed hawthorne and green skunk-cabbage; it is credible and persuasive with the bright witness of beauty. And, as always, style is authentic of quality. It is readable, and it should be read." E. M. Root

+ Christian Century 58:23 Ja 1 '41 1000w

"Mr. Daiches has written one of the few tough-minded studies of twentieth-century English poetry. Others have turned it over more sensitively on their tongues, or approached it with more zest and spirit. Scarcely anyone, in fact, has dealt with it more soberly than Mr. Daiches, but then, scarcely anyone has tried harder to explain its impulses, plumb its morality, and chart its direction. Mr. Daiches has not been interested in providing the poetic equivalent of a wine-tasting: what he makes clear is not so much the quality of the poetry as the nature." Louis Kronenberger

+ Nation 151:570 D 7 '40 950w

"This book has great merit but it is not, I think, so good as Mr. Daiches' recent 'The Novel and the Modern World.' . . The merits of this book help to define its limitations: Mr. Daiches is not so good a reader of poetry as of novels. He is better at backgrounds, influences, forces than he is at the poetic text; but we must be grateful that he has given us the first studied survey of British poetry from the late Victorians to the present, to Auden and Spender." Allen Tate

+ — New Repub 104:25 Ja 6 '41 1100w

DAKIN, ARTHUR HAZARD. Man the measure; an essay on humanism as religion. 284p $3 Princeton univ. press

144 Humanism 39-32502

This study is interested primarily in humanistic ideas in relation to God and in analyzing the worth of the humanist movement as a protest against theism. The conclusion reached by Mr Dakin is that "on historical, social, scientific, philosophical, moral, and religious grounds, theism appeared better rooted and more fruitful than humanism." Index.

Booklist 36:193 Ja 15 '40

"His treatise is a careful analysis of the humanist attack upon theism. It is not so much a defense of traditional theism as it is an exposure of the contradictions within humanist thought. Mr. Dakin has made a very careful study of humanist literature in the past decades and he quotes the utterances of humanists with telling effect. . . If there is any defect in his treatment of the subject it is the minor fault of giving as much space and attention to obscure and confused humanist preachers, who are incapable of understanding the implications of their own position, as he does to great philosophers such as Nicolai Hartman and John Dewey." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Books p12 F 4 '40 950w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 17:228 Jl '40 120w

"Mr. Dakin's book is a penetrating and, in general, a fair-minded examination of recent attempts to derive an adequate philosophy of life, a sufficient substitute for religion, from atheistic assumptions." Charles Hartshorne
+ Ethics 50:363 Ap '40 370w

"Mr. Dakin's real service is in pointing out the limited, middle-class character of American humanism in the early thirties, and the logical feebleness of most of its propaganda against theism. But the stronger his case on these scores, the weaker becomes the claim of his book to religious, much less to philosophical, importance." H. A. L.
+ — J Philos 37:220 Ap 11 '40 250w

Reviewed by E. S. Ames
J Religion 20:189 Ap '40 650w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 1 '40 250w

DAKIN, SUSANNA BRYANT. A Scotch paisano. 312p il map $2.50 Univ. of Calif. [15s Cambridge]

B or 92 Reid, Hugo. California—Social life and customs 40-1948

"Hugo Reid's life in California, 1832-1852, derived from his correspondence." (Subtitle) Hugo Reid was a young Scot who went to California in 1832, and remained to share the fortunes of the country as a trader. In her preface the author notes that members of the Reid family were prototypes of some characters in Ramona. At the end of the volume are printed Hugo Reid's letters on the Indians, first published in the Los Angeles Star in 1852. Contains a register of British and American residents in California prior to 1840; a bibliography; and an index.

"The book is an important contribution to early California history." D. E. Clark
Am Hist R 46:486 Ja '41 280w

"Miss Dakin has written with no profound background of historical knowledge but with expert advice to save her from error. The captious might pick her up here and there. . . The 'Scotch Paisano' wrote frankly and well. It seems too bad that tuberculosis cut him off before he was able to write his memoirs." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p9 D 31 '39 1100w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 1 '40 240w

DALE, EDWARD EVERETT, and LITTON, GASTON, eds. Cherokee cavaliers; forty years of Cherokee history as told in the correspondence of the Ridge-Watie-Boudinot family. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 319p il map $3 Univ. of Okla. press

970.3 Cherokee Indians. U.S.—History—Civil war—Indian troops. Watie, Stand 40-3719

The Confederate General, Stand Watie, was a Cherokee Indian, a slave holder, and a leader of his people in peace and war. This group of family letters between General Watie, his relatives and friends from 1832 to 1872, illuminates the history of the Cherokee Nation, especially during the period of the Civil war. Index.

Reviewed by A. H. A. Henderson
Am Hist R 46:430 Ja '41 650w

Reviewed by Edward Davis
Am Soc R 5:669 Ag '40 480w

"In these letters the florid oratory of the eighteen hundreds, the curt orders of army officers, half-literate but shrewd appraisals of character, heartbroken protests of despairing women, naïve observations of homesick children at strange boarding schools, all combine to make this one of the most illuminating as well as most poignant documents on the American Indian." K. C. K.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 6 '40 550w

"Well edited and furnishing valuable material on Cherokee and general history throughout the period."
+ New Repub 102:190 F 5 '40 30w

"In calling 'Cherokee Cavaliers' a valuable book, the reviewer is not thinking only of its documentary value for scholars, but of its vivid and surprising interest for the intelligent public at large. This is a book to read. . . In all this self-revealing correspondence the reader has little thought that these men and women are of another race than ours, different from ourselves. Indians? They are like the shrewd and salty Yankees, close kin to the more earnest among our pioneers." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 28 '40 1200w

"There is a good bit of heavy going in a book of this sort, inevitably; repaid many times over to the student of those times, repaid to the curious-minded generally by the constant, human flashes. It is, taken as a whole, a student's book in which the ordinary man, dipping and sampling, will find enlightening surprises." Oliver La Farge
+ — Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 17 '40 260w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. A book for Jennifer; il. by Katherine Milhous and with cuts from old books. 114p $2 Scribner

Newbery, John—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27641

"Mr. John Newbery, the bookseller of St. Paul's Churchyard, makes here his first appearance in a child's story. . . The glimpses of him are all too brief . . . but that is just as Mr. Newbery would doubtless have had it, for this is, after all, a child's story, and so is told from the viewpoint of the three youngsters who lived in Gough Square and whose various activities were shaped by his books." N Y Times

Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

"[This] is more than a mere 'period piece,' though in its fidelity to time, place and spirit it recreates a child's corner of London in the days of Dr. Johnson. . . It is more because books mean so much in little children's lives that this story of Jennifer's book is a story of her heart as well; as the ancient posy has it, the two 'shall never part.' " M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 S 8 '40 410w

"Miss Dalgliesh has brought Mr. Newbery and his shop to life in a book for boys' and girls' own reading. Katherine Milhous's ten drawings in gay colors enliven the story and they, together with cuts from old books with an epigram in verse adapted to each, provide authentic eighteenth century London atmosphere. Author and artist together have made an important contribution to the history of children's books." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 26 '40 420w

"Lively writing, instructive and interesting."
+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 20w

DALGLIESH, ALICE—Continued

"Miss Dalgliesh has achieved a book of unusual distinction. Her discriminating selection of verse and illustration from such a collection as that of Wilbur Macey Stone is worthy of note." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:340 S '40 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:347 S '40 160w

"The book is a rare treat for teachers and students of children's literature with its cover a copy of the old 'flowery and gilt paper,' with its quaint title-page and the decorated pages before each chapter, with its glimpses of John Newbery, Doctor Johnson, and even a Garrick play. For their personal libraries it is a 'must' purchase. Children of nine and ten will find that John and Robert and Jennifer are almost as real as the author's contemporary children." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 140w

"A book to treasure. . . The story is a convincing chapter out of eighteenth-century London with characters as alive as the children who will touch and enjoy the book." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 100w

"This is a humorous, lively little tale which girls, especially from 8 to 12, will enjoy for its details of family life in bustling, colorful eighteenth century London." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 18 '40 440w

"Author and artist have combined to make this one of the most exquisite books of the year and in it have created a memorial to John Newbery, the first children's-book publisher."
+ New Yorker 16:128 D 7 '40 70w

"Charming and original."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 D 14 '40 30w

DALGLIESH, ALICE, and BENNETT, CLEO. The Hollyberrys; pictures by Pru Herric. 59p $1.50 Scribner

39-33749

"A book for the younger children of five to eight years. . . Each chapter tells a story of the Hollyberrys and their good times—first, the building of their house in the country, then the planting of the garden, followed by picnics and visits to the seashore." Library J

"This fat little family—father, mother, two children and a dog—began as dolls; Cleo Bennett made and posed them, Alice Dalgliesh spun around them the simplest of little stories, to which Pru Herric made lively pictures in color. They came out in a popular magazine for little children, who practically drove them into a book. . . I do not wonder that they are popular periodically, and I think they will be between covers, for little children laugh easily and love to laugh over little things." M. L. Becker
Books p7 Mr 17 '40 170w

Reviewed by R. W. Stewart
Library J 65:123 F 1 '40 120w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Deadly nightshade. 301p $2 Farrar

(W) 40-30527

Detective story.

"The plot thickens amazingly toward the end, with a flurry of romantic gambits, and Miss Daly proves herself as deft at juggling hints as the armchair sleuth could wish. A pleasing yarn, tall in spots." Will Cuppy
+ Books p23 S 29 '40 180w

"Elizabeth Daly rose like a star on the mystery fans' horizon with 'Unexpected Night,' runner-up in the Mary Roberts Rinehart contest and one of last season's best whodunit tales. Here is another, also original and highly civilized, also excellent. . . The plot is complicated but the action is brisk; and both people and scene are alive. Miss Daly has done it again; and started in, we hope, as a regular." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p20 S 29 '40 240w

"Good atmosphere and interesting plots within plots in this one, with a solution on the fantastic side."
+ New Yorker 16:80 S 28 '40 50w
Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Unexpected night. 265p $2 Farrar

(W) 40-7238

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Miss Daly's baffler, a close contender for top honors in the Mary Roberts Rinehart Mystery Novel Contest, makes pleasant reading of the might-have-happened kind. It deserves a medal of its own for its credible plot and characters and is hereby recommended to those who want something human for a change." Will Cuppy
+ Books p16 Mr 10 '40 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 19:680 My 25 '40 140w

"To the basic essential of an ingenious plot Miss Daly adds consistent characterization, a light and easy style, and realistic atmosphere. Congratulations, with cheers!" Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 10 '40 240w

"Pleasant characters in this first mystery, which is so neatly written that it is almost restful."
+ New Yorker 16:92 Mr 9 '40 40w

"Worthwhile."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:16 Mr 9 '40 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 1 '40 140w

DALY, JAMES JEREMIAH. The Jesuit in focus. (Science and culture ser) 212p $2.50 Bruce pub.

271.5 Jesuits 40-13348

"On September 27 of this year the Society of Jesus celebrated the four hundredth anniversary of its foundation, which it dates from the Bull of Approbation of Pope Paul III and not from the famous gathering of Saint Ignatius and his companions at Montmartre in August, 1534. . . As part of the American celebration and to mark his own jubilee, Father James J. Daly, the 'Cheerful Ascetic,' has written a study 'intended to give an honest and faithful representation of the Jesuits by one who is so fortunate as to have lived for fifty years in the Society of Jesus.' . . Father Daly begins with a clear account of the principal factors in the moulding of a Jesuit, the Constitutions of the Society, the Spiritual Exercises, and Ignatian Spirituality, and then gives a series of short sketches, each of which throws light on some aspect of Jesuit life or answers some objection." Commonweal

"We commend these twenty odd essays with hearty enthusiasm." E. J. Hogen + America 63:609 S 7 '40 490w

"Father Daly might have undertaken to give us a massive and recondite study like Father Duhr's work on 'Jesuitenfabeln.' He has chosen however to construct a readable collection of brief chapters which in all likelihood will go farther and achieve more. He is playful at times as becomes the poet, and exact enough to please the scholar."
+ Cath World 152:125 O '40 360w

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan
Commonweal 32:394 Ag 30 '40 800w

DALY, MURIEL DE B. Way of life. 295p $2 Appleton-Century

40-13012

Pat Fernie's mother wanted her to marry well, but Pat fell in love with a young business man and tho she was determined to marry him she agreed to wait a year. And during the year Pat fell out of love with Colin Anderson and met his lost cousin, Andrew, posing as a servant in an Italian hotel. Andrew proved more to the liking of Pat's father and mother as well as to Pat and all ended happily.

Books p11 Ag 4 '40 370w

"We cannot have too many such for the average English novelist may find he has become an historian of a chapter of the world which we may never see again, but which we may well be thankful to have experienced." Edna Bryan

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 27 '40 320w

"Two stories are managed with deft artfulness in this book, so that when they are brought together toward the end there is no shock of collision. The backgrounds, one English county, the other rural Italy, are done with a skill and precision that spring from close, amused observation and a nice touch in writing. The contrasting scenes and the shrewd portrayal of character make the book agreeable reading." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 21 '40 170w

"This is a breezy tale, undoubtedly what people mean when they speak of Summer reading." N. L. R.

Sat R of Lit 22:19 Jl 27 '40 110w

DALY, ROBERT WELTER. Broadsides. 528p $2.50 Macmillan

40-14807

"Edward O'Corboy, a contradictory Irishman, raised to hate English oppression, yet spending the better part of his life in the British Navy, is the hero of this romance of the Napoleonic wars. From midshipman to captain, O'Corboy steadily climbs to prominence, assisted by the friendship of a British admiral and by his own courage and intelligent ship handling in half a dozen sea fights from the 'Glorious First of June' to Trafalgar." Boston Transcript

Booklist 37:137 D 1 '40

"Vivid and vigorous as a yarn of action and carnage, 'Broadsides' contrives at the same time to be a fairly comprehensive depiction of naval history in that sanguine era." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ag 18 '40 410w

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 100w

"A fine, swashbuckling yarn, if not quite up to the Forester standard."

+ Christian Century 57:1083 S 4 '40 90w

New Repub 103:426 S 23 '40 20w

"Mr. Daly's style and method are very different from those of the sea novels of the Napoleonic era by C. S. Forester, in the Captain Hornblower trilogy. Forester writes as a modern with a sophisticated touch and psychological character development. Here the characters are not complex and Mr. Daly, writing in the first person as of 1810, has given his prose and style the flavor of its period, a prose that seems to me to read like an imitation of Thackeray imitating late eighteenth-century memoir writers. But it is very well done and tempered to make it easy enough reading for any one." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 18 '40 1450w

New Yorker 16:63 Ag 17 '40 40w

"As O'Corboy tells of his adventures, in a swift, simple, imaginative style that makes easy reading, he keeps stopping the story, sometimes at an exasperating moment, for long digressions on ships, rigging, cannon, discipline, officers, and men. To many readers this rich lode of eighteenth century sea lore will be as engrossing as the devious windings of the tale itself. The astonishing thing is how, out of the melange of sails, broadsides, romance, and digression, there comes a very solid sense of that intangible thing called character, the character of O'Corboy and the navy he served." N. L. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 17 '40 380w

DALZELL, GEORGE WALTON. The flight from the flag; the continuing effect of the Civil war upon the American carrying trade. 292p il map $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

973.757 Confederate States of America—Navy. U.S.—History—Civil war—Naval operations. Merchant marine—U.S. 40-32765

Study of the United States shipping economy since 1860. Several chapters deal with the activities of Confederate raiders, which destroyed 110,000 tons of Federal shipping, and made necessary the sale of 800,000 tons to foreign carriers. The remainder of the book is a discussion of the efforts to counteract the decline of the American merchant marine by subsidies. Map on end papers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Harlan Trott

Ann Am Acad 213:222 Ja '41 550w

"In so far as Mr. Dalzell deals with history, one wishes he had devoted more thought to how far the self-interest appeals of powerful pressure groups are responsible for the fierce nationalisms that have contributed to the economic collapse of nations, with their ultimate political breakdown and relapse into barbarism. The author makes it plain that he would prefer not to entrust this question to 'free trade theorists' to answer." H. T.

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 15 '40 600w

DAME, LAWRENCE. New England comes back; with an introd. by Stewart H. Holbrook. 319p il $2.75 Random house

917.4 New England—Industries and resources 40-7051

Descriptive survey of the industrial comeback staged in the New England states, following on the heels of the depression. The author spent the better part of a year collecting the material for his study. He stresses the New England characteristics—ingenuity, diversity, and adaptability—as contributing factors in the industrial revival. Index.

"This book is a piece of first-class publicity for the ancient virtues of thrift, ingenuity, industry, courage, gumption, and above all, self-reliance."

+ Atlantic My '40 270w

"Obviously, Mr. Dame has worked like a horse at his fact finding. His packing of fairly complete surveys of the industries and enterprises, the arts and sciences, the recreation and economy, the aviation and gastronomy of six states into 307 pages is not the smallest triumph of Yankee ingenuity." F. F. Van de Water

+ Books p2 Ap 21 '40 420w

Reviewed by Bernard Peterson

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 18 '40 340w

"Mr. Dame is a good reporter. He has presented a picture that, except for [a] few gaps, accurately and comprehensively and pleasantly describes New England's present improved economic situation." R. R. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Mr 14 '40 600w

Reviewed by J. L. Carten, Jr.

New Eng Q 13:540 S '40 550w

New Repub 102:481 Ap 8 '40 50w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p5 Mr 31 '40 850w

"The author's high spirit, which is akin to the New England spirit, may lead him into occasional overemphasis or excess of color in his zeal to entertain the reader. Yet his book is not least valuable because it shows that the New England spirit of today, while full of old-fashioned grit, is exuberant, cheerful and up-to-date."

DAME, LAWRENCE—Continued

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 800w

DANIELS, JONATHAN. A southerner discovers New England. 398p map $3 Macmillan

917.4 New England. New England—Economic conditions (W) 40-27433

Study of present-day economic conditions in New England, as the author saw them during a trip which included each of the states and all conditions of living. He traveled slowly, stopped often to get the feeling of the country, and has interpreted New England to itself, and has shown its relation to the rest of the United States. Index.

Reviewed by W. B. Catlin
Am Econ R 30:592 S '40 600w

"Altogether his analysis of New England conditions is that of a sympathetic friend, and New Englanders can read his book with profit and pleasure even though at times they will find it disturbing."

+ Atlantic My '40 150w

Booklist 36:363 My 15 '40

Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"I think Mr. Daniels has done a rattling good job with us Yankees. It's a grand book, both for enjoyment and reflection. Not a dull page in it. Here is no fawning lecturer, come to praise our Yankee smugness by calling it something else. . . Any Yankee not wholly fat-headed will agree with the author's remarks about our shortcomings and possibly can list enough additional faults to warrant a sizable appendix in future reprintings, of which this altogether delightful book deserves many." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p5 My 19 '40 1650w

"I am no economist. I am not capable of passing on the solidity and soundness of Mr. Daniels's argument. But I am a teacher, and I know a good teacher when I see one. Whether Mr. Daniels likes the appellation or not, I believe that he is the best of teachers. I believe that his book is a lesson sheet to be conned over and studied, assimilated, digested, in fact, required of all New Englanders. I know far more about New England than I did two days ago, even after 50 years acquaintance; and I am grateful for the information and more for the illumination of Mr. Daniels's lesson sheet." M. E. Chase

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 900w

Christian Century 57:641 My 15 '40 50w

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 17 '40 650w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 32:213 Je 28 '40 650w

"Daniels is a keen-eyed traveler and even New Englanders will have to admit that his book discovers many aspects of their communities which they themselves have missed." Norman Cousins

+ Current Hist 51:5 Je '40 200w

"The book is a skillful job of first-rate reporting, written in an engaging, impressionist style, compact and clear. The frequent analyses are often penetrating. New England readers, in particular, should discover a good deal that is stimulating and valuable—about themselves." Oliver Jenkins

+ Forum 103:333 Je '40 390w

"A timely book, readable and thought-provoking." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 65:299 Ap 1 '40 180w

"Mr. Daniels's book is packed with information—he is an excellent and conscientious reporter. . . There is shrewdness in his book worthy of a New Englander; there is also gallantry—though he scorns the word—and for good measure a style compounded of intelligence, imagination and skill." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 150:629 My 18 '40 750w

Reviewed by J. L. Carten, Jr.
New Eng Q 13:540 S '40 550w

"The most engaging thing about Mr. Daniels' book is its candor, its avowed modesty of purpose. One ends the book, however, feeling that it is not so modest as superficial—the engaging chit-chat of a seasoned feature writer." Hamilton Basso

— + New Repub 102:831 Je 17 '40 550w

"A New Englander need not concede that Mr. Daniels has described New England. Even this small corner of a great country is a world in itself. With his introductions, in his necessary haste, and despite his unmistakable desire to be neighbor with all comers, Mr. Daniels moved within a limited circumference. His book tells as much about the South as about New England. Its great merit is that it tells something about an America whose tasks and hopes are not restricted by State and sectional lines. One hopes the 'Summer people' especially will read it; it will do them good." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 My 19 '40 1550w

"Mr. Daniels is not too reassuring, but neither is he a disaster-monger. A worthy companion volume to his 'A Southerner Discovers the South.' "

New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 80w

Pratt p20 autumn '40

"A sympathetic and thoughtful book. . . The author is a man with a keen social sense, tinged by a New Dealish idealism, which may at times annoy his less liberal readers, and he presents exactly the sort of record that will delight future historians. If the book is somewhat gloomy it is not Mr. Daniels's fault, for New England, when he saw it, was facing disillusion." J. P. Marquand

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 My 18 '40 2200w

"This is a wise book, a clever book, a realistic book. Muck-raking is there, but it is injected painlessly and it slips up on the reader before he is aware of it. There is nothing savage or crusading in its pages, and one has the opinion that Daniels would shudder if one attempted to read a reformer-purpose in his deft composition. He avoids starkness as nimbly as he does sentimentalism or sensationalism; yet New England emerges from his pages 'discovered' with a disconcerting nudity." R. M. Hodges

+ Social Forces 19:123 O '40 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 900w

"In view of the historical significance of Roger Williams and the cultural importance of Brown University, it may be said that the Baptists are virtually ignored in connection with Rhode Island. That the Unitarians get the publicity is because the Sharpes and Metcalfs of Providence happen to be Unitarians, whereas that sect never did amount to much in the state, anyway. But these little oddities are entertaining, not vital; they make the book more readable and refreshing in its motorized outlander's point of view. He talked with a great many people in city and village. The folks told him things. And what he picked up, altogether, is impressive. He even came to know the difference between Merrimack and Merrimac—and that still stumps many of our oldest families. This reviewer can dip into the book almost anywhere and learn something about New England. It is often the outlander coming to look your place over who learns most about it, not the native who has lived there since his birth." W. L. Cook

+ — Survey G 29:410 Jl '40 550w

Time 35:94 My 13 '40 600w

"The style of this book is very charming; it appears light and facile with comparisons that are almost always amusing and often incongruous. However, his juxtaposition of apparently unrelated facts has a powerful literary effect." G. D. Aiken

+ Yale R n s 30:167 autumn '40 850w

DARBY, J. N., pseud. See Govan, C. N.

DARBY, RUTH. Death conducts a tour. 273p $2 Doubleday

40-30177

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 80w

"The story holds one's interest in its puzzle and offers light amusement in its talk; a good average whodunit tale." Kay Irvin
+ — N Y Times p16 S 22 '40 170w

"Plenty of action. Average."
Sat R of Lit 22:18 O 5 '40 50w

DARE, MARCUS PAUL. Indian underworld; a first-hand account of Hindu saints, sorcerers, and superstitions. 218p il $2.50 Dutton [10s 6d Rider]

133.4 Magic. Superstition. India—Social life and customs 40-7735

Discussion of Indian magic and occultism, in which the author attempts to answer such questions as: can the Indian rope trick really be performed; can a Tibetan yogi live 200 years; what goes on at the mysterious jungle shrines; is it true that human sacrifices are still made in India; etc.

Reviewed by J. H. Gaul
— Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 360w

Christian Century 57:609 My 8 '40 250w

"A very interesting book. . . The author has not tried to prove any single thesis, but has presented his compilation in the spirit of a reporter who is himself genuinely interested in Indian life."
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 21 '40 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p682 O 22 '38 110w

DARLING, ARTHUR BURR. Our rising empire, 1763-1803. 595p $5 Yale univ. press [22s 6d Oxford]

973.4 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Territorial expansion 40-9340

A historical study of the relations of the United States with the three great European countries, England, France and Spain from before the Revolution to the Louisiana purchase and its immediate aftermath. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is notable for the thoroughness and care with which the author has analyzed his material and for the imaginative understanding with which he interprets it, reading every document in the light of surrounding circumstances and frequently finding meaning between the lines. Obviously, this method admits a subjective element, and there will not be universal agreement with all of Mr. Darling's conclusions. . . Errors of fact appear to be extremely few." J. W. Pratt
+ — Am Hist R 46:423 Ja '41 800w

"The study is a thoroughly scholarly and painstaking one of our earliest relations with European powers. . . Most of the ground is familiar to professional historians but I do not know of any other single volume which covers it so adequately, authoritatively, and in such detail. There are also original points of view, and to read the volume is like watching an absorbing game of chess." J. T. Adams
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 3 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p487 S 21 '40 140w

DARLING, FRANK FRASER. The seasons and the farmer; a book for children; il. with drawings by C. F. Tunnicliffe [and photographs]. 72p $2.25 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

630 Farm life—Juvenile literature

[40-30106]

By word and picture this small book for children describes the daily life of an English farm thru the seasons, from ploughing to harvest.

"The book is so full of facts that it cannot be described as easy reading, and a few pages at a time according to the season of the year will be enough to fill that season with new interests and a fresh outlook; but the author has wisely avoided the pitfall of talking down to his children, and the book is equally suitable for the grown-up, who should read and reread these pages and realise how much he has missed and how much more interesting his next visit to the country will be. The book is beautifully printed and the illustrations are delightful." A. W. Boyd
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 22 '39 300w

"In [a] way, never sentimental, never exuberant or preaching, it evolves a picture of England and the English farmer which has at once the soundness of an encyclopaedia and the beauty of a poem. . . This book is the perfect thing of its kind." H. E. Bates
+ New Statesman & Nation 18:842 D 9 '39 230w

"Dr. Fraser Darling really knows his subject and his audience, and has written a book which I recommend unreservedly." Amabel Williams-Ellis
+ Spec 163:840 D 8 '39 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup sup iv D 16 '39 220w

DARREL, DAVID. Boo Baboon; with il. by the author. [36p] $1.50 Scribner

40-6445

Picture-story book for very young readers all about a little baboon who tried to spoil a jungle picnic by eating all the food, and then was too full to eat any strawberry ice cream when it arrived.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 Mr 17 '40 230w

"A book to delight little boys and grown men with a taste for animals of the jungle. It is so inconsequent, yet delivered with skill in characterization of the animals and in composition and design." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:174 My '40 70w

"Slight but amusing, this story has some of the easy familiarity of a spur-of-the-moment, word-of-mouth tale, but the fun, as in a proper picture book, lies largely in the pictures. The child will not recognize their fine composition and drawing, but he will find in them the lion, the tiger, the elephant, the giraffe portrayed as just the same friendly creatures which he implicitly believes them to be." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 My 26 '40 230w

DAUGHERTY, MRS SONIA V. (MEDWEDEFF). Vanka's donkey; with il. by James Daugherty. 62p $1.50 Stokes

40-14674

Picture-story book about Vanka, a Russian peasant, his wife Mavra, and their donkey. Mavra hates the donkey and that leads to a series of funny experiences, which only cease when Mavra changes her tactics.

Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 16 '40 180w

"This is an excellent picture-story book. The pictures by James Daugherty reveal strength and humor and fit the text admirably." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 190w

DAUGHERTY, MRS SONIA V. (MEDWEDEFF). Wings of glory; il. by James Daugherty. 236p $2.50 Oxford

David, king of Israel—Juvenile literature (W) 40-27313

Retelling of the story of David for junior and senior high schools. Beginning when he was a shepherd boy, it traces his life at the court of

DAUGHERTY, S. V.—Continued
King Saul, the years in the army, thru his exile, to the time of his kingship and the building of the New Jerusalem.

Booklist 36:330 Ap 15 '40

"This is a book more than one has tried to write, and now it is written. I hope it falls into the hands of many young men and women." M. L. Becker
+ Books p12 My 5 '40 320w

"The sterling and beautiful character of the shepherd boy is set forth in all its Scriptural impressiveness. The story is dramatically heightened by the beauty of the incidents which are evolved from the author's knowledge of the customs of that early day, plus her own vivid imagination. This combination, coupled with considerable dramatic skill in the presentation, results in a highly readable volume which can scarcely fail to intensify the reader's interest." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 27 '40 230w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney
Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 27 '40 160w

"As in any splendid historical novel, the reader is swept into the spirit of the times—the hates and fears, hardships and enthusiasms of the people. And there is adventure and suspense for the most exacting as David travels hither and yon attempting to escape the wrath of Saul upon which the tale is focused. Libraries could use more Bible stories as well condensed and as vividly and convincingly told." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:214 Mr 1 '40 100w

"The dramatic story of David makes fascinating reading under any circumstance, and Sonia Daugherty's Wings of Glory is no exception. At times the author reaches thrilling heights, at others she destroys the mystery and poetry of the Bible story with oversimplification. However, any retelling of the Bible suffers the disadvantage of immediate comparison and, in spite of the shortcomings, this is a moving interpretation of a hero children love to read about and a living picture of David's time." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 80w

"The book does not always sustain the glowing promise of the first lovely chapters of David's boyhood. Jonathan is little more than a wistful shadow. Too often we are told what David thought, rather than made to feel the force of his deepest emotions, and often his prowess obliterates the finer lines of personality, but his greatness shines out clearly. This is a stirring evocation of a drama which has never lost its heroic outlines." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '40 500w
New Yorker 16:99 My 18 '40 40w
Wis Lib Bul 36:102 My '40

DAVID, MRS ELIZABETH (HARBISON). I played their accompaniments. 246p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-33172

Reminiscences of a well-known accompanist, now retired, who knew and played for many of the concert and opera singers of the early nineteen hundreds. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '40

"A casually, almost naively recounted series of reminiscences. . . The most vivid section relatively speaking, of the book deals with the years of the last war."
New Yorker 16:112 O 19 '40 50w

DAVIDMAN, JOY. Anya. 296p $2.50 Macmillan 40-12262

Character study of a passionate but honest woman, Anya, a Jewess, living in a Ukrainian village some seventy years ago. Anya is first seen as a girl of twelve, keen, apperceptive, beautiful. She grows in beauty, refuses to acquiesce in all the ways of her ancestors, has months of unfaithfulness to her husband; but eventually, after the death of a girlhood lover, she returns to her husband once and for all, and takes up her duty as a Jewish wife and mother.

"To say that Miss Davidman has not painted in the dross and tears is not to criticize her: she has written her book as a comedy, and her work is fresh and gay. It represents an old wives' tale raised to the dignity of a novel, a potpourri of venerable gossip and stale jokes and the oh's and ah's of generations of respectable housewives whispering over the antics of Anya, that flirt." Alfred Kazin
+ Books p2 Jl 14 '40 950w

Reviewed by Dorothy Frye
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 240w
Christian Century 57:879 Jl 10 '40 50w
New Repub 103:222 Ag 12 '40 60w

"This is a powerful, well-written novel. . . Anya, to be sure, is something of a wanton, but she is real and thoroughly alive." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 14 '40 480w

"Whatever the term 'first novel' implies, 'Anya' is free of it. It is the full-blown, beautifully written work of a keen artistic intelligence. Miss Davidman has a natural flair for fresh and immediate seeing, and a sure knowledge of the swells and starts of emotion. Better, she can write what she sees and knows." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 22:10 Jl 13 '40 500w

DAVIES, D. R. The two humanities. 256p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Clarke, J.]

901 History—Philosophy. War and religion. European war, 1939—Religious aspects. Kingdom of God 40-33267

"An attempt at a Christian interpretation of history in the light of war." (Subtitle) "In this volume the author . . . shows how war is a revelation of the essential character of humanity, which is cursed by a seeming inevitability of self-destruction, from which the only escape, in the author's opinion, is through a new humanity created by Christ. European History is seen as the conflict between the old humanity of the 'natural man' and the new humanity of Christ's Cross and Redemption, of which conflict the present war is a phase." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 37:214 Ja 15 '41

"It is difficult in a few words of survey to do justice to the clarity and profundity with which Mr. Davies traces the history of our Western culture. . . Mr. Davies' theory of redemption is rather too negative toward the possibilities of realizing anything good in history. He is strongly influenced by Berdyaev's Greek mysticism in some parts of his thought, with the result that he lands into a position of fairly pure 'other-worldliness.' He is certain that human sin will make any kind of a 'just' peace after any war impossible and tends therefore to take a rather indifferent attitude toward the problem of justice in history." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ — Books p30 N 17 '40 500w

Reviewed by H. J. Simpson
Churchman 154:17 D 1 '40 220w

"This book is unusually vital and full of insight into man and his works. No one can read it with an open mind and not profit greatly." Joseph Haroutunian
+ J Religion 21:78 Ja '41 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p324 Jl 6 '40 800w

DAVIS, ALICE VAUGHT. Timothy Turtle; il. by Guy Brown Wiser. [32p] $1.50 Harcourt 40-32634

Picture-story book about the predicament of an elderly turtle who fell on his back and could not turn over until several of his small animal friends banded together to help.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 D 8 '40 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"The text is simple and direct as fits the tale, but the illustrations by Guy Brown Wiser leave much to be desired. The coloring in the originals may be more pleasant but as reproduced they come out a disagreeable pinkish brown, and a green, blurred with too much black ink. But turtles are most appealing to children, and oddly enough we have no picture-book stories about them. This title, therefore, may have a temporary place in the picture-book collection." M. F. Potter
+ — Library J 65:813 O 1 '40 120w

"Highly recommended." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 90w

DAVIS, ANNE PENCE. The customer is always right. 307p $2.50 Macmillan 40-27314

Story of a department store—Stacy's, Your Department Store—with everything from a bargain basement to a French room, and fitted to supply the needs of a large district surrounding the town of Plainstown in northwest Texas. While the store itself is the central figure, the other characters in the story include a wide variety of men and women, successes and failures, happy and unhappy.

Booklist 36:325 Ap 15 '40

"Four events divide the narrative into animated sections—the spring trade festival, the installation of air-conditioning, the fall fashion show and the end of the year. When you finish the story, you will feel yourself as familiar with Stacy's and its personnel as if you had been on the pay roll." Lisle Bell
+ Books p12 Mr 24 '40 350w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor
Boston Transcript p3 My 18 '40 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

J Home Econ 32:398 Je '40 60w

"As a novel, it leaves a good deal to be desired; as a glimpse behind the scenes of a typical small-town department store, it is good reporting and pleasant reading." M. L. Rossbach

N Y Times p6 Mr 24 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:86 Mr 23 '40 30w

Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ap 13 '40 370w

Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. The Arkansas; il. by Donald McKay. (Rivers of America) 340p map $2.50 Farrar

917.8 Arkansas river. West—History
(W) 40-27483

History and folklore of the 1450 miles of the Arkansas river and the territory thru which it flows. Stories and anecdotes of the early days of Colorado mining, of H. A. W. Tabor and his fabulous fortune, Leadville, Dodge City, of the Ozarks, and the people who live there, are included. Index.

Atlantic Jl '40 160w

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

"As historian Mr. Davis is free and odd to the point of eccentricity, not to say flippant. . . Still, for a reader interested in adventure, in anecdotage, in legend there is a sufficiency, though often the bonds tying the matter to the Arkansas River are tenuous to the vanishing point." C. J. Finger
— + Books p2 My 26 '40 1300w

"Whatever Clyde Davis writes about, he is sure to be good. The most rambunctious river of the West is lucky to flow through his hands. He has made a salty and irreverent story of vivid personalities and has drawn scenery he considers nature's 'monstrous carelessness.'" Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 700w

"Mr. Davis is a good reporter. He has written a book that is more careful in its study and preparation than, perhaps, a casual reading would suggest. It is a good warm-weather vehicle for pleasantly acquiring a little background on some remote but interesting parts of the country." R. R. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 29 '40 480w

"The author has an obvious interest in this colorful phase of America's development. He transmits his enthusiasm to the reader in a book packed with historical facts and local color, entertainingly presented." A. L. Graham
+ Library J 65:396 My 1 '40 140w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
N Y Times p3 My 26 '40 370w

New Yorker 16:94 My 25 '40 30w

"Mr. Davis paints a scene swiftly, makes his characters come alive, keeps the narrative moving. His manner is vivid, breezy, tinged with irreverence, in places legitimately jocular, frequently charged with the Western humor of calm understatement. . . On this really gorgeous and competently illustrated book only one note of criticism may properly be entered. There could well be more about Arkansas River navigation, some description of the steamboats, their former routes, crews, and cargoes." C. B. Firestone
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:5 My 25 '40 650w

Wis Lib Bul 36:111 Je '40

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Sullivan. 279p $2.50 Farrar
(W) 40-30098

When he discovered that his wife had been unfaithful to him Sullivan, a newspaper man, started out to hitchhike to parts unknown. On the way he met McKinley Williams (named after Grover Cleveland) and the two proceeded together in Williams' ancient car. Sullivan believed that he could levitate himself and Williams thought he'd be his manager, in case there was any money in it. After some highly diverting adventures and one unwitnessed levitation, Williams settled down to a nice little tombstone-cutting business, and Sullivan went back to his Mildred.

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

"One might suspect this book to be the work of a disordered imagination, of an author whose mind has been destroyed by metaphysical speculation. Even were the case so unfortunate, one would roar with laughter over it. Touching on very weighty matters, the volume will strike the serious thinker as highly hilarious. In fact, I suspect it will seem hilarious to practically everybody." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p6 S 15 '40 650w

"I like the wistful hard-boiledness of Mr. Davis's characters; I shall remember Sullivan and McKinley Williams as I remember Horseshoes Patterson and Homer Zigler from previous books. No one else, I think, has ever made the philosophizing of the semi-articulate so unsentimentally winsome. But I half suspect that Mr. Davis intended to pack into McKinley Williams's final reflections on levitation and revolution something more than almost dumb fantasy. If I am right, it did not come off; if I am wrong, Mr. Davis failed in clarity. Success or failure, I recommend 'Sullivan.'" Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 S 12 '40 250w

"Does this book sound absurd? It is. But handled with that jigger of genius which Clyde Brion Davis possesses it has a gusto and charm which make you actually believe as you read." Ruth Blodgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 14 '40 600w

"Sullivan is an unusual story well told, and should be in demand in all libraries." R. D. Minnich
+ Library J 65:709 S 1 '40 100w

DAVIS, C. B.—Continued
Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 103:393 S 16 '40 230w

"There's a good story here, and in the interstices of the story there's a lot of glorious nonsense. . . There is something singularly native and American in Davis's humor. If he continues successfully to string his tall tales and his dead-pan exaggerations on a strong narrative framework, we may expect him to sell us the Woolworth Building any day now." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p17 S 15 '40 900w
New Yorker 16:80 S 21 '40 70w

Reviewed by Phil Stong
Sat R of Lit 22:14 S 14 '40 240w
Time 36:86 O 7 '40 70w

DAVIS, DON. Return of the Rio Kid. 281p $2 Morrow 40-27286

Western story.

Booklist 36:307 Ap 1 '40

"Here is a recommended Western with several different twists and one of the most likable heroes you've ever met up with." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 F 11 '40 120w

"A twisted plot which is worked out with considerable skill. The tale moves at a good pace and has its liberal share of gunfighting." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p16 F 18 '40 200w

DAVIS, ELMER HOLMES. Not to mention the war. 320p $2.50 Bobbs
814 40-7325

A group of essays written for Harper's, The Forum, and The Saturday Review of Literature, here collected for book publication with only slight revision. Contents: The "logic" of history; Prophets at the crossroads; Shaw and the inner light; On the eve: reminiscences of 1913; Purest of pleasures; On the gentility of Gentiles; On being kept by a cat; The imperfect Wagnerite; On not being dead, as reported; Notes on a new Bible; Let us now praise famous men.

"Without a memory that reaches back as far as Taft I doubt that any reader will get the full force of the argument in 'The "Logic" of History,' or the saturnine element in 'Notes on a New Bible' and the defense of the Emperor Gallienus. Yet these things lend the book its distinctive flavor, so handing it to boys is a method of casting pearls. To the partially bald and the moderately gray, however, it may be recommended without reservation. They will find it a little astringent. They may finish it somewhat resentful. But if it is a trifle bitter, it is also bracing, and the candid men among them will admit that it is probably good for them." G. W. Johnson
+ — Books p4 Ap 21 '40 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '40

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 150:570 My 4 '40 650w
New Repub 102:769 Je 3 '40 40w

"There is no need to look in detail at 'Not to Mention the War.' That is for the reader who enjoys good English prose, for the reader who, before the lassitude of Spring gets in his blood, sits down for an evening with a book. He has a treat in store." Francis Brown
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 14 '40 950w
New Yorker 16:91 Ap 6 '40 40w

"Of the eleven essays in this volume nine are absolute crackerjacks, full of the sort of observation not collected by two-spots, as also of criticism whose directed penetration makes you think of the dangerous beams of radiant particles with which elements are taken apart in the physics laboratory. None of his contemporaries is more deeply cultivated and none has less swank. None is kinder and none is more murderous when murder is called for." Leonard Bacon
+ Sat R of Lit 21:10 Ap 13 '40 900w
Wis Lib Bul 36:110 Je '40

DAVIS, FRANCES. My shadow in the sun. 318p $2.75 Carrick
B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Spain—History—Civil war, 1936-1939 40-32181

Memoirs of a young American girl who wanted to become a foreign correspondent and succeeded—"the only woman correspondent with Franco's armies" in Spain.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"If you are interested in the lives of American war correspondents, you cannot fail to be fascinated by this book because Frances Davis has achieved the tour de force of depicting them with meticulous realism and at the same time surrounding them with the aura of romance which they have in the popular mind. If the subject seems to you a dull one you may find parts of the book dull but there are many other things in the book which will make it seem an interesting and a moving one even to the reader who is surfeited with foreign correspondents." Edmond Taylor
+ Books p16 S 29 '40 700w
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 19 '40 150w
Commonweal 32:534 O 18 '40 50w
New Repub 103:566 O 21 '40 50w

"Her writing suffers from its restless, excited, staccato style, but this fault is less noticeable as the record gains substance; and even in the personal character of her book she achieves vividness. 'My Shadow in the Sun' belongs where its author would contentedly choose to be; not one of the big ones, but not too far away from them, with a real contribution to make." Katherine Woods
+ — N Y Times p5 S 29 '40 1300w

"Rather naïve, but swift, superior writing."
+ New Yorker 16:99 S 28 '40 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Smyth
Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 16 '40 270w

"This is not a story of the Spanish war. There is not even a bare statement of which side won. It is in part a picture of what war does and a description of how war is reported, but mainly it is merely the story of Frances Davis. And when that story is being told it doesn't make much difference which side won or which side lost, but only that here is a resolute personality, a tense newspaper woman carrying on the tradition of her craft by trying to beat the deadline and put on the wire the one story that only she can tell."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 27 '40 600w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE. The graveyard never closes. 292p $2 Doubleday 40-29464

Detective story.

Booklist 37:242 F 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 D 29 '40 200w

"The author's account of how Hatch, with the help of Jane, his beautiful secretary, solves his problems, leans a bit toward prosiness at times, and the ending of the story is rather far-fetched." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Ja 12 '41 160w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 4 '41 50w

DAVIS, GEORGE THERON. A navy second to none; the development of modern American naval policy. 508p map $3.75 Harcourt
359 U.S.—Navy—History 40-6041

Long, thoroly documented survey of the development of the naval policy of the United States from the 1850s to the present. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:376 Je 1 '40

Bookmark p19 N '40

"A scholarly, unpedantic, dispassionate study." R. F. Armknecht

+ Books p6 Mr 10 '40 1500w

"A substantial, scholarly, well documented volume." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 16 '40 370w

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 220w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 3 '40 600w

Reviewed by W. J. Myers

Churchman 154:20 Ap 15 '40 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

"Well-balanced, dispassionate and thoroughly documented work." J. J. O'Connor

+ Commonweal 31:437 Mr 8 '40 250w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 51:5 Ap '40 420w

Foreign Affairs 18:753 Jl '40 20w

"At long last we have an excellent book on American naval policy, admirably supplementing the historical work of the Sprouts, and providing the bewildered citizen with just the balanced summation necessary for an enlightened consideration of immediate issues." C. A. Beard

+ New Repub 102:283 F 26 '40 750w

"Here is a book that is sincerely done, and in all save its last chapter an objective and dispassionate report of the development of our naval policy. It suffers from an apparent haste in compilation and from a sometimes confusing presentation which skips back and forth blithely without too much regard to chronology. . . Despite these criticisms Mr. Davis has done a thoroughly valuable, intensely interesting and prodigiously documented job, which will long be a credit to his name and of fundamental importance to any understanding of American naval policy. His evident scholarship and the serried footnotes of twenty-four of his twenty-five chapters are convincing witnesses, if any be needed, of his thorough and studious treatment." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 10 '40 2200w

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 50w

Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

Reviewed by W. D. Puleston

Yale R n s 29:831 summer '40 800w

DAVIS, HASSOLDT. Land of the eye; [il. with phot. by the author]. 415p $3 Holt

915 Denis-Roosevelt Asiatic expedition. Nepal—Description and travel. Burma—Description and travel (W) 40-35622

"A narrative of the labors, adventures, alarums and excursions of the Denis-Roosevelt Asiatic expedition to Burma, China, India and the lost kingdom of Nepal." (Subtitle) Index.

"Hassoldt Davis has written a bully book with a meaningless title. On page 211 we learn that Nepal is the 'Land of the Eye' for no special reason and for relatively only a few pages. The author was a member of one of the well known Denis-Roosevelt expeditions with the dual duties of writing the narrative and taking the still pictures. The first he has accomplished with a vengeance; the stills as used in the book are not of a high order and many of them could well have been omitted. Davis can work magic with both words and phrases; high-pressure magic, breathless in its continuity of unexpected impact and juxtaposition of amazing adventures. There is no let-up, and little attempt at daily travel sequence." William Beebe

+ — Books p4 D 15 '40 750w

"There is a good deal that is dreadful in the expedition's report from the Burma Road, and one feels that it is set down here with reluctance. Throughout his book Mr. Davis shows a quick feeling for atmosphere, and that power of communication which—with the literary conscience which is also evidenced here—makes the difference between a good and bad travel book. 'Land of the Eye' is very good indeed. In the field of writing where monotonous mediocrity can perhaps most generally get by, here is a book with a quality of real distinction." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 D 8 '40 950w

"A vivid and colorful account of the place and its people, and the extraordinary facts which this enthusiastic explorer has to report lose nothing at the hands of his imagination. As a whole, Mr. Davis's book, however, is a little disappointing. The traveler is something of a barometer which registers atmospheric conditions wherever it is taken, but which only means anything when compared with a reading taken at some established base. Mr. Davis registers highs and lows with great gusto and charm, but the reader is left with the impression that he has not been in touch with his base. There is no real way of telling how high he has climbed." Raymond Holden

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 D 21 '40 650w

"Besides being a colorful, keen reporter, the author writes with sensitivity and restrained humor and the result is very good reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 1200w

DAVIS, HAZEL. Personnel administration in three non-teaching services of the public schools. 323p $2.50 Teachers college

371.1 School administration and organization. Employment management 40-8595

"This book brings together from schools and public organizations an outline of principles of personnel administration to serve as a guide in developing the non-teaching staff of a school system. The extent to which these principles may be carried out in practice was observed in three non-teaching services—attendance, nursing, and secretarial work—in twelve city school systems." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Readers interested in research techniques in administration and in the possibility of improving them can use this study as a basis for analysis of the survey method of research. Readers more interested in getting help on nonteaching personnel problems can forget that this book reports a research project and can read profitably from chapter vi on to the end of the book. On the research side, the efforts are praiseworthy. . . On the side of its contribution to administrative theory, it ranks far above most studies of its kind. It is more penetrating than some, more analytical than others. It gives evidence of having been written by an investigator who understood well what she undertook to do." J. M. Hughes

+ El School J 40:791 Je '40 700w

Reviewed by P. T. Orata

School & Society 51:646 My 18 '40 190w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Buttonwood island; il. by Paul Brown. 299p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-30561

The Hardwicke children, Lyb and Sandy, discovered an uninhabited island near their Connecticut home, and after some bickering shared their find with their neighbor, Sig O'Hara. It was their idea to start a riding club there, using an old barn as a stable. There is a mild mystery, involving some Indian relics.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

"A good mystery, but it is of secondary importance to the horses which are the chief interest of the active children in this book." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:852 O 15 '40 20w

"Vigorous line drawings by Paul Brown. Recommended for ages ten to fourteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 60w

DAVIS, LAVINIA—Continued

"This is less sharply defined in theme and plot than 'Hobby Horse Hill,' but like that book it is full of everyday pleasures, animated by the spirit of serious play which few writers this side of the Atlantic have been able to catch in its intensity, and the children, realistically complex with the conflicting traits of individualities in the making are well characterized." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p12 S 22 '40 380w

"For refreshment after 'homework.'" Gladys Graham

Sat R of Lit 23:25 N 16 '40 40w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). We all go away; with il. by Dorothea Warren. 112p $1.50 Scribner

40-7100

The members of a group of children, ranging in age from six to about nine, are the heroes and heroines. At the beginning of the summer they rejoice over their various summer destinations. Then the chapters follow them one by one on their travels—to Maine by sleeper, to France by ship, to Chicago by airplane, and so on.

Booklist 36:368 My 15 '40

"Considering how children find such interest in actual travel that an older person going along wishes he could keep as much bounce, I think this book has more than one reason for being read aloud to six-year-olds. The pictures are constantly lively and lifelike, and there are plenty." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 My 5 '40 290w

"There are nine various travel experiences; and the children seem to be the ages they are said to be. Small children would be interested in hearing about them; and boys and girls up to eight and nine will enjoy reading the book themselves. It has lively illustrations by Dorothea Warren, but it is not primarily a picture book." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 130w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 30w

"The zest of the stories is reflected in Dorothea Warren's illustrations, which are completely convincing in the delineation of children at play or wide-eyed with interest and curiosity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '40 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 1 '40 120w

DAVIS, RALPH CURRIER. Industrial organization and management. 636p il $5 Harper

658.5 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 40-27069

"Published in 1928 as Principles of Factory Organization and Management [Book Review Digest, 1928] and now revised and supplemented by new material on industrial buildings, production control, labor relations, and other topics." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Am Econ R 30:164 Mr '40 50w

Reviewed by G. T. Schwenning

Am Econ R 30:874 D '40 380w

Booklist 36:287 Mr 15 '40

Management R 29:117 Mr '40 90w

DAVIS, RAYMOND EARL, and FOOTE, FRANCIS SEELEY. Surveying theory and practice. 3d ed 1032p il maps $5 McGraw

526.9 Surveying 40-13536

"The former edition [Book Review Digest, 1934] has been rearranged, largely rewritten and in some places condensed for students' use. There is a new chapter on Photogrammetric surveying by Captain B. B. Talley." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:71 O 15 '40

Eng N 125:77 D 19 '40 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:54 O '40

DAVIS, RICHARD BEALE. Francis Walker Gilmer: life and learning in Jefferson's Virginia. 408p $5 Dietz

B or 92 Gilmer, Francis Walker. Virginia—Intellectual life 40-370

"This scholarly biography resurrects from virtual oblivion the name of one whom Thomas Jefferson described as 'the best educated subject we have raised since the Revolution,' a man admired and beloved by John Randolph, of Roanoke, George Ticknor and other statesmen and savants of the early nineteenth century. Before tuberculosis carried him off at the age of thirty-five he had impressed himself, by virtue of his amazing learning and his captivating personality, upon some of the foremost figures of his generation." Books

"Mr. Davis has extracted from the Gilmer Papers much information which will be available in a convenient form to the cultural historians of the period, significant documents which otherwise would not be easily accessible, and his moderate and judicious conclusions are on the whole quite acceptable." Gilbert Chinard

+ — Am Hist R 46:426 Ja '41 700w

"Dr. Davis's fresh, workmanlike and stimulating biography is an important contribution to our knowledge of Gilmer and the period in which he passed his tragically brief life. In one or two instances the style is uneven, and the adjective 'brilliant' is seriously overworked. In general, however, this book is a most creditable performance, and throws an important light upon a hitherto neglected figure in our history." Virginius Dabney

+ Books p19 F 11 '40 400w

DAVIS, ROBERT HOBART. Let's go with Bob Davis [il. with phot. by the author]. 452p $3 Appleton-Century

910.4 Voyages and travels 40-8353

Anecdotes of travel in India, Ceylon, Venezuela, the Caribbean, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Yukon, Gaspé, Chesapeake bay. Index.

"Bob Davis is his genial and entertaining self always; and he finds something interesting to show his readers wherever he goes."

+ Books p17 My 12 '40 220w

"Bob Davis's new book is well and richly illustrated with the products of his ever-present camera, and it is written with all his ever-present liveliness and unaffected charm."

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 28 '40 400w

"The book is uneven in quality, but the best of it is very fine indeed." H. D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:21 My 18 '40 240w

DAVIS, SHELBY CULLOM. America faces the forties. 283p $2.75 Dorrance

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions 40-5615

"In this volume a liberal Republican businessman examines the decade of the thirties in order to throw light on the forties. After a survey chapter on the general events of the thirties, Mr. Davis devotes a chapter each to the farm problem, old age security, relief, our major stagnant industries (railroads, public utilities, and construction), the effects of the war, unionization, inflation, and taxation, concluding with a chapter on what is likely to occur in the forties." Am Econ R

"Mr. Davis writes lucidly and illustrates his point with appropriate stories; the factual material is straightforward and well balanced. The book contains all that one would expect an intelligent and well-read business-man to know about the problems discussed. But unfortunately it does not do much more than that." H. H. Villard

+ — Am Econ R 30:593 S '40 360w

Reviewed by O. R. Warford

Christian Century 57:451 Ap 3 '40 650w

"This book is worth reading. The author attempts to describe where the American economy has been and where it is going. Though written in a breezy, readable style for the average reader, the discussion is factual and often rather penetrating. There is in it much sound economic theory." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 154:16 Ap 1 '40 250w

DAVIS, WATSON. Science picture parade. 327p il $3 Duell

500 Science (W) 40-27690

Pictorial presentation of twenty different subjects. Each section is introduced by a short article, and the captions for the illustrations add information. Contents: Animals; Archaeology; Atoms; Aviation; Birds; Chemistry; Earth; Electricity; Health; Industry; Insects; Light; Mind; Plants; Radio; Stars; Transport; War; Weather; Future; Marching on. Index.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 110w

"The book is attractive, interesting, and informative."

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:908 O 25 '40 80w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 65:928 N 1 '40 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:53 O '40

"Sketchy writing, but the illustrations—over three hundred of them—are generally excellent."

+ — New Yorker 16:79 O 5 '40 30w

"Accompanied and preceded by his own running comment, the pictures are informative and accurate; some are really beautiful; all are engrossing. The combination results in a most attractive and useful volume for both youthful and adult readers."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 N '40 250w

DAVIS, WILLIAM ELLSWORTH. Ten years in the Congo. 301p $2.50 Reynal

916.75 Kongo, Belgian. Missions, Medical 40-27381

Description of the ten years spent in the Congo by an American medical missionary. Most of his time was spent at Lotumbe, or with that place as a center from which he plied the rivers or penetrated the jungles. In the last year at his station the doctor treated 65,000 patients. His chapters tell of his experiences of travel, diseases, industry and trade, Belgian Colonial administration, and other topics.

Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40

Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"A rare and vastly interesting book... This latest personal record from Africa is illuminating as well as readable." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p3 Ap 14 '40 450w

Reviewed by John Kirkland

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 460w

"Dr. Davis has an easy and flowing style that makes reading a pleasure. Without romanticizing his theme, he discloses a warm attachment, which he does not hesitate to call a romantic affection, for the jungle and its people."

+ Christian Century 57:386 Mr 20 '40 240w

New Repub 102:417 Mr 25 '40 60w

"Writing with sympathy of native ways and problems, with appreciation of the work of the Christian church and with gratifying praise for the attitude of the Belgian Government toward the people, Dr. Davis leaves us with the most poignant memories as he describes the Congo scene. He makes us see and feel the river and swamp and jungle and the twilight in the native villages when the men and women come home from forest and stream and garden plot. The descriptions are so truly evocative, indeed, that the book does not suffer from the lack of illustrations. But one wishes that it had a map."

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 24 '40 600w

New Yorker 16:88 Mr 23 '40 20w

"With the wealth of material at Dr. Davis's command, it's too bad that 'Ten Years in the Congo' is not a more interesting yarn. It is one of those I-shall-always-remember efforts, abounding with superlatives, I-suppose-thats, and I-wonder-ifs. Moreover, it is repetitious, and the author's involved sentences, plus the publishers' failure to include a map, make reading difficult. Add to all that a disconcerting variation in style and Dr. Davis's persistent use of initials to conceal the identity of the whites who flit in and out of his chronicle and the patience of the reader is sorely tried." Linton Wells

— + Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 22 '40 600w

"A truly remarkable book, that gives a rather detailed and an inclusive picture of that part of the Congo where Dr. Davis and his wife lived, taught, and practiced for ten years." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:1 Mr '40 1000w

DAVISON, ARCHIBALD THOMPSON. Choral conducting. 73p il $2 Harvard univ. press [8s 6d Oxford]

784.6 Conducting (music). Choral music 40-27315

"A conductor with long experience outlines the technique he has found successful in directing amateur chorus groups. Illustrated with diagrams of the conductor's gestures." Booklist

Booklist 36:322 Ap 15 '40

"Dr Davison is a pugnacious, if hearty, expounder, and he makes it quite clear that the directing of choral music is a two-fisted and masculine as well as highly exacting profession. His discussion is more concerned with technical methods designed to produce desired results than with musical interpretation." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 6 '40 1100w

DAVISON, EDWARD LEWIS. Collected poems, 1917-1939. 195p $2 Harper

821 40-27434

Collection of the poems of this English poet, selected from his books Harvest of Youth, and The Ninth Witch (Book Review Digest, 1926, 1932). To these has been added a new group of poems.

Booklist 36:362 My 15 '40

Reviewed by W. T. Scott

New Repub 103:90 Jl 15 '40 280w

"Altogether, the vista one gets is a rich one, from the youthful freshness of the early poems to the mature perfection of the later . . . These poems of Edward Davison's are the work of a sturdy talent. Their texture is completely transparent: they state their ideas and emotions without subterfuge. They are not for the doctrinaire, the abstract esthete or the escapist. But they will be read and enjoyed by that wide audience which loves straight poetry, direct or reflective, ironic or forthright, rising here, in many high points, to a solid and not ephemeral beauty." Axton Clark

+ N Y Times p3 My 26 '40 490w

"It is Mr. Davison's manner rather than his material which makes his verse seem dated. Perhaps it is the country's change in taste, the

DAVISON, E. L.—Continued
fiercer tempo, the exacerbated tension, rather than Mr. Davison's change of scene, which is to blame. Many of his lines are gracefully turned and skilfully balanced; most of them are intelligently restrained, cool without being frigid, sensitive without being precious. Perhaps it is not the poet's fault that they read like indefinite anachronisms." Louis Untermeyer
— + Sat R of Lit 22:16 Jl 6 '40 240w
Wis Lib Bul 36:135 O '40

DAVISON, IRENE, and others. Needlework and crafts. 340p il $2 Chemical pub. co. [3s 6d Newnes]
646.2 Needlework 40-26832

"Plain sewing, hand embroidery, dressmaking, and mending stitches and processes are described and pictured. There are also chapters on Basketry, Seagrass Work, Painting on Glass, and many other crafts." School Arts

J Home Econ 32:633 N '40

"This very comprehensive book will be a fine guide book for the student."
+ School Arts 40:11a O '40 50w

DAWES, CHARLES GATES. Journal, as ambassador to Great Britain; foreword by Herbert Hoover. 442p il $5 (25s) Macmillan
B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. 39-29442

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by Herbert Wright
Am Pol Sci R 34:1202 D '40 1150w
Reviewed by C. C. Tansill
Ann Am Acad 211:218 S '40 650w
Foreign Affairs 18:570 Ap '40 60w

"Colonel Dawes was not a great ambassador, but he was a friendly soul who liked his position and the people he met. His journal does not say an unkind or biting thing about anybody. . . As history the journal is not of much importance." A. P. W.
Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '40 500w
Reviewed by Paul Birdsall
Social Studies 31:184 Ap '40 420w

"This is a useful and an interesting book, and were it the work of an ordinary Ambassador it would be accepted with gratitude, but 'Hell and Maria' Dawes is an author's name that arouses more expectation of amusement than the book satisfies." D. W. Brogan
+ — Spec 164:369 Mr 15 '40 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 24 '40 850w

DAWSON, CAROLYN BYRD. The lady wept alone. 273p $2 Doubleday 40-7932

Detective story.

"Plenty of clews and questions and a clever solution in this pleasing item." Will Cuppy
+ Books p15 My 12 '40 200w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 60w

"The story has a good plot, but in the telling of it the author has employed the hop, skip and jump technique, which makes it a little difficult to hold the thread of the narrative." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p22 My 19 '40 170w

"Perfectly good reading, but stop me if you've heard this one."
New Yorker 16:96 My 25 '40 50w

"Neither better nor worse than others of the Rinehart-school of mystery—except that this has more humor than most. Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 My 11 '40 40w
Time 35:80 Je 3 '40 30w

DAWSON, MRS GRACE (STRICKLER). The butterfly shawl; il. by Loren Barton. 294p $2 Doubleday 40-9444

California during the days when the Mexicans were trying to lay claim to the territory is the scene of this story for girls in grades five to seven. Luisa Garcia, the young daughter of a Spanish ranch owner, had set her heart on a silk shawl from China, but when the ship came in the shawl was sold to someone else by mistake. Partly thru the medium of the shawl and its owner Luisa was able to solve the mystery surrounding her adopted brother, Marcos.

Booklist 36:414 Jl 1 '40

"A graceful tale, full of songs and dances and the gentle romances of Luisa's sisters, one who makes things happen when she's around, and the other who manages, in spite of not doing so, to get a serenader of her own." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 Je 30 '40 480w

"Long after details of the plot are forgotten, vivid impressions of life in Spanish California should remain." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:596 Jl '40 110w
Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 10w

"The author of 'The Nuggets of Singing Creek' has given life to a romantic period in a colorful story, and girls of 9 to 12 will sympathize with Luisa, to whom a China shawl was more important than changing dynasties, but not so important as friendship and graciousness." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p9 Je 9 '40 330w

DAY, ALBERT EDWARD. The faith we live. 256p $2 Cokesbury press
234.2 Faith. God. Christian life 40-9395

In these Fondren lectures for 1940, the author, pastor of the First Methodist church of Pasadena, California, discusses in terms of psychology and experience the availability of God in present-day human problems—health, money, personal relations, etc.

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr
Books p18 S 15 '40 80w

"Here is real help in making religion more real for the individual. Dr. Day has presented his own religious life in a clear and convincing way which should be of value to all who seek to make their religious experience more satisfying. . . It is a long journey from this back to the earlier Methodist religion of camp meeting and revival, for this book gives a personal religion which should belong to every church." H. J. Simpson
+ Churchman 154:18 Je 15 '40 100w

"This volume deserves wide reading by ministers and by laymen seeking to know the challenge and power of Christian faith. The book deals constantly with the practical as opposed to the theoretical aspects of faith. Not its least valuable parts are those pages in which the author suggests techniques for developing faith through spiritual exercises." G. W. Davis
+ Crozer Q 17:309 O '40 700w
J Religion 21:100 Ja '41 100w

DAY, ARTHUR GROVE. Coronado's quest; the discovery of the southwestern states. 418p il maps $2.50 Univ. of Calif.
973.16 Vazquez de Coronado, Francisco. Southwest—Discovery and exploration 40-28531

The first white explorer of the Southwest was the Spanish protégé of the Mexican viceroy, Mendoza, Francisco Vásquez de Coronado. Four hundred years ago he led a well-equipped band thru parts of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. His dreams of a country filled with gold proved groundless but he was the discoverer of the Grand Canyon and the Pueblo villages, and the pathfinder for later explorers. This account of the expedition is told for the layman. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

"A thorough and reliable account, popular in tone and very readable. The author, an engineer on the University of California faculty, became interested in Coronado while working in Sonora a score of years ago; he consulted all the known Spanish sources and retraced the greater part of his hero's march. It is likely that even scholars will glean new information from his book." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 4 '40 500w

"A book which achieves the rare distinction of being both readable and scholarly. . . Some may question him on a detail or two. Were the Indians whom Coronado saw in the Texas Panhandle Apaches, as he says, or one of the Plains tribes—perhaps Comanches? Were there really great accumulations of buffalo bones on the prairies before Buffalo Bill and his colleagues went there with their modern rifles? On the whole, however, the book will stand up as good history and good reading." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p1 D 29 '40 1250w

DAY, JOHN PERCIVAL. Introduction to world economic history since the Great war. 161p $1.15 (3s 6d) Macmillan

330.9 Economic conditions. European war, 1914-1918—Influence and results [40-6117]

Traces the history of the economic damage caused by the World war, and the progress towards recovery. "The story is told in terms of three post-War phenomena; dislocation, debt and distrust—dislocation of supply and demand through the vast shifts in both brought about between 1914 and 1918; debts arising from the War or frozen through those dislocations; and distrust of all existing economic and political institutions. It does not attempt to come completely up to date. Indeed, the narrative as narrative ends with the 'second devaluation' of 1937." (Spec)

"An outline of either economic history since the war or of the theory underlying that development seems a heavy task for such a short work. To attempt both is to achieve neither. . . Despite these flaws, the book is of value for the elementary student for whom it is obviously intended. It is well and simply written, terse, and to the point. The problems stand clearly delineated against their historical background. Even if its theoretical digressions raise more questions than they attempt to answer, it is at least a good introduction to a study of world economic history since the war." L. T. Morgan

+ — Am Econ R 30:369 Je '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 19:253 O '40 20w

"So brief a survey as is given in this volume is extremely difficult. The author has done it well even though a reviewer dissents on many points." E. M. Patterson

+ — Social Studies 31:237 My '40 310w

"A straightforward textbook, without frills of any kind, lucid, concise, and unpretentious; not even an outline, but an introduction." Honor Croome

+ Spec 163:752 N 24 '39 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p706 D 2 '39 70w

DAY, MRS LILLIAN (ABRAMS). Youngest profession. 277p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-30755

The youngest profession is being a movie fan. Jane, aged sixteen, and Barbara, her girl friend No. 1, lead their various masculine Heart Beats into embarrassing situations with their dogged pursuit of actors and actresses, in hopes of bagging autographs. They themselves have no qualms or scruples as to their methods. Jane's diary is the source of the story.

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

"Reminiscent of the 'Maudie' books by Graeme and Sarah Lorimer, this is a gay comment on the deadly teens, and it has an atmosphere of fresh, up-to-the-minute teen-age slang. It is so entertaining in so many ways that perhaps it is being unnecessarily solemn to point out that unlike the 'Maudie' stories this book is aimed exclusively at amusing the adult, and that sometimes an honest portrayal of the young is sacrificed to that end." Anne Brooks

+ — Books p12 S 22 '40 370w

"To one who is no longer 15 it is hard to say whether Jane's startling activities are typical of today's high school girls. At any rate, her progress from 15 to 16 makes a youthfully gay and funny story. And several movie stars (whose footsteps are dogged by nuisances like Jane) have found this book of inside dope on young movie fans both charming and entertaining." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p18 S 29 '40 260w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). The summer camp mystery [Eng title: Malice in Wonderland]. 267p $2 Harper [8s Collins]

(W) 40-30756

Detective story.

Booklist 37:138 D 1 '40

Bookmark 2:15 Ja '41

"There's no stark terror and no corpse, unless you count the deceased rabbit and the poisoned dog. There is, however, much puzzle ingenuity, character interest and diverting episode dealing with odd events at Wonderland, a British holiday camp annoyed by the pranks of somebody calling himself the Mad Hatter. . . Mild is the word." Will Cuppy

Books p16 S 8 '40 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 70w

"Nicholas Blake has the time of his life, ridiculing the bourgeoisie at play, but he scamps the detective side of his work shamelessly. One sentimental red herring and a German spy are supposed to fob us off from the solution. The susceptible mass-observer sent down to collect sociological data at the camp provides plenty of fun; and we must make do with that, since the author has come to despise detection as a serious medium." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:143 Ag 10 '40 130w

"C. Day Lewis was not giving his brain any vacation when he spun this entertaining web of crime and puzzlement and signed it 'Nicholas Blake'; and he kept a satiric wit in almost constant play. But it's a most enjoyable, baffling mystery tale, first and last." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p21 S 8 '40 250w

"Strangeway's highly intelligent sleuthing well displayed in hard-to-solve yarn of middle class Britishers on vacation. Odd."

Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 21 '40 40w

Reviewed by Rupert Hart-Davis

Spec 165:68 Jl 19 '40 50w

"While desiring not to betray secrets, a reviewer may still feel compelled to mention that Mr. Blake is not severely conscientious and seems to revel in false clues. All would have been well if he had not taken his detective seriously. He must share in the shame when Strangeways is considered an impostor."

Times [London] Lit Sup p329 Jl 6 '40 240w

DAYTON, NEIL AVON. New facts on mental disorders; study of 89,190 cases. 486p $4.50 Thomas, C.C.

616.8 Insanity. Mental hygiene 40-6035

"Believing that the average patient has become the forgotten man of psychiatry and that a sociological and administrative analysis of mental disorders as a mass situation is essential for a proper understanding of a problem which involves a half million hospitalized cases annually, the author of this book has attempted a quantitative description of the approximately ninety thousand patients admitted to the hospitals for the mentally diseased in Massachusetts from 1917-1933." Am Soc R

"Instead of seeking material on a set of problems from every possible source, the author mainly contented himself with exploiting the Massachusetts data. No general picture emerges, but some of the analysis bears on such questions as: How did war, prohibition, and depression affect the incidence of mental disorder? To what extent are there trends in diagnosis? Are mental disorders increasing? and the like. Answers to such general questions cannot be satisfactorily found in a sample as limited as is the Massachusetts sample. There is reference to other studies, but documentation is all but lacking, and there is no bibliography. Those who seek to know if mental disorders are increasing would profit more by reading the publications of Ellen Winston than by consulting this work." R. E. L. Faris

Am J Soc 46:629 Ja '41 360w

"The entire study bears the earmarks of careful planning, meticulous attention to detail, and accuracy in collecting and verifying the data. Moreover, the 110 graphs and 84 tables indicate an attempt to present the results in as readable a manner as possible. It is unfortunate that these efforts have been to a considerable degree nullified by inefficient and faulty methods of statistical analysis, coupled with an uncritical faith in the causal relationship of two time series which fluctuate in an approximately similar manner." H. F. Dorn

+ — Am Soc R 5:451 Je '40 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 F '40 320w

DEAK, FRANCIS, and JESSUP, PHILIP CARYL, eds. A collection of neutrality laws, regulations and treaties of various countries. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of int. law. Publications) 2v 782;783-1615p $10 Columbia univ. press

341.3 Neutrality. Treaties. War, Maritime (international law). International law and relations. Aeronautics, Military 39-34164

"In two massive volumes, the editors have assembled most of the laws, regulations and treaties relating to neutrality promulgated by the nations of the world between 1800 and October 1, 1938. . . In the effort to document the efforts of neutral nations to secure the rights and fulfill the obligations flowing from their neutral status, the authors have sensibly distinguished between two types of measure: that which is 'permanent,' being enacted not with a view to any particular war, but for the purpose of codifying the general policy to be followed whenever that nation assumed the status of neutrality, and that which is 'temporary,' being evoked by the outbreak of a particular conflict." (Harvard Law R) Indexed at end of volume two.

"The collection is complete and well organized, with excellent notes by the editors. It is obviously a 'must' item for students of international law." Llewellyn Pfankuchen

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:827 Ag '40 80w

Foreign Affairs 18:748 Jl '40 10w

Harvard Law R 53:1413 Je '40 340w

DEAN, ELIZABETH. Murder is a serious business. 301p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-34423

Detective story.

"This is a fast line of goods with which you'd better get acquainted right now. And don't worry if the plot doesn't hold water at each and every joint. Why should it?" Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 N 24 '40 300w

"It is difficult to say just how convincing this narrative might have been had it been presented in a manner more in keeping with its title." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 N 24 '40 160w

"Great deal of interesting dope on muffineers, 'flup' glasses, etc.; well tangled plot, cheerful conversation and keen deduction. Pleasant."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:46 D 7 '40 40w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE. Murder by marriage. 242p $2 Scribner

40-30528

Detective story.

"Highly readable." Will Cuppy

+ Books p23 S 29 '40 130w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 70w

"Although there is a real mystery with a surprise ending, the story's continuous appeal is that of fun. Cockeyed fun, but foot-loose and entertaining, with Tony Hunter backed up by those assistants of contrasting temperament, Griffith and MacGillicuddy, and plenty of alcohol and impudence always at flood tide." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p16 S 22 '40 180w

"Tip-off so simple, it's brilliant. The guy can pitch."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 O 5 '40 50w

DEAN, ROBERT GEORGE. Murder through the looking glass. 277p $2 Doubleday

40-5186

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p21 Mr 31 '40 140w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 80w

"The title of this book suggests a story of the Lewis Carroll type, but it isn't like that at all. It is not for such tender ears as those which drank in the adventures of Alice in Wonderland; but adult readers who are not too easily shocked—as few of them are in this free-spoken age—will find lively entertainment in its pages." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p19 Mr 31 '40 220w

"Nice, flinty stuff for readers who don't mind a newspaper background in their escapist literature."

New Yorker 16:76 Mr 30 '40 40w

Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 30 '40 30w

DEAN, SIDNEY WALTER. He fought for freedom; with il. by Manning deV. Lee. 284p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

B or 92 Allen, Ethan—Juvenile literature 40-33442

A story-life of Ethan Allen, hero of Ticonderoga, written for boys.

Booklist 37:177 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 5 '41 320w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 27 '40 90w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Library J 65:855 O 15 '40 80w

"Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:38 D 7 '40 10w

"The book offers a good narrative and an interesting portrayal of a valorous, if faulty, American, who has to be judged in the light of his times and his temperament."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 220w

DEANE, ANTHONY CHARLES. To an unseen audience; talks on the Bible. 192p $1.50 Longmans [3s 6d Hodder]

252 Radio sermons

"Popular radio talks on New Testament themes by Canon Deane of Windsor." Christian Century

Christian Century 57:610 My 8 '40 10w

"The book is an introductory primer to those who want to read their Bible with a bit more understanding. Parables, miracles, four epistles, Fourth Gospel, and the Canon are the subjects simply but intelligently dealt with." G. F. T.
+ Churchman 154:34 Jl 1 '40 70w

"The technique of the wireless 'talk' seems to be to produce a very direct, conversational simplicity, and though such a style may be poorly adapted to the demands of print, these talks on the Fourth Gospel, the Parables, the Miracles and some of the Epistles, which of their kind are excellent, should be useful to teachers who wish to prepare special courses of lessons."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p599 O 14 '39 60w

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE. A summer day with Ted and Nina [il. by the author]. [32p] 75c Doubleday
(W) 40-9445

Picture-story book for the pre-school child or beginning reader. It recounts the doings of Ted and Nina on a very hot day in the country.

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40

"The pictures are of real children at an age that need not be idealized to be sweet. Their doings for the day are those of a boy and girl to whom the world is new and its simplest possibilities for pleasure still at their disposal. The result is a dear little picture book for an unspoiled child, with a story on which to try a new power." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Je 16 '40 160w

"Recommended for libraries of all sizes, but more useful when reinforced." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 65:543 Je 15 '40 110w

"The type is large and the sentences short and there is a picture on every page. This is a welcome little book that will prove a pleasant incentive to beginners in reading." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '40 160w
Wis Lib Bul 36:170 D '40

DE ANGELI, MRS MARGUERITE. Thee, Hannah! [il. by the author]. [88]p $2 Doubleday
(W) 40-27724

The scene is Philadelphia, some time before the Civil war. Hannah, the youngest member of a large Quaker family, had a hankering after frills and pretty clothes, and her pursuit of them often called forth an admonitory, "Thee, Hannah!" On the night when her plain Quaker bonnet led her to help an escaping Negro slave Hannah learned at last the meaning of the Quaker garb.

Booklist 37:93 N 1 '40

"This is real Quaker, real Philadelphia history, with colored pictures as if painted on the page." M. L. Becker
+ Books p9 N 10 '40 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:31 Ja '41 140w

"Hannah and the other children are very real and, in addition to the lovely pictures that follow the story, the street cries of old Philadelphia are effectively introduced and illustrated at the beginning of each chapter." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin
Library J 65:1091 D 15 '40 80w

Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 20w

"A little Quaker girl in Philadelphia in the 1850's is a very appealing character and her home life is vividly depicted in this charming story. Gay paintings in color and black-and-white drawings enliven the picture." E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 40w

"This naughty little Friend is the most engaging of Mrs. de Angeli's heroines, certainly the most distinct as to personality, and her story portrays the gentle, affectionate life of a Quaker family and the background of old Philadelphia, all of which furnishes material for some of the author's best illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 19 '41 240w
New Yorker 16:127 D 7 '40 70w
Wis Lib Bul 36:171 D '40

DEARDEN, HAROLD. The wind of circumstance. 437p $3 Reynal [12s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27380

Autobiography of an English doctor in which he begins with his childhood in a well-to-do Lancashire home, and brings the account of his education, training and medical practice up to date. "Among the chapters are his stories of his patients, with their names altered, who came to him in the days when he was a successful medical practitioner in London. Much of his practice was in handling certain forms of mental trouble, and to him came an odd assortment of freakish characters, some rich, some charming, some faintly disgusting. Although never profound, his stories of these people are in the main thoroughly absorbing stuff." (Books)

Booklist 36:343 My 1 '40

"The English, for the most part, do this sort of thing with great skill. Most men, sitting down to tell all, would either be so reticent that no story would come out, or they would go right ahead and blurt out everything in a saturnalia of bad taste which would be downright painful. An Englishman like Mr. Dearden avoids with great skill either of these extremes. . . There is very little of nobility in this volume of reminiscence; on the other hand, there is very little that is out and out shoddy." Stanley Walker
+ Books p15 Ap 28 '40 850w

"The almost indiscreet oddments of medical experience have a certain charm; but the richness of personality is lacking." Lewis Gannett
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ap 27 '40 50w

"It is not only a book of sophistication and wry wit but the record of odd experiences deliberately sought and faithfully recorded before ever the writer became a doctor at all. . . He is always interested in every one, and his thought does not run in a groove. That is why he has written such a readable story of his own life."
+ N Y Times p5 My 26 '40 600w
New Yorker 16:91 Ap 27 '40 40w

"Even if you are pretty fed-up with doctor books it will be a mistake to miss this one—that is if you still respond to a good yarn. For it is a mere accident of time that the author of this autobiography is a medical man. In another century he might have been a roving minstrel, or a swashbuckling privateer." M. S. Ulrich

DEARDEN, HAROLD—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 22:13 Jl 6 '40 800w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 24 '40 600w

DE BLOIS, AUSTEN KENNEDY, and GORHAM, DONALD REX. Christian religious education: principles and practice. 385p $3 Revell

268 Religious education 39-25419

A survey textbook and reference work on the subject of Christian religious education. After two chapters on historical background, the book is devoted to aims, curriculum, leadership, methods, worship and other pertinent matters. At the ends of chapters there are bibliographies and lists of subjects for further study. Index.

"So much has been crammed into the discussion of 'Methods of Teaching' that the authors have been compelled to treat some of the subtopics too briefly. . . But it can be said with considerable assurance that all who are interested in religious education, including those with thought patterns decidedly different from those of the authors, will find in this book a wealth of valuable material." L. H. Chrisman

+ — Christian Century 57:114 Ja 24 '40 600w

"Although volumes on the subject of religious education are constantly appearing, there is ample room for this new one. It is a convenient and well-arranged handbook. . . The chapters on the philosophical and the psychological implications are excellent." C. H. B.

+ Churchman 154:34 Ap 1 '40 190w

"Dr. de Blois wrote the manuscript, and he always writes well. Dr. Gorham furnished most of the materials, I gather from introductory notes, and has done the task so thoroughly as to commend himself for industry and research ability." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 17:159 Ap '40 110w

DEBO, ANGIE. And still the waters run. 417p maps $4 Princeton univ. press

970.5 Indians of North America—Government relations

An account of the relationships between the United States government and the white settlers on the one hand and the five "civilized" Indian tribes of Indian Territory on the other. Promised the opportunity to develop their own civilization in peace "so long as the waters run," the Indians were, the author feels, cheated, despoiled and degraded by the whites. Bibliography. Index.

"The author is a scholar of honesty and courage, with a talent and skill, which many a literary man might envy. Her presentation is as authentic as her materials. Though the book contains a wealth of detail, it is not only readable but a solid contribution to the history of the region." Stanley Vestal

+ Books p3 Ja 5 '41 480w

Christian Century 57:1451 N 20 '40 140w

"The book is both important and moving, but the difficulty of summarizing accurately the impression it makes is increased by Oliver La Farge's irrelevant statement that it is 'a first-rate literary treatment of history.' Literary is one thing it is not, thank heaven; but Miss Debo has done a first-rate job of investigation and reporting, which is at the same time an implied, and pretty final, judgment of value from a historical point of view."

+ Nation 152:26 Ja 4 '41 120w

DE CAMPI, WILLELLA. Do it yourself; save money while decorating; il. by the author. 162p $1 Stokes

747 House decoration (W) 40-32271

Information on interior decorating based on answers to questions received from women with a limited budget, written to a popular newspaper. There are chapters on furnishing and decorating each room of the house, suggestions for color schemes, directions for making slip covers, etc. Minimum budgets are given for each room. Some of the material appeared in the New York Daily News.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40

Books p24 O 6 '40 200w

DEEPING, WARWICK. The man who went back. 382p $2.50 Knopf [9s Cassell]

40-30099

The hero-narrator, having been injured in a motor accident, dreams he is back in the Roman Britain of many centuries ago when German invaders once before threatened the civilization of the country.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p22 N 24 '40 200w

Cath World 152:505 Ja '41 200w

"The field of historical romance is not a new one for Warwick Deeping. . . Nor is it new for him to use his stories of contemporary life as a medium for general opinion. . . In 'The Man Who Went Back,' he has effected a remarkable merger of his two kinds of novels. A cloak-and-sword drama this certainly is. Yet it is also a novel of contemporary opinion. . . The device itself, this reckless tinkering with the time machine, is not particularly new. But Mr. Deeping's application of it here is sufficiently daring to arouse the reader's curiosity." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p24 N 17 '40 700w

"The author means to show that England's spirit in the tragic days of the present has much in common with that of the Roman period in which he lives for some weeks while his maimed body is healing. The parallel need not be scrutinized too keenly for historical significances. 'The Man Who Went Back' makes its way by the portrayal of action and emotion, but the author's device, which is not wholly new, gives the work a stronger quality than has been found in Mr Deeping's recent romances."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 17, '40 500w

"Mr. Deeping has sketched an attractive picture of life in Roman Britain and is at his best in drawing comparisons between ancient and modern topography. Though his book inclines to be a tract for the times and the interpolated moralizings on occasion give his characters some faint flavour of an advertisement for Sanatogen, his command of detail and his skill as a story-teller triumph over these dangers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p440 S 7 '40 350w

DEEPING, WARWICK. The red saint. 363p $2 McBride [3s 6d Cassell]

40-34190

"England during the days of the Baron's War is the setting for this romantic novel of Denise of the golden red hair, 'Half hermitess, half saint,' and Aymery, gallant lord of the manor." Publisher's note

"It's all very vigorous and ruddy narrative, untainted by today's ideology." Lisle Bell

Books p23 Mr 3 '40 250w

"Mr. Deeping rolls his story through popular grooves with his usual ease. . . The result is entertaining but superficial. Characters of two dimensions against a thin backdrop of distorted perspective are not likely to be particularly memorable." Regina Madden

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 50w

"It is for those who like the high-flown language and violent action of an old-fashioned romance." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '40 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 100w

DEEPING, WARWICK. The shield of love. 340p $2 McBride

Romantic tale of England in the days of Richard II. Fulk Ferrers, forrester to John of Gaunt, and a double for the young king; a scheming friar, who was inciting the peasants to revolt; and Isoult of the Rose, a proud, mysterious beauty, are among the characters.

"If you are looking for an escapist item, not even remotely suggesting your contemporary problems, 'The Shield of Love' is recommended." Lisle Bell

Books p17 S 22 '40 140w

Reviewed by M. P. Johnson

Boston Transcript p1 S 28 '40 100w

"The story has plenty of action and plot and a goodly number of hot fights. . . The style is definitely in the florid vein of medieval story telling. The book is absolutely free of any tinge of social implication, the author's object obviously being simply to entertain. And he succeeds moderately well." B. S.

+ — N Y Times p17 S 15 '40 250w

DEFERRARI, ROY JOSEPH, ed. See Catholic university of America. Vital problems of Catholic education

DE FORD, MIRIAM ALLEN. Who was when? a dictionary of contemporaries. [162p] $4.75 Wilson, H.W.

902 Chronology, Biographical (W) 40-11691

Chronological charts arranged to show the contemporaries of 8,825 celebrated persons from 500 B.C. to 1938. The pages are divided horizontally by years and vertically by types of activity. No living persons are included. Fully indexed.

Booklist 37:11 S '40

"In their clear, chartlike tables these broad pages present the facts and degrees of contemporaneousness among eminent individuals both of similar and of completely different activities. The information they supply is handy for reference, and may sometimes have a picturesque as well as informative interest for the general. And certainly the compiler has worked out a novel scheme. . . The book is a collection of useful guideposts to past time."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 30 '40 320w

DEGEN, MARIE LOUISE. History of the Woman's peace party. 266p $2.75; pa $2.50 Johns Hopkins

172.4 Woman's peace party 40-5486

"[The author] presents a scholarly study of the struggle of women to attain world peace, principally through the medium of the Woman's Peace Party. Both chronological and analytical in its approach, the study presents a sympathetic treatment of the efforts of women such as Jane Addams, Carrie Chapman Catt, Rosika Schwimmer, and others, to influence governments as well as public opinion toward peace. The period covered extends from 1914 to 1919." Am Pol Sci R

"Miss Degen has used the published reminiscences of statesmen, the records of congressional hearings, and the periodical and newspaper press. Her thoroughly documented work is not, perhaps, as vivid and dramatic as some of the materials might warrant, but it is judicious in tone and a valuable contribution to the history of the peace movement. The concluding pages contain some provocative reflections on the relation of the pacifist struggle in the first World War to the continuing conflict between the desire for peace and freedom." Merle Curti

+ — Am Hist R 45:977 Jl '40 250w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Weber

Am Pol Sci R 34:378 Ap '40 330w

"A sound, informative study."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 70w

Christian Century 56:1475 N 29 '39 140w

DE GOUY, LOUIS PULLIG. Soda fountain and luncheonette drinks and recipes. 244p $2 Dahls

641.5 Cookery for institutions, etc. Beverages 40-27316

Some six hundred recipes for food and beverages sold at soda fountains and luncheonettes. Contains tables, a bibliography, a short cost table, and index.

Booklist 36:320 Ap 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:331 My '40 30w

DE HAAS, ELSA. Antiquities of bail; origin and historical development in criminal cases to the year 1275. 174p il $2.25 Columbia univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

343 Bail. Criminal procedure 40-7934

"The first intensive study of the writs involving release on bail up to the time when the first statute governing this practice was passed in 1275 at the instance of England's great lawgiver, Edward I, who clarified the bail situation by means of several great statutes. Prepared with the assistance of Professor Julius Goebel, Jr., of the Columbia Law School, who guided the course of the research, Miss de Haas' study involves a consideration of: (1) 'The Anglo-Saxon and Norman Periods: Theories of the Origin of Bail'; (2) 'Bail and Frankpledge System'; (3) [and (4)] 'Writs Governing Release. . . The administrative machinery through which bail operated is described in the course of the study of the theories of bail origin, and when extant records make it possible, an attempt is made to set forth the procedural details governing bail practice." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"Miss de Haas has assembled literally thousands of entries from the various rolls to support her conclusions. Her research closely resembles the scientific in the amount of data collected and in the sound case method she uses. A refined objectivity marks her findings, which supplant the insubstantial generalizations of earlier historians. Although the text is kept free from repetitious detail by elaborate footnoting, a simple chronological structure would have made her analysis easier to follow. Closer attention to dates, paragraph sequence, and the meaning of words would have focused her points more clearly. Nowhere is bail precisely defined for any given point in time." W. H. Dunham, Jr.

+ — Am Hist R 46:382 Ja '41 750w

Reviewed by F. R. Aumann

Am Pol Sci R 34:602 Je '40 500w

"This study is one which will obviously make its greatest appeal to legal specialists: but it is well worth examination by historians. They would be able to appreciate it more keenly if its technicalities were explained in an easier English style."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Ag 10 '40 280w

DEHON, THEODORA. Heroic dust. 395p $2.50 Macmillan

Frotte, Louis de—Fiction 40-2121

Historical novel of the Catholic-Royalist uprising against the French revolution, known as the Chouan revolt. The story opens in Normandy in 1792.

DEHON, THEODORA—Continued

"A tale of gallant men and women, but also a record of an important historical movement set down with a grace and earnestness that impart the real flavor of bygone days, 'Heroic Dust' makes delightful and engrossing reading." Elisabeth Abbott

+ Books p10 Ja 14 '40 340w

"Intimate affection for the Norman countryside and its peasants give her muted yet heroic tale a color and flavor quite her own. In this, rather than in violent action or profound character developments, Mlle. Dehon is distinguished." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 400w

Cath World 151:255 My '40 60w

Christian Century 57:82 Ja 17 '40 90w

"Should be considered as an attempt to call attention to forgotten bravery, rather than as a novel." J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 31:247 Ja 5 '40 240w

"Some stirring details of guerilla warfare tucked away under a stilted, brocaded style."

New Repub 102:158 Ja 29 '40 40w

"The story itself needs little aid from fiction to make it almost wildly romantic. And it receives little aid from fiction here. Even the romantic young hero and heroine of 'Heroic Dust' were real people, whose story is told as it has been handed down by their descendants through the generations from then to now. The aristocratic old town of Verneuil . . . is drawn with a careful hand. And the lovely Norman country, of farmland and orchard and forest, has its own right part in the tale." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 14 '40 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 21 '40 320w

DEJONG, DAVID CORNEL. Light sons and dark. 329p $2.50 Harper

40-32364

A story of an American family living on a nearly worthless farm in the Middlewest. The father, a weak ne'er-do-well, favors his dark sons, the twins, Bruce and Marius, and the rum-runner Sutton. The mother favors the light sons; Ben, wounded in the World war, a confirmed drunkard, and Joel, the only one with stamina enough to try to get out of the morass. Ben and Joel would save each other, but in the end Ben finds the only way out.

"This novel has upon it the mark of true skill and comprehension. Out of the heart of the land we live in, Mr. DeJong has built a story of the challenge of today's American life: its capacity for hatred and for love, for hope and for despair." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p7 O 20 '40 550w

"The portrayal of characters is weak and the book as a whole lacks unity." R. D. Minnich

— Library J 65:762 S 15 '40 130w

New Repub 103:702 N 18 '40 50w

"A novel of hard realism and spiritual intensity. Here are the weak, the evil, the wretched, the struggling; and strength in weakness, purity in earthiness, victory in defeat." K. W.

+ N Y Times p7 O 20 '40 550w

"A doleful story by a clever and powerful writer."

+ New Yorker 16:102 O 12 '40 70w

"DeJong is a realist as well as a lover of beauty, and he is without illusions; but since fortunately he is disillusioned about evil as well as about goodness, the novel has no trace of cheap cynicism. For all the pain in this tense family story, it is strangely moving and cleansing." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:15 D 21 '40 410w

DE KRUIF, PAUL HENRY. Health is wealth. 246p $2 Harcourt

614 Medical service. Public health

(W) 40-27512

"Asserting that the greater part of our people are 'less than half-alive' and that preventive medicine is cheaper than care of the sick, the author of 'Microbe Hunters' proposes a decentralized national health program to be administered by the United States Public Health Service. Expanded from magazine articles." (New Yorker) Index.

"The contents of this book have been published over 5 years in the Country Gentleman and a number of the chapters are substantially as they appeared in that journal. It is virile, entertaining, and contains much food for thought. The author is a propagandist and the book abounds in laudatory adjectives." M. P. Ravenel

Am J Pub Health 30:1122 S '40 550w

Booklist 36:395 Je 15 '40

"Paul De Kruif has rendered splendid service in the past ('Microbe Hunters,' 'Hunger Fighters' and 'Men Against Death') in popularizing medical science. These earlier works have been notable for the conscientious care which the author has taken to document his laboratory facts. The present volume is full of the same effective emotional appeal which these earlier works have exemplified. Unfortunately, however, the author in entering the field of medical economics and social organization has not familiarized himself with the basic facts as he did in his treatment of laboratory science." C.-E. A. Winslow

— + Books p9 Je 30 '40 1050w

"Whether or not one agrees with all of the author's contentions, some of which border on the Utopian, there is no denying that the subject is of immediate and vital importance to all. . . In this volume the subject is well presented in a pleasingly conversational style which merits a favorable and widespread reception by the public." E. B. Benedict, M.D.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 420w

Christian Century 57:826 Je 26 '40 60w

Reviewed by E. W. Mandeville

Churchman 154:20 S 1 '40 120w

Reviewed by E. M. Matser, M.D.

Current Hist & Forum 51:7 Jl '40 550w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham

Library J 65:541 Je 15 '40 150w

"The reviewer is not competent to examine critically the specific merits and defects of de Kruif's program. His honesty, his lack of bitterness, his sensible attitude toward the sensitiveness of the medical profession commend the book to readers interested in the problem. On the negative side de Kruif at times overrates certain new ideas; conservative physicians know of the disappointment which such strong indorsement is bound to produce. Also he dismisses health insurance a little too abruptly, ignoring the possibility that it has some preventive value. . . In spite of these things, however, the book is valuable because it gives further ventilation to an important social and scientific problem which deserves the thoughtful attention of every American at a time when the welfare of our nation must be supported from within as well as from without." Karl Menninger

+ — Nation 150:758 Je 22 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p4 Je 9 '40 1400w

New Yorker 16:80 Je 8 '40 50w

"All in all this is a book of arresting facts marshalled in militant words. That it can still have a pull in these days when human life seems at its cheapest, is proof of its sincerity and vitality." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 22:7 Je 8 '40 650w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 Jl '40 380w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 750w

Reviewed by M. M. Davis

Survey G 29:519 O '40 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:123 Jl '40

DELAFIELD, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M.

DE KRUIF (dē krīf')

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN, ed. Animal stories. 420p il $2.50 Scribner [8s 6d Faber] Animals, Legends and stories of
(W) 40-27317

Some fifty animal stories "chosen, arranged, and in some part rewritten," by Mr De La Mare. The tales, ballads and rhymes from many nations are many of them old; others are of more recent vintage. Illustrated with woodcuts.

Booklist 36:330 Ap 15 '40

"Librarians of children's rooms, whom Walter De La Mare has never failed, need no more news of this book than the name of the editor. But there are parents beginning to build a permanent library for their children, and looking for a cornerstone volume, who should be told this is the book." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 7 '40 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 My 27 '40 270w

"Some of the stories are re-written, in others Mr. de la Mare has smoothed out rough places and given them his own particular touch. It is equivalent to reading the story with him. The introduction merits a review by itself. The illustrations are really decorations selected by him from the woodcuts of an old 'Beaste' book of the seventeenth century. They should be taken for what they are rather than as interpretations of the stories." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:101 Mr '40 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:166 My '40 160w

"Having recently read a review in which the book was designated as a 'luxury' for a school or public library, I wish to place it among present-day necessities for those who are seeking to explore the world of books with the children and youth of the country." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:174 My '40 110w

"The long introduction tracing the history and describing the characteristics of folk literature is of particular interest to teachers and students of children's books. Ownership of such a delightful anthology would be a desirable luxury but no necessity for either the school or public library." Miriam Snow
+ Library J 65:303 Ap 1 '40 100w

"A splendid interpretation of folk lore in all its varied phases, and not only that but it reveals the human heart and imagination to which the folk tale speaks. It is a rich book indeed which gives us not only these pages of Walter de la Mare's thought but these stories which he has loved from childhood on, and here retells." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 60w

"Mr. de la Mare writes an essay on animals in imaginative fiction that adds real value to his collection." Evelyn Sharp
+ Manchester Guardian sup x D 1 '39 200w

Reviewed by H. E. Bates
New Statesman & Nation 18:844 D 9 '39 80w

"Here is a book of enchantment for all lovers of fairy tales, young and old. Like all of Mr. de la Mare's anthologies it has a fine, satisfying quality which comes from the fact that the compiler himself has found deep enjoyment in the tales and poems he has selected and now shares with others. . . This is a book that will enrich a child's experience, stimulate his imagination and provide lasting joy." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 24 '40 550w

"A book for every home library." K. S. W.
+ New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 50w

DE LA PASTURE, EDMEE ELIZABETH MONICA (MRS A. P. DASHWOOD) (E. M. DELAFIELD, pseud). The provincial lady in wartime; il. by Leslie Gilbert Illingworth. 349p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Macmillan]
(W) 40-27382

The Provincial Lady commences her war diary in Devonshire, relating the ups and downs of her attempts to accomplish blackouts, entertain Aunt Blanche from London, keep up with conflicting reports on her quota of "little evacuments," etc. The remainder of the three months is spent in London, where she goes to apply for work, and after considerable delay is taken into the Ministry of Information.

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40
Bookmark p12 My '40

"There is something universal about the Provincial Lady's problems and her feelings. We may not know about 'marrow jam,' or worry over 'having the Sweep,' but Robert, Cook and Lady B. have their counterparts in every American family. We know them well, though with a different accent. This is a good and cheerful account of a not very cheerful scene." Rosemary Benét
+ Books p2 Ap 7 '40 800w

Reviewed by Dorothy Greenwald
— Boston Transcript p1 Ap 13 '40 260w

"Miss Delafield is sprightly always, witty occasionally, and boring not too often. Yet the chatter of the Provincial Lady varies little; it clings to the same key, the identical emphasis. And it is just barely possible that we are becoming weary of listening while the Provincial Lady enlightens us." M. W.
Christian Science Monitor p10 My 11 '40 330w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"There is fully as much literary and social importance in such a book as this as in any number of pretentious and crudely executed special pleas, hailed by ignorant critics as 'social documents.' " J. G. E. Hopkins
+ Commonweal 32:44 My 3 '40 320w

Reviewed by A. R. Eaton
Library J 65:300 Ap 1 '40 200w

Reviewed by Marjorie McFarland
Living Age 358:491 Jl '40 320w

"The whole inconsequent story is very well told. Most of us have not yet been able to see this war in any aspect which suggests that it is something to laugh at, and Miss Delafield is wise in concentrating exclusively on its surface details. . . With its view of the first reactions to war and its rumours from 'someone who knows a man in the War Office' it already has a suggestion of the costume piece. The illustrations, by Illingworth, are excellent." M. A. L.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 5 '40 250w
New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 60w

"E. M. Delafield's claim to a high place in the delectable company of wits and originals using the English language as writers, from Chaucer to our own day and in both England and America, is never more evident than when she is dealing with her own country people on their own soil. She knows them from A to Z. . . Miss Delafield has never done anything more remarkable than [her] picture of a hastily devised subterranean world, blaring with noise and swarming with people of all ages and both sexes in every variety of uniform and pseudo uniform, many of them on twenty-four hours a day duty, sleeping 'in' or, rather, 'under,' and with nothing to do but attend practice raids—and wait." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 7 '40 1200w

"If you already know the Provincial Lady, you will be glad to see her Standing By, along with thousands of other Britishers, in a nation at war. If you don't know her, this is as good a time as any to make her acquaintance. In this chapter of her diary of what pretends to be an uneventful life, she is often amusing, sometimes sharp, often sly, occasionally cute."
+ New Yorker 16:90 Ap 6 '40 70w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts
Sat R of Lit 21:8 Ap 6 '40 700w

"The great thing about the Provincial Lady is that nothing can get her down: she thrives on inconveniences, records the rebuffs administered by officialdom with exactly the same gaiety that she gives to descriptions of the antics of the most eccentric of her colleagues, and when she is finally informed that her services, in a more suitable capacity, may after all be required, professes herself as much staggered as pleased. Her latest book, the lightest of reading, is perfect literature for anyone who wants merely to be diverted—pluperfect perhaps for brains temporarily weakened by the ravages of influenza."

DE LA PASTURE, E. E. M.—Continued

+ Spec 164:296 Mr 1 '40 240w

Time 35:104 Ap 15 '40 70w

"War-time has not quenched or dimmed or in any way diminished the provincial lady. She is, in fact, in very good form in this diary. . . It is lightly observant, witty and often pleasantly malicious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 10 '40 450w

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO. Whiteoak heritage. (Atlantic monthly press bk) Whiteoak ed 325p $2.50 Little

(W) 40-13042

Chronologically this volume in the Jalna saga begins in 1919, just as Renny returns from the War, and covers the time between the two books Young Renny and Jalna.

Booklist 27:12 S '40

Bookmark 2:12 Ja '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ag 25 '40 550w

"There is a stability about the Whiteoaks which is really something sound to tie to in an uncertain fictional world. They will never let you in, for their self-sufficiency is complete. Yet we for one are perfectly willing to sit on the side-lines, waiting to applaud whenever a Jalna book steps out." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '40 500w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey
Canadian Forum 20:290 D '40 200w

"The beginning and the end of 'Whiteoak Heritage' are up to 'Jalna' pitch, and a few intervening chapters are excellent units, for instance the charming tragi-comedy of Finch and his white rat. Characterization in the case of the Whiteoaks is adequate for readers who are already fully acquainted with them, but in the case of the newcomer, Mrs. Stroud, fails to secure full credence." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 S 7 '40 700w

Churchman 154:35 O 1 '40 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"Those who are familiar with the Whiteoak chronicles will eagerly welcome this addition; but it is not the best book with which to make a beginning. 'Young Renny' should be read first." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p7 N 8 '40 230w

"The most appealing part of the book, despite its rather too emphasized pathos, is the pen-picture of the lonely, unwanted child Pheasant. The novel is well written, and some of the descriptions have a good deal of charm. . . To many readers Jalna has become a kind of second home, and the Whiteoaks dear and valued friends, whose doings are a perennial interest. All these, and no doubt some others as well, will warmly welcome this new account of 'Whiteoak Heritage.'" L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 25 '40 750w

New Yorker 16:65 Ag 24 '40 40w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 165:486 N 8 '40 210w

"Devoted readers of the Whiteoak saga will find the element of suspense lacking, since from later volumes they already know the fate of many of the actors; but they will find the story otherwise worthy to take its place with the rest of the series."

Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 9 '40 320w

DE LA ROCHE, MAZO (mā′zō dê lȧ rōsh′)

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Dina and Betsy; il. by Cateau De Leeuw. 138p $1 Macmillan

Children in the Netherlands (W) 40-32774

The life on the Dutch island of Walcheren forms the background of this tale for young readers. At intervals thruout the book are stories of the heroic past of Holland, worked in naturally as part of the story of the two sisters, Dina aged nine, and Betsy aged five. Glossary.

Booklist 37:221 Ja 15 '41

"The little tales are all brief, and all mean much. At the back is a pronunciation list for every Dutch word used, in order of appearance. The story has information that enlarges a child's world, but it is first a story that moves cheerfully and takes a little reader with it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 20 '40 220w

"Pleasant enough and undoubtedly authentic, it is somehow lacking in sparkle and atmosphere. As a picture of modern Holland to follow the Dutch Twins, it will be useful for schools and in large collections for children from eight to ten. With good type and generously illustrated with pen and ink and crayon drawings by Cateau DeLeeuw, it is exceptionally well made and reasonably priced." J. L. Sauer

+ — Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 120w

"Authentic details and charming illustrations make this a valuable book about these picturesque people." Z. C. Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 140w

DELMONTE, JACK. Plastics in engineering. 616p il $7.50 Penton

668 Plastic materials. Machinery—Design 40-9947

"A comprehensive semi-technical treatment for the engineering designer, manufacturer, and others interested." (Cleveland Open Shelf) "Information contained in some of the chapters has appeared wholly or in part in articles prepared by the author which have appeared in Machine Design during the past year or two." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

"Mr. Delmonte has sought to discuss all but the production of the resins. In fact, he has even gone outside of the generally accepted boundary of the industry and included a chapter on synthetic rubbers. While the omission of the resin manufacturing procedure detracts from its value to chemical engineers nevertheless it contains other worthwhile information. Furthermore, the very fact that it is a new book in a field that is changing at a rate that makes obsolete a publication of a year or two ago, recommends it to any one interested in plastics." J. A. Lee

+ — Chem & Met Eng 47:443 Je '40 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:52 O '40

DEL VAYO, JULIO ALVAREZ. See Alvarez del Vayo, J.

DE MADARIAGA, SALVADOR. See Madariaga, S. de

DEMAISON, ANDRE. The new Noah's ark; tr. by Eric Sutton. 294p il $2.50 Macmillan

40-13934

"Andre Demaison, well known in France as a writer of books about wild animals, had many years of experience in Africa as a French government official, big-game hunter and collector of specimens for European zoos, which gave him the background for this book. In this tale the hero charters an old schooner and goes adventuring along the coast of Africa in search of rare beasts. His finds include a pair of beguiling chimpanzees, a baby hippo, a water buffalo, and a panther, as well as other odd guests for his Ark." Springf'd Republican

---

"The story is informed with sympathy, insight and humor as with natural observation, and an apparently effortless charm is part of its wholly individual quality." John Patton
+ Books p2 Jl 28 '40 700w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 13 '40 850w
Christian Century 57:926 Jl 24 '40 60w

"It is not only an informal and sympathetic survey of a cross-section of the animal kingdom by a man who is a keen observer and something of a philosopher but a book of distinctively literary charm." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 21 '40 480w

"Intelligent and charming travel adventure."
+ New Yorker 16:67 Jl 13 '40 30w

"The author is a sentimentalist, in his appreciation of animals and also in his understanding of the tropical continent that was the setting for his adventures. But he lacks the compensating grace of humor, the saving discipline of science, or the original vision that makes sentiment digestible. After all, this edge of Africa that he describes is, to the reader, the Africa of Saint Exupéry, of Anne Lindbergh, or Conrad's Marlowe, a land transfigured repeatedly by the finest literary imaginations of our times. The Romance à l'Africain which M. Demaison now serves up is commonplace by comparison, as though made from standard recipes. . . Mr. Eric Sutton's translation from the French is smooth throughout, and is accompanied by attractive pen-and-ink sketches at the chapter-heads." L. J. H., Jr.
— + Sat R of Lit 22:20 Ag 24 '40 490w
Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 21 '40 100w
Time 36:80 Jl 22 '40 450w

DE MEYER, JOHN (DANA BREED, pseud). F. D. R. and the Patriot's club. 101p $1.25 Washburn

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 40-9342

Political fantasy in which President Franklin Roosevelt is presented as a candidate for admission into a club composed of the great men of the nation. In the ensuing discussion the policies of the administration since 1933 are brought out and scrutinized by a committee of American presidents and heroes.

"The examination is free from brilliance on both sides, and the show is far from exciting."
Books p16 My 26 '40 100w

"The dialog is well and earnestly written, but the scheme seems somewhat labored."
Springf'd Republican p7e S 15 '40 180w

DEMPSEY, JACK. Round by round; written in collaboration with Myron M. Stearns. (Whittlesey house sports ser) 285p il $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Boxing (W) 40-30806

Autobiography of a former heavyweight champion. In his word of Appreciation, Myron M. Stearns explains, "the story is not complete. No autobiography—no biography even—ever is, or can be. Because it tells of a heavyweight champion of the world, it is confined largely to those angles and episodes that have a direct bearing on fights and fighting, without attempting to cover comprehensively the life."

Booklist 37:114 N 15 '40

"Myron Stearns, who 'collaborated' in the writing of this book, missed, to my mind, the fire back of this success story to end all success stories. It's well written, in a manner to be devoted to a mighty politician or a bishop, but surely not in the style for the bruising, mauling, rollicking and moneyed Dempsey. And the tale the book tells is thorough, even though it leaves out a lot of the stories of chicanery and good clean fun through which Dempsey and Jack Kearns, his manager, wallowed in their days, when no less than $5,000,000 passed through their outstretched hands." Caswell Adams
Books p20 S 29 '40 470w

"The writing is hack stuff, but it suits the theme to perfection. The book should have a good sale."
Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '40 110w

"An absence of boastfulness is conspicuous throughout the book, and the ex-champion is sparing in his use of alibis for his defeat. And it is doubtful if those who went down before him could find any fault with the spirit in which the narrative has been written." E. F. A.
N Y Times p5 O 13 '40 250w

DEMPSEY, MARTIN. John Baptist de La Salle; his life and his institute. (Science and culture ser) 255p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

B or 92 La Salle, Jean Baptiste de, Saint. Brothers of the Christian schools 40-13349

"De La Salle was a man who, realizing the part that education plays in the molding of character, gave himself in the latter part of the seventeenth century to the task of educating the children of the poor without expense to their parents. . . With due attention to historical background, the author makes plain the difficult conditions under which the Brothers of the Christian Schools had to labor; he speaks frankly of the opposition that came from clergy and laity; and he leads the reader skillfully to the climax, the moment when De La Salle's Institute was officially recognized by the French government and commissioned to train children in charity schools throughout the kingdom. . . Father Dempsey concludes his intelligent exposition of a very significant chapter of educational history with a survey of the Institute throughout the world in the present century." Cath World

---

"Educators will find in the present volume a clear and instructive account of the pedagogical methods of the Christian Brothers and their valuable contributions to the art and science of education. Father Dempsey merits the thanks of Catholic educators, as well as of all lovers of good biography." D. M. O'Connell
+ America 64:79 O 26 '40 350w

"A well made study of an educational pioneer."
+ Cath World 152:250 N '40 270w

DENNIS, LAWRENCE. The dynamics of war and revolution. 259p $3 priv ptd Weekly foreign letter, 205 E. 42d st, N.Y.

321.092 War. Revolutions. World politics. Socialism. Democracy 40-14827

"Lawrence Dennis, who within 10 years has written 'Is Capitalism Doomed?' and 'The Coming American Fascism' . . . presents the argument that capitalistic expansion has come to an end in the United States and that the future has little to offer but a series of wars and intervals of government spending for social welfare." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Reviewed by Pendleton Herring
Ann Am Acad 213:197 Ja '41 550w
Cath World 152:253 N '40 240w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 19 '40 750w

Reviewed by Michael Williams
Commonweal 32:428 S 13 '40 1250w

Reviewed by Michael Williams
Commonweal 32:488 O 4 '40 1150w
(Continuation of 1st review)

Reviewed by C. R. Walker
New Repub 103:728 N 25 '40 1400w

DENNIS, LAWRENCE—Continued

"Mr Dennis has a certain fertility of ideas and the courage of his convictions—or his paradoxes. His ultimate position seems to be that of an aristocratic, or authoritarian, socialism." E. N. Jenckes

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 3 '40 1200w

"Mr. Dennis's book is interesting, if not convincing, as a calculated propaganda to persuade America that national socialism is inevitable here, whether we accept it reasonably or fall into it through a losing war for democracy. . . This curious book is worth reading for its frank statement of the case that it is folly to frustrate the strong." Leon Whipple

Survey G 29:517 O '40 330w

DENNIS, WAYNE. The Hopi child. 204p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

970.3 Hopi Indians. Indians of North America—Children 40-7516

An account of child life in a primitive tribe of Southwest Indians, based on intensive study carried on while the author and his family lived in a native village in the summers of 1937 and 1938. The book is in two parts: The world of the Hopi child, and The behavior of the Hopi child. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Margaret Mead

Am Anthropol 43:95 Ja '41 1250w

"This book is one of the most important studies of children in a non-European society which has appeared to date. It represents a highly successful blending of ethnological and psychological techniques. The author is a trained child psychologist but he is also fully aware of the importance of cultural factors in individual behavior." Ralph Linton

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 320w

Christian Century 57:582 My 1 '40 60w

"This psychological study of child rearing and child behavior in the Hopi pueblos seems rather pedestrian and not so penetrating as one could wish. . . Still, the book undoubtedly has some value." Alden Stevens

— + Survey 77:29 Ja '41 70w

DENNISON, STANLEY RAYMOND. The location of industry and the depressed areas. 223p $3.50 (10s) Oxford

658.21 Industries, Location of [40-12510]

"It is the purpose of this little book to offer techniques for the study of the problems of location of industries, with particular attention to certain industrially 'depressed areas' in Great Britain. . . The 'depressed areas' are examined in terms of industrial location in part 2 of the book. The 'drift to the south' of the British industries is shown to be working out through the 'decline of old industries and the rise of new.' This recognition of the deep-seated origins of the problems of the 'depressed areas' raises the question of proper governmental policy." Am Econ R

Reviewed by D. R. French

Am Econ R 30:608 S '40 340w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 30 '40 600w

"It is in the lack of constructive criticism and positive suggestion that Prof. Dennison's book falls short of the standard generally set in the publications of the Economics Research Department at Manchester where the work was carried out. This defect is the more conspicuous in the first part of the volume, in which the economic aspects of the location of industry are discussed in detail. Excellent as is much of the analysis, though sometimes one-sided, Prof. Dennison appears to stress the difficulties in the way of control to an extent which paralyses action." R. Brightman

+ — Nature 145:916 Je 15 '40 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Ag 3 '40 600w

D'ENTREVES, ALEXANDER PASSERIN. Medieval contribution to political thought; Thomas Aquinas, Marsilius of Padua and Richard Hooker. 148p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

320.9 Political science—History. Thomas Aquinas, Saint. Marsilius, of Padua. Hooker, Richard [39-15662]

"To Professor d'Entrèves, the history of political thought is 'first and foremost, the history of the attempts to solve the problem of political obligation.' Instead of describing the vicissitudes of political institutions, Professor d'Entrèves endeavours 'to understand the efforts of generation after generation of thinkers to reach a solution of problems which, as philosophical problems, remain unaltered, and necessarily lead us away from the proper plane of history into the realm of values.' The six lectures printed in this volume cover in part the same ground as the author's 'Riccardo Hooker' and 'La filosofia politica medioevale,' but they were delivered in English with particular regard to the needs of an English audience." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The criticism I should offer of Professor d'Entrèves is that he gives us the virtue of his defect. He does not show that the medieval contribution is of current utility; but he does illuminate the nature of that contribution, and in doing so provides keenly stimulating exegesis of Aquinas, Marsilius, and Hooker. He has been superbly successful, moreover, in presenting these great thinkers as embodiments of the temper of their times, yet likewise as beads upon the endless strand of political thought." A. F. Saunders

+ Am Pol Sci R 33:1115 D '39 370w

"The book is remarkable for its skilful presentation of its author's views and, we may add, for its enviable command of idiomatic literary English." C. W. Previté-Orton

+ — Eng Hist R 54:700 O '39 1650w

"The value of this little book is out of all proportion to its size."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 27 '39 290w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Bright journey. 424p map $2.50 Scribner

Dousman, Hercules L.—Fiction (W) 40-33102

Historical novel of the fur trade in the Northwest territory covering the years 1812 to 1840. The book is divided into two main parts, the first section dealing with the boyhood of Hercules Dousman on Mackinac Island during the War of 1812; and the second with his experiences in Prairie du Chien, first as an employee of the American fur company, and later as a director of the same firm. Dousman is a historical character, and the mansion which he built so long ago still stands.

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"'Bright Journey' is an excellent and sometimes beautiful presentation of frontier Wisconsin." H. T. Moore

+ Books p20 O 27 '40 700w

"Notwithstanding something almost austere in his style, Mr. Derleth's imagination is that of a poet. Repeatedly he writes about the flight of birds, still more often about the clouds and the stars. He can never take a character out of doors by night without telling what constellations are visible. He has put the country he loves into three volumes of actual poetry, but a reader looking for poetic feeling and diction will not have to hunt beyond the first chapter of this prose work, and throughout the whole course of 'Bright Journey' will find many passages of heartfelt beauty." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '41 550w

Reviewed by J. E. Tobin

Commonweal 33:154 N 29 '40 290w

"Mr. Derleth tells his story simply and directly in the calm pace and timeless manner of the old historical novel. . . As is so often the case with contemporary historical novels, the love story seems a little mechanical and contrived: the private fortunes of Dousman and the woman he eventually marries seem much less real than the public history of the old Michigan Territory. That is well set forth." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p7 O 27 '40 600w

"Mr. Derleth's hero may be out of Henty, but the flesh-and-blood Indians bear little resemblance to Cooper's braves. Well done, too, are such minor characters as the rascally John Marsh. . . With its stately, unhurried manner, the narrative barely escapes monotony, though its frequent beauties of description and the sensitiveness of the poet-novelist to the pageant of the seasons give considerable warmth and color to the book." R. A. C.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 O 26 '40 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 500w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii winter '41 120w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Country growth. 322p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 40-11748

Twenty short stories of Wisconsin farm and country life. Contents: Good-bye, Margery; Crows fly high; Any day now; Country growth; That heathen Alonzo; A ride home; Frost in October; Holiday for three; The intercessors; The blue goose; Old Huckleberry; Hawk on the blue; The alphabet begins with AAA; Mrs Spinnet; A man needs a woman; Buck in the bottoms; The no-sayers; Geese flying south; The moon rose twice; Girl in time lost.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

Reviewed by H. T. Moore
Books p7 Jl 21 '40 700w

Reviewed by Ruth Hard
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 3 '40 280w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 27 '40 550w

Nation 151:139 Ag 17 '40 70w

"The stories are weakest when working Sherwood Anderson's side of the street ('The Intercessors'), best when Derleth's fresh, country humor brings him into the clear on his own ('Holiday for Three,' 'The Alphabet Begins with AAA')."

+ — New Repub 103:150 Jl 29 '40 70w

"Mr. Derleth handles a variety of situations well, but is at his best with humor. He writes humor as it should be written, with natural characters, believable situations, and no straining for effect. . . It should be added that Mr. Derleth does not edit himself any too well. He writes, it is evident, by ear rather than by plan, and has a tendency to waste effects in unnecessary verbiage. But as the fault of so many of his contemporaries is that of straining and cutting until finally the precious quality of their own work scares them, probably Derleth is right in going the other way." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 21 '40 470w

"Pleasant, neighborly short stories of Wisconsin farm life."

+ New Yorker 16:67 Jl 27 '40 90w

"Only one story, and that the most carefully and conscientiously wrought of all, betrays Mr. Derleth into some of his unfortunate ways. 'Any Day Now' is the story of a girl who turns away from love and lives to regret it. The author chants mournfully, lovingly, repetitiously over his theme for seventy-five pages, succeeding only in underscoring its commonplaceness. But when he gives casually of his rich knowledge of village life, August Derleth reveals himself as one of the best equipped and most appealing of our American short story writers." James Gray

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:10 Jl 20 '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:168 D '40

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. The Narracong riddle. 225p $2 Scribner

40-6801

Detective story.

"The case itself is fairly good, although the conclusion looks to me as if the author was having a hard time solving the crime. It is the characterization of the members of the Narracong family which lifts the book above average." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 30 '40 70w

"The story of Judge Peck's investigation into the murder is not so well organized as some of the earlier Judge Peck stories have been, but we are introduced to a most interesting group of people whose characters are skillfully drawn." K. I.

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 17 '40 170w

"Worth reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 20 '40 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Still small voice; the biography of Zona Gale. 319p il $3 Appleton-Century

B or 92 Gale, Zona (W) 40-27781

An interpretative biography of Zona Gale, written by a native of Sauk City, Wisconsin, who was a neighbor and former protegé. The book covers the whole span of her life from her birth in 1874 to her death in 1938, and includes some critical study of her writings and a fragment of Miss Gale's unfinished autobiography. Bibliography of the work of Zona Gale. Index.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"I think that Zona Gale would have been pleased by August Derleth's sensitive and discriminating biography. . . Miss Gale also would have rejoiced, I am sure, that her biography has been written by one who is also a writer and who knows her native Wisconsin. August Derleth's account of her books is a distinctive critical contribution and his chapter on Miss Gale's relationship to the controversy between Glenn Frank and the University of Wisconsin, as well as his pictures of the La-Follette 'dynasty' will be read with wide interest both within and without the borders of Wisconsin." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 D 1 '40 440w

"Friends of Zona Gale will welcome this book. Those who did not know her may appreciate something of her personal power and literary achievement by reading this sympathetic account of her life and the fragment of her autobiography which is included." Lois Byrns

+ Commonweal 33:306 Ja 10 '41 410w

"One expects the biography of an author to throw some light on the influences that may have contributed to his success as a writer, and caused him to write the particular kind of work he produced. This Mr. Derleth has done with almost a superabundance of detail. . . The inclusion of her unfinished autobiography adds greatly to the importance of the book." A. L. Jewett

+ — Library J 65:873 O 15 '40 310w

Nation 151:664 D 28 '40 40w

"Her life-story is well worth reading, even though its telling here is by no means flawless. The author seems indeed to have gone at his task not only with enthusiasm but with rather too much zeal: search for significance in every detail of his heroine's life makes an effect of strain inevitable, and praise overemphasized becomes heavy and monotonous where a lighter touch would more effectively have shown its deserts. August Derleth does not really take us inside Zona Gale's mind, nor set her to moving with the step of life in his pages.

DERLETH, A. W.—Continued
But he deserves thanks, nevertheless, for the conscientious research and active appreciation which have brought us her singularly interesting story." Katherine Woods
+ — N Y Times p22 D 1 '40 900w
Wis Lib Bul 36:165 D '40

DE ROUGEMONT, DENIS. See Rougemont, D. de

DE SAVITSCH, EUGENE CONSTANTINE. In search of complications; an autobiography; foreword by Arthur Krock. 396p $3 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-27585

Autobiography of a White Russian who was a boy of thirteen when the Revolution drove his family out of their native land. After an interval in the Far East and some experiences fighting against the Bolsheviks, the young man came to America. The latter half of the book is the story of his pursuit of a medical education in Denver and Chicago, Antwerp, the Belgian Congo, Paris and Vienna.

Booklist 36:428 Jl 15 '40

"While the events of the author's life give color to his autobiography, what gives edge and fascination to this particular story is his wit, humor and directness. Dr. de Savitsch's medical colleagues will find interest—sometimes not too comfortable interest—in his comments on medical education and practice in this country and Europe. Even those comments, however, are so made that the lay reader will follow them with an avid if sometimes wincing eagerness, and for both doctors and others the appeal of the book is far wider than its sidelights on scientific matters. It is a story both of dramatic aspects of our time and of the individual achievement of a very unusual human being." Mary Ross
+ Books p2 Je 30 '40 1150w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p19 Je 20 '40 900w

"Not the least amazing of Dr. De Savitsch's abilities is his command of a swinging, trenchant, vigorous English prose. Perhaps this mastery of language is part of his essentially cosmopolitan nature which is capable of understanding the strength and weaknesses of all nationalities, proving all things, holding fast what is good, finding in the free intensity of modern American life the best medium for its expression." R. M. Green, M.D.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 550w

Reviewed by J. E. James
Canadian Forum 20:189 S '40 220w

"This is a fascinating story in every page, and distinguished for a masculine vigor, a gaiety, and a complete absence of self-pity which become increasingly rare and distinguished in every country of the world today. The book is like a fresh breeze blowing through a malarial marsh. It should mean hope and health to many emigres." Emily Clark
+ Current Hist & Forum 52:57 S '40 360w

"Humorous and sometimes incisive comments on White Russians, medical schools, internes, medicine as practised in the Congo, etc. Intelligent froth, recommended for summer reading."
New Repub 103:150 Jl 29 '40 50w

"It is true that Dr. de Savitsch is neither a new master of English prose nor a new philosopher after the manner of Hans Zinsser. The prose, as Mr. Krock says, is lean and accurate—it is not in itself distinguished. The story is perfectly objective, without undertones, without many philosophic implications, and certainly without that 'brooding melancholy' with which it was once supposed each little Russian was endowed at birth. But it does move, as did also the life of the narrator." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 7 '40 1550w
New Yorker 16:67 Jl 13 '40 50w

"Let it be said at once that Dr. de Savitsch's story, as he himself tells it, ranks primarily as entertainment. His comments on medicine and surgery, shrewd and stimulating as many are, seem but added color to an adventurous tale. And that I think will be good news to those who are beginning to yawn at the prospect of still another doctor autobiography." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:14 Ag 31 '40 550w

"This book as a whole bears evidence of having been artfully written for publication. If anything, there is rather too much than too little 'sophistication.' A little more sophistication in the true sense would have suggested that credibility is not enhanced by an author who cites such incidents as typical. The meatiest part of Dr de Savitsch's book consists of his comments on hospitals and clinics and his other observations as a young doctor in Africa and in America."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 700w

"You are likely to keep [this] book in your hand until it is finished. Part of its drawing power lies in the pictures the author gives of other ways of life, of strange places and even stranger adventures. Even more comes from the wit, tolerance, and equanimity of the man of the world who writes it." Mary Ross
+ Survey 76:279 S '40 390w

DESCHIN, JACOB. Finding new subjects for your camera. (Whittlesey house publication) 239p il $2.50 (12s 6d) McGraw

770 Photography (W) 39-27900

This suggestive book for the amateur photographer discusses the selection of subjects, developing the picture idea, lighting arrangement, etc. with chapters on street scenes, picture-making at the Fair, home photography, trick effects, amateur models, self-portraiture, and using the camera to earn pin-money. Index.

Booklist 36:106 N 15 '39

"From these pages most amateurs may acquire a working technique that will surely yield a greatly increased variety of better prints."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 27 '40 250w

"A book of valuable suggestions for the amateur photographer, whether he takes pictures for pleasure only or in connection with his professional interests."
+ J Home Econ 32:115 F '40 20w

"One would suppose that the first element in an appetite for picture taking would be an awareness of potential subject-matter. But for any who have the appetite without the awareness Mr. Deschin has written exactly what his title promises: a full, cursive catalogue of everyday objects and their availability for photographic exploitation." E. F. Hall
N Y Times p20 Ag 4 '40 130w

DESMOND, ALICE (CURTIS) (MRS T. C. DESMOND). Feathers; the story of a rhea; pictures by Wilfrid Bronson. 72p $1.50 Macmillan

40-32635

A South American rhea is the hero of this book for young readers. Caught as a baby the bird grew up to be the mascot of the Argentine ranch as well as the pet of Chico, the boy gaucho who captured him.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 D 29 '40 140w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:853 O 15 '40 30w

"Besides the excellent background of life on an Argentine ranch, many amusing incidents and much excitement is packed into this slim volume." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 150w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 270w

DEVOE, ALAN. Down to earth; a naturalist looks about; with il. by Gertrude M. Bradley and D. F. Levett Bradley. 228p $2.50 Coward-McCann

814 Nature (W) 40-11530

Thirty nature essays on such subjects as hawks, skunks, oysters, cats, weathers and seasons, etc. The author is an American Mercury columnist, and much of the material of the book has appeared in periodicals.

Booklist 37:7 S '40

"The author of 'Down to Earth' obviously loves the white-footed mice, skunks, garter snakes and birds about which he writes, and he writes about them well. But he is not content with giving us essays and stories about these creatures. He preaches to us, not once or twice but repeatedly, about the sins of our race and times. . . Persons who need treatment of their mental and spiritual ailments will not, we fear, be reading 'Down to Earth;' and the rest of us would prefer to hear about what Mr. Devoe has seen and heard and experienced out-of-doors rather than learn why he thinks observation of nature 'good' for the human race. Without its therapeutical paragraphs, 'Down to Earth' is good reading."

+ — Books p12 S 8 '40 180w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '40 800w

"The author observes the animals and birds and other living creatures which find sanctuary on his estate and, close and scientifically accurate as his observation is, the process does not rest there. From observation Mr. Devoe proceeds to deduction and philosophical speculation. Because of this faculty, and because all that he writes is couched in beautiful language, Mr. Devoe may be considered to be directly in the tradition of the great nature writers of the past. His book belongs on the shelf alongside those of Richard Jeffries, John Burroughs, and W. H. Hudson." K. F.

+ Cath World 152:116 O '40 650w

Reviewed by J. McK. Kater
Commonweal 32:334 Ag 9 '40 280w

"Mr. Devoe belongs to the small group of naturalists who combine observation of fact with a style of fineness and distinction and a gift of poetic expression. . . He has the gift of making the reader share his awareness and perceptions, look with new eyes at familiar things and recognize in them the sentiment of miracle." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p2 My 26 '40 700w

New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 30w

"Mr. Devoe subtitles his book 'A Naturalist Looks About' and this expresses well the casual, close-to-home quality of his delightful collection of little nature essays. . . Go on, Mr. Devoe. Speak up again and louder. We want everybody to hear you. You say the right things, and you put them well; write more, and let your voice out." D. C. Peattie

+ Sat R of Lit 22:11 Je 15 '40 380w

Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 Je '40 400w

Springf'd Republican p8 Je 5 '40 650w

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE. Minority report. 346p $2.75 Little

814 (W) 40-30228

A selection from the essays and papers Mr De Voto wrote during the years when he was connected first with the Saturday Review of Literature, and later with Harper's Magazine.

"Mr. DeVoto's many friends who have followed his work as an editorial writer for Harper's Magazine and the Saturday Review will take pleasure in this volume of reprints; and those who have not already read his pages are well advised to make their acquaintance in this form. They represent about the best that the America of these days can show in the way of literary journalism."

+ Atlantic O '40 210w

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"If you feel that Mr. De Voto says everything twice, that he is always more useful than satisfying, remember that there are pages in this book that are as brilliant and sensible and necessary as anything being written in America today. It is sometimes difficult to say all one should like to about Mr. De Voto; it is impossible not to admit that he is stimulating even when he is wrong, and always alive." Alfred Kazin

+ — Books p5 S 15 '40 550w

"More than most contemporary critics, Mr. De Voto is both tolerant and opinionated. But then, clever people usually are opinionated, and most of Mr. De Voto's opinions are unusually sound." R. M. Green, M.D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '40 700w

"The essays in this book which are on such subjects as Lewis and Clark, or Gettysburg, or the Lincoln Election, hardly deserve comment. Nor is the literary criticism distinguished by anything except its truculence. Nevertheless Mr. De Voto hits some nails squarely on the head." T. M.

— + Cath World 152:370 D '40 320w

Christian Century 57:1384 N 6 '40 150w

"Here is literary warfare of the most spirited sort. What seems at first no more than a brilliant aerial display over a wide range of subjects turns out to have been a carefully calculated and direly effective campaign directed at a few points of strategic importance." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 21 '40 800w

Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 180w

Reviewed by Dunstan Thompson
New Repub 103:533 O 14 '40 900w

"Mr. DeVoto is as wrong and as irrelevant as any critic is likely to be and for much the same reasons, but one can read him even when he is wrong. He takes obvious and enormous pleasure in all that he has to say and communicates it to the reader. He has written many intransigent pages, but never a dull one; many self-admiring pages (as what essayist has not?), but they have been admirably written. Badly and dishonorably as Mr. DeVoto thinks of his profession, he is one of its liveliest professors." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p16 N 3 '40 850w

"Some are fairly good, some very vigorous and telling stuff, especially the piece called 'Passage to India.' "

+ New Yorker 16:56 Ag 31 '40 40w

Reviewed by J. T. Graves
Sat R of Lit 22:10 O 5 '40 600w

Time 36:62 Ag 26 '40 1000w

DE VRIES, PETER. But who wakes the bugler? il. by Charles Addams. 297p $2.50 Houghton

40-14185

"A mad tale of a Mr. Thwing, who was pursued by the women and didn't really want to get married. Mr. Thwing is the proprietor of a boarding house. The boarders include a demented sea captain, a witch doctor, an amorous plump lady, and assorted misfits in difficulties." New Yorker

"If the course of events in 'But Who Wakes the Bugler?' is not as straight as a die or as clear as crystal, there is no reason to complain. The author planned it that way." Lisle Bell

Books p8 S 1 '40 330w

Reviewed by R. H. Bonner
Boston Transcript p1 S 7 '40 180w

New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 40w

"The book is first-class fun, with the verities of the War Between the Sexes surging underneath. Its highly enjoyable humor is sometimes straightforward, but more often on the vague and subtle side, more lunatic than laughable. . . The simple but highly expressive

DE VRIES, PETER—Continued
illustrations by Charles Addams are so exactly right that they should please even the author." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 S 8 '40 700w
New Yorker 16:69 S 7 '40 70w

"Mr. De Vries is interested in modern poetry, and I wish he could bring himself to blue pencil his precious poetry right out of his sterling humor. . . Otherwise, 'But Who Wakes the Bugler?' (an interesting title which has no visible connection with the story) is a remarkable document, damned by an unfettered fancy and sired by a half pint of gin on an empty stomach. The numerous sketches by Charles Addams are only a little saner than the text, which must be rated as an artistic achievement of no small magnitude." Fred Schwed, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:12 S 14 '40 460w

DEWEY, JOHN. Education today; ed. and with a foreword by Joseph Ratner. (Minton, Balch bk) 373p $3.75 Putnam
370.1 Education (W) 40-31507

Collection of forty-five essays, drawn from the writer's contributions to education during the last forty years. Index.

Booklist 37:83 N 1 '40
Reviewed by G. O. Kelley
Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 210w
Reviewed by Theodore Brameld
New Repub 103:877 D 23 '40 30w
School & Society 52:240 S 21 '40 10w

DEWEY, THOMAS EDMUND. Case against the new deal. 165p $1.50 Harper
973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S. —Economic policy 40-32283

This volume contains Mr Dewey's speeches and addresses delivered from December, 1939 to June, 1940, criticizing the policies of the Roosevelt administration. The speeches are not chronologically arranged but grouped under the heads: Basic economic fallacies; Some consequences of New Deal economics; The moral issue; Social responsibilities; Foreign affairs and national defense; Roosevelt must go.

"A great deal has happened to the world and to the country since the Republicans met last June and passed up Mr. Dewey for another standard-bearer. But there is not a stale word in what Mr. Dewey had to say. His remarks have that surprising pertinence whose retention is the hallmark of statesmanship, and this, I think, will be conceded even by his partisan opponents, at least by those whose minds are still sufficiently open to want to retrace the arguments he put forth with such telling effect." W. M. Houghton
+ Books p10 O 20 '40 600w

"These speeches abound in generalized criticisms and assertions, expressed in the language of popular political polemics. They are not as informing or effective for reading as several other books directed against the new deal."
Springf'd Republican p7e O 13 '40 70w

DEWITT, JOSEPHINE. Felicia, the curious cow; il. by [the author]. [56p] $1.50 Nelson 40-32217

"Echoes of nursery rhymes float through this barnyard nonsense story, a good deal awry, but all the more amusing. Here is Cock Robin, doomed, according to all the creatures which he had teased and badgered, to a speedy end, and here is Felicia, a cow with a tremendous interest in other creatures' business." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 N 3 '40 150w
Cath World 152:374 D '40 40w

"This is not quite so successful a bit of tomfoolery as the author of 'The Fisherman and His Cat' has given us, but the lively style carries the narrative along briskly, with plenty of aid from her droll pictures, which are good for many a chuckle." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 N 24 '40 180w

DIBELIUS, MARTIN. The Sermon on the Mount. 148p $1.50 Scribner
226.2 Sermon on the Mount 40-34444

Lectures delivered in 1937 at Yale University Divinity School by Professor Dibelius of the University of Heidelberg. Contents: Christianity and the Sermon on the Mount; The character of the Sermon on the Mount; The old tradition about the preaching of Jesus; The sayings of Jesus; The Jewish law and the law of the kingdom; The Sermon on the Mount and Christ's mission; The Sermon on the Mount and the world of today. Index. Index of Scriptural passages.

"Not only those who heard Professor Dibelius at Yale and at other institutions during his memorable visit in this country, but many others will welcome this careful exposition of the Sermon on the Mount." F. C. Grant
+ Christian Century 57:1381 N 6 '40 1000w

"Dr. Dibelius gives to his subject the benefit of ripe and capable scholarship, and his readers will learn much of the modern historical interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount which this scholarship brings out." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '40 140w

"This unassuming little volume is the work of a scholar whom all count as among the foremost of living New Testament specialists and many count as the foremost of them all. But it is not written for specialists; it is addressed to the men and women of today, who are asking in perplexity What would Christ have me do?" B. S. Easton
+ Churchman 154:18 D 1 '40 650w
Reviewed by C. T. Craig
J Religion 21:70 Ja '41 550w

DICKENS, MONICA. The moon was low [Eng title: Mariana]. 340p $2.50 Harper [8s 6d Joseph, M] 40-14186

Mary Howard, spending a week-end alone in a remote cottage in the Essex Marshes, hears over the radio that her husband's ship has been torpedoed. It is impossible to get any more news until morning. Thru the whole of a sleepless night, Mary mentally reviews her life from childhood to her happy marriage. In the morning, after an agonizing trip, she discovers that her husband has been saved.

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

"The quiet reserve of 'The Moon Was Low' furnishes a welcome relief. You read, peacefully secure in the knowledge that Miss Dickens will tie up the loose ends with a promise of everlasting peace." D. B. Shapiro
+ Books p8 Ag 25 '40 430w

"Her story is fresh and funny. Miss Dickens has acidity, candor, and a flair for portraying people almost too good to be true." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 31 '40 440w
Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p7 Jl 26 '40 210w

"Mariana will be fun for those who like to look through other people's snap-albums and listen to the usual commentary." Christopher Barton
New Statesman & Nation 20:116 Ag 3 '40 220w

"Monica Dickens, great-granddaughter of Charles Dickens, makes her debut as a novelist to be reckoned with in a story that has not only body and charm but emotional force." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 25 '40 800w

"It's harmless and pleasant enough reading for a wet night in front of the fire, but it won't keep anyone awake. In the light of present conditions in England stories such as this have a certain clinical interest. One hopes they won't become museum pieces." G. G.
Sat R of Lit 22:19 O 5 '40 150w

"Mary's experiences are very obviously portrayed by someone to whom the joys of youth and the agonies of adolescence are near enough to be living and vivid, and Miss Dickens has performed a real feat in giving power and personality to an ordinary girl who stumbles in and out of unsatisfactory love affairs and is conspicuous for her failures in attempting a career rather than for her successes. . . There are several episodes in which the author's refreshing acidity and avowed anti-whimsy have full play. . . If the result is a farce rather than drama, it is none the less enjoyable for it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p361 Jl 27 '40 280w
Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

DICKINSON, HENRY DOUGLAS. Economics of socialism. 262p $3.25 (8s 6d) Oxford
335 Socialism. Economics [40-7480]

"In this book Mr. Dickinson, a lecturer at the University of Leeds, endeavors to show how a Socialist economy might work, with particular emphasis upon the pricing system in such an economy. He not only takes issue with orthodox economists who hold that socialism is an impossible ideal because rational economic calculations would be impossible, but with those exponents of an 'age of plenty' who say there would be no problem of scarcity or of pricing under socialism and, finally, with those Socialists who deny, wholly or in part, the relevancy of rent and interest in a Socialist economy." N Y Times

Reviewed by J. E. Moffat
Am Econ R 30:654 S '40 550w

"In general it is perhaps unfortunate that the book was so obviously written for economists. The ordinary Socialist reader, who perhaps more than anyone needs to be familiar with studies of this kind, will find Mr Dickinson tough going. It is, however, a book well worth the trouble of study, and it is to be regretted that, in the preoccupations of war, it may not get the widespread consideration it deserves—even though the combination of individual enterprise with tighter State control is, in one aspect, peculiarly, a problem of war economics." + Economist 138:295 F 17 '40 1000w
Foreign Affairs 19:254 O '40 50w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 23 '40 350w

"This book will make some Socialists more convinced than ever of the practicability of their doctrine, and believers in capitalism probably will put it down more confident that the weak spots in the present system, which this author discusses at great length, can be corrected more effectively by a little patching than by scrapping in its entirety the economic system which has become inseparably connected with the ideals of democracy." J. H. Crider
N Y Times p9 Mr 17 '40 700w

"The Economics of Socialism makes the latest developments of Socialist theory, and its remarkable rapprochement to individualist economics, accessible to all. Here there is a common language, a common recognition of economic criteria, a not very divergent view of social ends, a common apparatus of analysis and—it is not too fanciful to hope—a common ground for a synthesis of ideas." Honor Croome
+ Spec 164:454 Mr 29 '40 750w
Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 24 '40 200w

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DICKSON, LEONARD EUGENE. Modern elementary theory of numbers. 309p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]
512.81 Numbers, Theory of 39-31899

"The author is Professor Emeritus of Mathematics at the University of Chicago. His work comprises a beginner's course with 200 problems; also a supplementary course with 120 additional problems covering as simply as possible some interesting and important topics of modern number theory. Integral calculus is used in only one small section of the book." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The style is a strictly business-like one, and the author does not give much indication of the general theories which sometimes underlie particular results. The references to the history and literature of the topics treated are often inadequate. . . It is not quite clear for what class of reader the book is designed. The ordinary student cannot be expected to make much progress beyond the earlier chapters. The expert will find it a convenience to have an elementary account of quadratic forms in three and four variables to which he can refer, but he is unlikely to be interested in the various modifications of Waring's problem, or in the introductory chapters. The book, however, will certainly be of great value to research students whose field is related to one of the topics dealt with." H. Davenport
+ — Nature 146:418 S 28 '40 550w
N Y New Tech Bks 24:57 O '39

DICTIONARY of American history; James Truslow Adams, ed. in chief; R. V. Coleman, managing editor. 6v set $60 c1940 Scribner
973.03 U.S.—History—Dictionaries (W) (40-5646)

"This Dictionary is made up of brief and compact articles covering American history in its widest sense. Cultural, artistic, literary, social, economic and industrial history are included. . . The Dictionary of American History, a stupendous cooperative undertaking, was begun in 1936. . . In the case of certain specialized modern subjects the articles were written by men most closely connected with events. . . In general the articles are brief, dealing with a definite subject or aspect of our history. There are, however, as stated in the foreword, 'a number of "covering articles," each of which not only presents its broader subject in an orderly sequence but, by cross references, guides the reader to the various supporting or related articles in which the individual phases of the subject are treated in more detail." (Subscription Bks Bul). Volume six is the index volume.

"These books are not a dictionary of national biography, and it is somewhat disturbing at first not to find the names of historical characters in due alphabetical location or any facts concerning them. Doubtless cross-indexing all the names of individuals mentioned would have added greatly to the size and labor of this undertaking. And with the exception of this deliberate omission one could find nothing but praise for a work that not only is valuable, but will in all probability become an indispensable book of reference."
+ Atlantic N '40 150w

"Few students will have recourse to the dictionary for its stylistic grace, and few will deny that the old Harper's Encyclopedia contained—in its narratives of battles and campaigns, in its warm accounts of the Quakers or the Puritans—more interesting narrative than is to be found in the dictionary. The Dictionary of American History is, however, a notable achievement. It covers wide ground, it achieves a sensible balance in the apportionment of space, it makes no concessions to filiopietism or prejudice, it is accurate, thorough, intelligent, discriminating. It is, in short, indispensable." H. S. Commager
+ Books p1 D 29 '40 1150w
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '40 700w

DICTIONARY of American history—Continued

"The general policy appears to be to give the subject to a specialist in the field who is 'pro.' There is a definitely 'institutional' atmosphere as opposed to 'muckraking.' This is not meant necessarily to imply dullness in writing or stuffiness in overlooking non-academic themes. The content is big and well-rounded, and the writing clear, concise and for the most part interesting. But it is not very critical, and the presentation of subjects frequently fails to raise or hint at questions which any symposium of informed students of the matters would undoubtedly have to debate at length." Philip Burnham

+ — Commonweal 33:27 O 25 '40 550w

"Dictionary of American History represents, of course, true history, giving not only historical events but also biography, geography, and social aspects of American life, ranging in this volume from the A.B. Plot through the Big Brother Movement and Boondoggling to the Comstock Lode. In other words, it is a surprise and a delight. There is little need to review a 'dictionary' critically; either it has or has not what the reader wants. But every care, apparently, has been taken to produce a standard work." Karl Brown

+ Library J 65:248 Mr 15 '40 420w (Review of v 1)

"Another achievement in making trustworthy knowledge easily available. . . No one expects absolute perfection in any compilation of this kind. Some might prefer a different plan for this work. But there can be no doubt that the new 'Dictionary of American History' has been launched on a career of wide usefulness."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '40 1000w

"Each article is signed by the author. The articles are well selected, well written and compact. It would be difficult to find elsewhere in such definite and concise form such entries as Brady photographs, Chiswell's mines, Gangsters, International peace garden, Interstate compacts, and Raw materials. Much recent material is included. . . Each article is followed by a brief bibliography. . . Because of its broad scope, its value as a 'quick reference' tool, its timeliness and the authentic, simple and clear manner in which its material is presented this dictionary is recommended for high school, public and college libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:30 Jl '40 800w

"The whole work is a product of American scholarship at its best. It is in the finest Jameson tradition. More than a thousand experts collaborated in the selection of the topics and the writing of the text. It can be recommended not only without reservation but with enthusiasm." R. H. Gabriel

+ Yale R n s 30:387 winter '41 500w

DIES, MARTIN. The Trojan horse in America. 366p $2.50 Dodd

335 Communism. Fascism. Propaganda

(W) 40-33230

Popularly presented report of the findings of the Congressional committee which has been investigating un-American activities, under the chairmanship of Mr Dies.

Atlantic D '40 220w

Bookmark p15 N '40

"Mr. Dies has done us a service in this book. He would have done much better service if both in the book and the investigation behind it he had followed the most permanently effective method in controversies of this kind—had dismissed conjecture, refrained from strained inferences, yielded every doubtful point to the opposition and then had come down to the ineluctable, inescapable, 'but the fact remains.' In short if he, as presiding judge over a semi-judicial body, had been judicious." Will Irwin

Books p7 O 27 '40 1250w

Cath World 152:637 F '41 320w

Christian Science Monitor p22 D 5 '40 250w

"An interesting perspective on the method and scope of the whole investigation. Browder, Kuhn, Pelley and others come in for their just deserts. The evidence and documentation may seem inadequate to many." E. W. M.

Churchman 154:38 D 15 '40 60w

"The trouble with Mr. Dies' book is precisely that he has put into it more 'generous heart' than brains. He fails, through an excess of zeal, to bring to his 'exposure' of the Fifth Column at work the impartiality that such a responsible task calls for. No judge in his right mind would sentence an accused on the sort of evidence that the author appears to regard as conclusive. . . However, taken with a pretty substantial grain of salt, The Trojan Horse in America remains, for those who can do their own thinking, a readable and provocative addition to our scanty knowledge of the subversive agencies in the U.S.A." C. J. Rolo

— + Current Hist & Forum 52:2 D 10 '40 450w

Reviewed by Pierre Loving

Living Age 359:493 Ja '41 1000w

Reviewed by J. A. Wechsler

Nation 151:507 N 23 '40 900w

"Ever since the Soviets found it necessary to defend themselves against the aggressive Finns and the Nazis benevolently took over Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium, the researches of the Dies Committee have been regarded with less jaundiced eyes and fewer lips curled in scorn. Representative Dies and his occasionally fumbling colleagues poked up prodigious clouds of smoke and cold ashes; also they uncovered some coals of fire and not a few extremely hot potatoes." S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p22 O 27 '40 850w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 11 '41 550w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 7 '41 700w

Reviewed by Werner Guttmann

Survey G 30:40 Ja '41 200w

Time 36:61 O 28 '40 350w

DIFFIN, CHARLES WILLARD. Gray Smoke; the coyote of El Coronel; il. by Alyn. unp 50c Garden City pub. co.

40-32775

The story of an Indian boy, called Jimmie Chicken, and the coyote puppy he found and trained.

"Children will like to read of the companionship of the two and of the loyalty of the animal when disaster overtakes his young master. A picture book of interest to the third or fourth grade reader." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 70w

Wis Lib Bul 36:170 D '40

DIGBY, GEORGE. Under the redwood trees [Eng title: Red horizons]. 285p $2.50 Dutton [12s 6d Collins]

917.94 California—Description and travel. U.S.—Description and travel

(W) 40-4946

The author, a young Irish-Englishman, with his wife, left New York in a second-hand car, drove thru the south and southwest, and up the west coast, enroute to Vancouver. In the California redwood country they found a cabin on a deserted "ranch" and settled down to the joys and rigors of a protracted session of camp life. The book is an account of their trip and their months in California.

"Its tone of jaunty familiarity with the reader is irritating, but one puts up with it for the sake of the uncommon amount of strong common sense which pervades the author's observations and reflections. The work is frankly journalistic, and sometimes amusingly, even ludicrously, superficial."

+ — Atlantic Mr '40 150w

Booklist 36:304 Ap 1 '40

"Along with his gay sense of humor, a quick kindliness to anyone in grief, and a pleasant, ingenuousness, Mr. Digby puts an unerring finger on the weaknesses of the American democracy." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 24 '40 230w

"One of the pleasantest books of British travel in America which this reviewer has seen for a long time. . . It is true that Mr. Digby joins the mass of his fellow-countrymen in jokes about the American drug store and American tea. . . But once the travelers settle in their season's home on the neglected 'ranch' among the redwoods, they have time and humor for observation, enjoyment, even adventure. There is the stamp of genuine human interest on this record of their experience."

+ N Y Times p21 F 11 '40 480w

New Yorker 15:80 F 10 '40 30w

"George Digby, who knows so well how to make readable and repeatable anecdotes out of any adventure great or small, has never done better than the pages of this book." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 Mr 30 '40 310w

"George Digby writes largely as a reporter, now in humorous vein, now serious, with mildly ironical comments thrown in. His narrative is vivacious and lucidly phrased, but, considered as anything but a travel chronicle, it is of interest chiefly because Mr Digby carried his own eyes with him and, when he stopped long enough to use them properly, he often saw something that Americans don't see, or see so well that they take it for granted without questioning its significance."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 20 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 28 '39 550w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

DINSMORE, RICHARD JOHN. Hoss doctor. 311p $2.75 Waverly house

B or 92 Veterinarians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-33154

Reminiscences of a veterinary doctor who farmed a western Massachusetts farm, in addition to caring for the horses, cattle and dogs of his neighbors.

Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"Dr. Dinsmore tells [his story] in simple, homely language and out of his telling emerges a rugged individualist who has no illusions about anything. . . One closes 'Hoss Doctor' with the feeling that animals are a noble race, much more admirable, in many instances, than the men who own them." David Tilden

+ Books p23 O 13 '40 380w

"Neither lyrical nor meditative, this book includes much good narrative and sane information about husbandry and health."

+ Commonweal 32:534 O 18 '40 40w

"No one, I believe, will lay down this book without a consciousness of amusement enjoyed, enlightenment received and a heightened respect for a too often disregarded calling and the men who practice it." F. F. Van de Water

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 19 '41 850w

"An honest, humorous autobiography."

+ New Yorker 16:79 S 28 '40 30w

"The tone of the book is salty, thoughtful, and humorous. . . The doctor points out the importance of veterinary science to human welfare—the tuberculosis measures of various governmental agencies have been well publicized but there are any number of diseases that the four-footed brethren can distribute. . . These are technical matters—the characters and incidents of the book furnish the greater part of a warm and engaging text." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 22:42 O 12 '40 360w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 31 '40 440w

DINWOODIE, MRS HEPBURN. All the world and I. 345p $2.50 Little

40-31622

A story of Labrador hunters and fishermen during the first World war. The hero is Alec Hardy, the story concerning chiefly his love for Flora Eldridge and the influence of the far-away war on their lives.

Booklist 37:137 D 1 '40

"Mrs. Dinwoodie has written such an unusually mature first novel that a reviewer must discard that guarded word 'promising' and acknowledge that 'All the World and I' is no mere pledge of future achievement but the very present fulfillment of it." Muriel Chatain

+ Books p18 O 27 '40 700w

"'All the World and I' does not quite escape the drawbacks which one so often associates with the genre study and the local color school. As a story, it is only reasonably moving and only reasonably interesting. Atmosphere dwarfs character. Monotony creeps in. 'All the World and I' is an honest, careful novel, but it is not first-rate." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p26 O 20 '40 500w

New Yorker 16:110 O 19 '40 60w

"These people are interesting and well drawn, against their background of struggle with the frozen land and the waters. Less well developed is the plot of the book." N. L. R.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 2 '40 180w

DISNEY, DOROTHY CAMERON. The balcony. 323p $2 Random house

(W) 40-31178

Mystery story.

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40

"This is a topnotcher in its field, the best of Dorothy Cameron Disney's Grade A tales—a full-bodied, carefully built, and truly baffling affair." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 S 8 '40 100w

"'The Balcony' is a natural member of the best-of-the-year list. . . Don't miss it." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 28 '40 60w

"This is an expert and interesting mystery novel, which blends incident, atmosphere, character and romance in its search for the murderer. It will make your scalp tingle in dexterous fashion, and surprise you with John Hieronomo's secrets with merciless skill." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p21 S 8 '40 260w

New Yorker 16:84 S 21 '40 20w

"Required reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 S 21 '40 40w

DITMARS, RAYMOND LEE. A field book of North American snakes. 307p 48pl maps $3.50 Doubleday

598.12 Serpents (W) 39-27974

"A condensed, simplified identification book; descriptions are arranged by sections of the country and by poisonous and nonpoisonous snakes. Unfortunately no reference is made in the descriptions or in the index to the good photographic plates at the back of the book; merely a list of these illustrations is given. Cross references refer to chapters rather than to specific pages. Because of these omissions, the book is unsatisfactory for reference use." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:128 D 1 '39

Bookmark p4 My '40

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '40

DITMARS (dĭt′märs)

DIVER, MRS MAUD (MARSHALL). Sylvia Lyndon. 476p $2.50 Houghton [9s 6d Blackwood] 40-31872

This long, leisurely novel of English life during the last three years before the war, tells the story of Sylvia Lyndon, a middle-aged but lovely and emotionally starved spinster. The story relates how she and Keith Lenox, fifteen years her junior, fell in love, married, and eventually found fulfillment, tho not together.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 O 27 '40 320w

"The cool, unhurried flavor of the novel in its facing of national problems, and in Sylvia's well balanced attitude toward the difficulties of her personal life, acts in a pleasantly sedative fashion on the reader. 'Sylvia Lyndon' offers a temperate climate of love and life which many people may find particularly enjoyable today." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p26 N 17 '40 700w

"None of [the author's] old admirers need fear disappointment in this, her most recent book."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p569 N 9 '40 100w

DIVINE, ARTHUR D. (DAVID RAME, pseud). In the wake of the raiders; and, The merchant navy fights [Eng title: Wake of the raiders]. 2v in 1 153,121p il $2.50 Dutton [5s Murray, J]

940.545 European war, 1939—Naval operations 40-31255

An account of some of the naval operations and their significance during the early months of the second European war, written from the British point of view. The volume is in two parts; part one contains: Beginnings of the pocket battleships; The Deutschland's cruise; The City of Flint; The battle of the river Plate; Hans Langsdorff's end. The second part deals with the exploits of such merchant ships as the Heronspool, the Stonepool and the Rockpool.

"The author's vivid style carries the reader along from one exploit to another. A welcome addition to literature of the current war."
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 28 '40 90w
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 8 '40 600w

"The style is that of one of the less happy Parliamentary orators in a flag-waving mood. It is true that the illustrations are excellent, but they alone are hardly worth $2.50." Fletcher Pratt
— + Sat R of Lit 22:14 S 14 '40 200w

DIX, LESTER. A charter for progressive education. 107p $1.60 Teachers college

370.1 Education 39-30757

"The philosophy and history of the program developed at the Lincoln School of Teachers College, Columbia University, through close co-operation between the school and the parents of the pupils. By the principal of the school, who is also associate professor of education at the College." J Home Econ

---

Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

"The value of this publication lies in its suggestive value for those who have turned their backs on the traditional school and are seeking a progressive and consistent approach to better things." F. S. Breed
+ El School J 40:714 My '40 500w
J Home Econ 32:183 Mr '40 50w

"The task of formulating a charter for Progressive Education is a large one. Dr. Dix has shown great courage in attempting the task. I am sure that he regards the book as a tentative draft. If professionally minded teachers could read his book and talk with him from the varied corners which make up America, some of which he has touched in mentioning the 4H clubs and the CCC, a fuller charter with changes in emphasis would emerge. His challenge to secondary school teachers to be their own men rather than wards of teacher colleges should receive a hearty response." Howard Cummings
+ Social Educ 3:666 D '39 700w

DMITRI, IVAN, pseud. See West, L.

DOBBS, ALMA A. Teaching wholesome living in the elementary school. 304p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

372.8613 Hygiene—Study and teaching 39-23030

"A book for parents, principals, and most particularly for teachers who are accepting the challenge of progressive thought in education by building curricula in which the primary concern is that the child shall grow in all ways." (Pref) Parts one and two discuss general principles of personal development and curriculum building. Part three takes up special phases of the curriculum and pupil activities. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"It goes without saying that there will not be complete agreement as to the teachings set forth, but the book stimulates thinking and combines to a remarkable degree fine educational philosophy with practical suggestions for everyday experiences. Its usefulness would have been increased by more careful editing." P. B. Williamson
Am J Pub Health 30:836 Jl '40 450w
Booklist 36:82 N 1 '39
J Home Econ 32:183 Mr '40 80w

DOBERT, EITEL WOLF. Convert to freedom; tr. by Heinz and Ruth Norden. 337p $3 Putnam

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Democracy 40-7066

"Autobiographical narrative of a young Prussian, a Potsdam cadet during the first World War, who joined the Nazis in the inflation period and was converted to democracy by a sojourn among the French. He escaped from Germany when Hitler came to power and now lives in the United States." New Yorker

---

"It is a moving story, excellently done. Mr. Dobert's conversion is complete, and completely logical and credible. Whether 'freedom' (democracy at peace) merits the faith this convert has in it is something which the next few years will show. Meantime, it looks like a million dollars." D. M. Young
+ Books p17 Ap 28 '40 650w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 8 '40 280w
Nation 150:634 My 18 '40 80w

"An honest, unpretentious biography by one young German out of thousands, in parts naïve politically, but well worth reading."
New Repub 102:649 My 13 '40 50w

"Genuineness breathes from its pages. One feels instinctively that here is outlined the inner struggle of thousands of German youths of today." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 7 '40 1050w

"An extraordinarily poignant tale."
+ New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 50w

"Dobert writes sincerely, convincingly, and impressively. When he describes various people he has met he gives you the living, breathing personality in a few short, kindly words. . . His autobiography becomes a panorama of genuine significance to anyone who wants to understand what turned eighty million people toward tremendous military development and cultural decadence. The only person he has left out is the working man. Hence this otherwise magnificent book cannot be regarded as the whole answer. Yet it should have a place in every library as a deeply moving spiritual account." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 22:10 My 11 '40 390w

DOBYNS, FLETCHER. Amazing story of repeal; an exposé of the power of propaganda. 457p $3 Willett

351.761 Prohibition. U.S. Constitution. 18th amendment. Propaganda 40-10511

"The author explains that his object in writing this book 'is to contribute something to the understanding of modern propaganda and the liquor problem of today,' and he devotes the first half of the volume to a study of the problem of propaganda. He considers that the methods used to bring about the repeal of the 18th Amendment furnish ideal material for an authentic and illuminating case study of the whole propaganda problem, since we are all familiar with the history of the liquor question, and it involves no difficult economic questions." (Boston Transcript) Index.

"The convinced drys (and there must be a lot of them left) will greet Mr. Dobyns's opus as a long overdue masterpiece. . . The friends of repeal and regulation, as well as those who honestly think liquor can be a good thing in its own right (there are said to be several of these people around the country), will size up the book as highly prejudiced, not to say downright nonsensical in spots. It all depends on where one sits." Stanley Walker

Books p11 S 1 '40 270w

"The book has real and substantial merit. It is an important contribution to the discussion of prohibition and propaganda. It is particularly timely and should serve a real need, not only to anti-Saloon Leaguers and those interested in prohibition but to all who desire to evaluate more accurately the reports, both written and oral, on conditions at home and abroad." F. H. Pardee

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 18 '40 750w

"A more complete record of this disgraceful episode in American politics than any that has hitherto appeared in print. . . Wets and drys alike, if they have one glimmer of respect for the democratic process, ought to be deeply disturbed by this revelation of the methods by which prohibition was scuttled. . . It is a tremendous story, this record of repeal and its aftermath. It is not easy to read it without being tempted to despair of democracy. But that would be the wrong reaction. Mr. Dobyns does not mean to invite it. He wants to make clear the alignment of forces, and he does." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 57:674 My 22 '40 1250w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 10 '40 550w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 154:17 Je 15 '40 260w

"Mr. Dobyns's book belongs to the field of curiosa." S. T. Williamson

— N Y Times p14 Ag 4 '40 1050w

Discussion by the author

N Y Times p15 S 15 '40 550w

DODGE, MRS CONSTANCE (WOODBURY). The dark stranger. 439p $2.50 Penn

40-27568

Historical novel beginning in Scotland during the '45, and following the fortunes of its hero to the New World, on a plantation in Carolina, on the Indian warpaths, and on the deck of the Bon Homme Richard.

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40

"It is a stirring depiction of stirring times, done with unflagging zest. Readers who like a lot of swordplay and gunfire will read it with enthusiasm; the author describes carnage with no lack of realism and wades into gore as unhesitatingly as her hero." George Conrad

+ Books p10 Je 16 '40 420w

"Dugald is an entirely credible hero and the story rises to a climax worthy of his earlier adventures. Nevertheless, 'The Dark Stranger' might have been longer. This, coming from a reviewer in a day when the average historical novel is much too long, must seem an ungrateful complaint. And it is true everything here could have happened as stated. Miss Dodge has worked carefully on her chronology and everything fits, though perhaps too neatly to be altogether lifelike." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 16 '40 800w

"Here is a vivid historical romance, filled with high words and brave deeds, such as are hard to come by nowadays. . . In these days it is pleasant to find a book where war is conducted gallantly, where one knows securely that everything will come out right in the end for the hero, and where, even if he serves a lost cause, time tempers defeat to romance." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 22:14 Jl 20 '40 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 230w

Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

DOLLEY, JAMES CLAY. Principles of investment. 460p $3.50 Harper

332.67 Investments. Securities 40-11648

"Designed as a basic textbook for college courses in investments, this volume brings together the essential information on investment theory and presents it in well-organized fashion. In addition to the aspects of the subject usually covered in such texts, this work includes a section dealing with fraudulent securities, considerable material on security market practices and the regulation of security markets, and a discussion of the flotation of security issues." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by Shaw Livermore

Am Econ R 30:620 S '40 250w

"The book is reasonably well written, though at points greater precision of statement and consistency of thought, together with more illustrative material, would be helpful." G. W. Hoffman

+ — Ann Am Acad 212:263 N '40 190w

Management R 29:312 Ag '40 70w

DOMS, HERBERT. Meaning of marriage; tr. by George Sayer. 253p $2.25 (7s 6d) Sheed

173.1 Marriage 40-11913

"The book deals with the relationship existing between the meaning of marriage and the ends of marriage. The meaning of marriage consists in the actual realization of the unity of two persons. But in achieving its meaning (the blending of You-Me to Us) it is quite naturally directed in itself towards ends which are of two kinds, personal and biological." Commonweal

Cath World 151:631 Ag '40 370w

"A Roman Catholic discussion of marriage, which is reported to have created something like excitement in clerical circles upon its first appearance in German. Not that it is in the least heretical, for it bears the imprimatur, but it breaks some new ground for a Roman Catholic treatise and, especially in the sections on the purpose of marriage, is something very different from a routine exposition of the traditional dogmas."

Christian Century 57:185 F 7 '40 70w

Commonweal 32:46 My 3 '40 260w

"The author has made a noteworthy contribution to this all-important subject, and his book has been freely and readably translated for the layman who does not want to be bothered with technicalities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p723 D 9 '39 60w

DONAVAN, JOHN. The case of the violet smoke. (Mystery house publication) 256p $2 Arcadia

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 D 22 '40 130w

"The author has concocted an oddly fascinating story out of some highly improbable ingredients." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p7 D 22 '40 150w

"Smoothly written and logically worked out example of English mystery tale—with distressing lack of action and almost unbelievable motive. Grade C."
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:20 D 28 '40 40w

DONER, MARY FRANCES. Chalice. 448p $2.50 Penn
40-8547

The story of Jane Halloran from the age of six (about 1900) thru childhood, youth and early maturity, war years, struggles for recognition as an artist, unhappy marriage and final reunion with a childhood sweetheart. The early scenes depict life in city and country in the Great Lakes region.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p19 My 5 '40 290w

"Occasionally, homely details which might have clarified the picture for those unfamiliar with the locale, seem to have been sacrificed to historical minutiae with which the book is crowded. But through it all she spins a good yarn, and her characters, even the minor ones, are clear cut and arresting." R. G. Cook
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 11 '40 270w

"Miss Doner takes her people seriously—sometimes solemnly. Romance and sentiment are here in plenty. But only the earlier chapters have much of the honest breath of life in them and are apt to stick very long in the reader's memory." Margaret Wallace
— + N Y Times p7 My 12 '40 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PAYZANT). The doctor's party; il. by Ralph Crosby Smith. 162p $1.50 Penn 40-34595

Doctor Martin Brady, called Doctor Mart thruout the small Michigan town where he practised, decided to give a night-before-Christmas dinner to six young people, each of whom was in some sort of difficulty. After the dinner the guests discuss their hopes and aspirations, and one by one the difficulties are straightened out.

"There are interweaving threads of drama and the characters are skilfully drawn and effectively contrasted. 'The Doctor's Party' should fit neatly into your holiday design for giving." Lisle Bell
+ Books p32 D 8 '40 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 70w

DONNELLY, THOMAS CLAUDE, ed. Rocky Mountain politics; with a foreword by Arthur N. Holcombe. 304p maps $3 Univ. of N.Mex. press

978 West 40-13198

"The authors—Frank H. Jonas, Roy E. Brown, Jeanne E. Wier, Henry J. Peterson, Lawrence H. Chamberlain, Newton C. Abbott, Thomas C. Donnelly, and Waldo E. Waltz—in their separate chapters set out to discover and relate the complexity of economic, social, and political factors influencing political processes in Utah, Colorado, Nevada, Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, New Mexico, and Arizona." Am Pol Sci R

"That each author, with the exception of Dr. Jonas, teaches at present in the state of which he writes may explain a tendency both toward circumspection and toward eulogy in certain evaluations. An introductory summary by Professor Donnelly draws the wealth of miscellaneous information into an interpretative synthesis." R. G. McKelvey
Am Pol Sci R 34:1035 O '40 330w

Reviewed by F. F. Gosnell
Ann Am Acad 213:237 Ja '41 360w

"The historical and economic setting is adequately treated; the statistics are never barren—in all, a standard work on the subject."
+ New Repub 103:280 Ag 26 '40 30w

DONWORTH, ALBERT BERNARD. The reason why Columbus sailed. 130p il map $1.50 The author, Houlton, Me.; $2 Chapman & Grimes

B or 92 Columbus, Christopher 39-32117

The author assumed that before he sailed for America, Columbus had made a voyage to Iceland with the Norsemen. He bases his evidence on a reference in one of Columbus' own letters to his son. The book deals with Columbus' plans and his later voyages to America.

Booklist 36:305 Ap 1 '40

"In spite of the reviewer's entire sympathy for Mr. Donworth's enthusiasm over the Columbus and Norse voyages, he is unable to believe that in this book new light has been cast upon the reason why Columbus sailed to the west." L. J. Burpee
Canadian Hist R 21:323 S '40 400w

DOOB, LEONARD WILLIAM. The plans of men. 411p $3 Yale univ. press

301 Social sciences—Philosophy 40-27514

"After a consideration of the nature of planning, the author, a member of the Yale Institute of Human Relations, analyzes the main phases of human behavior and their contributions to planning; applies his deductions to existing attempts at planning in the United States and to fascism, communism, and war; and adds a section on the problems involved in planning." (Nation) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Lynd
Am Hist R 46:375 Ja '41 470w

"While the style of The Plans of Men is a little repetitious and possibly not as readable as that of Doob's other works, the book should be read by all social scientists. It is without question a credit to the Institute of Human Relations from which it was published." P. R. Farnsworth
+ Am J Psychol 54:144 Ja '41 700w

"In addition to its dubious theoretical structure, the book is verbose, repetitive, and prone to elaborate the obvious. One may raise a serious question as to why the Institute sponsors this sort of work and the Yale University Press sees fit to publish it. Perhaps it will alleviate the regretted sharpness of these comments to say that the reviewer believes all concerned to be capable of better things." Kingsley Davis
— Am J Soc 46:625 Ja '41 240w

"This volume and its conclusion contain a mass of material from which useful grains may be garnered with sufficient patience. But it falls between two stools. The writer does not use the techniques of psychology in which he was trained and with which he is familiar, and on the other hand, he is not enough at home in dealing with the techniques of economics and government to function effectively there. The result is that, notwithstanding the industry of the author, the study is of limited usefulness either to a social psychologist or to a student of government." C. E. Merriam
Am Pol Sci R 34:999 O '40 700w

"The author is to be commended for undertaking this work. The attempt to correlate social science with the problem of social direction and social control is much needed." Jerome Davis

+ Am Soc R 5:970 D '40 180w

Reviewed by Gardner Murphy

Ann Am Acad 212:268 N '40 700w

Booklist 36:394 Je 15 '40

"This book on planning, by a professor of psychology, is timely and significant. It should especially interest readers of The Christian Century, by reason of its general insistence that personality and the aspects of society which develop it must be the goal of any planning which finally works." W. L. Bailey

+ Christian Century 57:797 Je 19 '40 800w

"An excellent analysis of the problem of planning in so far as it is fundamentally one of values. The presentation is unique in its comprehensiveness of scope and the unity of its treatment as a problem centering in the physical and social aspects of man. Professor Doob as a professional psychologist is capable of running the gamut of the other social sciences, and in so doing greatly enriches the design in his treatment of social values." Findlay MacKenzie

+ Ethics 50:474 Jl '40 900w

"It seems a waste of mental energy to comment, however astutely, in empirical terms, on matters of detail, which could either be settled briefly on the basis of self-evident general principles, or which at least cannot be very profitably discussed until these are made clear and taken into account. The reader will find many penetrating observations in Mr. Doob's pages; but unless he is willing to supply such fundamentals or fails to miss them, much of the discussion must seem unnecessary and tedious, and even beside the point." F. H. Knight

+ — J Pol Econ 48:754 O '40 1450w

"The obvious jostles the tentative and controversial, but this is unavoidable in an effort to achieve a comprehensive survey."

+ — Nation 150:605 My 11 '40 80w

" 'The Plans of Men' is perhaps not a book for the layman, however inquiring and intelligent; but it deserves serious study by sociologists and all those who may be concerned with the theory or practice of planning." J. S. H.

+ — Nature 146:383 S 21 '40 550w

Reviewed by F. Creedy

New Repub 103:875 D 23 '40 550w

"The Plans of Men renders a double service, one a negative contribution in revealing how meager is the equipment in the arsenal of social prearrangements, and the other, a positive contribution, in estimating with discriminating eye the value and efficiency of the weapons that are there. Both contributions are timely, and the book inpresses this reviewer as sanely and carefully done." Bryant Smith

+ Pol Sci Q 55:476 S '40 850w

"A timely and significant survey."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:3 My '40 480w

DOONE, RADKO. Red beards of the Yellow river; il. by Harry Deitch. 223p $2 Macrae Smith co.

(W) 39-31690

"An exciting tale of the outlaws of China known as red beards, or hung-hutzes. Chen, unrecognized by them as the son of the wealthy merchant Wu Ling; Wing, son of a poor farmer with whom for safety Wu Ling had left Chen; and Joe King, a young American boy held for ransom, are the real actors in the drama, as they are carried into the roving tribe of bandits." (Wis Lib Bul) For grades six to eight.

Booklist 36:179 Ja 1 '40

Wis Lib Bul 36:33 F '40

DORN, WALTER LOUIS. Competition for empire, 1740-1763. (Rise of modern Europe) 426p il maps $3.75; text ed $2.90 Harper

940.22 Europe—History—18th century

(W) 40-3701

Scholarly monograph on European institutions and culture during the years 1740 to 1763; the years when feudalism gave way in Europe to the present competitive and industrial society. The book is the sixth in the series The Rise of Modern Europe. The author of this volume is professor of history at Ohio State university. Illustrations grouped in front of book. Bibliography. Index.

"The bibliography is excellent, but the reviewer would have included the fine article on bibliography in the new Italian encyclopedia, the work of Sanchez, and the standard histories of Blok and Brugman. Professor Dorn's book, however, is a great credit to American scholarship. It shows wide reading on the part of the author through many years, much study in archival materials, and an unusual grasp of the meaning of facts." C. P. Higby

+ — Am Hist R 46:127 O '40 550w

Booklist 36:303 Ap 1 '40

"As an individual study and as a harmoniously planned unit in a larger whole the volume is a tribute to the thoroughness and objectivity of American scholarship and a valuable addition to the series." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Books p2 F 18 '40 700w

"Dr. Dorn has treated the period . . . with masterly grasp of the significance of the social changes which were accompanying Europe's shift from the last of feudalism to the establishment of the balance of power."

+ Christian Century 57:320 Mr 6 '40 110w

New Repub 102:585 Ap 29 '40 60w

"This is an unusually good book, though it may appeal rather to those who already have some knowledge of the period than to the general reader. For the most part it is topical and not narrative. Nor is it dramatic, as the title might signify. . . In view of the magnitude of the work, and the excellence of Professor Dorn's contribution to it, it would be invidious to point to minor errors or occasional faulty sentences, a few of which I frankly cannot understand after many readings. Occasionally, also, sums of money are expressed in figures but not in terms of pounds, livres, francs or dollars, and one is left guessing. These, however, are small blemishes on an otherwise first-class work." J. T. Adams

+ — N Y Times p9 F 4 '40 1600w

"The analysis of the 'competitive state system' is a brilliant piece of work and it makes the book indispensable to anyone interested in the eighteenth century. Some of the other sections are not quite up to this standard. The long chapter on the Enlightenment, inserted between the account of two wars, has only a chronological connection with the rest of the book, and is a little too compressed to do justice to the movement. The chapter on the Seven Years' War shows that the author is better at analysis than narrative." J. R. Strayer

+ — Sat R of Lit 21:11 Mr 2 '40 500w

Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

DORSEY, NOAH ERNEST, comp. Properties of ordinary water-substance in all its phases: water-vapor, water, and all the ices. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 710p il $15 Reinhold

546.11 Water 40-6778

"After some introductory notes explaining documentation, symbols, units and equivalents, the properties are listed in logical order: synthesis, dissociation, single systems (gas, liquid and solid state), multiple phase systems and phase transition. The term 'water-substance' is meant for water of the normal isotopic composition. Reference for deuterium oxide is given." Chem & Met Eng

---

DORSEY, N. E., comp.—Continued

"This volume is a fine example of an extraordinarily painstaking work requiring the exercise of a high order of discriminating and well balanced critical judgment. . . It is not easy to express adequately in words the value of Doctor Dorsey's work but he may be assured that scientific men everywhere and in all fields will never cease to be grateful for his having presented them with a stupendously valuable and enduring piece of work." F. G. Keyes

+ Am Chem Soc J 62:2570 S '40 550w

"The monograph is a necessity for any organization that makes studies related to or involving phenomena for which data are given in the tables and text." W. D. Collins

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:417 My 10 '40 750w

"The literature references at the bottom of each page and a well organized index make the book most valuable to workers in the fields of chemistry, physics and physical chemistry." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:270 Ap '40 200w

"The book is a monumental piece of industry, guided and inspired by learning and a breadth of interest far beyond that of most scientific authors. Naturally it is not a book to read through, though many parts of it are surprisingly readable. It should be on the shelves of every well-equipped library, where it will be consulted by workers in almost every branch of science. It provides, immediately, data of sufficient completeness and authority for all but very highly specialized work; and even those intending to pursue any special part of the subject farther than it is taken here will find this book an admirable and extremely well-balanced introduction." N. K. Adam

+ Nature 146:145 Ag 3 '40 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:28 Ap '40

"The general appearance and typography of the book does not compare too favorably with the excellence found in many of our scientific books. Many of the formulas and equations are badly printed with type of unsuitable size and the figures are poorly drawn. . . These minor criticisms are of no consequence, however, compared with the great usefulness of the book as a whole. It is hard to think of anything concerning water which has been omitted and the literature has been included up to 1938. Mr. Dorsey is to be congratulated for the immense amount of work that he has done and the service he has rendered in making such a vast store of information available. No reference library should fail to have this book on its shelves and no one working with or interested in the properties of water can do without it." G. M. Murphy

+ R of Scientific Instruments 2:325 O '40 550w

DOTEN, HAZEL R., and BOULARD, CONSTANCE. Fashion drawing; how to do it. 222p il col pl $4 Harper

741 Art, Commercial. Anatomy, Artistic. Drawing. Costume (W) 39-31911

The book covers with great thoroughness the art of fashion illustration—advertising which reaches the public thru newspapers, magazines, manufacturers catalogs and matter sent out by shops and department stores. Beginning with an outline of the necessary art supplies, instructions are given for drawing the human figure, treatment of texture and rendering of fabrics, drawing for half-tone reproduction, illustration of accessories, layout, etc. A history of costume is included and an account of textile fabrics and their design. Bibliography.

Booklist 36:172 Ja 1 '40

J Home Econ 32:115 F '40 60w

"The book will be a great aid and inspiration to both the beginner and the established fashion artist."

+ School Arts 39:8a Ap '40 130w

Wis Lib Bul 36:13 Ja '40

DOUBLEDAY, RUSSELL. Tree neighbors. 103p il $1.75 Doubleday

582 Trees (W) 40-9874

Short descriptive sketches of some thirty-five well-known American trees. Photographs accompany nearly every sketch, and end papers have smaller pictures showing the bark of most of the trees.

"Whereas this small volume may serve as a starting point for those to whom a tree has never been much more than just another tree, it can hardly prove of real value to more advanced seekers after practical knowledge. Its weakness lies in saying too little rather than too much, with the result that unwary readers could readily make the serious blunder of planting this or that species where it would prove far from satisfactory." R. S. Lemmon

— + Books p13 S 15 '40 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 30w

"Tree Neighbors is interesting chiefly for the thirty-two excellent, full-page camera studies which accompany the brief descriptive text. . . This is a pleasing book to read in spring, after a long, hard winter, when the trees everywhere are bursting into bloom and leaf, often more comforting and satisfying as neighbors than the human variety." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 190w

DOUBLEDAY'S encyclopedia; written by leading authorities in every branch of knowledge; ed, Arthur Elmore Bostwick; managing ed, Asa Don Dickinson; associate ed, Nella Braddy; foreign ed, J. A. Hammerton. 11v il col pl maps. This is no longer offered at a retail price. For information, buyers should write Doubleday, Subscription Books Dept, D, 111 8th av, N.Y.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 40-8783

"The first and second editions of this encyclopedia, 1931 and 1932, were reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, April 1931 and July 1932, respectively [Book Review Digest, 1934]. The publishers state that in the 1940 edition 'all necrologies were brought up to date, revisions were made in approximately 225 articles, new articles were included, [and] new pictures have been added.' The set is reported to contain 29,000 articles." Subscription Bks Bul

"The revision is uneven and many changes are simply a matter of slight alteration. The dates of death have been added for Barrie, J. M., Adler, Felix, and Freud, Sigmund, but no additional facts regarding the lives of these people are given and no additions have been made to bibliographies. However, the article on Jane Addams has been revised, giving a brief reference to the Nobel prize award and the date of her death. Titles of two books published respectively in 1910 and 1930 were substituted for three titles previously listed. The set is weak in the listing of outstanding, contemporaneous people, e.g. Pearl Buck is cited as a Nobel prize winner but there is no entry under her name. . . This edition of the set is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 11:50 O '40 800w

DOUGLAS, HENRY KYD. I rode with Stonewall. 401p il $3 Univ. of N.C. press

973.78 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives. Jackson, Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall Jackson) (W) 40-35490

The manuscript of this book, edited by the author's nephew, was written in 1899 on the basis of diaries and notes dating from Civil War days and magazine articles of somewhat later date. In its subtitle the work is described as "being chiefly the war experiences of the youngest member of Jackson's staff from the John Brown raid to the hanging of Mrs. Surratt." Bibliographical note. Index.

"A valuable addition to the ever-growing documentation of the War between the States."
+ Atlantic D '40 160w

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

"There is much here aside from the glimpses of Jackson. Douglas was observant, discriminating and intelligent, and what he has to say of battles and campaigns, of soldiers and fellow-officers is illuminating. He reminds us again, too, of what so many Civil War narratives emphasize—the romantic and chivalrous quality of this war. . . For the most part Maj. Douglas's narrative style is straightforward and simple; occasionally it takes on an emotional and poetic quality." H. S. Commager
+ Books p5 D 8 '40 1350w

"To those on whom the Civil War exercises an inescapable attraction, this is unquestionably the book of the season. Or, in fact, of many seasons. First written almost immediately after the close of the war by the youngest member of Jackson's staff, then rewritten and put into final form in 1898-99, the manuscript in some way was tucked away in an attic after the death of its author in 1903, and has only now been rescued from oblivion. It gives by far the most intimate and rounded picture of the Stonewall Jackson known by his troops that we have, or are likely to have." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 58:190 F 5 '41 800w
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 25 '41 450w

"Written originally immediately after the war and revised thoroughly by Colonel Douglas a few years before his death in 1903, this work deserved to see the light long ago."
+ Nation 151:485 N 16 '40 170w

"It is a valuable addition to the history of one phase of the War Between the States, the many and hard-fought battles in and around Virginia, including the famous Valley campaign. It is a colorful, dramatic and often highly amusing narrative, full of good stories, and since Douglas was obviously a man of intelligence and integrity, as well as education and spirit, it is also strikingly fair-minded and accurate." Herschel Brickell
+ N Y Times p4 D 22 '40 1350w

"This is a book of rare quality. Its primary distinction lies in the intimacy, frankness, and discernment with which it treats Stonewall Jackson, substituting a series of graphic undress photographs for the usual portrait in oils. The great commander had become conventionalized. . . This author, who knew Jackson from Bull Run to the tragic end at Appomattox, makes him human, likable, and understandable." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 D 28 '40 700w

DOUGLAS, LLOYD CASSEL. Invitation to live. 393p $2.50 Houghton
(W) 40-33062

The story of a group of young people whose lives are changed by coming under the influence of Dean Harcourt, the protagonist in the author's earlier novel, Green Light (Book Review Digest 1935).

Booklist 37:137 D 1 '40

"Perhaps it should be stated at once that this novel is in every way complete in itself; and also that it is not in the ordinary sense to be called a 'religious' book. Lloyd Douglas's readers will know both these things without being told, of course; but 'Invitation to Live' will undoubtedly win new readers. It is a pleasing romance, peopled with lively young folk who face individual problems in individual ways, and its events hold a bright-spirited interest." John Patton
+ Books p16 N 3 '40 370w
Churchman 155:34 Ja 15 '41 90w

"Lloyd Douglas has mastered a smooth and expert narrative technique. His style is studiously simple. He is careful to avoid the appearance of preaching, to flavor his pronouncements with homely and common-sensible humor, to wrap his incidental moral lessons in a palatable sugar coating of adventure and romance. 'Invitation to Live' is a return engagement for Dean Harcourt of Trinity. Readers who met him first in 'Green Light' will be glad to renew the acquaintance here." M. W.
+ N Y Times p20 N 3 '40 600w

DOUGLAS, WILLIAM ORVILLE. Democracy and finance; ed, with an introd. and notes, by James Allen. 301p $3 Yale univ. press
332.0973 Finance—U.S. 40-34244

These addresses and public statements of the former member and chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, now a Supreme Court justice, have been grouped under the following heads: Democracy in finance; Stock exchanges; Public utilities; Reform of corporate reorganizations; Administrative government; Education in government and law. Index.

"In spite of the somewhat uneven quality of the author's conclusions, the reviewer hopes that this book will receive the careful attention of American business leaders. In the first place, it contains much that will be useful to alert and intelligent business leadership of the future. In the second place, it is a clear-cut statement of the economic philosophy of a man who will probably be in a position to play a major role in shaping the attitude of the government toward business for a long while to come." H. E. Hoagland
+ — Ann Am Acad 213:220 Ja '41 550w

Reviewed by R. A. Sawyer
Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 250w

Reviewed by H. P. Jordan
Living Age 359:388 D '40 1400w

Reviewed by Elliot Janeway
Nation 152:48 Ja 11 '41 1500w

"Speeches usually make rather dull reading when collected and published; the occasions for which they were prepared having passed, their generalities no longer glitter. This is, to some extent, true of the present collection. That it is true in a relatively minor degree is due in the first place to Mr. Douglas, who gave real thought to what he was saying, and secondly to Mr. Allen, who has arranged the material wisely by subject matter rather than by date." G. T. Washington
+ Yale R n s 30:398 winter '41 950w

DOUGLAS-IRVINE, HELEN. Mirror of a dead lady. 333p $2.50 (8s 3d) Longmans 40-27642

"Relates the pathetic story of the short life of Sylvia Dundas, the daughter, born out of wedlock, of a Scots writer and a Chilean adventuress. The fact of Sylvia's illegitimacy, even though her parents subsequently married, dominates her consciousness and involves her in ultimate disaster." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 37:35 O 1 '40

" 'Mirror of a Dead Lady' couldn't have been written more beautifully, more tenderly, and yet it entirely escapes sentimentality in favor of a joyous objectiveness which is an especial triumph in view of the appealing pathos of the story Miss Irvine tells." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p2 S 22 '40 850w
Cath World 152:507 Ja '41 110w

"The various settings are presented with a vivid economy of description, while the characters, so diverse in nationality, are all vital creations. It is a poignant little tale of a bright, vivacious spirit done to death by the grossness and stupidity of less sensitive souls, and the somewhat perfunctory accident which brings it to a conclusion is welcomed by the reader for the assurance it brings of a final escape for Sylvia from the entanglements of her earthly existence." Wilfrid Gibson
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 1 '40 170w

DOUGLAS-IRVINE, HELEN—Continued

"The book is richly endowed in characterization which is striking both for individual originality and for recognizable truth to life. It is, in fact, prodigally rich." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 S 29 '40 600w

"Here, on the same small scale and in the same beautiful proportions as the setting of 'Fray Mario,' are Paris, Chile, and London as they were about the turn of the century, here are the same impeccably modeled human figures and the same deft costuming. But this world is closer to us than viceregal Peru, it is a world without the same glamour, a world to which we are wise. Perhaps a more robust style is needed to do justice to such a world." L. J. Halle, Jr.

Sat R of Lit 22:10 S 14 '40 500w

"Written with taste, and altogether feminine. . . The characterisation is lively, the settings distinct, the sentiment simple, and no less agreeable than the meticulous style of the writing." John Marks

+ Spec 164:340 Mr 8 '40 190w

"Sylvia carries passivity a little too far and the charm of Miss Irvine's novel lies not so much in her character as in the backgrounds against which her ill-starred life is played out. Paris in the nineties, the exquisitely formal Chile of the early years of the century and London in its spacious days before the last war —the pictures of them Miss Irvine presents are proof of the quality of her writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 30 '40 300w

DOWLIN, CORNELL MARCH, ed. The University of Pennsylvania today; its buildings, departments and work. 209p il map $1.50 Univ. of Pa. press

378 Pennsylvania. University 40-13364

"The present volume has been prepared in the hope that it will be of interest to visitors to the University of Pennsylvania and also to undergraduates, alumni, and other friends of the University who would be glad to have a brief outline of its present organization and activities, the extent of its physical equipment, and something of the origin of its many divisions. . . Because of the belief that visitors and others will especially wish to learn how the University of Pennsylvania functions, the book has been organized on the basis of departments." (Foreword) Index.

School & Society 52:128 Ag 24 '40 20w

Social Studies 31:378 D '40 10w

DOWNES, MRS ANNE (MILLER). Until the shearing. 448p $2.50 Stokes

40-33581

Character study of Felix Thorpe, the son of an American actress and her up-state New York engineer husband. The growth of this sensitive boy is traced from childhood to early middle age. The time is the early decades of the present century.

Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"The story makes Clearwater and its people real and interesting and pleasant to know, despite the occasional nostalgia in its reiterated affirmation of the independent traditions of one way of American life. It is easy to believe, and one wants to believe that there have been such places and people, even though it may not be often that helpfulness, generosity, perseverance and self-respect so uniformly win their just and satisfying desert. 'Until the Shearing' is a thoroughly enjoyable novel, told with a storyteller's gift." Mary Ross

+ Books p12 O 20 '40 600w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 65:923 N 1 '40 140w

Nation 151:400 O 26 '40 50w

"The American way of life is the real protagonist of a story which, though not probing deeply into problems social and economic which exist even in Clearwater, is a thoughtful affirmation of belief in American values." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p23 N 3 '40 550w

DOWNES, OLIN, and SIEGMEISTER, ELIE, comps. A treasury of American song. 351p $5 Howell, Soskin

784 Folk songs, American. Ballads (W) 40-34372

A collection of about 140 songs from old Puritan hymns and colonial ballads to the modern blues and jazz songs. "The procedure followed seems to have been, first, a selection in collaboration of the songs to be included; then Mr. Downes wrote critical notes and Mr. Siegmeister made arrangements. The volume begins with an illuminating essay on American music, followed by a short note—this by Mr. Siegmeister —on some of its technical aspects. Thereafter the songs are presented in sections, roughly chronological in their order, each section preceded by a page or two of explanatory text, and most of the songs having a few lines of criticism attached." (Books) Index.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

"Among the war songs popular among American soldiers during the preliminary bout in 1917-'18, they include 'Mademoiselle From Armentieres' and 'It's the Syme the Whole World Over,' both simon-pure British, and omit 'Good Morning, Mr. Zip, Zip, Zip!', which is not only as American as corn on the cob but unique. This is a type that they missed. . . But with this exception duly noted, one may hail the Downes-Siegmeister work with unrestrained enthusiasm. It is not merely another collection of familiar songs; it is a shrewd, intelligent study, with examples, of the history of that American music which is really autochthonous." G. W. Johnson

+ Books p1 N 3 '40 1400w

"Inevitably, any such book must be compared with Carl Sandburg's classic. It includes fewer songs—some 140, as against 270 songs, or fragments of songs, in the 'Songbag.' But the 'Treasury' covers a wider range; and it is a more musicianly book. All the songs have full accompaniments and master-musicians who do not spell out tunes with one finger, as I do at my best, have always held the frailty of the accompaniments against Carl Sandburg's book. . . Yet this is no highbrow collection; this is American song." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p11 O 29 '40 700w

Reviewed by Abbe Niles

New Repub 103:874 D 23 '40 600w

"This is in every way a good book. Where the versions were numerous, and there are as many versions of a true folksong as there are singers to sing it, the editors have chosen well for tune and text. The headnotes are interesting and gracefully phrased; the large comely page for the first time in books of this sort does justice to the printing of the musical score. Mr. Siegmeister's piano accompaniments deserve special mention. They are simple without being scrawny, and they admirably build up the background for each song." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p3 N 17 '40 1100w

"The book inevitably challenges comparison with Carl Sandburg's 'American Songbag', published more than a dozen years ago and since become a classic. The Poet of the Plains emerges, on the whole, unscathed from the comparison. . . But where Sandburg sometimes, exasperatingly, gives only the unaccompanied tune, Siegmeister always gives a playable, singable rendering. His is, on the whole, the greater unity, as is to be expected in a volume steming all from one hand. . . The book is marred by minor flaws." Heinz Norden

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 23 '40 750w

"It may be news to them, but Olin Downes and Elie Siegmeister have put together a book which ought to find its way into the hands of every American playwright, dance choreographer and composer of opera. . . The authors have done a skilful and affectionate job."
+ Theatre Arts 25:76 Ja '41 290w

DOWNING, J. HYATT. Sioux City. 314p $2.50 Putnam
40-6909

In 1884 Anthony Trant, son of a Sioux City doctor, returned from college. He was a hard-headed young person, with an ambition to earn money, and with little sympathy for his horse-and-buggy father's way of letting bills run without trying to collect on them, so he chose another profession. Anthony and Sioux City grow up together, and the results are described in this novel.

"The rather stock characters and situations have their existence against a lively background. For the town swaggers and grows before the reader's eyes. This is an achievement, and an interesting one." Walter Havighurst
+ Books p12 Ap 21 '40 550w

"Mr. Downing's novel is a good, straight-forward one, without bawdy touches or padded local color. His interest lies in Anthony, and the reader's fun is to discover whether or not the unadmirable fellow comes a cropper or not in the end. We can report without spoiling the plot that Mr. Downing's sense of values is absolutely all right, anyhow." O. O.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 230w

"Mr. Downing handles his period background with an ease and naturalness born of close familiarity. The detail of the novel strikes one as authentic, but not particularly noticeable. This makes 'Sioux City,' in fact, an infinitely better period piece than if it had been self-consciously stuffed with horsehair sofas and cast-iron deer." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 14 '40 600w

"'Sioux City' is a vigorous, interesting novel and shows an advance in both characterization and handling of material over Downing's first two novels; moreover the style is less frilly, more sharply masculine. There is less sentimentality, although the novelist is somewhat guilty in his portraits of the hero's father and the heroine's family. One wishes that the heroine were not such a paragon of sense and virtue, and that the Bret Harte touches in the reformed drunkard and gambler were less obvious, but the edge of the main story—that of Anthony Trant—is not blurred, and the novel comes to a forceful and poignant conclusion." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:13 Jl 6 '40 600w

DOWNING, TODD. The Mexican earth. 337p il map $3 Doubleday

917.2 Mexico. National characteristics, Mexican

Study of Mexico and the Mexican people: their history, culture, legends, manners and customs, all of it interspersed with anecdotes tending to explain the Mexican character.

"Mr. Downing has lived many years in Mexico, thought about Mexico a good deal, and read about it at length. Out of this first and second hand knowledge he has put together here a very engaging book." J. H. Jackson
+ Books p21 My 5 '40 500w

"'The Mexican Earth' is neither guide book nor history and lacks index and bibliography. It is written in journalese. As Mr. Downing was a guide, he knows his Mexico and loves it. He also knows the kind of information that the average tourist finds savoury. It is obviously the extra package on that great summer trek to Laredo and Vera Cruz. But for tourist trade only. The only thing not cheap about it is the price." E. V. R. Wyatt
— Commonweal 31:539 Ap 12 '40 600w

"Because Mexico this year is by far one of the most popular travel and vacation spots for Americans, The Mexican Earth becomes a 'must' book for those who contemplate a trip below the border. Delightfully written, the volume immediately makes one feel the spirit of old Mexico, and interprets the baffling personalities and events of today so that the reader really knows the people, the country and the history of that colorful and tragic land."
+ Living Age 358:293 My '40 250w

New Repub 102:681 My 20 '40 30w

"From beginning to end this delightfully written book makes it very clear that Mr. Downing knows Mexico thoroughly and that he loves that beautiful land and its people, whose tragic fate it has been to know throughout their history so much of violence and of dread as well as so much of material splendor and of gallant struggle. . . It is a crying pity that so excellent a book as this should have no index. Its usefulness would be quintupled if it had one." P. A. Means
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 31 '40 1000w

New Yorker 16:76 Mr 30 '40 20w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening
Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 17 '40 320w

Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseuds). The leather burners. 273p $2 Doubleday 40-5187

Detective story featuring the cowboy detectives Rainbow Ripley and Grumpy Gibbs.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 F 11 '40 110w

"The cowboy detectives found plenty of problems to solve, and also that their solution called for plenty of fighting. How they went about it and the nefarious schemes they uncovered before peace was restored to the range make a fast and lively Western yarn, perhaps the best of the half-dozen that Bliss Lomax has published." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 3 '40 180w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseuds). Rider of the midnight range. 283p $2 Morrow 40-10189

Western story.

"It's a spirited yarn with a bit of fun in the right places." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 Je 16 '40 130w

"If you are very tired of one, two or three corpses and everything done very scientifically, get hold of this. Crimes in the West, so it seems, are solved by wholesale slaughter. Great stuff for the jaded literary detective." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 130w

"The tale is swift-paced and lively, without a dull page, and is the best written story Will Ermine has thus far produced."
+ N Y Times p15 Je 23 '40 180w

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR (WILL ERMINE, BLISS LOMAX, pseuds). Singing lariat. 281p $2 Morrow 39-32382

Western story.

Booklist 36:239 F 15 '40

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p26 D 10 '39 130w

"Whether the story gains or loses by [the] comparative lack of violence will depend upon the taste of the reader. Whatever the verdict may be on this count, the book provides an interesting picture of life in Nebraska immediately before and immediately after the Territory's admission to Statehood. The characters are well drawn." I. A.
+ N Y Times p7 D 31 '39 240w

DRAPER, ARTHUR L. Wonders of the heavens; astronomy for young people; il. by Barry Bart. 28p 50c Random house

520 Astronomy—Juvenile literature (W) 41-1021

Primer of astronomy, explaining the essentials in simple language for readers from eight to ten. The author is director of the Buhl planetarium and Institute of popular science.

Reviewed by A. E. Brown
Library J 65:1091 D 15 '40 80w

"Attractive." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 16 '40 10w

DRATLER, JAY. Ducks in thunder. 247p $2 Reynal

40-30395

The story of a bold young American's rescue of a German friend's sweetheart from the Gestapo in Vienna. The two escape by train and bus, on foot and on skis out of Austria and across the mountains, take the plane for Paris, but arrive too late. The Gestapo had caught up with Hans.

Booklist 37:117 N 15 '40

"A narrative of tense and sometimes brutal violence." George Conrad
Books p11 S 22 '40 400w

"In no manner important or admirable (it's even pretty raw in spots), Mr. Dratler's exciting trumpery may keep you happily diverted for an hour."
Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 150w

New Repub 103:482 O 7 '40 40w

"A love-adventure story that moves at a terrific pace down to the last chapter. George tells the story himself with the gusto of a very hearty young man. Readers who enjoy breath-taking adventure fiction seasoned with amorous romance (George leaves very little to one's imagination!) will find Mr. Dratler's exciting story a good evening's entertainment." Drake de Kay
+ — N Y Times p22 S 29 '40 420w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 320w

DRESSER, DAVIS. Death rides the Pecos. 249p $2 Morrow [3s 6d Ward, Lock] 40-11749

Western story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p18 S 22 '40 80w

"Hamp Jerome, a 'bad' man, is a novel criminal. He possesses a kind heart and some scruples. And the good characters have just the right amount of vices to make them human and likeable. However, although the story is engrossing, the ending seems forced." E. M. Wedrow
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 180w

"The story is fairly well written, but not well enough to hide some careless discrepancies or to make plausible certain preposterous situations and impossible happenings. It is largely derivative and inferior to its models." G. W. Harris
— + N Y Times p18 Ag 11 '40 200w

DRESSER, DAVIS. The hangmen of Sleepy Valley. 250p $2 Morrow

40-31520

Western story.

Booklist 37:156 D 15 '40

"Swift and likable." Will Cuppy
+ Books p18 N 3 '40 50w

DREW, ELIZABETH A. (MRS B. W. DOWNS), and SWEENEY, JOHN L. Directions in modern poetry. 290p $2.75 Norton

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. Poetry. American poetry—History and criticism (W) 40-27435

The aim of this book "is to try to give some account of the variety and significance of the poetry of the last twenty-five years, and particularly to do so by the method of supporting generalizations by example and examination." (Introd) Contents: The poet and his audience; The waste land; The nineteen twenties; Poetry and meaning; The nineteen thirties; Poets of affirmation: D. H. Lawrence, T. S. Eliot, W. B. Yeats; The poet and his medium; Visions and revisions; The logic of the imagination; Pattern; The poet's tongue; The poet and the community. Index.

Booklist 36:362 My 15 '40

Reviewed by Howard Baker
Books p13 Je 30 '40 700w

Reviewed by John Holmes
Boston Transcript p11 Ag 5 '40 190w

Cath World 151:755 S '40 280w

"This book on the trends in contemporary verse is a very welcome piece of sane, appreciative and understanding criticism. . . Its main fault, despite some neat dressing down, lies in too great sympathy with ambitious obscurity and too great a reverence for occasional grandiose shams." J. G. E. Hopkins
+ — Commonweal 32:214 Je 28 '40 180w

Reviewed by Eugene Jolas
Living Age 358:494 Jl '40 60w

"In general, Miss Drew and Mr. Sweeney's conversations on modern poetry are of a nature that would have delighted Dr. Samuel Johnson's 'common reader.' Their wit and ease should serve as an example to our more serious critics of contemporary writing." Horace Gregory
+ New Repub 102:735 My 27 '40 600w

"The essay form dominates the book, and while it is most charming and literary and agreeable in its quotations and allusions, we come to feel that its directions and decisions are neither strong nor very adventurous. . . Miss Drew and Mr. Sweeney, in adopting the essay style, have given up the opportunity of public information and public debate. But though the range is narrow, the quality of taste and style should be enough to interest those who are interested in poetry." P. M. Jack
+ — N Y Times p6 My 19 '40 1900w

New Yorker 16:99 My 11 '40 30w

"The chapters of criticism in this book devoted to criticism of contemporary English and American poets are thoughtful and well written, though not deeply critical. Many of the general observations about poetry and the writing of poetry have vigor and penetration. The 'modern' movement might have been more broadly charted and its peculiarities of meter and diction treated more fully in relation to earlier literary forms and its immediate predecessors. There are, however, a number of pertinent comparisons." E. N. Jenckes
+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 27 '40 1250w

"The most matter-of-fact book about modern poetry yet published."
Time 35:100 My 13 '40 40w

DRUMMOND, MRS RUTH. A woman faces the war. 183p $1.50 Kinsey

940.5481 European war, 1939—Personal narratives 40-11219

Diary in letter form written by an English mother living in Bedford, England. Her husband works at the construction of barrage balloons, and it is up to the author to care for her four young children, keep them clothed, fed, cheerful and unafraid in a country at war. These letters about her daily life cover the period from September 4, 1939 to April 21, 1940.

"One of the most readable of the war books. It is a confidential report from behind spiritual lines that hold firm." M. L. Becker

+ Books p13 Je 30 '40 600w

"It is a brave, thoughtful, realistic book—yet to read it today is like listening to a voice in a dream, long, long, ago."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 23 '40 340w

"Here, without heroics or fine writing, is one English woman's reaction to the first eight months of the war. . . There is a quiet courage and wholesome commonsense about the book. Mrs. Drummond speaks a language universal among women." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 N 9 '40 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 25 '40 900w

DRURY, CLIFFORD MERRILL. Elkanah and Mary Walker; pioneers among the Spokanes. 283p il map $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 Walker, Elkanah. Walker, Mrs Mary (Richardson). Missions—Oregon

40-4680

Biography of two early missionaries to the Oregon country, Elkanah and Mary Walker. It is also the story of the Tshimakain Mission station, near the present city of Spokane. The work includes a great part of Mrs Walker's hitherto unpublished diary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:305 Ap 1 '40

"It is not clear that Elkanah and Mary Walker ever accomplished anything worth remembering, but this account of their efforts to carry the gospel to the heathen Spokanes illuminates one chapter in our history and one aspect of our national character. It is an account which succeeds, almost in spite of the author, in being interesting; its interest, vitality, and humor are found in the excerpts from the journals and letters of the heroine, Mary Walker." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p20 Mr 31 '40 1000w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 130w

Christian Century 57:283 F 28 '40 130w

"The book is painstakingly accurate and is no doubt the last word on the subject." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 5 '40 700w

Reviewed by A. R. Moore

Crozer Q 17:301 O '40 130w

DU BOIS, GUY PENE. Artists say the silliest things. 318p il $3.75 Duell

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

41-1201

"The fourth volume in the series of books by and about contemporary American artists, published by the American Artists Group. . . The book gives an account in the third person of the very young Guy, fictionized as Giles, and his life in New Orleans, Manhattan and Staten Island. . . Book 2 begins with an account of the Chase school in New York, where the youth began his formal education. . . In the course of the book Mr du Bois presents many of his contemporaries, both American and French, with frank and discriminating comment on their work. . . Mr du Bois's book is illustrated with 44 excellent reproductions, including three in color." Springf'd Republican

"He is always animated and colorful, and there is a tincture of thoughtfulness running through the book. At the back there is a collection of his paintings and drawings, well reproduced. It is difficult to choose between them and the text for evidences of the seeing eye and the caustic touch possessed by Mr. du Bois." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p6 D 1 '40 1300w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

Commonweal 33:148 N 29 '40 240w

Reviewed by Peggy Bacon

New Repub 103:592 O 28 '40 400w

"The first third of the book is given to the author's childhood and youth; there is a fine portrait of his remarkable father. He recounts his experience as a New York art critic, an experience which incidentally presents an entertaining history of the growth of art appreciation in this country. Excellent reproductions of the painter's work supplement the text." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 D 15 '40 850w

"There's little here to illuminate either the theory or the practice of painting, but as a straight autobiography of a man who's been around a good deal in his fifty-odd years, it's lively reading."

New Yorker 16:88 N 2 '40 30w

"In a quiet way this book is throughout colorful and witty. On the more serious side it expresses a resolute empirical endeavor quite free from illusion or malice. This habit of mind perhaps diminishes the amount of Dichtung usual in autobiographies, but it also greatly enhances the quota of Wahrheit. It is a book which everyone who concerns himself with recent art in America must read and own." F. J. Mather, jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 2 '40 800w

"The title, a quotation from the late William Glackens, a friend and kindred spirit of the author's, is not exemplified by this breezy, philosophical and informative book. Nor is Mr du Bois, a veteran writer, like the group of artists of whom he tells who 'knew what they were talking about, but wouldn't say it.' He can say it."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 850w

DU BOIS, MARY CONSTANCE. Shadow Cove mystery; il. by Elise Parks. 310p $2 Appleton-Century

40-4718

Mystery story for older girls.

"An adult reviewer, conscientiously working through what now affects her like a third helping of banana split, reflects that there was once a time in her life, as in that of most girls, when it was practically impossible to get enough of this form of food. We did not take it for nourishment, but we took a lot of it and it didn't hurt us." M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 24 '40 210w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 2 '40 40w

Reviewed by M. A. Whitney

Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 27 '40 160w

DU BOIS, THEODORA. Death comes to tea. 232p $2 Houghton

40-14187

Detective story.

"This smoothly spun tale might find its best audience among the lady fans, meaning no offense. Among its lifelike characters love is all, or practically all; it features several feline fights and the most awful accusations are hurled at a nice girl, or is she a diabolical fiend?" Will Cuppy

Books p26 O 27 '40 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p33 O 20 '40 280w

Sat R of Lit 23:17 O 26 '40 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM. The case of the deadly diary. 282p $2 Little 40-2006

Detective story.

"Written in plain, speedy prose of the fashionable mystery kind." Will Cuppy

Books p13 Ja 7 '40 190w

"A first mystery so good that all the time you are reading it you are wondering what else this guy DuBois has written." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM—Continued
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p17 Ja 7 '40 200w

"Feverish activity from Manhattan start to Florida finish. Author plays premier clue bit too close to vest. Otherwise jake. Good grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 6 '40 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM. The case of the frightened fish. 276p $2 Little 40-13043

Detective story.

"No great shakes as a puzzle, this may be read for its piscatorial background and hit-or-miss excitement." Will Cuppy
Books p9 Ag 18 '40 110w

"Frightfully exciting, sometimes a little melodramatic, but still good reading." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 70w

"A lively tale—with just a little too much explaining left to be done in the last chapter." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 11 '40 220w
New Yorker 16:56 Ag 31 '40 20w
Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 10 '40 40w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT. Dusk of dawn; an essay toward an autobiography of a race concept. 334p $3 Harcourt
B or 92 Negroes (W) 40-27643

Autobiography of a Negro educator, editor and writer, a leader of his people in the fight against racial intolerance. Index.

Booklist 37:34 O 1 '40

"If 'Dusk of Dawn' lacks in parts the passion and poetry of 'The Souls of Black Folk,' it also lacks much of its bitterness; it is a mellower book, provocative throughout. Though some will question some of Dr. DuBois's premises and many may disagree with many of his conclusions none can fail to find it a brilliant record of an inspiring life." A. B. Spingarn
+ Books p6 S 8 '40 950w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p3 S 7 '40 900w

Reviewed by J. F. Mulholland
Christian Century 57:1211 O 2 '40 750w

"This book is in every way creditable to this famous Negro educator. . . A graduate of Fisk and of Harvard, he brought to his life's work, an innate ability trained to the great task thrust upon him. Unflinchingly performed, it will remain his monument." A. L. Byron-Curtiss
+ Churchman 154:16 O 1 '40 150w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"Dr. DuBois describes in a mood of mounting intensity, sternly held in check, his own changing attitude towards the restricting bars set up against the world of color. The story of Dr. DuBois' life, devoted to a program of action against these restrictions, presents an unforgettable picture of the changing social life of our time. It should be read widely, not only by those interested in the Negro, but by all who are concerned about our American way of life and its future." Ernestine Rose
+ Library J 65:707 S 1 '40 170w

"Considerable beauty and sound decision are to be found in this autobiography of Mr. DuBois, the Negro educator and historian, but unfortunately it is so concerned with the general racial question that it provides but a dim portrait of that extraordinary man himself."
+ — Nation 151:512 N 23 '40 160w

Reviewed by M. R. Werner
New Repub 103:700 N 18 '40 550w

Reviewed by L. C. Jones
N Y Times p16 D 22 '40 1400w
New Yorker 16:70 S 7 '40 50w

"No one can deny that this book must be on the shelves of every collection dealing with the colored race. Whatever is in store for us, Dr. DuBois has done well for his own future standing in the light of history and for the correct interpretation of his people and their problem by writing this noteworthy book." O. G. Villard
+ Sat R of Lit 22:26 O 12 '40 1200w
Social Studies 31:380 D '40 20w
Time 36:83 S 9 '40 300w

DU BOIS, WILLIAM PENE. The great Geppy; il. by [the author]. 92p $2 Viking
(W) 40-6302

The great Geppy was a horse, red-and-white striped, like an awning, who in this grave nonsense tale for children, succeeded in solving the mysterious safe robbings in a circus.

Booklist 36:368 My 15 '40

"This volume, crammed with pictures, is a thrilling successor to 'The Three Policemen' and as good as a circus for young and old." Will Cuppy
+ Books p17 Ap 21 '40 140w

"The mystery has an amiable solution; nothing in the book could have happened, which is so soothing to the mind I recommend it to older people who want to keep calm, and have learned that a laugh may loosen a knot in the nerves. Not all young readers will laugh at it: many will think it silly: it is not a book for commonplace children. There are a great many such, who will grow up into admirable, even leading citizens, but will miss many laughs along the way." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 My 5 '40 260w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 20 '40 230w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 26 '40 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"A highly original picture book with an imaginative story affording a great deal of fun to readers not too literal or conventional in taste." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:166 My '40 100w

"The most distinguished and I think also the most original and delightful book of the Spring is The Great Geppy by William Pène duBois. Let no reviewer attempt to tell the story of this remarkable red and white striped horse, who talks, writes letters, solves a mystery inside the circus and achieves a character unmistakably his own." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:175 My '40 170w

Reviewed by M. F. Potter
Library J 65:502 Je 1 '40 140w

"With a binding striped even as Geppy himself and colored illustrations that do justice to the variety and ingenuity of the text, it is a book which no child, and few grown-ups, can resist." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 100w

"This gifted young artist-author has an inventive mind, his tale of Geppy develops with a refreshing unexpectedness, and his beautifully made drawings have humor, wit and imagination. Geppy, who, unless he reared on his hind legs to make his stripes go across instead of up and down, could not be seen in the red and white striped circus tent, inspires the same confidence which readers feel in all the great detectives of fiction; he has, moreover, something of the sturdy reliability which children find in their best-loved animal toys." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 21 '40 650w

"The book, which defies classification, is as full of giddy nonsense and gay pictures as its predecessor, 'The Three Policemen,' yet this time the dizziness seems a shade less spontaneous. Try it, though, on a child of almost any age." K. S. W.
New Yorker 16:97 My 18 '40 40w
Wis Lib Bul 36:144 O '40

DU BOS, CHARLES. What is literature? 124p $2 (5s) Sheed
801 Literature—Philosophy 40-13935

"Here are gathered four lectures given by the French philosopher to the faculty of St. Mary's College at Notre Dame. In them he touches upon such deep matters as the relation of Literature to 'the Soul,' 'to Light,' 'to Beauty' and 'to the Word'—since literature is itself 'an incarnation wherein the creative emotion is made flesh in words.' To Charles Du Bos it is also the 'meeting-ground of two souls,' and when our 'psychic temperature' falls low, he wisely sends us to the great writers of past and present, that from them we may win that 'correct diagnosis' which is the first requirement for healing." Cath World

"Mr. Du Bos is a master of Catholic criticism at its best—a criticism at once clearly objective and intensely subjective in its rightness; and to all who prize such criticism and the Catholic literature it serves, this last will and testament among his published books takes to itself something of the sanctity and indispensability of a missal." K. B.
+ Cath World 152:364 D '40 200w

"A steady but not arbitrary insistence that the essential quality of creative literature is sacramental is the compelling theme of this little book, which is sufficiently remote from the habit of contemporary criticism to have a salutary influence: for du Bos was never afraid to use the big indefinable words as the instruments of his analysis, in the firm conviction that they had accumulated depths of meaning which were indispensable to the effort to reveal the significance of literature."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Ap 13 '40 550w

DUDLEY, FRANK, pseud. See Greene, W.

DUFFIELD, ANNE. The sweeping tide. 303p $2 Arcadia [8s Cassell]
[40-31623]

"Miss Duffield tells how poor but pretty Rose Randall accompanied her rich and even prettier cousin to Paris just before war broke out. Rose was to study in order to earn her living, while Melissa went to an expensive 'finishing' school; but Fate had very different things in store for them both." Times [London] Lit Sup

"If you want a story in which Mars yields the stage to Venus, 'The Sweeping Tide' won't let you down." Lisle Bell
Books p12 Ja 12 '41 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Ag 10 '40 70w

DUGGAN, EILEEN MAY. New Zealand poems. 63p $1.25 Macmillan [2s Allen, G] 821

"These poems are published 'in honour of the Centennial of the Dominion of New Zealand,' but apart from the opening 'Centenary Ode' and one later 'Ode,' Miss Duggan celebrates the genius of her country less by direct address and acclamation than by expressing with loving insight the minute particulars of its life. . . She is as imaginatively intimate with the Maoris as with the settlers from oversea, so that in such verses as 'A Maori to Mary,' 'A Maori Lullaby,' or 'Peace of Hina,' the two streams of native culture meet and mingle." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:87 N 1 '40

"Here is poetry of the purest water. Miss Duggan writes of the land and people of New Zealand, and she knows both their inward and their outward truth. Her use of words and patterns is highly individual, her imagery has strength as well as freshness, her lines have that spontaneous quality which marks the born poet. Because of her technical skill and her awareness of the uncommon and bitter beauty of common things she belongs in the great English lyric tradition."
+ Christian Century 57:1251 O 9 '40 80w

"There is not a poem in this little book that fails to reveal a fresh perception or an entirely individual utterance. Eileen Duggan's is one of the very few authentic lyric voices of our time." Theodore Maynard
+ Commonweal 32:473 S 27 '40 350w

"Words are unusually real to her, and she handles them sensitively. Of rhythm and rhyme she is less a master, and both at times can be rather facile."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 24 '40 250w

DUHAMEL, GEORGES. Cécile Pasquier; tr. from the French by Béatrice de Holthoir [Eng title: Cécile among the Pasquiers]. 634p $2.75 Holt [9s 6d Dent]
(W) 40-9305

Another installment in the long chronicle of the French family of Pasquiers. This volume covers in time the six or eight years before the first World war, and ends in July, 1914. Joseph, the business man who stoops so low as to swindle his own family; Cécile, the famous pianist; and Laurent, the idealistic scientist who rides for a fall, are the principal characters.

Booklist 36:412 Jl 1 '40

"The 400 pages devoted to Laurent constitute a carefully documented, insidiously deliberate study in the disillusionment of the idealist in the world of science. This is hardly a new theme in fiction, but it seems to remain as poignant and dismaying as ever." Milton Rugoff
+ Books p3 My 26 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Thomas Lester
Boston Transcript p2 My 25 '40 500w

"Each member of the family seems as real as a personal friend of long standing. Fine characterization, probably not enough action to be popular with young people." Lena Ruppert
+ Library J 65:397 My 1 '40 120w

"The narrative displays a precise and forceful style, but, as in the earlier work, there is a certain unreality about the dialogue which one could wish away. It is the sole defect in a brilliant picture of French middle-class life." G. Irwin-Carruthers
+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Je 3 '40 550w

"It would be unjust to deny M. Duhamel a great many admirable qualities. He is talented, sincere, careful, a good stylist, a tasteful sentimentalist and an acute psychologist; but he is not a genius, and it would be unfair to judge him by the standards one applies to greatness. 'A truly great book,' 'one of the great pieces of fiction of our time' should light a fire in the mind, or wake a tide in the blood, or play on at least one passion or sensibility. The Pasquiers, however, do none of these things, and I am sure that few even of their greatest admirers can claim that they brought them the mildest catharsis." John Mair
— + New Statesman & Nation 19:704 Je 1 '40 700w

"The Pasquier saga is an ornament of contemporary French literature. One cannot help but wonder gloomily whether we shall ever see more of it." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p2 My 26 '40 1350w

"Because he is writing about a family, and also a civilization, Duhamel denies himself the advantage of a closely knit plot and a concentration of interest on one character. But he is continuously interesting, serious but not heavy, often profound. If this is not a great novel, it is an intensely readable one."
+ New Yorker 16:92 My 25 '40 130w
Pratt p23 autumn '40

"Georges Duhamel, like Romain Rolland and others, has embarked upon a monumental task. Necessary to enjoyment of his work is a mood which does not seek quick and decisive action,

DUHAMEL, GEORGES—Continued
but is content to move, like life, slowly and sometimes infuriatingly in wading through a mass of cause that produces an eventual effect. Tremendous patience and a gift for detail have gone into the work; patience of a different sort and concentration on detail are necessary to savor its richness."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 2 '40 550w
Time 35:92 Je 17 '40 90w

"It is, very briefly, a nobly civilized novel, which bears the imprint of the intellectual and moral passion of the line of French humanists from Montaigne. 'Je n'enseigne point; je raconte.' That is M. Duhamel's genius also."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Je 15 '40 950w
Wis Lib Bul 36:137 O '40

DULLES, FOSTER RHEA. America learns to play. 441p il $4 Appleton-Century
790 Recreation—History. U.S.—Social life and customs (W) 40-27383

"A history of popular recreation, 1607-1940." (Subtitle) Partial contents: Husking-bees and tavern sports; The Colonial aristocracy; The theatre comes of age; Mr Barnum shows the way; Cow-towns and mining-camps; The rise of sports; World of fashion; The growth of the movies; A nation on wheels; On the air; Sports for all; The new leisure. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:340 My 1 '40

"This book is unique. So far as I know there has been nothing of its kind. The author has done a tremendous amount of research and he has integrated his material in first-class order. Here in one large volume is a sober workable account of the rises and falls of American sports and amusements, varying from Chautauqua to wheel burlesque, from charades to crossword puzzles, from one-base cat to skiing. . . The illustrations, many from old woodcuts and lithographs, could not be better." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p7 Ap 7 '40 1350w

"What could be less promising than a Columbia University thesis for a Ph.D. by somebody named Dulles? But here is entertainment such as rarely issues from ivy towers as a current professor of history at Smith College surveys American recreation." Benjamin Bowker
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 600w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester
Commonweal 32:21 Ap 26 '40 800w

"Both scholarly and entertaining, this account of the ways in which America has enjoyed itself during three and a half centuries clarifies what with most of us are rather hazy ideas of amusements from husking bees and tavern sports to motors, movies, and public parks."
+ J Home Econ 33:45 Ja '41 80w

"America's pastimes form an essential chapter in its social history, for the intimate folkways of a people—unconscious in motivation and devoid of obscuring rationalizations—often emerge most clearly in its leisure-time pursuits. Mr. Dulles' work is a praiseworthy attempt to chronicle the history of such activities through three centuries of hectic evolution. With painstaking attention to detail and with constant reference to a wide variety of sources he has put together the first complete study of the subject and provided a valuable point of reference for those working in his field." Oscar Handlin
+ New Eng Q 13:567 S '40 650w
New Repub 102:801 Je 10 '40 50w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p1 Ap 14 '40 1450w

"Perhaps too sedate for the subject, but an entertaining, well-documented job."
+ — New Yorker 16:95 Ap 20 '40 40w
Pratt p20 autumn '40

Reviewed by H. D. Meyer
Social Forces 19:126 O '40 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 28 '40 230w

"Mr. Dulles' history of popular recreation is a unique and greatly needed contribution to the literature of the movement. His lively and often humorous treatment of the material he has assembled with so much research adds to the interest, as do the old wood cuts with which the book is illustrated." Abbie Condit
+ Survey 76:278 S '40 430w
Wis Lib Bul 36:97 My '40

"Mr. Dulles is an able scholar who sees the imaginative possibilities in his subject, and knows how to write with clarity and grace. His book offers a series of piquant samplings, rather than the exhaustive analysis of any one topic. Yet one wishes that he had explored even more bypaths." Dixon Wecter
+ — Yale R n s 29:828 summer '40 400w

DU MAURIER, ANGELA. Weep no more [Eng title: The spinning wheel]. 296p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Joseph, M] 40-13626

The heroine is Mary Fitzgerald, an Irish beauty. Her first husband, a Scottish lord who died during the first World war, was the real love of her life. Her second marriage was to a German professor, who committed suicide to set her free at the approach of the second war. The last episode in Mary's life was with a boy many years her junior, who bore the same name as her beloved first husband, and who in some ways seemed the reincarnation of the first Sirion.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Jl 28 '40 300w

"Mary, Sirion, Val—their son—and Uncle Herman—Mary's second husband—are so alive they vibrate. The second Sirion, however, has about him just enough of unreality to make his story convincing. This is a puzzling book, beautifully written; a book to be read, put away, thought about and re-read." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 3 '40 290w

"[Weep No More] did not impress me as being a particularly well-written or convincing story." J. D. Beresford
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 21 '40 180w

"Miss du Maurier moves her story swiftly and with sincerity; in spots, though, her characters' passion seems a little unconvincing."
+ — New Repub 103:198 Ag 5 '40 50w

Reviewed by Rose Feld
N Y Times p18 Jl 28 '40 550w

"An innocently voluptuous romance of highish life. Miss du Maurier makes an attempt to relate her characters to historical events, but the book remains a tea-shop daydream." Rosamond Lehmann
— Spec 164:574 Ap 19 '40 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Ap 6 '40 230w

DUMESNIL, MAURICE. Claude Debussy: master of dreams. 326p $2.50 Washburn
B or 92 Debussy, Achille Claude 40-32738

This biography of the modern French composer, who died in 1918, is written by a friend and based upon the personal notes of Debussy's widow, who also authorized the book. The book stresses Debussy's love of Paris. He "was so intensely Parisian that he never could stay away from Paris long. He threw up the Prix de Rome after a few months' sojourn in the Villa Medici, because of his longing for the Paris boulevards. The book is filled with gay and charming descriptions of Paris cafés, of Claude's favorite sweet shops, of the sociable pharmacy where he met Lily Texier, who became his first wife, of the suburbs and parks where he spent his Sundays, walking and dreaming." (Sat R of Lit)

DU MAURIER (dü-mō'ryā')

Reviewed by Peter Bowdoin
Books p36 N 10 '40 1400w

"Here a volume of insistent charm presents itself, faithful, granted, to fact, yet abounding in fancy." W. P. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 S 21 '40 450w

"Maurice Dumesnil, an internationally famous concert pianist, has written a delightfully intimate sketch of the life of his compatriot, Claude-Achille Debussy. . . The book is vividly written and full of entertaining anecdotes which aid in tying up the composer's life with his famous music scores." W. P. Sears, Jr.
+ Churchman 154:20 O 15 '40 160w

"Mr. Dumesnil's writing is sensitive and perceptive at times; at other moments it tends to be lush and old-fashioned. But he keeps the story moving. He does not pause to give exact dates in many instances, keeping his eye on the human elements of the tale. Readers who are in search of all the precise information, dates and details of Debussy's life—as much as we know of them—had better turn elsewhere. Those who seek a free picture of France's greatest composer will find it in this book." Howard Taubman
+ — N Y Times p9 N 24 '40 750w

"The style of Mr. Dumesnil's book is not conspicuous. The biography is a fair, honest, complete one, simply and directly written. . . The musician, Claude Debussy, appears before us with photographic accuracy, and we can much better understand his music when we see the man who created it." Katharine Scherman
+ Sat R of Lit 22:16 O 5 '40 400w
Springf'd Republican p5 N 4 '40 130w

"That the book is meant to have popular appeal is indicated by its frequent direct quotation of conversations that offhand do not appear to have lent themselves to exact recording. Written in an easy, almost superficial, style, the biography is not documented and makes no pretense of being definitive."
Springf'd Republican p6 N 11 '40 290w

DUNBAR, PAUL LAURENCE. Little brown baby. 106p il $1.50 Dodd
811 (W) 40-4721

Poems for young readers, selected from the works of the Negro poet, Paul Laurence Dunbar. The volume contains a biographical sketch by Bertha Rodgers; illustrations are by Erick Berry.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ap 7 '40 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"Some children will be discouraged by the dialect, but the book is a delightful introduction to the well-known Negro poet. Black and white drawings by Erick Berry add to the appeal of the book, and a biographical sketch of the author adds to its usefulness." Marian Herr
+ — Library J 65:355 Ap 15 '40 60w

DUNCAN, MRS EULA GRIFFIN. Big Road Walker; based on stories told by Alice Cannon; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 121p $1.75 Stokes
40-34007

Stories of a black Paul Bunyan, who was so big that he could carry all five of his children in the bowl of his pipe, and of his tiny wife, Hokey, who could work magic. The stories are told in simplified dialect. For children of eight or nine and up. Some of the stories are not suitable for the very young.

"There has been nothing so important in its line as this book since 'Uncle Remus.' . . A visitor to this office read most of it standing by my desk the other day, coming out of a trance when I took it away from her." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 S 22 '40 550w

"A fresh and exhilarating collection of tall tales. . . The dialect is slightly different from that of Joel Chandler Harris, the material is new to readers and in no way derived from him. It is good substance for storytelling, preserving as it does a truly American piece of literary invention and a highly entertaining one at that." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:435 N '40 120w

"It has the flavor, naiveté, and unconscious humor of real southern Negro talk! Realism blends imperceptibly with the impossible. . . Three of the stories [are] unsuitable for younger children. But they will fascinate those from eight or nine years up." Maude Adams
+ — Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 180w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 50w

"Whatever his antecedents, Big Road Walker and his family are worth knowing. . . This is an eerie world of mind-twisting proportions and grotesque creatures, but so childlike in its conception, so genuinely humorous in its fantasy and rooted firmly in common earth, that there is no suggestion of horror or ugliness. It is the kind of world which children invent for themselves and the yarns about it are shaped with a born story-teller's skill, rolling on with the free swing of Negro dialect transcribed at its best. It is a gusty, rollicking addition to our cherished store of native tall tales." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 N 10 '40 280w

DUNCAN, IDA RILEY. The complete book of progressive knitting; with foreword by Julia P. Crant and Gertrude S. Capps. 387p il $2.50 Liveright
646.26 Knitting (W) 40-9950

Handbook on knitting. The history of knitting from Egyptian times is used as a background. That is followed with step-by-step instructions from casting on stiches to binding off; with illustrated directions for knitting various kinds of garments. Index.

Booklist 36:407 Jl 1 '40
J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 60w

"The book is written simply and clearly, leaving no guesswork in the directions of articles ranging from dresses to mittens. The index is satisfactorily inclusive and the text profusely illustrated."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 14 '40 90w
Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

DUNCAN, MARION. On the farm; a photographic picture book. 40p 50c McKay
630.1 Farm life—Juvenile literature 40-32876

Brief text and photographs describe the adventures of two real boys on a Wisconsin farm.

"Will help small city children to understand farm life. The text is slight but direct and not 'written down.' " E. D. Briggs
+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 60w

"Interesting and educational."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:40 D 7 '40 40w
Wis Lib Bul 36:170 D '40

DUNCAN, THOMAS WILLIAM. Ring horse. 239p $2 Doubleday
40-7857

When old Dan Gilpin and his beautiful circus horse, Silver Fire, are stranded in an Iowa town, Dan makes two friends—a struggling young lawyer and the little, red-headed daughter of the county prosecutor. But Dan also makes an enemy—the county prosecutor himself who, with the help of an unscrupulous livery stable man, tries to run Danny out of town. In the end Betty and Paul Reese save Danny who then returns to his old life in the circus.

DUNCAN, T. W.—Continued

"A capital yarn with tanbark flavor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Je 2 '40 420w

"Frankly sentimental but vigorously told tale."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 230w

"'Ring Horse' is a thoroughly enjoyable, absorbing yarn. It is first-rate telling of a slim, sentimental story. . . But the style hasn't a trace of mawkishness—in fact, it has all the detail and impersonality of a good detective story with an endearing touch of old-fashioned pomposity and oblique humor." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p15 My 26 '40 310w

"The book is slight and runs along well trodden ways for the most part but in these days of stress it is pleasant to turn again to 1915 and deal with purely personal problems." G. G.

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 320w

DUNN, VIOLETTE KIMBALL. No other wisdom. 282p $2 Dutton

40-3030

A young girl brought up to a life of luxury and idleness is rushed into marriage by an unscrupulous, managing mother. The man turns out to be a homicidal maniac, and the girl escapes just in time. With courage and common sense the girl makes a new and happier life for herself.

"'No Other Wisdom' is an interesting study of the sort of woman you wouldn't care to have around the house." Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ja 7 '40 150w

"An amusing story. It is light-weight but engaging entertainment. It leaves you with a fondness for Alena in spite of her overwhelming good looks and with the satisfaction of seeing her in a safe port with a true love at last." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 14 '40 280w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 18 '40 360w

DUNSANY, EDWARD JOHN MORETON DRAX PLUNKETT, 18th baron. The story of Mona Sheehy. 334p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Heinemann]

(W) 40-4884

For reasons explained in the opening pages of this novel, Mona Sheehy, her father Dennis O'Flanagan, and all the village folk believed she was the daughter of the Queen of the Fairies. How the village threw her out, how she lived among the tinkers and then in London, and then finally how and why she returned home and married Peter, is told in this modern fairy story.

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40

Bookmark p12 My '40

"It is, as one would expect, a tale of imagination all compact, lighted with glints of humor and satiric flashes, written in a sensitive, delicately cadenced prose as variable in poetic mood as the changing Irish landscapes it describes." J. S. Mabon

+ Books p10 Mr 24 '40 480w

Reviewed by Mary Manning

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 22 '40 240w

Cath World 151:633 Ag '40 190w

"Who could tell such a charming story as this quite as charmingly as Lord Dunsany? We smile at the strange simplicities of the people of Athroonagh, wonder at the cunning illegalities of his tinkers . . . and so forget, as we read, that we are living in such a very different world. And can literature at the present moment have any kindlier uses than that of transporting us into such a country of the mind? Lord Dunsany tells us in one place of 'an Irishman's anxiety not to be definite,' and if we would enjoy the story Mona Sheehy to the full we must not limit our imaginations by applying the criterions of modern town-life." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 29 '39 440w

"This book, alas, is a falling between two stools; the poetic realism of Up in the Hills will not mix into the same vessel which holds a fairy story like The Curse of the Wise Woman. Readers will be happier with either of those pleasant books which are entities for one thing and for another do not lay on charm with the careless trowel wielded here with such chilling effect." Anthony West

— New Statesman & Nation 18:462 S 30 '39 210w

"Lord Dunsany writes with grace, wit and humor. Criticism may well judge these last Irish romances to be the redundancies of an imagination which has done its best work. But they are, for all that, charming, beautifully phrased tales with the mellowness of the past on them." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 24 '40 650w

"Lord Dunsany handles this all lightly and pleasantly, with plenty of Irish talk, a touch of romance, and a whiff of a moral. First-class if you like the class."

+ New Yorker 16:86 Mr 23 '40 60w

"It is after all a fantasy. . . And where it is good it is excellent. There is the right romantic flavor to the tinkers, who know what is happening on the roads all over Ireland. . . There is pathos in Mona exiled in London, and there is genuine satire in her considered judgment that when she was helping the murdering tinkers pass counterfeit half-crowns she was earning an honester living than when she worked in an advertising agency. 'The Story of Mona Sheehy' is like a child who is a little gawky from growing past its strength, but who can at times be elfin, fresh, and lovely." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 21:12 Ap 13 '40 480w

"This is a delightful book, belonging to the disputable territory between fancy and imagination, full of underground malice and quite free from whimsy—a difficult achievement." Graham Greene

+ Spec 163:450 S 29 '39 400w

"'The Story of Mona Sheehy' is told in language which might be that of an ancient sitting by the fire and delighting a circle of listeners, young and old, with his deft mixture of fact and fancy. It has soft beauty of descriptive phrasing and a warmth and naturalness that are peculiarly Irish. The reader is made equally to feel sympathetic understanding of the villagers' superstition and to appreciate ridiculousness of phases of city life that made London a horror for Mona. Throughout the book, Lord Dunsany reveals exquisite style and workmanship, capturing the imagination and titillating the mind."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 30 '39 340w

DUPLAIX, GEORGES. Topsy turvy circus; pictures by Tibor Gergely. 40p $1.50 Harper

(W) 40-34738

"A French circus is turned inside out for a day, with the animals in charge, but thanks to Rosalie the giraffe, all comes out well in the end." Commonweal

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

Cath World 152:374 D '40 90w

Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 20w

Reviewed by M. F. Potter

Library J 65:983 N 15 '40 130w

"This is a hilarious picture-story book which transports the reader straight to the world of nonsense. . . 'Topsy Turvy Circus' may well prove in some instances a satisfactory substitute for the 'funnies.'" A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 17 '40 200w

DUNSANY (dŭn-sā'nĭ)

DUPUY, RICHARD ERNEST. Perish by the sword; the Czechoslovakian anabasis and our supporting campaigns in North Russia and Siberia 1918-1920. 302p il maps $2.50 Military service

940.4385 European war, 1914-1918—Czechoslovakia. Russia—History—Allied intervention, 1918-1920 40-497

"This is an account of the work, hardships and unusual duties of the expeditions from American troops in the Archangel region of Russia and in eastern Siberia in 1918-'19. By guarding the railways from west Russia and keeping some order in Vladivostok, the United States troops were of great aid to the 40,000 Czechs coming in from west Russia and finally taking ships at Vladivostok for home." Books

---

"On the whole the book is not only worthless as a piece of historical writing, but it is a misrepresentation of an as yet obscure but important part of American history." L. I. Strakhovsky

— Am Hist R 46:444 Ja '41 700w

Reviewed by W. C. Rivers

Books p13 Mr 24 '40 850w

Foreign Affairs 18:749 Jl '40 40w

" 'Perish by the Sword' is an interesting addition to the shelves of military history. And though it suffers from the very scope of its subject-matter and the necessity of combining within the covers of one book the essential details of skirmishes as far removed in scene as Archangel and Vladivostok, the volume is of particular pertinence at present." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p19 Mr 17 '40 900w

Reviewed by D. H. Popper

Sat R of Lit 22:18 Ag 24 '40 490w

"Maj Dupuy is fitted to appraise the situation by his training and his experience as a journalist and military commentator for the Columbia Broadcasting company. It is a soldier's book for soldiers, although the layman will find it interesting reading. The author has some sharp criticisms, but lets it be known that they are his own private opinions, not official opinions."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 26 '40 650w

DUPUY, RICHARD ERNEST. Where they have trod; the West Point tradition in American life. 424p il $3 Stokes

355.07 U.S. Military academy, West Point 40-35676

"Colonel Dupuy traces the history of the Point and its influence upon the nation—chiefly through the lives of three men, great in academy annals—Sylvanus Thayer, father of the academy and its superintendent from 1817 to 1833; Dennis Hart Mahan, long-time professor there and father of Alfred Thayer Mahan, and Peter Smith Michie, professor and guide to generations of 'the long gray line.' " (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:264 F 15 '41

"This is one of the most interesting studies ever published about West Point." W. C. Rivers

+ Books p24 N 24 '40 1400w

Churchman 155:34 Ja 15 '41 90w

Reviewed by L. H. Nason

Current Hist & Forum 52:1 N 26 '40 1000w

" 'Where They Have Trod' is a unique book, a challenging book, a book that puts into print source material heretofore scattered and largely unknown. Colonel Dupuy has done not only the Academy, but the nation, a service in thus precisely summarizing the place West Point has occupied in the history of the nation. Mrs. Dupuy has added materially to the book's beauty by her illustrative woodcuts." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p20 N 17 '40 1300w

DURBIN, EVAN FRANK MOTTRAM, and BOWLBY, JOHN. Personal aggressiveness and war. 154p $1.50 Columbia univ. press [5s Routledge]

172.4 War. Personality, Disorders of [40-5042]

"This is a reprint of an essay which was originally published in 1938 as part of a symposium on 'War and Democracy.' It was rightly felt that the essay was of sufficient value to deserve separate publication. It is a study from the point of view of comparative anthropology and of psychoanalysis of the causes which lead men to fight." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"An unsympathetic critic might point out that sharp and rigid definitions are lacking and that the hundred pages of documentation of the frustration-aggression relationship include but two main sources, Zuckerman's apes and Susan Isaac's school children. The definitions are adequate for their purpose, however, and the importance of further documentation is a matter for argument. The chief virtue of the book is its success in breaking down the superficially obvious connection between personal aggressiveness and war and showing the exact mechanics of that relationship." R. R. Sears

+ — Am J Psychol 54:153 Ja '41 400w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 600w

Foreign Affairs 18:749 Jl '40 10w

"Of its own special problem it is an admirable study, and, whether we agree or disagree with the value of its point of view, it is a book which deserves careful study."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 My 23 '39 200w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 17:468 Mr 25 '39 400w

DURYEE, MRS MARY BALLARD. No special pleading. 70p $2 Putnam

811 40-6642

Collection of lyrics and sonnets, some of which have appeared in the New Yorker. Two longer poems: Lines on the back of a menu; and Puck, a legend of Bethlehem, are included.

"The skilled delicacy and the sharp, distinctive flavor of Mary Ballard Duryee's verses are already known to readers of F. P. A.'s 'Conning Tower' and 'The New Yorker.' This collection runs the scale from gay to grave and back again: the gayety spontaneous but precise, never vulgar; the more serious driving straight to the mark, sometimes with a barb of satire, again with a gesture of tenderness that never becomes banal."

+ Books p13 My 19 '40 120w

New Yorker 16:88 Mr 23 '40 20w

DUTCH, OSWALD, pseud. Hitler's twelve apostles. 249p $3 McBride [10s 6d Arnold, E. & co]

923.2 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Biography 40-5073

Character sketches of the twelve men who along with Hitler are directing the fortunes of Nazi Germany: Hermann Goering; Josef Goebbels; Alfred Rosenberg; Rudolf Hess; Heinrich Himmler; Robert Ley; Joachim von Ribbentrop; Julius Streicher; Walther von Brauchitsch; Walther Funk; Wilhelm Frick; Baldur von Schirach.

Booklist 36:304 Ap 1 '40

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes

Books p13 F 4 '40 650w

Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 25 '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '40

Foreign Affairs 18:755 Jl '40 20w

New Repub 102:189 F 5 '40 50w

DUTCH, OSWALD—Continued

"It must be stated right away that he has done a good job. He writes with directness, in a terse and easy style. . . All in all, his is a most informative work; it is one that will give the average reader a much clearer picture of Hitler's leading subordinates than he had before." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p16 F 4 '40 1100w

"Fluent character studies."

New Yorker 15:63 Ja 27 '40 30w

"Interesting and readable book." J. C. de W.

+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 F 3 '40 100w

"Provides some useful, but not always accurate, information." Elizabeth Wiskemann

Spec 163:788 D 1 '39 50w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 6 '40 850w

"Mr. Dutch, in his study of the men round Hitler, avoids the cheap jibe and the more obvious scandal-mongering, but his researches do not seem to have gone very far. Göring, Ribbentrop and Goebbels come to life in these sketches, but we could have done with more personal details of the careers of such men as Baldur von Schirach, Himmler and Ley."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p665 N 18 '39 360w

Wis Lib Bul 36:66 Ap '40

DUTTON, CHARLES JUDSON. Saints and sinners. 303p $3 Dodd

B or 92 40-6836

In this informal autobiography a Unitarian minister records his youthful experiences, his trouble in finding a pastorate, his own thoughts on the subject of religion, and stories of some of his quaint parishioners. His more recent work has been with the Board of Pardons and Parole in New York State.

"The author complains of nothing and laments nothing; his recital is factual and manly. Like many men of force and imagination he writes dryly, sometimes awkwardly, but the strength of fact is always there."

+ Atlantic Ag '40 170w

Christian Century 57:453 Ap 3 '40 90w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 154:15 My 1 '40 160w

"Mr. Dutton generalizes too much, and his censure seems quicker than his tolerance. But he is sincere and earnest in his love for his fellow-men, and his generosity toward those who are called sinners. . . One goes back to enjoy his remarks on Nick Carter and Frank Merriwell and other boyhood heroes, and one wishes he had told us all about the writing of his own detective stories. There must have been about a dozen of them, and they were not silly; they were good."

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 31 '40 480w

"One could have wished he might have spent less time venting his spleen and more on 'constructive' criticism, but this would be to try to rewrite his book for him. Further, one is generally in a fog as to where he is located, though the desire to obscure some of the personalities he discusses may have dictated this." E. D.

Sat R of Lit 22:19 My 11 '40 310w

"Mr. Dutton neglects his opportunity to expose and reprove the evils of church politics where they exist. He keeps closer to general experience and wins more assent when he tells of the trouble that individual church members often make for their pastors. . . But his suggested solutions are often so simplified that they may be characterized as crude. . . In general, he seems to be little concerned about convincing persons who disagree with him. However, his book is apparently written more to exploit 'human interest' of a mildly sensational kind than to correct faults that need correction." E. N. Jenckes

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 20 '40 1150w

DYER, GEORGE. The people ask death. 313p il $2 Scribner

40-6699

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p21 Mr 31 '40 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 13 '40 80w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 20:590 D 7 '40 70w

"By far the best of the Catalyst Club series and one of the season's best mystery novels." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 24 '40 230w

"Stays a mystery to dénouement. Excellent book mfg.—tabloid illustrations throughout build newspaper background and suspense. Let the people ask for Dyer."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:32 Ap 6 '40 50w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake

Spec 166:44 Ja 10 '41 50w

"Even those who have seen the Catalyst club in action before will find that they show more action and astuteness than could be deemed possible in a group of amateurs. It may be stated as a fact that this is their best, most puzzling, most unusual adventure to date."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 26 '40 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p605 N 30 '40 200w

DYGERT, WARREN BENSON. Radio as an advertising medium. 261p il maps $3 McGraw

659.1 Radio advertising 39-30084

"Written to give business men and advertising executives enough fundamental data about radio to evaluate its use as an advertising medium. Space buying, research, testing, the psychology of the consumer (including his radio habits), and circulation are among points considered. Graphic circulation statistics compiled by several broadcasting research groups are included." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 36:145 D 15 '39

Management R 29:119 Mr '40 50w

E

EARLY, ELEANOR. New England sampler. 372p il $2.50 Waverly house

917.4 New England—Social life and customs (W) 40-27541

Witty essays on New England customs and people of a by-gone day, with some of more recent date. The author ranges the territory from the days of Anne Hutchinson, to Lydia E. Pinkham and Mrs Jack Gardner; from Puritan customs of love-making, to the saving ways of Calvin Coolidge. A final chapter contains recipes for typical New England foods and drinks.

Booklist 36:410 Jl 1 '40

"Little in the book is new, but the old stories have a new touch and some a new slant, while there is often a special personal sidelight such as shines on the profile of Calvin Coolidge." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Je 16 '40 550w

"It may be necessary to regard this book as unaccustomed and violent but very delightful exercise, and take it, at first, a little at a time. It can, and I think should, be laid down frequently, unless or until spirit flares up to match its spirit. . . But gradually its stimulation becomes a true tonic, and, I think, too, that on better acquaintance, the wit of the speaker mingles more and more steadily with deeper and more reassuring qualities of mind and heart." G. H. Carroll

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 8 '40 950w
Commonweal 32:235 Jl 5 '40 90w
New Repub 103:93 Jl 15 '40 60w
N Y Times p2 Je 30 '40 350w

"The move to make history more readable and less stuffy is certainly a good one. 'A New England Sampler,' however, goes a little too far in that direction. Some excellent material is concealed behind a too-slangy style and a constant roguishness ends by interrupting the narrative. . . This is an amusing book, full of odd bits of information, marred only by its artfully artless style." R. C. B.
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 20 '40 310w

"The author recalls some well-known and some almost-forgotten phases or incidents of New England life. But she is more interested in her present treatment than in past history. There is no lack of color in her versions."
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 330w
Wis Lib Bul 36:125 Jl '40

EARNEST, ERNEST. John and William Bartram, botanists and explorers. (Pennsylvania lives) 187p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Bartram, John. Bartram, William 41-86

The subjects of this biography are two early American botanists, father and son. John, born in Darby, near Philadelphia in 1699, was called by Linnæus "the greatest natural botanist in the world." His son, William, born in 1739 was the author of the famous Travels, first published in Philadelphia in 1791. The author retells the story of their lives, and discusses their contributions to the science of botany. Bibliographical note. Index.

"Professor Earnest's careful reconstruction of the two careers and of their 18th-century setting is hardly of a sort to popularize these sturdy scholar-sons of the soil, but it has its own forthright charm." Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p9 Ja 20 '41 900w

"Readers eager for brevity and accuracy will find full satisfaction in this volume where deftness in character portrayal is equaled by skill in analysis of philosophical tendencies. To read the book is to find adventure."
+ Commonweal 33:286 Ja 3 '41 100w

"While generally authoritative, the Bartram sketch lacks cohesiveness as well as smoothness in style. Garden enthusiasts and students of Americana should, however, find the Bartrams subjects deserving of attention. Such early scientists and literary figures are all too apt to go neglected and submerged by the more glamorous political personalities in the colonial and early federal period of our history." Clifford Moore
+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 19 '41 800w

EASTMAN, FRED. Men of power, v 5. 224p il $1.50; set $7.50 Cokesbury press

920 (38-5117)

Contents: Nicolai Lenin; Mahatma Gandhi; Edward Livingston Trudeau; Robert Louis Stevenson; Bibliography.

Booklist 36:236 F 15 '40
Boston Transcript p7 Mr 30 '40 60w

"Now that this biographical series is complete, it is fitting to give to it as a whole the commendation which has hitherto been given to its parts as they appeared. These studies in character, motivation and the sources of power are informing and inspiring."
+ Christian Century 57:115 Ja 24 '40 80w
Churchman 154:34 Mr 15 '40 80w

Reviewed by Shailer Mathews
J Religion 20:411 O '40 300w

"Professor Eastman is not only a scholar interested in historical accuracy, a philosopher seeking first causes and hidden meanings, but a writer with ability to tell his story dramatically and readably. It is hoped that he will reconsider his announcement that this book is the last of the series." Mabel Skinner
+ Survey 76:212 Je '40 150w

EASTMAN, LINDA ANNE. Portrait of a librarian: William Howard Brett. (Am. library pioneers) 104p $2.75 A.L.A.

B or 92 Brett, William Howard 40-27318

William Brett, a Cleveland bookseller, was appointed librarian of the Cleveland Public Library in 1884, a position he continued to fill until his death in 1918. This biographical sketch and tribute to his achievements comes from the pen of his successor, who had been his friend and assistant for many years. Index.

Booklist 36:323 Ap 15 '40

"It would be fascinating and instructive to follow the evolution of this thirty-eight-year-old book-seller into one of the most enlightened and progressive library executives of his day against the background of a moribund institution of the past also in the process of growth. The present book, however, affords but slight material for such a study—and that is the fault neither of its author nor of its subject but of the craft and body of American librarianship as a whole which, though dealing with the recorded thoughts and deeds of all mankind, manifests a strange reticence in making a coherent record of the thoughts and deeds from which its own scant body of doctrine is laboriously evolving. . . Thus we have, in Miss Eastman's little book, the only record it was possible to make of the career of William Howard Brett, done by the one in all respects most fit to undertake the grateful task. Her judicious use of the available data is vivified by the memories and loyalties of a lifetime of association." C. B. Roden
+ Library Q 10:596 O '40 800w

EASTMAN, MAX. Marxism, is it science? 394p $3 Norton

335 Marx, Karl. Communism 40-34929

In this treatise Mr Eastman has employed an educational method developed elsewhere in his works: that is, simply stated, there should be several repetitions of the same idea or story, each time given with fuller detail or more elaboration of the thought. Thus in Part I, the world as escalator, Marxism is "glimpsed from afar off;" in Part II, the trouble with Marxism, "it comes nearer;" and so on until in Part VII, Trotsky defends the faith, the author discusses "the most recent attempt to make the Marxian religion stand up in the face of scientific thinking." Index.

Booklist 37:236 F 1 '41

"Max Eastman's book is, as readers of his earlier philosophical writings would expect, a work of art. . . The worth of Eastman's argument, that scientific socialism, so called, is not science but religion, depends, of course, not only upon the correctness of his analysis of Marxism but upon the understanding which he shows of religion itself. Eastman's treatment of this phase of his argument leaves much to be desired." A. N. Holcombe
+ — Books p6 D 22 '40 1100w

"The author of Marx and Lenin and The End of Socialism in Russia excels in this book as an historian, as an economist and as a spirited commentator. To students of history, the social sciences and the labor movements, the originality of Mr. Eastman's approach, and the clarity of his language will be a pleasing departure from the 'lourdeur' usually associated with such weighty subjects. In certain respects this book is a résumé of Mr. Eastman's writings on Marxism, Leninism, and Trotskyism." Géza Schutz
+ Library J 65:807 O 1 '40 230w

EASTMAN, MAX—Continued

"The book is carefully reasoned and well written. For the layman certain portions of philosophical argument are tough going, despite the publisher's claim that the book enables 'an uninitiated person, by one reading, to get a general idea of what Marxism is and what is the matter with it.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 4 '40 450w

EASTMAN, MAX. Stalin's Russia and the crisis in socialism. 284p $2.50 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

947 Communism—Russia. Russia—Politics and government (W) 40-27209

A study of the political faiths and principles developed in Soviet Russia and their failure to achieve Utopia there. "The book is the fruit of long and anxious study, first of Marx's theoretical philosophy, second of Lenin's impetuously practical application of it, third of the gradually developing results of the revolutionary experiment set going under Lenin's guidance." (Foreword) Index.

Am Soc R 5:687 Ag '40 80w

Atlantic My '40 150w

Booklist 36:280 Mr 15 '40

"It is a long way that Max Eastman has gone since he started out on his quest for the truth about Soviet Russia. He has got more than he expected at the start—but not more than he has been willing to take. History has been recently confirming some of the views he has lately discovered and he will have more company henceforth than he had among radical and liberal intellectuals just before the Hitler-Stalin pact. He will have the pleasure of fraternizing with some of the individuals whom he has been reproaching for their persistent hopefulness about Soviet Russia; and he will learn, I expect, that they haven't been so dishonest or so cowardly as he is inclined to suppose. It's just that it takes a long time to get over a love affair with a Utopia." Floyd Dell

+ Books p6 Mr 10 '40 1500w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 8 '40 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '40

"Altogether the radical empiricism of Max Eastman seems to involve either much of 'metaphysical' degeneration, a thing he condemns in Stalinism, or else a religious core which he dismisses with unusual contempt. Clearly his call to action in the last chapter, 'What to Do Now,' is inadequate. The program appears mostly wise as far as it goes, but more than simply 'emotional reorganization' must come first, and before anything very hopeful will actually be done. 'Stalin's Russia' is an excellent and brilliantly written book, but it needs an additional volume."

+ — Commonweal 31:476 Mr 22 '40 1400w

Foreign Affairs 18:758 Jl '40 60w

Reviewed by S. E. Sherman

Library J 65:166 F 15 '40 180w

Reviewed by A. L. Harris

Nation 150:711 Je 8 '40 1350w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski

New Statesman & Nation 20:262 S 14 '40 550w

"Although one might quarrel with Eastman over his selection of evidence and over some of his interpretations, particularly when he deals with Germany, his considered judgment on Russia is, nevertheless, deserving of close attention." M. T. Florinsky

N Y Times p15 Mr 17 '40 1000w

New Yorker 16:91 Mr 9 '40 30w

Reviewed by Joseph Carwell

Pol Sci Q 55:615 D '40 550w

"His book is cogent, clear-headed, and like everything Max Eastman commits to print, amazingly well written. Even in the most theoretical passages he succeeds in communicating an element of drama. In the process of revaluing socialism, which is likely to occupy the attentions of the next generation, this volume will represent a notable pioneering stage. A great many real and make-believe socialists who will now shy away from a book of this type, are likely to return to it later in a mood of intellectual humility." Eugene Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 Mr 16 '40 950w

Reviewed by E. H. Carr

Spec 165:274 S 13 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 26 '40 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p478 S 21 '40 550w

"In a sense, the author of 'Stalin's Russia' has now done what Mr. Lyons did in his 'Assignment in Utopia': Mr. Eastman gives an account of his own gradual loss of faith in the Soviet experiment. He does this, however, in a different, less personal and less emotional, way. In his case, the disillusionment with the practice of the communist régime in Russia has led to a revision of the theory on which it was first erected. And because of this, Mr. Eastman's criticism goes considerably farther than that of many other European and American radicals." Michael Karpovich

+ — Yale R n s 29:817 summer '40 700w

EASTMAN, NICHOLSON JOSEPH. Expectant motherhood. 176p il $1.25 Little

618.2 Pregnancy. Obstetrics (W) 40-32419

An obstetrician at Johns Hopkins explains the course of pregnancy, diet and hygiene, danger signals, the birth of the baby, convalescence from childbirth, and care of the newborn baby. Index.

Booklist 37:85 N 1 '40

"Accurate and authoritative in its contents, wise and sympathetic in approach, readable and lucid in style, this handbook should prove an excellent adjuvant to the preparation for motherhood." H. M. Stone

+ Books p32 N 24 '40 500w

"Particularly is the author to be praised for the sanity of his attitude towards Caesarian section and painless childbirth. One might suggest, however, that in the future editions it would be well to include some comment on the relationship of nephroptosi to pyelitis, and of focal infections of the teeth to the eclamptic toxemias of pregnancy." R. M. Green, M.D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 150w

EATON, ANNE THAXTER. Reading with children. 354p $2.50 Viking

028.5 Books and reading. Children's literature. Children's literature—Bibliography (W) 40-27384

A book on children's literature beginning with the assertion that "those who cannot read a really good book for children with something of a child's enjoyment should never undertake to criticize children's books or to direct children's reading." Partial contents: Reality and imagination; Through magic doorways; Poetry; The world's great stories; Roundabout the earth; Men and manners of the past; Our world—earth, air, skies, and seas; Art and music; Nonsense is fun. Index.

Booklist 36:337 My 1 '40

Bookmark 2:6 Ja '41

"The librarian of the Lincoln School . . . has surely done what she set out to do, and while producing an invaluable book of reference for parents and teachers who want to know what books children 'should' read she has also produced a book that should bring delight to any adult reader." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p13 My 19 '40 550w

"Reading Anne Eaton's delightful book is like being at a reception with all of one's best friends present. The reader experiences that pleasant sense of intimacy induced by the pages of certain autobiographies crowded with great names that somehow seem strangely familiar even though remote in time and space." B. J. T.

+ Cath World 152:119 O '40 450w

"I have found Miss Eaton's book excellent as far as it goes. The trouble is that it does not go far enough. Her recommendations are all pretty sound, but she utterly neglects to mention some books which I believe deserve mention. Thus in her religious section we find nothing of Joan Windham, Loren Ford or Fanny Delehanty. Yet I know children like the works of these three. They are, of course, specially directed toward Catholics. But will no Catholic ever consult Miss Eaton's books? With that qualification, however, I recommend her work."
+ — Commonweal 33:121 N 22 '40 120w

"Sharing books with children in the kind of companionship that comes from a similarity of tastes is in itself a joy to an understanding adult. All such, parents, teachers and librarians, will gather from this wise and stimulating book fresh zest for introducing books to boys and girls through their own enjoyment of the old and new. At the close of each chapter is a list of the books mentioned therein and a complete author, title and subject index is to be found at the end." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:171 My '40 70w

"It is the sure hold upon real literature and the author's own style which sets Reading With Children apart from other books about children's books or children's reading. One of its finest chapters is entitled 'Nonsense is Fun.' " A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk M 16:174 My '40 160w

Reviewed by Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 90w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:845 O 15 '40 50w

"The library of the Lincoln School of Teachers College is to the school what the heart is to the body. The librarian, Anne Thaxter Eaton —appointed before school opened, to plan the library and equip it—has a great zest for living as well as for books. She also has an unusual capacity for genuine friendship with children and young people, friendship which lasts beyond their years at the school. 'Reading With Children' is a true title. This book of Miss Eaton's has grown out of daily contacts with children over books for more than twenty years. It is this fact which has given her reviewing in the New York Times Book Review special value." B. M. Miller
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 28 '40 1350w
Wis Lib Bul 36:101 My '40

EATON, CLEMENT. Freedom of thought in the old South. 343p il $3 Duke univ. [18s Cambridge]

975 South—Intellectual life. Liberalism. Slavery in the U.S. 40-5232

"The period covered by Prof Eaton's study runs from Washington's time to the Civil war. An agrarian aristocratic liberalism was during these 70 years transformed into a militant—and ultimately triumphant—authoritarianism. The skepticism of the earlier period, born of the English liberalism of Locke and Bentham and of the French enlightenment, became antiliberal and coercive. Freedom of speech and assembly, and of the press and teaching, were progressively limited and ultimately suppressed." Springf'd Republican

---

"Dr. Eaton's thesis constitutes an important contribution to the history of the ante-bellum South. His scholarship is thorough. He has added much to our knowledge of the workings of American democracy. When an author has given so much, it is, perhaps, ungracious to ask for more. Yet the reviewer wishes that Dr. Eaton had not been content to conclude his monograph with the chapter on the 'intellectual blockade'." R. H. Gabriel
+ Am Hist R 46:427 Ja '41 900w

"The book is a good study in public opinion, and should be of considerable value to political scientists. Its principal defects arise from the author's proneness to wander from his subject." C. B. Gosnell
+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:613 Je '40 350w

Reviewed by A. B. Miller
Ann Am Acad 210:181 Jl '40 240w
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 10 '40 320w

"The book shows careful study and wide reading. Offered as a case history in the record of human liberty and intolerance, it is timely in view of recent world events. While such a subject is almost unlimited and necessarily detailed, it is unfortunate that the author has not made more use of the pronouncements of the churches and religious groups in the South. Nevertheless he has given us a book of interest to students of church history." A. R. Moore
+ — Crozer Q 17:302 O '40 260w

Reviewed by F. B. Simkins
J Religion 20:411 O '40 270w

"This book, which won the Duke centennial prize, is an especially worthy example of recent impartial studies of bypaths of Southern history by Southerners."
+ Nation 150:430 Mr 30 '40 80w

"Deserves a place on the shelf of Southern history beside Virginius Dabney's 'Liberalism in the South.' " W. S. Meacham
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 17 '40 1300w

"Prof Eaton's essay is a distinguished contribution to intellectual history as well as to an understanding of the old South." P. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 2 '40 400w

"Mr. Eaton's book on 'Freedom of Thought in the Old South' is difficult to review briefly. Its subject is controversial, and its treatment of the main theme does not seem to me convincing. In certain chapters, not clearly related to this theme, it offers, however, fresh and interesting material. . . Taken as a whole, [however], Mr. Eaton's book lacks perspective, consistency, and understanding of the problems involved in the abolition issue in the period under discussion, and knowledge of conditions in the North during the same period." F. L. Owsley
— + Yale R n s 29:851 summer '40 800w

EATON, EVELYN SYBIL MARY. Quietly my captain waits. 365p map $2.50 Harper

Freneuse, Mme Louise (Guyon) de—Fiction (W) 40-6339

In the form of a historical novel, this is the reconstruction of the life story of one Madame de Freneuse, often mentioned in the dispatches from New France during the years 1691 to 1711. Louise de Freneuse was a beautiful, cultivated woman, who thru two marriages, kept her love for the love of her youth, Pierre de Bonaventure. When he returned to Acadia after the death of her second husband Louise lived with de Bonaventure as his mistress, and took a hand in the management of New France.

Booklist 36:383 Je 1 '40

"In the main, Miss Eaton has managed to keep her historical facts in good order. There is of course the distortion necessary to romanticize a minor character of history and the great Frontenac appears only in a brief ballroom scene, while the efforts of Mme. de Freneuse in the interests of New France become monumental. Miss Eaton's version makes a good rousing tale anyway but for the real romance of the French regime in Canada with the accents properly placed you will have to read the works of Francis Parkman." Muriel Chatain
+ — Books p8 Je 16 '40 750w

" 'Quietly My Captain Waits' is not, perhaps, literature. Neither in our opinion was 'Gone With the Wind' or 'All This, and Heaven Too.' Miss Eaton's book suggests both these phenomenal best-sellers without copying them. . . Miss Eaton (a Canadian girl) has

EATON, E. S. M.—Continued
fine-combed the New Brunswick archives, has hobnobbed with the Indians, and has made a thorough study of colonial life. Other writers of historical novels have made similar preparation. Yet few of them have condensed their material so well, or have been able to warm it to a temperature of 110 degrees, or have put it over with so fine a surging vigor. It may not be literature, but it's fun." Olga Owens
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 8 '40 900w

Reviewed by Eleanor Godfrey
— Canadian Forum 20:125 Jl '40 190w

Cath World 151:507 Jl '40 270w

"Told with restraint and imagination, the novel presents a vivid and interesting picture of the period. It has the merit of being a romance of moderate length." A. T. Davidson
+ Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 130w

"Bought by Hollywood while still in manuscript this is one of the novels that a resourceful director could shoot from the cuff while slowly turning the pages, a love story with plenty of sentiment and melodrama, worked out against a rigged-up historical background and conveniently broken up into nearly a hundred brief chapters, each one building to a neat dissolve in the last paragraph." Max Gissen
New Repub 103:35 Jl 1 '40 280w

" 'Quietly My Captain Waits' is a novel of unusual distinction. It is no disparagement of Miss Eaton's skill—rather the contrary—to point out how much it owes to the happy choice of material. If she has any more stories to match her chronicle of Louise de Freneuse, some very good historical novelists are going to be feeling uncertainly for their laurels." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p6 Je 9 '40 800w

"There are some sharply done scenes—notably an Indian initiation episode that will make your hair curl—and a raft of high romantic drama. In fact, I guess it's what they call a robust yarn, maybe even a robustious yarn. Instructive historical color too." Clifton Fadiman
New Yorker 16:78 Je 8 '40 300w

"It's good work, readable work, on a little known period. It contains one live woman, some excellent subsidiary characters, a conventional young juvenile, a passable hero, a good deal of feeling for background and country, a number of shots of conventional melodrama, and some telling individual scenes. The lending libraries will like it, the movies already have. But, compared to a book like 'Guns of Burgoyne', it remains Class B romance." S. V. Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:6 Je 15 '40 500w

"Quietly My Captain Waits can afford to wait quietly. Any day now it will be made into a very good film, and it will be far more enjoyable and effective in that medium than it is as it stands." Kate O'Brien
Spec 165:590 N 29 '40 100w

"It seems unlikely that, remarkable as she was, Louise de Freneuse was as incurably romantic and as devastating as she is presented; but she is an eminently satisfactory heroine for such an exciting and absorbing story."
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 9 '40 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 21 '40 300w
Wis Lib Bul 36:127 Jl '40

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii autumn '40 40w

EATON, WALTER PRICHARD. Boy scouts in Death valley. 307p $1.75 Wilde
39-33750

This book for boys combines history and story. Part one describes the discovery of Death Valley by the forty-niners on their way to California. Part two treats of the period when the borax industry was begun in the Valley. Part three shows the Boy Scouts in the region after it had been made into a national park.

Reviewed by Ruth Page
Boston Transcript p3 My 11 '40 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 18 '40 290w

EBENSTEIN, WILLIAM. The law of public housing. 150p $1.75 Univ. of Wis. press 331.833 Housing—U.S. Eminent domain
40-28414

"[This work] is concerned chiefly with the constitutionality of this recent extension of the scope of the welfare clause and use of the power of eminent domain for purposes for which the others of the 'trinity of sovereign powers' have been used for many years. Dr. Ebenstein analyzes in detail the arguments in the briefs and in the opinions in the leading cases in a fashion to which we are accustomed in law review writing; the two central chapters of his monograph make a neat case study in the way in which the courts feel their way around when a new social need is brought before them. In a prefatory chapter, the author expounds briefly what that need is; in an equally brief concluding chapter, he suggests what some European countries have done about it." Am Pol Sci R

"The book should be valuable to all who are concerned with public housing as a social, sanitary, and legal problem of great current significance." J. A. Tobey
+ Am J Pub Health 30:1242 O '40 120w

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Am Pol Sci R 34:1034 O '40 150w

Reviewed by I. S. Robbins
Survey G 29:637 D '40 240w

"There is much in the book that is helpful to the student interested in the legal background for recent decisions on housing in its public purpose aspects. But there still exists a vital need for a comprehensive study on 'The Law of Public Housing.' " Charles Abrams
+ — Yale Law J 50:361 D '40 900w

EBERHART, MRS MIGNON (GOOD). The hangman's whip. 275p $2 Doubleday 40-8548

Detective story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Love, poison, a hanging and a second murder are among the ingredients of Mrs. Eberhart's new story—a smart and entertaining item for any fan and a natural for the matinee trade." Will Cuppy
+ Books p12 My 19 '40 260w

"A book for females who prefer atmosphere to clues." Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 My 18 '40 60w

"The suspense in this story mounts steadily from the beginning to the dramatic climax. Mignon Eberhart, who has written many excellent mystery stories, has seldom, if ever, produced one better than 'The Hangman's Whip.' " Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 My 19 '40 210w

"Frilly stuff built on a sound structure, with love abounding."
New Yorker 16:95 My 25 '40 20w

"Highly emotional and satisfactorily suspenseful. Romantic side especially well developed, though puzzle is no slouch, and finish packs prime punch. Capital."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:18 Je 1 '40 50w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 30 '40 180w
Time 35:80 Je 3 '40 40w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. A good house for a mouse; pictures by Eloise Wilkin. unp $1 Messner 40-6901

The story of a gentle little girl who could not understand the attitude of grown-ups about mice. Dinny found them fascinating, and rescued a family of five babies from her mother's spring cleaning throes. When the cleaning was over the babies were restored to their frantic mother.

Booklist 36:368 My 15 '40

"There is something so touching in that loving care, in the way she managed, active as she was, to play only what would not jounce them, and never to forget and bump them—that any one who loves kindness or small girls must be moved, even if they don't like mice. And if, like this reviewer, they followed the reaper in Vermont, rescuing families of pink field mice and trying to bring them up by hand, they may feel as if tenderness forgotten had come back to life." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ap 21 '40 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '40

"An appealing story, full of gentle humour which those who can remember the Nineties will delight in sharing with children. And children themselves will find it an easy book to read. They will love Dinny because she is earnest and warm-hearted and like themselves." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 16:163 My '40 90w

"Even if the story were not told with a beautiful simplicity one would enjoy it for Eloise Wilkin's drawings, in the same sepia tone as the text, of a big-eyed anxious little girl in 1905 frock and hair-do which catch all the eagerness and the wistfulness of a situation which any 6 to 8 year old will appreciate. The combination of pictures and text makes this one of the most engaging books of the season for younger children." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 31 '40 260w

New Yorker 16:96 My 18 '40 30w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Spice on the wind; il. by Richard Jones. 56p $2 Holiday

633.83 Spices 40-27752

"The subject of the book is spice. An introductory chapter tells of the importance of spices in the history and civilization of the world. Then follows a chapter on each of the more common spices: pepper, cloves, vanilla, nutmeg, ginger, and cinnamon, telling of the countries where each is grown and of the cultivation, harvesting, and preparation of each. The last chapter describes briefly less familiar spices and arranges them in alphabetical order." Library J

Booklist 37:122 N 15 '40

"The book is sensible to begin with . . . and the color scheme and nature of its decorations just fit." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 13 '40 160w

"The changing spice routes and their effect upon the trade of the world, the peoples among whom spices grow, the harvesting and marketing are simply and vividly presented. Imagination and information are well blended in this beautifully made and distinctively illustrated book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:36 Ja '41 90w

"A lovely book and a careful piece of writing. It will be useful in any collection." E. G. Mullan

+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 150w

"The odor of the Indies, or at least the better part of it, is literally wafted from the pages of this beautiful little book and makes one of the most pleasant introductions we have yet come across to straight information. . . This book will not only help to answer the rightful curiosity of the young but will be useful for reference in historical and geographical subjects." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p11 D 22 '40 280w

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON, and HUBBARD, CORTLANDT VAN DYKE. Portrait of a colonial city, Philadelphia, 1670-1838; 252 il. in half-tone, 2 maps drawn by John B. Lear, jr, and 96 coats-of-arms drawn by Marian Greene Barney. ltd ed 580p $15 Lippincott

974.811 Philadelphia—Historic houses, etc. 40-1572

"A volume for students of American antiquities and social history. . . The book presents a description, in Mr Eberlein's appreciative and understanding manner, of 75 houses surviving from the Colonial and early federal periods in Philadelphia and vicinity. These include some of the nation's most noted examples of colonial architecture. Mr Eberlein recites the history of each house and adds information about its owners and occupants and the changing life of the city and its environs." Springf'd Republican

---

Reviewed by W. C. Weber

Books p17 Je 30 '40 470w

"The famous historic show-places of Philadelphia are described and pictured here, of course—Stenton, Cliveden, John Bartram's house, John James Audubon's Philadelphia home, Joseph Bonaparte's Philadelphia refuge, the little place that Stephen Girard called his gentilhommière; these and others. But the greatest interest and value of this exhaustively written and richly illustrated volume are in its collection of houses which are less well known but in many cases no less interesting and beautiful. The book is primarily one of houses—old houses still standing in and about Philadelphia. It is illustrated with 252 photographs and drawings of many coats-of-arms. And its text supplies a mass of interesting detail of both family and city history."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 14 '40 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 23 '40 90w

EBY, FREDERICK, and ARROWOOD, CHARLES FLINN. The history and philosophy of education, ancient and medieval. 966p il $3.75 Prentice-Hall

370.901 Education—History. Education—Philosophy 40-33505

Study of the beginnings of education, which commences with education among primitive peoples, and brings the history down to the renaissance. The section on Greek education is the most detailed. Copiously illustrated. Bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

Booklist 37:147 D 15 '40

"A contribution of marked distinction."

+ School & Society 52:408 O 26 '40 30w

ECHARD, MARGARET. A man without friends. 309p $2 Doubleday

40-30396

Psychological study of murder and its consequences. Shelley Carnes, who has just lost a writing job in Hollywood, meets Richard Trevelyan, a romantically handsome young man who had served two years in prison for the murder of his wife. Freed because of a technicality, Treve was living in a secluded southwestern ranch house where Shelley barged in one stormy night. The love between these two lonely people finally brings Treve back to normal.

"Margaret Echard's first book was 'Stand-in for Death,' but 'A Man Without Friends' simply makes use of a past crime as the foundation of a psychological build-up. Her story has all the out-and-out suspense of unsolved mystery, with the extra dividend of expert and intricate romance. The characters are skillfully drawn and the atmosphere of the desert country contributes its own tension to a swift and ominous opus." Lisle Bell

ECHARD, MARGARET—Continued
+ Books p17 S 8 '40 200w

"The title is depressing, but the story is not. It is a sharp character study of some pretty interesting people set in a situation of high excitement and freshness. It can definitely be listed as 'good.' " E. J. Bartnett
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 7 '40 500w

"A blend of high-flown mystery and callow romance. A tremendous smoke-screen of eroticism is thrown round Trevelyan's past. As Shelley meets his former friends and associates she becomes more and more baffled by the incongruity between the man's reputation and his real self as she sees him. The story depends for its chief interest on long-drawn-out suspense, though there are bits of Texas atmosphere and scenery which are interesting. There is a happy ending finally, with a mystery solution which falls this side of plausibility." B. S.
N Y Times p23 S 8 '40 250w

"As little doubt is cast on Treve's guilt of murder until the last few chapters the love story has to carry the burden of interest and—in one reader's opinion—it is not quite beguiling enough to do so." H. McC.
Sat R of Lit 22:23 S 21 '40 200w

ECHARD, MARGARET. Stand-in for death. 306p $2 Doubleday 40-5219

Hollywood murder mystery.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
+ Books p14 F 4 '40 140w

"The yarn is most interesting, not in its crime-solution, but in its exploration of the unhealthy minds which seem to abound at the screen capitol. The conclusion is utter fantasy." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 50w

"It is a strange tale and one that holds the attention of the reader in a quite different way from that of the typical murder mystery." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 28 '40 240w

"A completely engrossing book dealing with some frightening complexes, this is the first full-length novel by an author who knows her Hollywood background and is extremely skillful in her treatment of complicated people."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 27 '40 70w

" 'Why' more than 'how' or 'who' is what matters here. Trifle long drawn out but skillfully contrived and continuously interesting."
+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 F 3 '40 40w

EDDINGTON, SIR ARTHUR STANLEY. The philosophy of physical science. 230p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

530.1 Physics—Philosophy. Science—Philosophy
39-29489

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

Reviewed by G. A. Lundberg
Am J Soc 46:623 Ja '41 750w
Cath World 151:501 Jl '40 550w

"Without covering all the ground traversed by his earlier philosophical writings, the present volume contains the essentials of Eddington's familiar interpretation of science—but with not even a shred of comfort for his many critics in the form of retractions from his previously expressed views. Indeed, Eddington is more confident than ever that philosophical idealism is the logical outcome of contemporary physics, and that the 'matter' of which physics yields structural knowledge is something akin to consciousness. . . However, although Eddington has not been convinced by his critics, his critics are not likely to find the present version of his philosophy more plausible than the previous ones." Ernest Nagel
J Philos 37:161 Mr 14 '40 3700w

"No man of science should miss reading the book. But with a work of Eddington's these are truisms. I propose to take a phrase on p. 113 as a motto for the whole—in spite of the author, who would certainly disagree. It reads: 'I have been acting as an advocate for an extreme view, presuming that your natural prejudices are all the other way.' " E. Schrödinger
+ — Nature 145:402 Mr 16 '40 1450w

Reviewed by J. D. Bernal
New Statesman & Nation 19:177 F 10 '40 1150w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:10 Ja '40

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. I have seen God do it. 231p $2 Harper

231.5 Providence and government of God
40-27319

The theme of this volume "is that God is present, is available to solve the human problems which so poignantly confront humanity at the present time; and the author furnishes proof of his assertion through citing concrete cases of divine intervention having produced healings of various types. It is a frank expression of faith in God and in the firm conviction that peace on earth can be established on no other basis than the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Illustration is given of God's work in America, Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Russia, China, India, Japan, and the Philippines." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 36:318 Ap 15 '40

Reviewed by J. M. Dawson
Christian Century 57:738 Je 5 '40 600w

"The book makes interesting and profitable reading. It is, as it were, the log of a Christian traveler who has sought to help stem the tides of ignorance and wickedness which seem so dominant in present society." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 20 '40 950w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 154:18 Je 15 '40 110w

Reviewed by Rittenhouse Neisser
Crozer Q 17:229 Jl '40 120w

Reviewed by A. G. Baker
J Religion 20:412 O '40 60w

"The vigor, deep religiousness, and social radicalism of Mr. Eddy all are evident in this very readable gathering up of strands in an unusually wide, varied, and interesting career." J. H. Lathrop
+ Survey 76:214 Je '40 170w
Wis Lib Bul 36:109 Je '40

EDEN, ROB, pseud. See Burkhardt, R. F. and E.

EDEY, MAITLAND ARMSTRONG. American songbirds [with 30 full-color plates by Louis Agassiz Fuertes]. 72p $1 Random house

598.2 Birds—North America (W) 40-34646

Color plates and simple descriptions of over one hundred American birds. Index.

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

"Illustrations, in color, by an artist outstanding in this field."
+ Churchman 154:34 D 1 '40 20w

"The author practically takes you with him on early spring bird trips. He addresses his book to boys and girls, but anyone who is an amateur bird student will find American Songbirds useful. . . The cost is so little that boys and girls who cannot afford Bird Portraits in Color can get this very nice book." A. E. Brown
+ Library J 65:1092 D 15 '40 150w

"The color work is ambitious but uneven. Good handbook." Raymond Holden
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:5 N 16 '40 20w

EDGERTON, LUCILE SELK. In walked Anny. 281p $2 Penn 40-3847

"Romance, music, scandal, newspaper work and gangster stuff are tossed together in this story of a young farm girl's success in the big city." N Y Times

"A light little story for not-too-particular readers." M. P. Johnson
Boston Transcript p1 F 3 '40 60w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '40 200w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 7 '40 100w

EDGETT, EDWIN FRANCIS. I speak for myself; an editor in his world; with a prefatory note by William Lyon Phelps. 385p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 40-33254

The author was for forty years, until his retirement in 1938, on the editorial staff of the Boston Transcript as a literary and dramatic critic. In addition to the account of his own life and travels, he has many pages of comment on the men and women he has known—Booth Tarkington, Rachel Field, H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, etc. Index.

"Mr. Edgett comes out with an autobiography on a new plan—new, at least, to us—which seems really a sensible one. . . We are immensely taken with this autobiographical scheme; its advantages to both writer and reader are so obvious that one wonders why it has not been more generally adopted. The spirit of the book is admirable. Mr. Edgett reveals himself as a lonely survivor of that superb breed which was marked by the very noblest of echt-American virtues—cussedness. He thinks clearly, knows what he thinks, unlimbers it good and hot, and if anyone takes umbrage it is just too bad."
+ Atlantic Ja '41 250w

"It is an interesting tale, this autobiography, and one that will leave at least those of its readers who are in the book trade asking for more. Mr. Edgett is an objective autobiographer, for the most part, and sometimes to the point of being most laconic where one feels that he might be most interesting." George Stevens
+ Books p20 N 3 '40 440w

Reviewed by F. S. Ambrose
Boston Transcript p1 O 5 '40 800w
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 19 '40 380w

"A fine portrayal of literary Boston and journalism at its best." J. B. Fogg
+ Library J 65:761 S 15 '40 110w

"This book is a picture of the author's mind, a mind honest and impatient of shams, and giving rein now and again to a characteristically dry New England wit." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p4 O 13 '40 650w

"The majority of readers who have come of age since the early twenties will unfortunately find little of interest in Mr. Edgett's book. For the more mature, particularly those curious as to the whys and wherefores of New England's literary sterility, 'I Speak for Myself' is by way of being a self-explanatory document." J. H. Smyth
Sat R of Lit 22:14 O 5 '40 400w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 29 '40 1150w

EDGLEY, LESLIE. No birds sing. 328p $2.50 Farrar 40-6063

Bleak story of a mid-western steel town, and young Nick Torrence, who fled from its rigors to fight for loyalist Spain. He returns home, wounded, aimless, and weary; falls in love, and loses his Elena to a more fortunate man who can support her.

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff
Books p2 F 18 '40 900w

"Mr. Edgley has told a story of weltschmerz, and no more. His portrayal of the dissolution of that idealism and almost physical need for completeness which marks the peak of adolescence is very good. Once in a while, as in the conversational flashbacks to Spain, the language is strained. But such scenes as the Lithuanian burial and Nick's meetings with Elena, on a minor level, to be sure, are without flaw." E. B. Garside
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 24 '40 550w

"Mr. Edgley creates a gloomy but impressive atmosphere, in which the characters act and talk like people you know. He is a writer who knows his generation, even if his book leaves its people with their worst problems still unsolved. Their story makes good if slightly dull fiction." Freda Barry
+ — New Repub 102:480 Ap 8 '40 280w
New Yorker 16:78 F 24 '40 70w

"'No Birds Sing' is a powerful and readable book, an almost horrifying study of frustration. . . It would be quite unfair to describe Edgley's style as anemic. In his next book, which we will certainly read, let us hope for a little warmth in his humor, and at least one bird to sing. He is a novelist to watch." R. A. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 24 '40 310w

EDIDIN, BEN M. Rebuilding Palestine. 264p il maps $1.75 Behrman's

296 Zionism. Jews in Palestine. Palestine—History 39-25863

"Describes in simple language what has been done by Jews in Palestine to build from swamps and wilderness a new life for themselves. Their achievements in cities are also cited, including the erection of all Jewish Tel Aviv, a very modern city in Palestine. The Jewish claims to that country are given, with an explanation, from the Jewish standpoint, of their troubles with Arab neighbors. Written for Jewish children and young people by a supervisor of schools, Tel Aviv." Booklist

Booklist 36:342 My 1 '40

"A very informing book which may advantageously be read by many Christians."
+ Christian Century 56:1580 D 20 '39 60w
Foreign Affairs 18:762 Jl '40 20w

EDMONDS, MARY D. Out of the net; pictures by Dorothy Bayley. 254p $2 Oxford
(W) 40-27596

Story of Newfoundland for young readers. In a season of misfortune for the O'Hagen family, the father was laid up for several months and thieves stole the fish from their nets. Fourteen-year-old Jorley discovered the thieves and took part in their capture. For readers of from ten to fourteen.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

"A book that will be eagerly read straight through, even by an older person if he knows the region at all. Before Jorley gets his chance as a carpenter in Flatbush—the rest of the family think this a fearful comedown—there has been a disastrous fire and more than one violent death, but the book is not in any sense a shocker. It is a rough island story, an episode in family life under the attacks of relentless nature and evil men, and of good humor and calm courage persisting through every strain." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 S 8 '40 260w

"Young Jorley is a most likeable hero with generous response to unwanted responsibility and courage in time of danger. His story deserves a permanent place among the favorites on our book shelves." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk M 16:347 S '40 110w

EDMONDS, M. D.—Continued

"This is a story of Newfoundland which describes the courage, vigor, and friendliness of the people. It will be enjoyed by both boys and girls ten to fourteen." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 90w

EDMONDS, WALTER DUMAUX. Chad Hanna. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 548p $2.75 Little (W) 40-27263

The Mohawk Valley region of New York, in the 1830's, is the setting of this novel. It describes the adventures of one Chad Hanna, an orphan, who runs away from his duties as stable boy at the Yellow Bud tavern, and joins a traveling circus. In due time Chad marries, rises to some small success in the circus, then loses his prestige for a time. The circus and its participants hold the chief place in the story.

Booklist 36:306 Ap 1 '40

Bookmark p12 My '40

"Ladies and gentlemen, here is 'Chad Hanna,' unparalleled novel about the circus by that unsurpassed master of fiction about the Erie Canal, Walter D. Edmonds. You'll read it and weep; you'll read it and laugh; you'll read it and chuckle. Put lock and chain on it for if ever a book was designed to be begged, borrowed and stolen, this is it." Rose Feld

+ Books p1 Ap 7 '40 1000w

"Chad is well done; the minor figures are clearly and vividly conceived; and if some of the major ones are not wholly consistent, it is no great matter in a story that moves along with the interest and vitality of this one. The book is thoroughly romantic in tone, with a great deal of good-fellowship, hearts of gold beneath rough exteriors, and true love winning in the end. But, after all, the circus is the thing, and the circus makes the story what it is—an extremely good yarn with a faint Dickensian flavor, handled with skill and assurance." Dorothy Greenwald

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 6 '40 550w

"An entertaining and pleasant novel."

+ Cath World 151:634 Ag '40 100w

"Here is a gusty, slightly rowdy book, novel in its material and lively in its style." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 22 '40 600w

Churchman 154:35 Ag '40 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '40

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 32:24 Ap 26 '40 600w

"This novel seems destined for the best seller list, is well written, of special masculine appeal, and a worthy library item. It is interesting to think of how this author has captured a locale and period of time." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 65:300 Ap 1 '40 140w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p6 S 13 '40 120w

"That Mr. Edmonds knows how to tell a good yarn is no news to readers of 'Rome Haul' and 'Drums Along the Mohawk.' His roustabouts, farmers, Indian-fighters, innkeepers talk in an earth-bound, juicy idiom only too rare in historical fiction, and his racy prose never revels in its own expertness, never diverts attention from the action. . . 'Chad Hanna' has abundant zest and hearty exuberance, plenty of movement with a vivid sense of real back-country life. It will sell well, and deserves to." L. B. Salomon

+ Nation 150:488 Ap 13 '40 420w

"Mr. Edmonds can fill a landscape with lively figures or recreate the past with authentic detail, but he remains indifferent to the motives underlying the energies of his people. This is apparent in those parts of the novel which resemble 'Huckleberry Finn.' Huck's attitude toward Nigger Jim is an act of moral judgment; it gives order and meaning to Huck's world. Chad's encounter with the fugitive slave is merely a device to create action, adding nothing to our understanding of his character or his age." Dayton Kohler

+ — New Repub 102:584 Ap 29 '40 270w

"Mr. Edmonds's story is the sort of thing that deserves and will have a wide audience. It is fit for the motion pictures. It is good entertainment. One comes back in the end to what makes it more than good entertainment—Mr. Edmonds's grasp of the time, scene and atmosphere of which he writes." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 7 '40 1500w

"For good lively fun of a rather conventional order may I propose Chad Hanna? . . It's a long book, by the way, but you can race through it. Don't go so fast, however, that you miss the richly hilarious account of Oscar, the lion, and the story of his decline and death." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:89 Ap 6 '40 230w

"A warm and picaresque yarn, told affectionately and in detail by Mr. Edmonds. . . If you're looking for important work or another 'Drums Along the Mohawk,' you won't find it in 'Chad Hanna.' The characters are characters of romance, sufficiently well-drawn to come to a brief life in the reading . . . but never really coming out of the book to take on that larger life which is the gift of great fiction. Nor is Mr. Edmonds's slow-paced narrative method always fortunate for this particular kind of story. He gets tangled up in his sub-plots and the sub-plots really don't add up to much in the end. But he has written an agreeable book and an entertaining one, and recaptured something of the small-boy glory of the days of one-ring circuses and pink lemonade." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ap 13 '40 600w

"In 'Chad Hanna' Mr Edmonds displays the same skill in recapturing the spirit of the period depicted that he showed in 'Drums Along the Mohawk,' and in his earlier stories about New York state. Not only does he dramatize in detail the daily routine of an old-time circus, with its romance and its realities, but he paints in a colorful background of small-town life, with many interesting references to contemporary events and thought. Some of the small-town characters he delineates with a humor as captivating as Mark Twain's. The excellent pictures of old-time circus life and characters, as well as small-town types, and the wealth of authentic detail and local color make 'Chad Hanna' a valuable addition to our novels depicting interesting phases of the American scene." L. C. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 14 '40 1100w

Time 35:100 Ap 22 '40 40w

"Mr. Edmonds has not the narrative strength to carry off his Dickensian extravagances or even to make a specially live figure of Chad, but this is a workmanlike novel with an authentic circus tang."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p469 S 14 '40 430w

Wis Lib Bul 36:99 My '40

"The characters, whom one gets to know slowly, and likes better and better as one knows them, are a refreshingly genuine collection of characters from an America that is gone. The words that Mr. Edmonds puts into their mouths are particularly admirable. This, one says to oneself, is the way Americans must have talked in those days." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 29:vi summer '40 350w

EDWARDS, ALICE LEORA. Product standards and labeling for consumers. 134p $2.50 Ronald 339.4 Standardization. Commercial products. Buying 40-4843

"Miss Edwards's book deals with the central objective of the consumer movement—standardization, grading, and informative labeling of consumer goods. . . There are brief descriptions of the work done by the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics, the Agricultural Marketing Service, the Food and Drug Administration, the National Bureau of Standards, and the Trade Practice Division of the Federal Trade Commission, as well as by the American Standards Association, the National Association of Better Business Bureaus, the numerous technical and consumer societies, and the recently established National Consumer-Retailer Council." J Home Econ

Reviewed by A. E. Albrecht
Ann Am Acad 209:216 My '40 460w

"In the opinion of the reviewer, this is a must book for all teachers and students of home economics; and it should be read by the manufacturers and retailers of consumer goods. It is an invaluable statement of the subject for the leader of consumer groups whose desire is to be up on the latest and soundest thinking on standards and labeling for consumer goods." P. H. Nystrom
+ J Home Econ 32:252 Ap '40 800w

EDWARDS, DOROTHY LEE. Oscar, the business rabbit; phot. by Carroll Snell. 71p $1.25 Dutton 40-12855

Biography of an ex-Easter rabbit with a taste for business. Oscar spends the week in New York city, acting as receptionist and assistant in the shipping room of a Lexington Avenue lamp shop. His week-ends are spent in New Jersey, with his beautiful but dumb wife, Josephine, and their many children. Illustrated with photographs of Oscar at work and play.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p6 Ag 11 '40 220w

"Although one wonders whether this little biography of a real rabbit . . . was written with the tongue in the cheek, nevertheless it will be of interest to any aged child or adult who has considered the rabbit only as a pleasant barnyard pet." Ruth Hadley
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 160w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara
Library J 65:660 Ag '40 80w

EDWARDS, MRS MARGARET (DULLES). Child of the sun: a pharaoh of Egypt; drawings by Richard B. Beaman. 115p il maps $1.75 Beacon press
39-22132

The story of Akhenaten, the young Egyptian pharaoh, who was one of the first rulers to acknowledge the supremacy of one God. Illustrated with photographs, drawings, and maps. Bibliography.

"There is real and lively hunger on the part of many ten-year-olds for such stories; this one would last well into the teens... Something about this time in Egypt calls across the ages to today. Even a child may recognize a likeness of the spirit of this past to that of our modernity." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 F 11 '40 160w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '40 50w

"A carefully studied, well written and superbly illustrated account of that Egyptian king who was among the first to grasp the idea of one God. It includes pictures of the treasures in Tutankhamen's tomb. The book is itself a treasure."
+ Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 30w

EDWARDS, RICHARD HENRY. Person-minded ministry. 253p $2 Cokesbury press
250 Pastoral work 40-11841

"The book has been written as a manual of guidance for ministers in their person-to-person relationships. The conviction which underlies its argument is expressed in these words: 'Until we sense the supreme significance of persons in our world, until we get them into central focus, until they count above everything else with us, until we are, in a word, possessed by person-mindedness, we do not have the first prerequisite for the Christian ministry.' The processes which contribute to creative personal relationships, the author lists under such titles as 'achieving togetherness,' 'getting and facing facts,' 'realizing the meaning of facts,' and 'acting on the basis of facts.'" Christian Century

"The promoter extraordinary of informal education and for many years director of united religious work at Cornell University has written his book. Not that Mr. Edwards has not written other books and good ones. But this book is peculiarly his in that it develops the theory of religious leadership which he has demonstrated in life." J. W. Nixon
+ Christian Century 57:1517 D 4 '40 750w

"I heartily recommend the book to liberal ministers and laymen." G. C. Heyl
+ Crozer Q 17:314 O '40 330w

EELLS, WALTER CROSBY, ed. See American council on education. American junior colleges

EGGLESTON, MARGARET (WHITE) (MRS G. W. OWEN). Forty stories for the church, school and home. 154p $1.50 Harper
244 Christian life 39-31045

Stories designed to lead children to a ready acceptance of the Christian ideals on which a strong character is built. A topical index adds to the book's usefulness.

Booklist 36:318 Ap 15 '40
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 23 '40 20w

"One is always glad of a real good story that swings its meaning into the heart with a dramatic touch and especially when the Christian significance of deed and word shines clearly through. Well! Here is a story-teller's pack suited to catch this mood and those who welcome a good tale rightly told will be glad of Miss Eggleston's art." L. L. R.
+ Churchman 154:35 F 1 '40 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '40

EGLOFF, GUSTAV. Physical constants of hydrocarbons; 4v; v 2, Cyclanes, cyclenes, cyclynes, and other alicyclic hydrocarbons. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 608p $12 Reinhold
547.2 Hydrocarbons (39-7977)

"This book is the second of four volumes giving values for the boiling point, melting point, density, and refractive index of pure hydrocarbons. Volume I [Book Review Digest, 1939] covered the paraffins, olefins, acetylenes, and other aliphatic hydrocarbons; Volume II covers the alicyclic hydrocarbons, including the cyclanes (cycloparaffins), cyclenes (cycloolefins), cyclynes (cycloacetylenes), and olefin- and acetylene-substituted cyclanes and cyclenes." Chem & Chem Eng N

"This second volume is an appropriate companion to Volume I, and the reviewer heartily recommends its purchase by all scientific and technical institutions and libraries and interested individuals who can afford the cost." F. D. Rossini
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:560 Je 20 '40 700w
Chem & Met Eng 47:443 Je '40 180w
Nature 146:507 O 19 '40 370w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

EINZIG, PAUL. Economic warfare. 151p $1.90 (7s 6d) Macmillan
330.19355 War. European war, 1914-1918—Economic aspects. European war, 1939—Economic aspects [40-14139]

"This book is based on Dr Einzig's Economic Problems of the Next War [Book Review Di-

EINZIG, PAUL—Continued
gest, 1939] published early in 1939. The material has been thoroughly revised in the light of the experience of the first three months of the war. Several of the chapters had to be almost completely re-written, and two new chapters are added, dealing mainly with offensive economic warfare." Publisher's note

Am Econ R 30:594 S '40 30w

Reviewed by William Ebenstein
Am Pol Sci R 34:1229 D '40 450w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 1 '40 140w

Economist 138:380 Mr 2 '40 250w

"Dr. Einzig is, on the whole less critical of the Government effort than Mr. Clarke, [in Economic Effort of War] though no less bold in his outlook or suggestions. His criticism is indirect or implied rather than direct. . . Both these books should, in fact, be widely and appreciatively read, and should assist in that educational work indispensable in our war effort, which the Government itself has largely neglected." R. Brightman
+ Nature 145:724 My 11 '40 600w

New Repub 102:833 Je 17 '40 50w

Reviewed by Honor Croome
Spec 164:151 F 2 '40 440w

"Of the two books Mr. Clarke's 'The Economic Effort of War' is the more thorough, and its arguments are well illustrated by statistics. . . Mr. Einzig's essay is innocent of statistics; it is perhaps the better written of the two . . . but Mr. Einzig has tried to cover too much ground in far too short a space, with the result that much of his argument only skims the surface of the subject. The two books supplement each other and should be read by those who would understand alike the difficulties and problems that lie ahead and why we are going to win the war if all is done as it should be."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 20 '40 500w

EISENSCHIML, OTTO. In the shadow of Lincoln's death. 415p il maps $3.50 Funk, W.

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 40-32510

"The book is a collection of studies held together only by the fact that all deal in some way with Lincoln's death. There are short pieces on his narrow escapes, the premature reports of his assassination, the reputed escape of John Wilkes Booth and the identification of his body, and the character of Edwin M. Stanton; and longer ones on Mrs. Surratt, her place in the conspiracy trial, and the adventures and trial of her son. The conclusion is a list of minor questions still unsolved." Books

"[The author] presents in an admirably documented and well-indexed work a clear story of an unsolved, behind-the-scenes mystery in the history of American Federal Administration, in which the evidence was destroyed and the mouths of the actors sealed. To what end, nobody knows. It is a sorry record, but in this volume well presented." R. E. D.
+ Atlantic F '41 230w

"Rightly or wrongly, one expects the sensational from the author of 'Why Was Lincoln Murdered?' Careful, ingenious research marked Mr. Eisenschiml's earlier book, but what drew and held readers was its likeness to a first-class mystery story in which all the evidence pointed to Edwin M. Stanton as the villain. 'In the Shadow of Lincoln's Death,' however, contains little that is startling. . . Essentially 'In the Shadow of Lincoln's Death' is a long footnote to Mr. Eisenschiml's earlier book. . . Those for whom the assassination of Lincoln has a strong attraction—and they seem to be many—will find here fare to their liking; but the general reader will doubtless conclude that the important fact was Lincoln's death, and that the shadows matter little." P. M. Angle
Books p23 N 17 '40 480w

Living Age 359:393 D '40 210w

"'In the Shadow of Lincoln's Death' contributes nothing to our greatest drama except a lot of useless speculation, unsupported by credible documentation. A simple acceptance by Dr. Eisenschiml of the ancient dictum that all men are liars might have put an end to his attempts to make mysteries where none exist." Herschel Brickell
N Y Times p20 F 2 '41 700w

New Yorker 16:79 O 5 '40 30w

"Much of this is curious rather than important, and some of it decidedly trivial. But in his long chapter called 'Behind the Scenes of the Conspiracy Trial' Mr. Eisenschiml presents a striking and illuminating story; while elsewhere in the book he throws valuable new light on the enigmatic and increasingly repellant figure of Stanton." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ja 4 '41 120w

EKVALL, ROBERT BRAINERD. Cultural relations on the Kansu-Tibetan border. 87p il map pa $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press [pa 7s 6d Cambridge]

572.951 Ethnology—China. Ethnology—Tibet. Mohammedans in China 39-22769

"This book is a clear ethnographic presentation of the types of contact between four distinct peoples in this area. The Chinese and the Chinese-speaking Moslems, similar in culture, are antagonistic in religion, and there is conflict and a continuing tendency to segregate. The Chinese culture tends to absorb the simpler sedentary Tibetans, who cling only to their Buddhism. The Moslems and the nomadic Tibetans, though separated, have trade affinities and affect each other strongly through this narrow channel. The sedentary and nomadic Tibetans agree in the view that settled peoples are superior in culture, and the nomads tend to be subordinate." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 5:686 Ag '40 100w

Christian Century 56:976 Ag 9 '39 70w

"A book as out of the ordinary as this one should be widely recommended to all those—not only anthropologists—who are interested in the way cultures and social orders 'behave'; in the ways in which the groupings which we clumsily call 'national,' 'tribal,' 'religious,' and so on, recoil from each other, merge into each other, or change into something else. Mr. Ekvall's pages—which are all too few—are packed with acutely observed details of the protean phenomenon of social change." O. L.
+ Pacific Affairs 13:217 Je '40 800w

ELAM, SAMUEL MILTON. Weevil in the cotton. 231p $2 Stokes

40-30178

"This is another it-can-happen-here book. A star political reporter in a small Southern city plays ball with a handful of venal politicians to start a Negro riot scare. In putting the faked riot down—there is no opposition paper to expose the plot—the politicians assume dictatorial power, organize a band of ruffians to terrorize the Negroes in true Nazi fashion, liquidate some of their enemies, and place others behind barbed wire. One of the politicians becomes 'Guardian,' instead of Fuehrer. . . The newspaper plays its tune well, keeping all respectable citizens frightened. Successive murders and atrocities, however, accumulate too rapidly for the good of the 'Guardian.'" Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Elam's fling at what might happen here is not for subtle tastes and strikes me as not very convincing. Buzzards like Hob Warren, Burt Henderson and Bull Scroggins exist. A psychopathic sadist and sexual criminal like Harry Sudbury is not unknown to such movements as this book describes." F. T. Marsh
Books p8 S 1 '40 340w

"This is a very curious book and might well be read as a phenomenon of our times. Lest there be any misunderstanding, let it be stated now that the writing is unbelievably bad, being at its worst barely literate, at its best a cut or two below the better pulps. . . Somewhere in the middle of the book Mr. Elam stumbled on an ability to create pace, and in addition he makes free use of sadistic and cheap sex incidents. Yet these things do not successfully explain the curious hold on one's attention that the book possesses." Harry Sylvester

— + Commonweal 32:412 S 6 '40 460w

"The story is told with brutal force and squeamish readers will not like it. Others will wish that the scene might have been any other place than the United States, but perhaps it can and has happened here." Dorothy Stockford
Library J 65:652 Ag '40 120w

Nation 151:373 O 19 '40 60w

New Repub 103:394 S 16 '40 50w

"The language is rough, and frequently profane; the action is brutal, and the entire flavor of the book is strong and acrid without smelling quite real. Some passages are vivid enough to be painful. Hanging is too good for Mr. Elam's evil creatures. Their consistent malevolence makes them incredibly diabolical, though there are doubtless monsters like that." C. D.
N Y Times p26 S 22 '40 400w

" 'Weevil in the Cotton' is a racy, shocking novel of no great literary merit; at times it is too blatant and the borrowings from the Nazis too obvious. Nevertheless, it contains too much truth for comfort. The author knows well the bawdy politicians and newspapermen who are democracy's worst enemies." C. K.
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 31 '40 240w

ELEANORE, SISTER. See Mary Eleanore, Sister

ELIOT, THOMAS STEARNS. The idea of a Christian society. 104p $1.50 Harcourt [5s Faber]

261 Sociology, Christian 40-3912

This brief and closely reasoned volume is based upon three lectures delivered in March, 1939, at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. Mr Eliot maintains that society has only one real choice—to become either Christian or pagan—and he defines "the essential conditions which must obtain in any future society which is to be compatible with freedom for the Christian community within it to live the Christian life."

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p16 F 18 '40 600w

"By the bland assumption that we can all agree on what is 'Christian,' Mr. Eliot seems to me to do some fine shadow boxing. And if he does not want to impose upon the state the authority of a set of Christian categories, he is forced to come out precisely where the liberals come out, whom he condemns. Strip off his ambiguities, and his essays are a plea for moral betterment." H. M. Jones
— Boston Transcript p1 Ja 20 '40 1000w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 27 '40 550w

"This is a precious small book—one for thoughtful people to cherish." J. McS.
+ Cath World 151:245 My '40 500w

"The book as a whole would probably have been very different, and I believe more helpful, if avarice had been faced two pages from the start rather than two pages from the close. I cannot escape feeling, therefore, that the book is chiefly valuable as a basis for discussion and a point of departure. But a book which can provide either of those things in such days as these has extraordinary value." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 57:182 F 7 '40 800w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears, Jr.
Churchman 154:21 Ja 15 '40 100w

"Mr. Eliot is no professor and protests he is no technician, except with words and their meanings. So it is a joy to read him, and it is the more incredible that any should misread him. . . What he says is compact, and is said in a way to promote a whole library of further enquiries into the matter." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 31:288 Ja 19 '40 950w

"The three lectures which Eliot publishes in this booklet are slight in content when compared with the books named, Maritain's True Humanism, Dawson's Inquiries into Religion and Culture, or Berdyaev's Meaning of History, but they make a very thoughtful and well-written supplement to them—especially to True Humanism. . . Every serious-minded person agrees that there is a need for a reintegration of society in spiritual terms, and T. S. Eliot points one way to it. This way seems rather local and British from his side, and we await an American presentation. One hopes that it will be as good-tempered and as thoughtful as The Idea of a Christian Society." M. M. Colum
+ — Forum 103:199 Ap '40 480w

"This book offers the first real solution to humanity's social perplexities since Plato's Republic described the way out of its politico-intellectual ones." L. B. Block
+ Living Age 357:593 F '40 1050w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 8 '39 200w

Nation 150:370 Mr 16 '40 240w

"I did not expect to like 'The Idea of a Christian Society,' and yet in the end I was greatly impressed by it. Once you have granted Mr. Eliot his doubtful premises, the rest of his argument moves toward wholly logical conclusions. And you find, even when you are hostile to the main trend of it, that it is full of moderation and worldly wisdom." Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 102:829 Je 17 '40 1050w

Reviewed by John MacMurray
New Statesman & Nation 18:933 D 23 '39 330w

"Rarely has Mr. Eliot written anything more penetrating, or more disturbing to complacency. . . The very brevity of the book makes a review of it the more difficult. Every page, every paragraph, almost every sentence, starts the reader on an independent exploration of fundamental issues. The importance of the volume lies even more in its many and pertinent implications than in what explicitly it says." B. I. Bell
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 7 '40 1500w

"Rather opaque, in spite of the author's Augustan style."
New Yorker 15:62 Ja 6 '40 40w

"His formal argument is as astute an arrangement of fine words in alluring design, vacuously simulating the appearances of thought, as one could rationally expect to come across outside the products of authentic and immedicable hallucination." Joseph Ratner
— Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ja 6 '40 700w

Discussion by V. C. Bishop and Joseph Ratner
Sat R of Lit 21:9 Mr 2 '40 2300w

"The outstanding qualities of Mr. Eliot's thought, as of his prose, are purity, precision, self-discipline, and a grave sense of intellectual responsibility, particularly in the use of words. In consequence, his statements are characteristically measured, qualified, and guarded; and his argument is at the same time close-knit in its construction and discursive in its range. His thought is therefore as easy to follow as it is difficult to grasp: paradoxically, it is elusive, not in spite of its precision, but because of it. . . The Idea of a Christian Society is a thesis distinguished not less, though less obtrusively, by its moral earnestness than by its intellectual cogency: and it is bound to exercise a lasting influence upon all future investigations regarding the nature, end, and function of the social order." Charles Smyth
+ Spec 163:687 N 17 '39 1350w

"His incidental comments on a hundred themes reveal original penetration, and give his book a suggestive power deserving the consideration of all persons who are concerned about the religious and social drift of the age. There are numerous observations enlightening

ELIOT, T. S.—Continued
in themselves, though the composite argument is not."
— + Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 7 '40 850w
Time 35:67 Ja 15 '40 100w

"To bring the contemporary intelligence to an attitude of respect for Christian thought is an undertaking as arduous as it is urgent. Mr. Eliot's book is a very valuable contribution towards this end."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p640 N 4 '39 2300w

"Early critics of his book have complained, not without warrant, that he has not 'implemented' his idea with specific political and economic apparatus. His failure to do so is deliberate. Mr. Eliot is a poet, and something of a mystic. We may not criticise him for failing to be an economist and sociologist as well. Being a mystic, he has chosen to approach his central theme along the classical via negativa of mysticism—by saying what he does not mean. To persons who are strangers to that 'way' the method is puzzling, but it has the great merit of opening the subject to each reader, and challenging him to do a little thinking on his own account—as against beating him over the head with one more club." W. L. Sperry
+ Yale R ns 29:624 spring '40 850w

ELIZABETH, pseud. See Russell, M. A.

ELKINS, FRANK, ed. The complete ski guide. 286p il maps $2.50 Doubleday
796.93 Skis and ski running (W) 40-35469

Short articles on the technique of skiing, compiled by the ski editor of the New York Times. The second part of the book gives places for skiing in the United States and Canada, ski records and championships, rules, ski songs and poetry, and directories of North American ski organizations and Canadian amateur ski association clubs. No index.

Booklist 37:170 Ja 1 '41
N Y Times p12 D 15 '40 290w

ELLARD, GERALD. Men at work at worship; with a pref. by John G. Murray. 307p $2.50 Longmans
264.02 Public worship. Roman Catholic church 40-10029

An account of the liturgical movement in the Catholic church in America. Index.

"Father Ellard frankly confesses that it has been his dream for years to write 'a book on the liturgical movement that would be of benefit to millions.' The language he uses is one that the 'millions' can readily understand: not fatuously simplified, but popular, direct and illustrated by the practical examples of an experienced lecturer. His assertions are backed up by innumerable references, checked and re-checked by his associates, and deal with the concept of Christian worship and the nature of the liturgy, its underlying doctrines, the practices which enable Catholics to participate in the Church's public worship, and the other movements—social, religious, educational—which are based upon the same doctrines." John LaFarge + America 63:274 Je 15 '40 750w
Cath World 152:247 N '40 160w

"The author has humor and imagination, as well as sound learning. . . Based on the thesis that communal social life and harmony depend upon communal prayer, this book should serve as a ready manual of what is to be done in making the Church more corporate-minded and socially responsible. It is a gathering together of all the ecclesiastical pronouncements on liturgical worship—from Trent down to the present—as affecting Catholic faith, Catholic prayer and Catholic action. There is, moreover, an excellent index of subjects treated and of authorities cited. Such a book could well serve to incite parish societies and whole parishes to the realization of their real purpose." Richard Flower, O.S.B.
+ Commonweal 32:435 S 13 '40 350w

ELLIOTT, HARRISON SACKET. Can religious education be Christian? 338p $2.50 Macmillan
268 Religious education 40-31202

"The liberal religious education, which the author defends, is in line with modern educational theories and is experience-centered rather than Bible-centered. A part of the book is a critique of Reinhold Niebuhr's writings and theories." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:63 O 15 '40

"Both those who agree with and those who dissent from Dr. Elliott's conclusions will be grateful to him for his lucid outlining of problems and viewpoints. Some who examine the same sources may not agree that the conflicts are so sharp and the viewpoints so irreconcilable." R. G. Ross
+ Christian Century 57:1418 N 13 '40 850w

"This is a challenging book on bold philosophy of religious education rather than an answer to the provocative question in the title. . . In many places confusion arises through long quotations from other writers and through over-multiplied citations. But read the book and think." C. H. Brewer
+ — Churchman 155:20 Ja 1 '41 280w

Reviewed by W. R. McNutt
Crozer Q 18:73 Ja '41 320w

"A careful study of this book should lead to fruitful conferences in which antagonisms might be eliminated and combined ministries give new meaning to the Christian cause. Elliott proves that religious education can be Christian." E. J. Chave
+ J Religion 21:67 Ja '41 650w

ELLIOTT, ROBERT G., and BEATTY, ALBERT R. Agent of death; the memoirs of an executioner. 315p il $3 Dutton
B or 92 Capital punishment 40-4780

In his capacity as executioner for six Eastern states the writer of these memoirs put 387 criminals to death in the electric chair. The book records such famous cases as those of Sacco and Vanzetti, Hauptmann, and Ruth Snyder, and others more obscure. The final chapter states his views on capital punishment, to which he was opposed.

"What he has to say on capital punishment bears the ring of authority. Coming from an official executioner, Elliot's views are surely unusual. But, after all, this is an unusual book!" S. G. Kling
+ Books p9 Ja 28 '40 800w

"Not only interesting, but informative as well." Marian Wiggin
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 20 '40 100w

Reviewed by George Joel
Nation 150:456 Ap 6 '40 430w

"The book as a whole is not sensational. It is not the tears of a murderess, but the prosaic, grisly details of executions, which are hardest for the reader to bear. And it must be stated frankly that this strange autobiography is genuinely interesting. Some of the individual cases are very interesting. So are the author's own comments and conclusions and summaries."
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 21 '40 400w

"A curious book, of more than morbid interest. Perhaps the most curious feature is the revelation of Elliott himself, so sane an average man that ordinary circumstances might have made him stodgy. . . He protests a little too much, especially since the book closes with quite a fervid little plea for the abolition of capital punishment. He never laughs." Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 21:14 Ja 20 '40 550w

"'Agent of Death' is written in a journalistic style that makes its unpleasant subject no more harrowing than the ordinary news story of an execution carried by papers as a matter of course. Even the parts that might seem concocted with an eye to sensation are less ghastly than the descriptions of the inevitable series of corpses in many a mystery story."

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 25 '40 600w

"His memoirs finished shortly before he died, describe the mechanics of the job, how it affected his personal life (hardly at all), how his victims acted. Opposed to capital punishment but unemotional as a surgeon, Executioner Elliott wrote as matter-of-factly as though he were describing the operation of an electric toaster. Few readers would wish for creepier reading."

Time 35:64 Ja 15 '40 450w

ELLIS, ANN FALWELL. Gentile wife. 459p $2.50 Carlyle

39-32122

"Family friction and political antagonisms in a small Southern city are brought to the boiling point in Ann Falwell Ellis's story of the battling and bickering Winthrops. . . Don Winthrop, who was his mother's favorite, worked on a newspaper and was not averse to carrying his resentment into print. His prejudices stemmed from ancient Southern grudges; he was against Republicans, Catholics and Jews. When his older sister Violet married Clifford, who was a Catholic, he stormed. When Janna, the younger, fell in love with a Jew, he was more upset than the cook, to whom diet and religion brought confusion. Readers will give most of their sympathy in this family chronicle to Uncle Pete, the unhappy neutral." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p22 N 19 '39 140w

"A truly interesting study of the difficulties inevitable to a mixed marriage and augmented when that marriage is between Jew and Christian. . . The theme is elaborated by the inclusion of extended family relationships and bigotry. The author presents her case clearly, strongly and with honesty."

+ Cath World 150:635 F '40 70w

ELLIS, CARLETON. Printing inks, their chemistry and technology. 560p il $7 Reinhold [42s Chapman]

667.5 Ink 40-8715

"After two introductory chapters which give a brief history of printing and necessary background descriptions of presses and processes, the book continues with chapters on vehicles, driers, modifiers and pigments. Different types of inks; typographic, planographic, intaglio, transfer, emulsion and special purpose types all have complete descriptions and discussions. Numerous formulas, analyses of inks and directions for use are scattered throughout the text. The book concludes with chapters on problems encountered, testing and paper. A nine-page glossary of terms and 64 pages of subject and author indexes add to the value of the book." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by H. L. Gerhart

Chem & Chem Eng N 18:598 Jl 10 '40 500w

"Usable information is the keynote of this book. Ink manufacturers, printers, lithographers, photoengravers, chemists, paper makers and even editors—all who are directly or indirectly concerned with printing ink will find something of interest and value in this volume."

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:443 Je '40 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:23 Ap '40

ELLIS, HAVELOCK. My life; autobiography. 647p il $3.75 Houghton [15s Heinemann]

B or 92 (W) 39-27979

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"Much in the book disappoints. It begins with a chapter of nearly 18,000 words on the author's genealogy, full of research but better suited to an appendix than to an exordium. The following chapters on childhood and youth are good but not superlative; there is little dew on the grass. Only with the problems of his marriage does the record blaze up into greatness." R. C. K. Ensor

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 15 '40 650w

Reviewed by J. C. Flugel

Nature 145:759 My 18 '40 900w

"He was a slighted and ill-used man, to whom fortune denied personal happiness, and the book shows the refuge he made for himself in an unkind world. But by building the refuge so strong, and by so strenuously evading description of the attacks which drove him into it, he appears a weak and whining man, an impression utterly at variance with the truth." Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 19:504 Ap 13 '40 1600w

"This is a book that must make varying impressions. The author places it on the shelf alongside the immortal, self-revealing books of St. Augustine and Rousseau. Whether it can remain there, time alone will decide. There are moments when it reaches high places, but whether these are frequent and sustained enough to justify the author's expectations can be known only when the book is detached from the curious significance it has on account of the life task as an interpreter of sex that Ellis assumed." E. R. Groves

Social Forces 18:445 Mr '40 1400w

Reviewed by Honor Croome

Spec 164:378 Mr 15 '40 950w

"Havelock Ellis's autobiography is the strangest, the least revealing, the most provoking, complex and baffling of his works. . . It is at once unsatisfying and intensely interesting; but the interest it arouses is not the kind its author aimed at. Many reasons might be assigned for this misdirection of purpose; perhaps the chief is the loss of that gift of quiet humour which gave poise to his work and so often saved his deliberate eloquence from running into strains of sentimentality. In this book the sentimentality swells up into waves and spills over into the margins."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p126 Mr 9 '40 1450w

Wis Lib Bul 36:29 F '40

ELLIS, LEWIS ETHAN. Reciprocity, 1911; a study in Canadian-American relations. 207p map $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

337 Tariff—U.S. U.S.—Commerce—Canada. Canada—Commerce—U.S. Reciprocity

39-25965

"A study of Canadian and American cross-border influences operating upon the passage of the implementing legislation in the United States and the rejection of the Taft-Fielding agreement in Canada. . . Political scientists will welcome the masterful analysis of propaganda techniques utilized on both sides of the line; the dissection of the Canadian and American pressure groups and their interests; the excellent description of a crucial Canadian political campaign; the clear account of the relation of the reciprocity controversy to the political fortunes of Taft and Laurier, to the further disintegration of the Republican party, and to the tariff reform movement of the times." (Am Pol Sci R) The work belongs to a series on the Relations of Canada and the United States prepared by the Division of economics and history of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. Bibliography. Index.

ELLIS, L. E.—Continued

"The book is at once a significant addition to the literature of propaganda methods and a scholarly reëxamination of a crucial period in the tariff relations between Canada and the United States, based upon the exploration of a wealth of source material, some of which has only recently become available." P. S. Peirce

+ Am Econ R 30:395 Je '40 260w

"An interesting, lucid, and very detailed account of the whole abortive attempt to establish a reciprocal trade agreement between Canada and the United States in 1910-11." Donald Masters

+ Am Hist R 45:685 Ap '40 300w

"An old tale is vividly retold, with a wealth of new materials. The study is distinguished by the use, for the first time in this connection, of the Taft papers; by a thorough investigation of the Laurier papers; by a canvass (the first of its kind) of Canadian press opinion from coast to coast; by use of contributions from a voluminous correspondence between the author and numerous individuals who had participated in the controversy." Henry Reiff

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:175 F '40 250w

Reviewed by J. P. Smith

Canadian Hist R 21:217 Je '40 800w

Christian Century 56:1110 S 13 '39 40w

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell

J Pol Econ 48:908 D '40 700w

ELLISTON, HERBERT BERRIDGE. Finland fights. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 443p il maps $2.75 Little

947.1 Finland—History. Russo-Finnish war, 1939-1940 (W) 40-27264

Graphic account of the war in Finland, written against a background of the historical, political, and economic situation of Scandinavia. The author, who has been an editorial writer for the Christian Science Monitor and American correspondent for the Observer (London) "was standing on the Finnish-Russian frontier just eighteen hours before the Russian Army came pouring over to invade Finland. He got back to Helsinki, the Finnish capital, exactly eight hours before Russian airmen swooped down on the city with bombs and machine guns." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by M. W. Graham

Ann Am Acad 212:236 N '40 280w

Booklist 36:304 Ap 1 '40

Bookmark p8 My '40

"Here it is—hot off the griddle—the best book of its kind the American reader is likely to get. . . By following the events, proposals and counter-proposals and interviews immediately preceding the Russian invasion—and it's as easy as following a detective story, for Mr. Elliston writes swiftly and clearly—the reader finds himself in breathless and indignant comprehension of the conflicting forces which led to the present situation. . . It is a rare thing for a book to handle such complicated questions on such a gigantic and diversified map so readably and authoritatively. And rare, indeed, to be able to present them almost up to the present moment." Agnes Rothery

+ Books p1 Mr 10 '40 1000w

"The book appeals to my emotionalism, not to my scholarship." P. C.

Cath World 151:251 My '40 500w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 154:16 Ap 1 '40 290w

Reviewed by Norman Cousins

Current Hist 51:1 Ap '40 1200w

Foreign Affairs 18:758 Jl '40 50w

"Mr. Elliston's repertorial style is of a high order, and in a work of the long-range interest of Finland Fights its readability may be set down as a circumstance both fortunate and important."

+ Living Age 358:294 My '40 230w

"It is a fine tale, and it reads as easily as a novel." A. W. J.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 26 '40 140w

"Mr. Elliston has painted a rapid portrait, as sympathetic as it is sincere, of the Finnish people at war. Too informal to be classed as literature, too spontaneous for the name of journalism, it is a triumph in the art of conversation. The reader feels that he is one of a little group of Mr. Elliston's best friends. With the dust of his travels still upon him, he tells us his story. It pours from him in a rapid stream till he grows hot and breathless. Vivid and picturesque though it is, it tumbles out in perfect order, for this fountain was built foursquare." H. N. Brailsford

+ New Statesman & Nation 19:369 Mr 16 '40 1050w

"Mr. Elliston wrote, of course, in a hurry. His book shows this throughout. . . But the excitement under which he wrote throbs in his pages. It lends them adequacy and force. It endows him with genuine feeling, enables him to use convincing argumentation. His book presents the best panorama so far of Finnish courage and suffering and indifference in the presence of death." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 10 '40 1100w

New Yorker 16:107 Mr 16 '40 40w

"'Finland Fights' is a carefully written, conscientious, and balanced treatment of a complicated problem. It is excellently done, well supplemented by maps and illustrations. And it is as up to the minute as the average magazine article. Mr. Elliston managed not only to be on the spot at the right time; he was able to get his material in shape in record time. Nor has the end of the war spoiled the timeliness of his book." H. C. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 21:15 Mr 23 '40 600w

"Finland Fights is, and will remain, a valuable contribution to the literature of the most heroic episode in modern history, well worth the great labour which its rapid production must have meant." P. N. Baker

+ Spec 164:454 Mr 29 '40 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 17 '40 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p130 Mr 16 '40 500w

Reviewed by Waino Nyland

Yale R n s 29:854 summer '40 200w

ELLSBERG, EDWARD. Treasure below. 305p $2 Dodd

(W) 40-3961

This story for older boys is a sequel to Spanish Ingots (Book Review Digest, 1936), carrying on the adventures of Philip Ramsay, former lieutenant in the United States navy, and his men in their efforts to salvage the sunken treasure of the Santa Cruz, an ancient Spanish galleon.

"This is a man's book as much as a boy's: a father can borrow his son's copy without losing face. All he'll lose is sleep, if he incautiously opens it late in the evening." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 10 '40 280w

"Mutiny, swift disaster at sea, a lost submarine combine to make an exciting adventure story for boys."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 23 '40 50w

"The author tells his story in direct, straightforward fashion and even those boys and girls for whom a whole book is something of a task will find that 'Treasure Below' reads easily and rapidly." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 My 5 '40 220w

ELLWOOD, CHARLES ABRAM. The world's need of Christ; with a foreword by Samuel McCrea Cavert. 237p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 Sociology, Christian 40-27866

"What Professor Ellwood demands is a new 'imitation of Christ.' Our world is collapsing, he says, because it has abandoned the teachings of Jesus, which are the way of life for societies and cultures as well as for individuals, in favor of the lust and greed of a sheer possessive materialism. . . Nothing can save the world but 'a return to the Christian tradition.' . . What this means is worked out in detail in a series of incisive chapters on science and philosophy, the church, business and industry, politics and international relations and the reconstruction of our civilization." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:211 Ja 15 '41

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes
Books p13 Ja 12 '41 160w

"The World's Need of Christ is a testimony of the faith of an earnest student of society but it is also a portent of our time. The very urgency of the appeal reveals that men who throughout their lives have been content to work as students suddenly discover that unless they also become prophets who win men to convictions, their freedom as students is gone. There is no ivory tower for scholarly recluses in our time. Every man must give testimony to the faith that is in him, and Dr. Ellwood has presented his faith in compelling fashion." J. F. Mulholland
+ Christian Century 58:22 Ja 1 '41 600w

ELSBREE, WILLARD SLINGERLAND. The American teacher; evolution of a profession in a democracy. 566p il maps $2.75 Am. bk.
371.1 Teachers 39-17288

Presents the historical backgrounds of the present-day problems of teaching personnel. The three main divisions are: the Colonial schoolmaster; the public-school teacher during the early years of the Republic; the emergence of the professional teacher. Chapters under these headings describe the teacher's status as to qualifications, certification, functions, tenure, salaries, economic and social position, etc. Index.

Reviewed by Willard Waller
Am Soc R 5:995 D '40 50w

"The author is to be congratulated on so handling his array of facts that all of them, even those from the early period of American history, throw light on American educational institutions and on the status and the work of the American teacher of the present day. In few books that this reviewer has read is the continuity of historical events made so clear to the reader. The book is recommended both for class work and for general reading." C. F. Arrowood
+ El School J 41:73 S '40 650w

"The material has been selected, organized, and interpreted in such a manner as to constitute a highly readable treatise well meriting its subtitle 'Evolution of a Profession in a Democracy.' . . For this work a wide range of existing researches has been drawn on and skilfully articulated. The documentation is ample." P. W. Hutson
+ School R 48:149 F '40 350w

"This is obviously a book which should be read by the school teachers of this country. . . As a historical and social study it has a more general interest."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 S 14 '39 550w

ELWOOD, MURIEL. Pauline Frederick, on and off the stage. 225p il $3 Kroch
B or 92 Frederick, Pauline 39-34188

Biography of this American actress who died in 1938. Pauline Frederick was famous on both stage and screen, and her greatest success was Madame X. "The picture that finally rises from the page is, owing to Miss Elwood's patient assembling of facts and in spite of her crude writing, the essential picture of the successful actress in any epoch—a woman beautiful in a stately way, intrinsically happy, considerate of younger talents, unconsciously a bit pompous, doomed to suffer many personal losses, and always generous." (Sat R of Lit)

Books p13 F 18 '40 80w

"From the pages of this biography written without sparkle or skill Pauline Frederick emerges as an actress capable in the pre-war tradition and as a generous woman. But there is to be found here no trace of her 'enchantment' . . . nor of the ability to provoke romance that charmed her countless audiences." C. B.
Boston Transcript p3 Mr 16 '40 70w

"In spite of the shoddy writing—the prose style is reminiscent of the dull stretches between the lurid bits in photoplay magazines—this volume has a certain claim on the interests of those who follow the theater closely, and who remember the days of Pauline Frederick's ascendancy. . . The personal portrait of Pauline Frederick, as presented here, makes her seem a little incredible: she appears as too perfect. Miss Elwood does a plausible job of rationalizing the five marriages." H. T. M.
— + Sat R of Lit 21:19 F 10 '40 220w

Reviewed by H. G. Percey
Special Libraries 31:174 My '40

ELY, RICHARD THEODORE, and WEHRWEIN, GEORGE SIMON. Land economics. 512p il $4 Macmillan
333 Land 40-8985

"Land economics is here defined as the science which deals with the utilization of the earth's surface, or space, as conditioned by property and other institutions. The first five chapters discuss this while the remainder of the book treats their application to the various types of land and natural resources." (Social Studies) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well written and will serve as a ready reference for those who wish information concerning the land and other natural resources of this continent." W. E. Grimes
+ Am Econ R 30:860 D '40 430w

Reviewed by Karl Brandt
Ann Am Acad 212:266 N '40 700w

Reviewed by P. W. Wager
Social Forces 19:279 D '40 450w

"Excellent volume backed by twenty years of teaching."
+ Social Studies 31:333 N '40 70w

"This meaty volume presents its subjects in a fresh and interesting fashion, the human aspects and present day problems being kept constantly to the fore. . . The authors are teachers of high ability as well as experienced writers, and they present their subject in such a way as to stimulate interest and thought, rather than giving a finished exposition of the subject. . . The book should be welcomed as an aid toward meeting the pressing and exceedingly important requirement of conserving the resources of our country, agricultural, mineral, and human, so as to make possible for it a very long future." D. R. Wickes
+ Social Studies 32:40 Ja '41 480w

"It is a scholarly and yet a lively work. . . Perhaps not many scholars, but some highly important ones, I feel, will be deriving findings from Ely and Wehrwein a hundred years hence." Russell Lord
+ Survey 76:373 D '40 310w

EMANS, ELAINE V. About spiders; introducing Arachne; drawings by Viola A. Young; phot. by Lee Passmore and O. C. Kuehn. 183p $2.50 Dutton
595.4 Spiders 40-30730

Popular study of some varieties of American spiders, written "for all who do not know about, and so do not care about, spiders." Some of those considered are the beautiful lady, the tarantula, the black widow, and the trapdoor spiders. Index.

Booklist 37:94 N 1 '40
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 10 '40 210w

"Recommended for all libraries who can afford it." A. E. Brown
+ Library J 65:768 S 15 '40 160w

EMANS, E. V.—Continued

"For laymen of all ages it presents briefly, readably and enthusiastically, with charm and imagination, the essential facts about an order which, familiar as it is, has been studied intensively by only about thirty men, and seldom by a woman." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 4 '40 950w

New Yorker 16:62 Ag 10 '40 60w

"Miss Emans handles a most difficult topic in the field of natural science in a sensitive and intelligent way. A lively and yet restrained sense of humor helps immeasurably in presenting the subject." C. M. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 4 '40 700w

Wis Lib Bul 136:152 N '40

EMBREE, JOHN FEE. Suye Mura, a Japanese village. 354p il maps $3 Univ. of Chicago press [18s Cambridge]

915.2 Suye Mura, Japan. Japan—Social life and customs 40-1477

"Dr. Embree's book is . . . a description, based on direct observation, of the life of a Japanese village community. Its chief purpose is to provide material for that comparative study of the forms of human society that is known as social anthropology; but it should have an appeal to a wider audience of general readers as giving an additional insight from a new angle into Japanese civilization." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"Since the work is descriptive, a report of a field investigation, there is little that a reviewer can do other than to advise the reading of the book. It is a sound, reliable picture, rich in detail. Descriptions of this sort cannot be summarized; their usefulness is in the details which a summary glosses over." D. G. Haring

+ Am Anthropol 42:680 O '40 900w

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Am J Soc 46:252 S '40 550w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman

Am Soc R 5:259 Ap '40 490w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 9 '40 330w

Reviewed by G. M. Fisher

Pacific Affairs 13:461 D '40 4000w

"This book differs from any other book on Japan known to the author. Its approach and treatment is that of the social anthropologist, and it deals more fully and completely with all the phases and relationships of a single village than does any other work." D. H. Buchanan

+ Social Forces 19:286 D '40 650w

Time 34:87 N 27 '39 370w

EMBURY, LUCY. The listening man; il. by Russel Hamilton. 283p $2.50 Messner

40-32776

Story of sixth-century Ireland and the days of the bards on Tara Hill. It is the saga of Ollave, the small son of tall parents, who sees miracles all around him in nature, and does not want to become a fighting man. He enters Prince Finnian's school at Clonard, and most of the story is of his stay there.

"The story is romantically written, often overwritten, but it creates an atmosphere with cool sweet adjectives and the soft cadence of its prose." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 10 '40 200w

Cath World 152:378 D '40 70w

EMERSON, CAROLINE DWIGHT. The magic tunnel; a story of old New York; drawings by Raymond Lufkin. 120p $1.75 Stokes

40-30715

Two modern children on a subway train find themselves coming out of the tunnel into New Amsterdam back in 1664. Before they return to their modern apartment home John and Sarah have experienced some exciting times in the New York City of three hundred years ago.

"A good story, and it also gives an interesting picture of Colonial New York and the important historical events of the time. The illustrations by Raymond Lufkin bear out both the magic and historical background, a difficult assignment." R. A. Hill

+ Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 60w

"The tale moves swiftly and the transition from the present to the past and back again is made smoothly and convincingly. The description of life in old New York is full of accurate historical detail, and without being aware of anything but the fact that he is reading an interesting story the young reader from 8 to 10 years old will learn much about the life of New York City in the days when it was New Amsterdam." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p32 N 10 '40 160w

EMERSON, CAROLINE DWIGHT. School days in Disneyville; il. by the Walt Disney studio. 102p 68c Heath

39-21182

"There was plenty of excitement and fun in the Little Red Schoolhouse in Disneyville where Mickey and Minnie Mouse, the Three Little Pigs, and Donald Duck were the pupils. The Big Bad Wolf snooped around once too often when Mickey Mouse was on the job to prove himself to be a real hero. Donald Duck, the problem child of Miss Lane's class, was a poor speller but good in arithmetic, and he often played hookey, but he always returned to play with his schoolmates." Boston Transcript

"The author tells her story well and makes it just a bit different by bits of humor, which were uproariously received by the young child to whom this reviewer read the story. The illustrations drawn by the Walt Disney Studio enhance an already delightful and charming book." Bess Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 6 '40 180w

"Donald Duck and Mickey Mouse have not been fortunate in their presentation in book form. In the moving pictures the Disney Studios have made Mickey and Donald and their many friends beloved characters to children, but the originality and sparkle evident in the moving pictures are missing in these books. Careful reading demonstrates that the illustrations are much better than the text. Perhaps the effort to control the vocabulary of the text has restricted the authors and prevented them from presenting these characters as the jolly bits of pure nonsense that they are. The format of the books is excellent." A. R. Polkinghorne

— + El School J 40:792 Je '40 140w

"In 'School Days at Disneyville' Caroline Emerson is most successful in catching the gay absurdity which distinguishes Walt Disney's work, and has added to it a special quality of humor." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 18 '40 80w

EMMART, EMILY WALCOTT, ed. & tr. See Cruz, M. de la. Badianus manuscript

EMMETT, ELIZABETH. The land he loved; a story of old Narragansett; il. by Lydia H. Parmelee. 291p $2 Macmillan

(W) 40-30537

"This is about a boy who arrived in New England from London in 1726, desperately determined to get back. He had been drugged and sold overseas. . . The Throckmortons bought him for thirty pounds, in kindness, and found him for weeks a bad bargain. Neither honest treatment nor the charm New England had for these good people had the least effect on a boy longing for London's dear dirty streets. . . [But] when he won his freedom, honestly and at his peril, and started toward Boston and the ship, he found himself longing to go back to the land he loved. Only it was Rhode Island now." Books

---

"A story for ten-year-olds, stronger than most historical tales for that age, it has ideas useful to people who want to help strange children find themselves. There are many line drawings with the costumes and buildings of pre-Revolutionary Rhode Island." M. L. Becker
+ Books p7 S 1 '40 320w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Stromdahl
Library J 65:713 S 1 '40 100w

"The humor and the excellent characterizations in this story of a proud boy's difficult adjustment to an unwelcome situation in a strange, harsh land make an absorbing book." R. A. Hill
+ Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 50w

"There is such a hearty flavor of well-being in the story that no melodrama is needed. One of the most refreshing tales of earlier days that has come our way in a long time, this is even more important as the story of a bewildered boy making peace with the world, drawn with such knowledge of boy-nature that he might have lived in the twentieth century as well as in the eighteenth." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 25 '40 440w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 15 '40 180w

Wis Lib Bul 36:153 N '40

ENCYCLOPEDIA of Canada; general editor: W. Stewart Wallace. 6v $55.50 by subscription; $49.50 to libraries 1940 Univ. associates of Canada

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Canada

"Volume I of the Encyclopedia of Canada published in 1935 was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1935, p.57-59 [Book Review Digest, 1936]. The publication of this set was completed in 1938. The previous review dealt with the scope and purpose of this encyclopedia as evidenced in volume I. The entire set 1935-38, has now been examined to see if the same evaluation applies to succeeding volumes and if any additional observations are required. In general, volumes II through VI follow volume I closely in treatment. The set is especially strong in biographies, place names, natural science, social science, and history. The authorship of the longer articles is indicated under Contributors of Special Articles. These articles are written by specialists and in most instances excellent bibliographies are appended. The articles of the set are well proportioned in length according to their importance." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"Cross references are numerous but are sometimes misleading. . . As a rule biographical sketches are not included for living persons other than a few governmental leaders, but material of a biographical as well as of a critical nature appears in the general articles. . . It is to be regretted that in the 1940 printing, errors of the original printing were not corrected. . . Libraries possessing the first edition in good condition do not need to purchase the 1940 printing; otherwise the set is recommended for purchase by large libraries, by Canadian libraries, and by those in the U.S. near the border, having calls for material about Canada."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 11:51 O '40 700w

ENCYCLOPAEDIA of world history; ancient, medieval and modern, chronologically arranged; a rev. and modernized version of Ploetz's Epitome; comp. and ed. by William L. Langer. 1249p maps $5.50 Houghton

902 Chronology, Historical (W) 40-32043

A revised and modernized version of Ploetz's Epitome first published in German over seventy years ago. "Ploetz' Epitome was translated into English by William H. Tillinghast and published by Houghton Mifflin Company in this country in 1883. The translator, recognizing that the original was designed particularly to meet the needs of the German student and that therefore the history of central Europe was weighted as against the history of France, England, and America, took the opportunity to enlarge a number of sections and to add others. . . Occasional revisions were made and in 1915 the title was changed to A Handbook of Universal History. . . The Epitome, again revised, was published in 1925 as A Manual of Universal History. . . [In this latest revision] almost nothing of the substance of the old book remains; every single section has been reduced or expanded and, above all, brought into line with present-day knowledge." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

Books p29 S 29 '40 650w

"I hope that some will be found who will not only use the book as a reference book but will roam over its well printed pages and its most interesting genealogical tables with the same delight and the same spirit with which I once used my old Ploetz, which was infinitely less well printed, less attractive, and much poorer in material and in presentation. A generation of students and readers will be thankful to Professor Langer and his collaborators for this product of infinite labor and devoted care." Hans Kohn
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 360w

"The old 'Ploetz' was a standard reference volume, and Professor Langer's modernized version will undoubtedly continue its popularity now when new historical knowledge and new interests demand revision." Philip Burnham
+ Commonweal 33:27 O 25 '40 290w

Reviewed by S. F. Bloom
New Repub 104:59 Ja 13 '41 600w

"Professor Langer had the assistance of more than a dozen of his Harvard colleagues in the preparation of a reference book which immediately takes its place in the front rank of historical manuals." Simeon Strunsky
+ N Y Times p8 O 13 '40 650w

"This 1,155-page chronology, which is based on Ploetz's 'Epitome,' seems, so far as this department can judge, to be a well-planned, well-indexed, attractively written guide to its enormous field."
+ New Yorker 16:70 S 7 '40 40w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly
Sat R of Lit 23:16 D 28 '40 400w

ENGLAND, JANE, pseud. See Jervis, V. M. S.

ENGSTRAND, MRS SOPHIA (BELZER). Miss Munday. 345p $2.50 Dial press

40-27385

The story of Helen Munday, teacher in the High school of River Port, Wisconsin. "She has been taught that the children under her care must not only be educated, but given principles of conduct as well. She conforms to the straight-laced mode of life of the villagers . . . so her days are spent in teaching and her evenings are spent in brooding on the narrowness of her outlook. She falls in love with the fisherman, Adam La Fonde, and she wants terribly to marry him. But she is first, last, and always the school teacher, and the struggle for a new world is lost by her own training." (Sat R of Lit)

Booklist 36:345 My 1 '40

"As a novel 'Miss Munday' has many faults in development of character and plot, but in spite of that it tells a common story uncommonly well. It succeeds in portraying the starved and pitiful lives of school teachers, finding each other's society unbearable but turning to it for want of anything better. Small town school boards and parent-teacher associations

ENGSTRAND, SOPHIA—Continued
will find this book uncomfortable reading but will doubtless use the arguments Mrs. Engstrand reports as justification for their mores." Rose Feld
+ — Books p13 Ap 21 '40 750w

"Mrs. Engstrand had a right to do as she pleased in a novel; but in the interests of validity we doubt that all these horrors could have been present, and to the nth degree, in any single small community. Even Adam is an extreme example of what he is. We know a number of young teachers who do not go about clearly yearning and who enjoy ordinary feminine pleasures without criticism from superiors. Besides, if teaching were as desiccating, exhausting and profoundly discouraging as Mrs. Engstrand pictures it, she never could have written so spirited and challenging a story. Her novel would have died away in the classroom."
+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '40 900w
New Repub 102:586 Ap 29 '40 60w

"The author has had courage enough to end her book in accordance with realities instead of sentimentalities. The dialogue is a trifle sententious at times, and there are moments when the writing is strained, but the book impresses one as giving a truthful as well as a vivid picture of an important part of our American life." L. M. Field
+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 21 '40 700w
Reviewed by Kenneth Horan
Sat R of Lit 22:13 Ap 27 '40 500w

ENRIGHT, ELIZABETH (MRS ROBERT GILLHAM). The sea is all around; il. by the author. 124p $2 Farrar
(W) 40-27691

A little girl on her first trip away from home is the heroine. Her journey begins in Iowa, and ends on an island off the Massachusetts coast. There she spends an exciting winter, including tea parties in old Mr Bates' antique shop, a night when she was lost in the fog, and finally the finding of a playmate just her age.

Booklist 37:74 O 15 '40

"A child gets, through Mab, a sense of the goodness and gayety of New England winters; of their round of nature and festivals; of school and friendship and the enveloping kindness people show a child far from home. It is told as it happens; pictures do much of the telling. Some are spirited black-and-white, but a large proportion is in color, wind-blown and free. On the title-page an oil lamp stands for much in island life. The book itself is full of light." M. L. Becker
+ Books p12 N 10 '40 360w
Cath World 152:379 D '40 40w
Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 11 '40 180w
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:438 N '40 80w
Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 40w
Reviewed by Lena Barksdale
Nation 151:455 N 9 '40 10w
Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:844 D 16 '40 50w

"Lovely as the writing is, this is not a precious book. There is for Mab, a spirited and inquisitive and none too patient little girl, always something doing, whether it is exploring Mr. Bates's antique shop with the scores of stories about his curios, playing with the rambunctious Prior children or being lost on the snowy moors under the Northern lights, and the whole adds up, with its understanding of people as well as place, into a worthy successor to 'Thimble Summer.'" E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p32 N 10 '40 280w

"Unusually fine." Z. C. Durrell
+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 N 16 '40 30w

ENTERS, ANGNA. Love possessed Juana [queen of Castile]. 198p $2.50 Twice a year press, 509 Madison av, N.Y.
812 Joanna, consort of Philip I, king of Castile—Drama 39-34189

A play in four acts with incidental music and ballets, stage sets and drawings by the author. The play tells the tragic story of Joanna, queen of Castile, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, unhappy wife of Philip of Flanders.

"Miss Enters does not believe that Juana was mad. Mad or not, hers was a sad enough story, and deserves a somewhat swifter and less rhetorically clogged drama than Miss Enters is able to supply." W. P. Eaton
Books p13 My 12 '40 80w
Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 10 '40 390w

ENTWISTLE, WILLIAM JAMES. European balladry. 415p $5.50 (17s 6d) Oxford
808.1 Ballads [40-9177]

"[This work] further enlarges our definition of the ballad and our view of its provenience, showing us 'any short, traditional narrative poem sung, with or without accompaniment or dance, in assemblies of the people' from Spain, Spanish Jewry and Ibero-America to the tip of Scandinavia, from Asia Minor through Greece and the Balkans, Ukraine and the Russias across to Britain, and across again to North America. This magnificent geographical prospect is matched by one of time: the earliest bits of popular poetry are examined along with their modern survivals. . . The book's purpose is a presentation of material, rather than a critical estimate or a discussion of ballad questions." Books

Reviewed by E. K. Wells
Books p7 Ja 21 '40 550w
Reviewed by Evelyn Sharp
Manchester Guardian p5 O 13 '39 460w
Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 6 '40 850w

EPPES, ALLEN. Magic spring. 256p $2 Phoenix
40-11493

An old Southern hotel with a medicinal spring on the premises; a small boy crippled from infantile paralysis; two young men, one of them a doctor; and two charming Southern girls, make up this love story.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 Jl 7 '40 150w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 3 '40 30w

EPSTEIN, JACOB. Let there be sculpture. 393p pl $5 Putnam
B or 92 Sculptors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W)

Autobiography of the American born sculptor who has long been resident in England, and is famous—or notorious—for the Rima statue and others which have provoked controversies. The book gives a more or less chronological account of his life and works, with many pages devoted to exposition of his side of the controversies. Index.

"The book is excellent, both on its lighter side and on its serious side, and as such we recommend it."
+ Atlantic D '40 170w
Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40
Reviewed by Thomas Craven
Books p6 N 3 '40 1000w

"This is a sometimes inspiring and constantly cantankerous document in the artistic temperament. Mr. Epstein is a great creative artist; yet the reader of his book may come to suspect that the controversies which have shaken London each time he has unveiled one of his major works are not exclusively the fault of the benighted Philistines. Mr. Epstein is artist enough to be enraged by what the critics say of his work, and to feed the fires." Lewis Gannett

Boston Transcript p9 O 25 '40 600w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

Commonweal 33:149 N 29 '40 140w

"One's feeling is that a fine book has been just spoiled by a recurrent note of peevishness. But Epstein has the right to be peevish. He has suffered not so much from the attentions of the press as from neglect by architects. Given a handful of architects with the faith and courage of Charles Holden, Epstein could have bestowed real significance on buildings that are at present merely tasteful. It is still not too late." Eric Newton

+ — Manchester Guardian p8 D 6 '40 440w

"On the whole, as one reads, the book appears hastily written and inorganic. Nevertheless, when I had finished I changed my judgment. I realized, as with some of Epstein's monumental works, that I had had a true and large experience. Perhaps the book broke all the rules, but its blunt lines summed up into the sense of a remarkably honest man and of a truly religious artist. The book lives by its own rules; reveals strength and freedom of action. After all, it articulates Jacob Epstein." Waldo Frank

+ Nation 151:422 N 2 '40 900w

Reviewed by Cyril Connolly

New Statesman & Nation 20:546 N 30 '40 1000w

"Mr. Epstein is reticent by nature. You have a feeling in reading him that he tells you only what he deems of importance in relation to his art. . . There are no blurred edges in the expression of the sculptor's thoughts, and he is not above confessing to mistakes, such, for example, as he made in his 'Rock Drill' period. He abhors shams in life and in art, and makes his position clear in both. This is an important book, whatever way you look at it." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p9 N 3 '40 1100w

New Yorker 16:88 N 2 '40 40w

"Epstein's works have so often touched off controversy, his forms so unequivocally defied conventions, that it has been easy for the public to create an Epstein stereotype: an unkempt eccentric trying to dumbfound the bourgeoisie with mallet, chisel, and both fists. This autobiography dissolves the stereotype and reveals the man. . . Coolly and with a minimum of bitterness Epstein describes that world of critics, collectors, dealers, and fellow artists; and the picture is not a pleasant one. Instead of indulging a martyr complex, he shows how difficult it is to be independently creative in a philistine society." Oliver Larkin

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 N 9 '40 480w

"The book makes dull and choppy reading, but it is worth while for the account it gives of the author's sensibility and creative powers, which are so remarkable and yet have such astonishing gaps. When talking about doing sculpture (far too little of this) instead of about exhibiting he is always interesting, and there is a fine direct quality in his writing whenever jealousy and rancour are absent, as in the section on African and Polynesian carving. . . Then, later on, comes a patch of fifth-rate journalism, showing that sudden emptiness and absurdity that is so shocking in some of the large-scale carvings." John Piper

+ — Spec 165:584 N 29 '40 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p602 N 30 '40 3000w

ERGANG, ROBERT REINHOLD. Europe from the renaissance to Waterloo. 839p il maps $4 Heath

940.2 Europe—History 39-19174

"College textbook for the period 1500 to 1815. The author has regarded history as the study of developments, and has attempted to present a 'well-rounded and fairly complete picture,' devoting a generous amount of space to cultural history without slighting the political and economic phases. He has sought also to include the latest findings of historical scholarship and to characterize the great personalities so that they will be more than mere names." (Social Educ) Select bibliography. Index.

Cath World 151:763 S '40 50w

"On the whole, the work is marked by sound scholarship, a clear and agreeable style, and careful organization. Several topics receive exceptionally good treatment. Among these one might mention the introduction on Basic Factors in Early Modern History, the Renaissance, the Holy Roman Empire, and Dutch Economic Expansion." H. T. Hagg

+ Social Educ 4:214 Mr '40 550w

"Cultural history receives attention and the work is well balanced in its presentation of the political, economic, social, and cultural factors." S. J. Hemleben

+ Social Studies 31:140 Mr '40 280w

ERMINE, WILL, pseud. See Drago, H. S.

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD. Too big. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 314p $2.75 Little 338.7 Business. Corporations—U.S.

(W) 40-27542

"Carrying on the theme of Louis D. Brandeis's 'The Curse of Bigness' (Book Review Digest, 1935), Mr. Ernst considers corporative size in terms of inefficient organization, shoring up his thesis with case histories in steel, insurance, cities, the federal government, etc. He recommends corrective legislation and other measures." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 36:406 Jl 1 '40

Reviewed by C. N. Stabler

Books p6 Je 30 '40 1300w

"This is an interesting book, filled with sanity and wise philosophy." F. H. Pardee

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 29 '40 410w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 17 '40 850w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 154:19 Ag '40 330w

Reviewed by R. A. Sawyer

Library J 65:590 Jl '40 170w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 151:34 Jl 13 '40 700w

"The glib way in which Mr. Ernst accuses some of the objects of his wrath of being naive will probably not set well with some readers. . . It is nevertheless a fascinating tale that Mr. Ernst unfolds. Much of the historical matter is familiar to students of economics and to others, but there are also spicy details that the author has apparently gathered by independent research. Unfortunately in recent years there have been far too many popular books on economics based on statistics that would not stand too close examination. I have not had an opportunity to check on Mr. Ernst's statistics, which he uses with fluency to support his arguments." D. W. Ellsworth

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 7 '40 1450w

"A readable and significant book."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Je 29 '40 50w

"The book is a good factual analysis of the ills of bigness, and a challenge to the reader to do some thinking on his own account." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 22:12 Je 29 '40 700w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle

Survey G 29:559 N '40 390w

Wis Lib Bul 36:134 O '40

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and LINDEY, ALEXANDER. The censor marches on. 346p $2.50 Doubleday

323.445 Censorship. Literature, Immoral. Sex in literature (W) 40-27033

"Recent milestones in the administration of the obscenity law in the United States." (Subtitle) Taking up in turn literature, sex instruction, the theater, the movies, radio, art, birth control, and nudism, the writers show what success the efforts to save society from sex have had and where they are leading us. Index.

Reviewed by S. H. Van Dyke
Am Pol Sci R 34:614 Je '40 230w

"If you are irked by the censored products offered you on the screen and the air, and could do with a little more Boccaccio and a little less Breen in your entertainment, you will be sympathetic with Mr. Ernst's wideranging attack upon the Puritan forces, and not annoyed by his methods or his repetitions. If you are seriously interested in the problem of censorship, you will regard this book as an exhibit, and be most grateful for its reproduction of some fifty pages of court decisions and codes." W. R. Crawford
+ Ann Am Acad 209:213 My '40 470w

Booklist 36:208 F 1 '40

Reviewed by Rose Feld
Books p4 F 11 '40 900w

"'Censor Marches On' deals with a serious and prosy subject, is highly instructive, spirited, and equally funny without being at all vulgar." Joan Hopkinson
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 10 '40 350w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 31:369 F 16 '40 300w

"'The Censor Marches On' makes lively reading, if only for the amusing views it provides of the minds of censors from Sumner to Will Hays; and it is an indispensible handbook for anyone interested in the workings of censorship. That should be everyone." Margaret Marshall
+ Nation 150:131 F 3 '40 750w

"This general view of censorship is bound to be interesting reading, and is often amusing. In a sense it is jerry-built: Messrs. Ernst and Lindey aren't bad writers but they aren't good by a long throw; they achieve a fine balance of both too many details and not enough. And although it is no crusading book and has a quiet urbanity of judgment, it nevertheless is marked by the general assumptions of the grim liberal." Otis Ferguson
+ — New Repub 102:314 Mr 4 '40 1250w

"The volume as a whole offers a clear, interesting and cool-headed study, and it ought to be widely and thoughtfully read."
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 14 '40 480w

"Lively review of sex and obscenity censorship in the United States by two noted oppositionists."
+ New Yorker 15:64 Ja 13 '40 20w

"Mr. Ernst and Mr. Lindey are well qualified to survey the current situation with respect to censorship. It has been their good fortune, as they remark, to argue many of the most important cases in this field in recent years. . . They have performed a genuine service in this admirable survey of censorship and in assembling the facts concerning many incidents of which the lay observer recalls only inaccurate impressions." C. McD. Puckette
+ Sat R of Lit 21:8 Ja 13 '40 950w

Social Studies 31:236 My '40 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 80w

"The material covered by the book is interesting, well presented, stimulating and informative. The progress of the battle against censorship is encouraging. 'The Censor Marches On' should make an appeal to all men interested in the freedom of the human mind." A. G. Hays
+ Survey G 29:256 Ap '40 850w

"A sharp, clattering, rather witty account, in the best liberal-lawyer-to-laymen manner, of what U. S. sex censorship amounts to in its several fields. Nothing startlingly new is said on this sore old subject. The authors bring all the more famous court fights, raids, enlightened opinions and funny stories between two covers."
Time 35:75 Ja 29 '40 80w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Give me liberty; the story of an innocent bystander. 313p $2.50 Stokes

Henry, Patrick—Fiction (W) 40-34424

Historical novel of pre-Revolutionary Virginia. The hero of the story is young David Farrill, ardent admirer of Patrick Henry but not an entirely willing follower, as Patrick Henry more and more openly preaches sedition.

Atlantic Ja '41 180w

Booklist 37:175 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p5 N 3 '40 550w

"John Erskine's happy faculty for stepping into almost any period of history and drawing from it the material for a light and entertaining tale is once again demonstrated in his newest novel. . . David is, of course, the 'innocent bystander' of the book's subtitle; but the man whose words gave the book the actual title emerges as a far more vivid figure. In this respect, the introduction of Patrick Henry as one of the main characters proves a fortunate device, affording a measure of warmth and depth which might otherwise have been lacking." M. W. S.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '41 410w

Churchman 154:38 D 15 '40 90w

New Repub 104:62 Ja 13 '41 60w

"In a sense this is a gay and witty rather than an exciting tale, but for those who realize its implications it must be also a profoundly moving narrative. There is unmistakable significance for our day in those vivid glimpses of Patrick Henry." Drake de Kay
+ N Y Times p6 N 3 '40 750w

"The fortunes of a young Virginian (not much interested in politics), his new wife, and Henry himself lead up to the famous speech as a grand climax. It is probably not Mr. Erskine's fault that the speech, with its ringing ending, is the best part of the novel, as pertinent and powerful today as it was when it was delivered."
New Yorker 16:85 N 2 '40 80w

ERWIN, MABEL DEANE. Practical dress design; principles of fitting and pattern making. [new ed] 470p il $3.50 Macmillan

646 Dressmaking. Clothing and dress 40-8558

"This text is the result of the author's attempt to develop some basic principles upon which any designer, dressmaker, fitter, homemaker, or clothing teacher can rely to solve the problems of fitting garments, making patterns, and developing them into attractive, wearable, satisfying clothes. It presupposes the possession of some sewing skill and some fundamental principles of art or good taste. . . The book is intended primarily as a text for college classes in pattern making and dressmaking." (Pref) The author is professor and head of Department of clothing and textiles, Texas Technological college, Lubbock, Texas. Index.

Booklist 36:399 Je 15 '40

J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 70w

ESHLEMAN, LLOYD WENDELL. Victorian rebel; the life of William Morris. 386p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Morris, William (W) 40-27783

Biography of the English painter, poet, translator, industrialist, and socialist, William Morris, whose life spanned Queen Victoria's reign almost in its entirety. Includes a partial bibliography of Morris' published works and an index.

ERSKINE (ûr'skĭn)

"If not particularly distinguished as literary art, [the book] is well worth our having at this time when everything that happens in organized society throws a vivid light backward upon Morris's socialism and brings out the respects in which he was a prophet and a seer."
+ — Atlantic D '40 210w
Booklist 37:135 D 1 '40

"Mr. Eshleman evidences great devotion to Morris; but Mr. Eshleman's book is more of a dissertation than a biography. It was a Princeton Ph. D. dissertation to begin with, and in his preface the author tells us that he hopes he has succeeded in transforming it into a book of 'a style which the average reader may not find objectionable.' The Ph. D. touch still lies somewhat heavy upon it, however, despite its modish title and its catchy chapter headings. It does not fail to present us with most of the chief facts of Morris's life, but its emphasis is upon analysis of Morris's ideas. . . The book is most informative, and evidences long and careful research; but it is notable for exposition rather than for narrative." Francis Steegmuller
+ — Books p17 O 20 '40 650w

Reviewed by Cecelia Gaul
Christian Century 58:20 Ja 1 '41 360w

Reviewed by Johanna Doniat
Commonweal 33:184 D 6 '40 440w

Reviewed by Freda Utley
Nation 151:663 D 28 '40 900w

"The book satisfies because it has matured. As a graduate of Yale, Mr. Eshleman selected Morris for a thesis to be submitted at Princeton, and the spell of a fascinating personality has pursued him ever since. He has delved into dusty newspapers. He has listened to the dwindlers who still remember Morris. He has ransacked bibliographies. And he has got his man. Morris is put upon paper." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p1 N 3 '40 1500w

"Not definitive, but an engrossing biography of a man of ideas."
New Yorker 16:87 O 26 '40 30w
Sat R of Lit 23:22 D 21 '40 280w

"Mr Eshleman writes in a cultivated, earnest spirit, and shows appreciation of personalities as well as a scholarly sense of intellectual values. Yet there are pages which are more successful in showing Mr Eshleman's facility in tracing literary or social ideas than in delineating sharply the diverse aspects of Morris's life and mind." E. N. Jenckes
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 N 2 '40 950w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Survey G 29:629 D '40 550w

ESQUIRE (periodical). The bedside Esquire; ed. by Arnold Gingrich. 703p $3 McBride 810.8 American literature—Collections
40-10052

Collection of short stories and articles reprinted from Esquire.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p6 Je 9 '40 310w

"Good dip-into-it reading. No cartoons, gentlemen."
+ New Yorker 16:91 My 4 '40 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 19 '40 550w
Time 35:102 My 13 '40 180w

ESTES, HARLOW (WILSON) (MRS STANLEY GODDARD ESTES). Hildreth. 307p $2.50 Dodd
(W) 40-34191

Penetrating character study of a nineteen-year-old girl, Hildreth Considine, who is a clear-eyed but over-confident individual, with a vast belief in her own judgment. She attempts to manage her sweet, foolish mother; her long-suffering friend, Geoff; her young widowed Aunt Laura and her four bewildering sons; and Regina, the boys' nurse. Before the summer of this story is over Hildreth has become more humble, more understanding. The scene is a quiet summer colony on the Maine coast.

"The characters are well drawn, several of them remarkably so. The story has a slight tendency to drag, owing to the author's preoccupation with her characters as against incident. It is, however, a well-achieved novel, even if it is not a great one."
+ — Atlantic D '40 140w
Booklist 37:154 D 15 '40

"'Hildreth' is a brilliant, open-eyed novel which has no concern with sweetness-and-light or the note-of-cheer: what its author is interested in is truth, and her method is candidly, and most skillfully, cerebral. Yet it is safe to make the customary prophecy that you can't lay it down until you finish it. These people who are so true to fact and so seldom met in popular fiction—you've got to see what happens to them all." John Patton
+ Books p5 N 10 '40 750w
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 30 '40 550w

"The setting is Maine. It is au courant. It abides by the sign. The Catholic readers will, however, object to its extensive use of soandso." W. J. Grace
Commonweal 33:156 N 29 '40 320w

"The characters are well drawn and the action, in large part psychological, moves rapidly. Reader appeal should be general." R. T. Manlove
+ Library J 65:874 O 15 '40 150w

"An appealing, sensitive and carefully wrought little novel. Mrs. Estes has clothed them with real and living flesh and has dissected her characters and their background more delicately than I have been able to indicate in a synopsis. All of these characters emerge very vividly, from poor, foolish, babbling Madeleine to Laura's four engaging little boys, and yet—oddly enough—the most arresting person in the story is Laura's dead husband, Drake, who never actually appears upon the scene. 'Hildreth' I feel, is definitely a pleasant book." E. H. Walton
+ N Y Times p16 N 10 '40 800w
New Yorker 16:95 N 9 '40 110w

"The creation of Hildreth is a fine achievement. The author's tenderness toward her does not save the young heroine from being presented as a frequent thorn in the side of everyone around. Like justice is accorded her fellow-characters: her silly mother, her lovely, newly-widowed aunt, the troubled young man, Geoffrey." Frances Smyth
+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 N 30 '40 330w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 1 '40 390w

EULICH, MRS MARGARET SALLY. White mother in Africa. 220p il map $2.50 Smith, Richard R.
916.73 Africa, Central—Description and travel
39-25066

"As a 19-year-old bride in the American Middle West, Margaret Sally Eulich looked forward with delight to the life of 'glorious adventure' promised by her engineer husband in Equatorial Africa. She thought of days which should be exciting without ceasing to be pleasant, peaceful tropical nights, strange and fascinating jungle people—well, as she recalls it now, she can say that she got all that, and that she loved Africa. But along with the stuff of picturesque dreams she got also discomfort and heat and storm and insect pests and disobedient natives and malaria and dysentery and loneliness and constant danger from the tsetse fly. . . She celebrated her twentieth birthday

EULICH, M. S.—Continued
on the Congo River boat on the way to the mining company's farthest outpost; and her baby was born in mid-Africa before she had been there a year." N Y Times

"The story of this white mother in Africa is no doubt the story, with only slight personal variations, of many an engineer's wife; and Mrs. Eulich neither writes with any special distinction nor has any particularly memorable incidents to narrate. But her book has a quality of personal interest in its matter-of-fact acceptance of every strange detail of her new life, and also in its candid naiveté. . . [She] combines pleasure and excitement, along with the day's discomforts, in a record of matter-of-course sportsmanship."
+ N Y Times p9 D 24 '39 410w

"Mrs Eulich relates her experiences with the same good nature and zest for adventure which she apparently brought to her wilderness experiences. If her frankness at times seems to verge on the sensational, it perhaps adds piquancy to an entertaining story."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 11 '40 110w

EVANS, BENJAMIN IFOR. Tradition and romanticism; studies in English poetry from Chaucer to W. B. Yeats. 213p $2 Longmans [6s Methuen]

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. Romanticism [40-32668]

A collection of essays "in which criticism and the history of poetry are combined. [The author] shows that the contemporary discussion of poetry has become involved in controversy and that, as a consequence, scant justice has been done in many recent works to the great names of the past, and that the tradition of English poetry has been misrepresented. To restore perspective he has examined the development of English poetry and particularly of ideas about poetry from Chaucer to W. B. Yeats." (Publisher's note) Some of the work was delivered as lectures at the Sorbonne, the Universities in Peking, and at Cambridge. Index.

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 4 '40 550w

"Professor Evans's little volume . . . will be welcomed for its considered quiet protest against the many extravagances of modern reaction both in the theory and in the practice of verse, and for its broad restatement of the amplitude and unbroken continuity of the English poetic tradition." Basil de Selincourt
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 26 '40 300w

"Professor Evans, who of course does not possess the brilliance or fruitfulness of major critics like Eliot, provides an excellent corrective for their aberrations, and he has done a real service in elucidating aspects of the English tradition which are so frequently overlooked or misinterpreted, and in supplying a less tendentious definition of two easily abused but useful terms." Hilary Sumner-Boyd
+ Nation 152:105 Ja 25 '41 750w

"Professor Evans writes with a welcome liking for his subject matter and an express dislike of squabbling. His aim is to demonstrate continuity and thereby to preserve it; but apart from the sidelong argument with Hulme, much of the book consists of scholarly shadow-boxing: it shows a warm enthusiasm for familiar English poets (including Meredith) and a slight queasiness about Mr. T. S. Eliot and some unnamed contemporaries. One can seldom see precisely what view Professor Evans is talking against, and when he maintains that no development in literary style is ever written without an ancestry, that good poetry has seldom been written to fit a critical programme, that poetry should be likeable, and that Milton is an important poet, he will meet with general agreement." Michael Roberts
Spec 164:224 F 16 '40 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p58 F 3 '40 2700w

EVANS, MRS EDNA HOFFMAN. Bill and the bird bander; phot. by William J. Evans. 220p $1.50 Winston

598.2 Birds—Juvenile literature 40-8393

Bill, a young Florida bird lover, joins forces with a famous ornithologist, and learns about bird banding, bird flights, and about the birds themselves. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40

"Considering the speed at which some of the pictures were taken the results are unusually clear, often of dramatic beauty. . . Some of the snaps are as funny as only a young or molting bird can be; some are landscapes with birds. Before the book is over it may have settled the career of more than one bird bander." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 14 '40 460w

"The principle of coupling information with story has always seemed to me rather questionable; here, however, it is fairly successful. . . Bill, is genuinely interested in birds, and any child who reads this book will watch birds more carefully because of it. He will know, if he sees a banded bird, what it signifies, and where to send information concerning it. This may open up a new field of interest to many boys and girls of ten and over." Josephine Smith
+ Library J 65:399 My 1 '40 120w

"Unusual and pleasant." Raymond Holden
+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 N 16 '40 20w

EVANS, MRS EVA KNOX. Emma Belle and her kinfolks; il. by Flavia Gág. (Minton, Balch bk) 175p $2 Putnam

40-6694

Children's story of small-town life near Memphis, Tennessee, after the Civil war.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

"The pictures have the very spirit of the 1880's, unspoiled by caricature or condescension and with a natural fun that never lets you down." M. L. Becker
+ Books p10 My 5 '40 350w

"Recommended for large library collections only." J. L. Sauer
Library J 65:455 My 15 '40 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:850 O 15 '40 40w

"This is the first story of white children which the author of the Araminta and Jerome Anthony books has given us, and though it falls a little short of their originality and lacks the richer substance of 'Key Corner,' it is marked by the same spontaneous ease and humor. Flavia Gág has contributed amusing vignettes which almost look as if they had been taken from McGuffey's Readers and which will tell children practically all they will want to know of the period." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Je 16 '40 300w

EVANS, GEORGE HEBERTON, and BARNETT, GEORGE ERNEST. Principles of investment; with an introd. by Edgar S. Furniss. 225p $2.25 Houghton

332.67 Investments. Securities 40-7649

"A deductive monograph having as a central theme that 'an understanding of the principles of combination is of greater value to the investor than a mastery of the techniques for making specific investment selections.' The authors are not much concerned with ratio analyses or with investigations of individual companies or groups of companies as a means of measuring relative investment outlook. Instead, they stress how investments are affected by changes in the pure rate of interest, by changes in the general level of commodity, prices, by taxation, and by liquidity reflecting itself in the element of time, causing, for example, long-term bonds to sell on a different basis from that of short-term bonds or notes." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by D. M. Halley
Am Econ R 30:874 D '40 160w
Reviewed by G. W. Hoffman
Ann Am Acad 212:263 N '40 480w

EVANS, HOLDEN A. One man's fight for a better navy. 393p il $3 Dodd

B or 92 U.S.—Navy. Shipbuilding 40-3236

Autobiography of a retired lieutenant commander of the United States navy, whose eagerness for efficiency and willingness to work has brought him some difficulties, but also a measure of success as a naval constructor. One of his undertakings was the reorganizing of the Mare Island navy yard. Index.

Reviewed by R. F. Armknecht
Books p17 F 25 '40 1000w

"Mr. Evans names names. And he has amassed much information to document his charges. In view of his reputation as a shipbuilder in and out of the Navy, this book may become the basis of a careful inquiry by Congress into the workings of the naval establishment. . . Parts of the book dealing with the author's boyhood and private life are painfully naive, and his self-appraisal at times approaches the frankness exhibited by General Longstreet, who in his memoirs referred to an acquaintance as a 'friend and admirer.' But the main theme and purpose of Mr. Evans' book come through with force and sincerity." H. T.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 23 '40 800w
Foreign Affairs 19:256 O '40 30w

"Here is an egotistical, bumptious, revealing, provocative, and able autobiography. But its importance does not lie either in its full-length picture of an unusual man, or in its chronological but competent and interesting style. For it is intended as an indictment of American naval bureaucracy, as bitter criticism—against a background of personal experience—of 'waste and inefficiency in American naval construction.' . . It is destructive, not constructive, but nevertheless it is not without value, for if 'One Man's Fight for a Better Navy' succeeds in inviting public attention to a closer examination of our naval structure's undoubted faults . . . then the volume with all its imperfections will have done a real service." H. W. Baldwin
— + N Y Times p14 Mr 3 '40 900w

EVANS, MARY, and MCGOWAN, MRS ELLEN AMELIA (BEERS). A guide to textiles. 233p il $2.50 Wiley

677 Textile fabrics (W) 39-32130

Written for the average consumer as well as the student, this book provides the facts about textiles which are in common use in the household and in clothing, the characteristics of the various fibers, their manufacture, the finish required for certain uses, and the necessary care. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:170 Ja 1 '40
J Home Econ 32:114 F '40 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:13 Ja '40
Pratt p12 winter '40

EVANS, RICHARD LOUIS. Unto the hills. 151p $1.50 Harper

252 Sermons 40-8173

A collection of the brief sermons broadcast weekly from the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City during the last ten years. The sermons are given here without dates, but are grouped according to subject matter under the headings: Time and its passing; "O the vainness and the frailties and the foolishness of men"; Freedom and restraint; Some constants in a changing world; From the record of time and experience; Toward endless things to come.

Reviewed by C. H. Kopf
Boston Transcript p4 Je 22 '40 120w

"The non-sectarian appeal of the magnificent choir has been matched by the almost equally non-sectarian character of the addresses. This volume gives permanence to a selection from these talks. An occasional quotation from Doctrine and Covenants or the Book of Mormon . . . will scarcely command general acceptance, but there are few such questionable passages. Otherwise the talks contain universal truths admirably expressed."
+ — Christian Century 57:547 Ap 24 '40 100w

"There is nothing controversial in the pages, nothing but clear, sound common sense, touched with a fine spiritual idealism." M. L. E.
+ Churchman 154:34 Je 15 '40 70w

EVELYN, JOHN. Life of Mrs Godolphin; ed. by Harriet Sampson. 282p $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Godolphin, Mrs Margaret 40-13075

Reprint of a biography which was written at the close of the seventeenth century but first printed in 1847. Margaret Blagge, later Mrs Godolphin, was a maid of honor at the court of Charles II of England. Conspicuous for her piety in the midst of this lively court, she became the friend of the diarist John Evelyn. When she died at the early age of twenty-five Evelyn wrote this biographical tribute to his friend.

"This record of 'the most harmless and diverting creature in nature' is not for 'flicker-minded folks,' but for any one interested in the life and thoughts of a seventeenth-century woman, Evelyn's oblation to friendship is a treasure." E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p21 Ja 7 '40 800w

"After 'The Life of Mrs. Godolphin' was first printed in 1847, it ran through several editions, for the Victorians appear to have regarded it as a primer of piety. Today its lessons seem less urgent, but its charm is as great as ever. Accordingly one is grateful for Harriet Sampson's editing of the Rosenbach manuscript, which is preferable in several respects to the Harcourt manuscript on which earlier editions were based. The present volume is provided with a complete critical apparatus (in extent greater than the text), and it bears every mark of scrupulous, intelligent editing." A. C.
+ Sat R of Lit 21:20 Ja 27 '40 300w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 14 '40 300w

"John Evelyn's biographical tribute to his saintly friend Margaret Godolphin is one of the most charming in the language and it is to be hoped that this edition will give it the wider public it deserves. The textual notes and commentary are on a high level of scholarship and so, too, is the introduction by Miss Sampson. The introduction, it should be added, in addition to the information it offers, provides pleasure by its delightful writing."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p723 D 9 '39 80w

EVERMAY, MARCH, pseud. This death was murder. 311p $2 Macmillan

40-31873

Detective story.

Booklist 37:117 N 15 '40

"Nobody can say this isn't a solid, meaty narrative containing stretches of impressive writing, some of it a little too good for what it is talking about. . . As for Inspector Glover, his reconstruction of the three crimes is a model, and there's a double surprise at the end." Will Cuppy
+ Books p23 S 29 '40 190w
Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 O 5 '40 40w

"A well-conceived and suavely written story which discriminating fans should greet with delight. The characters stand out as individuals by their traits, not merely by their mannerisms, and the atmosphere registers through a fine restraint." Kay Irvin

EVERMAY, MARCH—Continued
+ N Y Times p20 S 29 '40 240w

"March Evermay outdoes herself in this new Inspector Glover story. The Inspector is no flatfoot and March Evermay is no slouch at writing. Very definitely recommended."
+ New Yorker 16:80 S 28 '40 40w

"Better grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 40w
Time 36:88 O 7 '40 40w
Times [London] Lit Sup p619 D 7 '40 130w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. More about Copy-Kitten [il. by the authors]. [57p] 50c Rand McNally 40-7105

More adventures of the little kitten who endeavored to copy all the animals, but gave out when he came to the giraffe. This time he tries it in reverse, with very funny results. For very young readers.

"Owners of the first book will take this one right in." M. L. Becker
+ Books p8 Ap 28 '40 150w

"So perfectly was the moral drawn in the first book that this sequel is in adult eyes something of an anti-climax. Children, however, will probably have no such artistic scruples about a story which is built with the same narrative skill and pictures in the same comic spirit, although if the two books are read together they may be slightly bewildered as to which moral to take to heart." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Je 16 '40 230w

EWEN, DAVID. Pioneers in music. 280p il $2.75 Crowell
780.9 Musicians. Music—History and criticism (W) 40-27484

"This is a book about composers great and near-great . . . This book, however, hopes to blaze a new trail for the more adventurous lover of music. Here he will find discussed many composers, some of them (like Monteverdi, Gluck and Liszt) with whom he is more or less familiar; but others whom he may not even know by name. But, known or unknown, these are important composers all, and in the development of music they played heroic parts." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 36:382 Je 1 '40
Books p9 Je 9 '40 90w

"The book will be highly useful to students and intelligent hearers of music, and all the more so for its ample bibliography and its selected list of recorded music."
+ Christian Century 57:610 My 8 '40 100w

"It is a short book and a sound one. . . [The author] has not blazed new pathways in his research or his judgments. The materials of this book are to be found elsewhere in the large histories of music. He has simply confined himself to some aspects of the subject. Nevertheless, his enthusiasms are his own. Sometimes he seems to be stretching the influence of some of his chosen pioneers." Howard Taubman
+ — N Y Times p4 My 26 '40 550w
Social Studies 31:287 O '40 30w
Wis Lib Bul 36:124 Jl '40

EWING, CORTEZ ARTHUR MILTON. Presidential elections from Abraham Lincoln to Franklin D. Roosevelt. 226p $2.50 Univ. of Okla. press
324.73 Presidents (U.S.)—Election. Political parties—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government 40-33395

"Basing his distinctions primarily on the division of the Republican and Democratic vote, Mr. Ewing finds four major voting periods: (1) the reconstruction era from 1864 to 1876, when the Republicans won every Presidential test by substantial margins. . . (2) the 'fifty-fifty' period from 1880 to 1892, when the Democrats fought back to something like equal party stature under Cleveland and Hancock; (3) the period of 'rampant Republicanism' from 1896 to 1916, and (4) the period of landslide elections from 1920 to 1936. One of the most interesting sections of Mr. Ewing's book is his analysis of the voting characteristics of various sections of the country." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"Interesting charts and salty interpretation make Mr. Ewing's book more than a dry rehash of old political box scores and election headlines." J. K. M. Tibby
+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 D 28 '40 330w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 3 '40 900w

F

FABRICIUS, JOHAN WIGMORE. A castle in Carinthia; tr. from the Dutch by G. J. Renier and David Hallett. 489p $2.75 Random house [9s 6d Collins] 40-9306

Long novel chronicling the fortunes of an aristocratic Austrian family, from the carefree pre-War days to the sad days of breakdown and defeat which followed the close of the War. Most of the action takes place on the baronial estate, Maria-Licht, in Carinthia.

Booklist 36:429 Jl 15 '40

"Mr. Fabricius has the ability to reconstruct painstakingly an era from the dim past, but for this very reason 'A Castle in Carinthia' cannot be recommended for any one who lives with one eye on the clock. The cryptic phrase and the quick word of implication are not this writer's metier. Rather, he insists on rounding out even the obvious facts into great full-bodied sentences. You will find that these combine to make a good story, however, once you have made up your mind to take it in the author's own tempo." Muriel Chatain
+ — Books p5 My 19 '40 800w

"The story is somewhat humorless and long, in the early chapters unnecessarily detailed, but it acquires significance as a study of that tradition and of the part its death played in the death of a civilization." E. B. Schriftgiesser
+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 25 '40 600w

"The novel is too long to be popular, but for those readers who prefer a leisurely interpretation of many characters, painted upon a broad canvas, instead of rapid-fire action, it will earn a merited popularity." I. M. Turner
+ Library J 65:397 My 1 '40 180w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 F 27 '40 240w

"A long, clear and traditionally built novel that moves conscientiously and somewhat coldly in Galsworthy's polished shoes."
New Repub 102:682 My 20 '40 50w

Reviewed by Harold Strauss
N Y Times p6 My 12 '40 1000w

"It is a familiar story . . . but the author handles it with sympathy and firmness."
+ New Yorker 16:98 My 11 '40 70w

"Johan Fabricius is a Dutch novelist, and though this novel is about Austria, there is a Dutch quality about it, an exactness and craftsmanship in the rendering of surfaces, an honest realism in the portrayal of character, an essential soundness and sober delight in soundness, which is perfectly appropriate to the subject, and reminds one of a good Vermeer. . . The result is a book which for all its calmness and restraint is genuinely moving and exciting." G. M.
+ Sat R of Lit 22:21 Ag 31 '40 400w

FABRICIUS, JOHAN (yō'hän fä-brē'kē-us)

"The sympathies of the tale are a little jarring sometimes. The course of events after 1918 is unfolded with a mixture of lavish regret for the old order and rhetorical yearning over the new fanaticism of the German idea. But it is a skilful enough piece of story-telling, very smooth in translation, and as such makes nice long reading."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p113 Mr 2 '40 450w

FAIR, A. A. Gold comes in bricks. 280p $2 Morrow

40-30882

Detective story.

"If you like Erle Stanley Gardner you must on no account miss the works of A. A. Fair. They're up the same street." Will Cuppy

Books p23 S 29 '40 180w

"All the way the action is swift and unpredictable. If the plot hops first on one foot and then on another so quickly that you can scarcely keep up with it, that is just a part of its constant movement. Watch out for the slick salesman. His patter is good, one of the most amusing features in a smart, tough, entertaining story." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 S 29 '40 200w

"Action so fast, dialogue so tart, plot so completely bamboozling it keeps reader's mind turning endless series of delighted somersaults."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:38 O 12 '40 50w

Time 36:88 O 7 '40 40w

FAIR, A. A. Turn on the heat. 306p $2 Morrow

40-2120

Detective story.

Booklist 36:326 Ap 15 '40

"For a shining example of the tough school of puzzling, with a distinctive twist of its own, see this able successor to 'The Bigger They Come' [Book Review Digest, 1939]." Will Cuppy

+ Books p13 Ja 7 '40 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 6 '40 40w

"The book is cleverly and brightly written and has less of that sex and alcohol atmosphere that distinguishes some American books and that is admired by some readers as much as it is disliked by others." E. R. Punshon

Manchester Guardian p7 Je 3 '40 100w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 19:680 My 25 '40 60w

"This story is even better than A. A. Fair's first mystery, 'The Bigger They Come.'" Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 14 '40 160w

"Exciting if you are not repelled by the character of mammoth Bertha Cool."

+ — New Yorker 15:64 Ja 6 '40 40w

"Unprincipled, involved, and mighty clever affair—mental acrobatics of Mr. Lam being something to marvel at. Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:19 Ja 6 '40 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Mr 25 '40 90w

FAIRCHILD, HENRY PRATT. Economics for the millions; drawings by DeLos Blackmar. 262p $2.50 Modern age

330 Economics (W) 40-27073

Explanation for the layman of the elements of economics, and the workings of the present economic system, the ins and outs of modern capitalism, etc. The author is a professor at New York University.

Booklist 36:230 F 15 '40

"This book is really a critique of our capitalist economy from the Marxist point of view. Thus, while the explanations of economic principles are complete and fairly stated, they are conditioned throughout by the author's firm belief in the desirability of Socialism. This militates against the complete objectivity which the title would lead one to expect." H. J. Bresler

+ — Books p19 Mr 17 '40 290w

"Regardless of one's personal views, this book will repay a thoughtful reading for its criticism of certain aspects of the existing order requires a satisfactory answer from those who wish to maintain it, while its proposals demand equally conscientious treatment on the part of its proponents. The science remains dismal, however." Stuart Huckins

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 180w

Cath World 151:373 Je '40 290w

New Repub 102:286 F 26 '40 60w

"At first glance the volume seems promising: it is just about the right length for a popular introduction; it is broken into many brief chapters for the short of breath, and it is simply and smoothly written. But it turns out to be, in essence, not a popular introduction to economics but a pamphlet for socialism, and its argument is conducted on a very superficial level." Henry Hazlitt

— + N Y Times p22 Ap 7 '40 490w

"An elementary treatise on economics which is skillfully selective, interesting, and respectable theoretically. . . The Fairchild book scores its success through lucid writing, artfully divided into some ninety short sections, each with a big heading. The drawings by DeLos Blackmar are in just the right style." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Mr 9 '40 350w

Reviewed by Amy Hewes

Survey G 29:258 Ap '40 100w

FAIRMAN, CHARLES. Mr Justice Miller and the Supreme court, 1862-1890. 456p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press [20s Oxford]

B or 92 Miller, Samuel Freeman. U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Constitutional law

39-24930

For descriptive note see Annual for 1939.

"Samuel F. Miller is generally recognized as one of the greatest constitutional philosophers in American history. This long overdue study, therefore, will be welcomed by all who are interested in American development. Those who are acquainted, however, with the well-known contributions of this great jurist may be disappointed at the career as sketched here. . . As a sketch of the career of a brilliant jurist, unlearned in the law but nevertheless a great philosopher, the book lacks the sparkle, drama, and romance it might have had in view of the play of social forces which characterized the postwar period. As a history of the Supreme Court during thirty stirring years it has its limitations." B. R. Trimble

— + Am Hist R 45:927 Jl '40 800w

"Professor Fairman's study of Miller is a very real contribution to the field of judicial biography, a field only beginning to be carefully cultivated. The book gives evidence of long and painstaking research. . . I have no hesitancy in expressing the opinion that, with the sole exception of Beveridge's John Marshall, no other judicial biography gives so complete and enlightening a picture of its subject, and of the Court, during his period as a member. I do regret, however, that the author did not deal more adequately with Miller's life and times before he became a member of the Court." B. F. Wright

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:132 F '40 700w

"A careful and meticulous study. Though one may disagree as to its organization, this biography will remain for long the definitive work upon Lincoln's most able appointee to the Court." C. A. M. Ewing

+ Ann Am Acad 208:220 Mr '40 300w

Reviewed by Willard Hurst

Columbia Law R 40:564 Mr '40 3700w

FAIRMAN, CHARLES—Continued
Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Ethics 50:457 Jl '40 600w

"A contribution of the first importance to American constitutional history." C. E. Wyzanski, Jr.
+ Harvard Law R 53:696 F '40 950w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
New Repub 103:531 O 14 '40 1050w

"The author presents his subject with meticulous accuracy. If other than through the Miller letters he fails to achieve the final stage of art necessary to make his subject live, he nevertheless sets an example to justify the understated scorn with which he views the imaginative creation of facts to make a smooth flowing story pleasing to trusting readers. The book is eminently sound, and will have permanent value for students of the Supreme Court and of the constitutional history of the period." C. B. Swisher
+ Pol Sci Q 55:138 Mr '40 600w

"We owe Mr. Fairman a great debt for rescuing these letters of Mr. Justice Miller. They make the book a far more valuable contribution to a study of the post-Civil War Court than are Trimble's Waite and Swisher's Field. But the study is still to be made. When it is made, it will demand more attention to the Court's cultural inheritance from the Marshall and Taney régimes than Fairman has given. It will need more concentration on the surging stream of American life outside of the Court's walls than is here to be found. And it is hoped, too, that when the study comes it will come with more gracious language, less clumsy construction and fewer dull pages than those with which Mr. Fairman encumbers the excitement that Mr. Justice Miller provides." T. R. Witmer
+ — Yale Law J 49:1336 My '40 3200w

FALSTAFF, JAKE, pseud. See Fetzer, H.

FAMOUS American athletes of today; seventh series, by Jerry Nason and other sports writers; foreword by Edward S. Parsons [il. from photographs]. (Famous leaders ser) 448p $2.50 Page
927.96 Athletes. Sports 40-27344

"Biographical sketches of Patty Berg, Douglas Corrigan, Frank (Pat) Dengis, Bill Dickey, Abner Doubleday, Bob Feller, Hank Greenberg, Ralph Guldahl, Donald Lash, Alice Marble, Mel Ott, Bobby Riggs, with stories of the Sugar bowl, and Orange bowl." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 36:324 Ap 15 '40
Boston Transcript p1 Je 15 '40 100w

"Although hastily written in the jargon of the sports page, the accounts are more or less interesting. The information is clear and accurate. Whether a public library is sufficiently justified in paying $2.50 for an article on Hank Greenberg, etc., by a sports writer for the Boston Evening Transcript is a question. I should doubt very much the value of such a book in a public library; however, the material found here is so recent that it could not be readily found in any other book." J. F. Carter
+ — Library J 65:596 Jl '40 120w
Wis Lib Bul 36:126 Jl '40

FANTE, JOHN. Dago red; il. by Valenti Angelo. 211p $2.50 Viking 40-31624

Thirteen short sketches all of them about a family of Italian-Americans, the Toscanas, as seen thru the eyes of a small boy. The scene is a small western town near Denver.

Booklist 37:90 N 1 '40

"Mr. Fante has a special faculty for making clear, with considerable economy and sincere feeling, the strong but transitory moods and conflicts engendered by family life, or between growing children. . . It is also extremely pleasant to read about food and drink when it is written about with as much gusto as here; these stories are apt to make one ravenously hungry for ravioli and rough red wine." Iris Barry
+ Books p2 S 29 '40 500w

"'Dago Red' has in it the warmth and the simplicity and the sudden surprising rage of the good red wine of Sullivan street and Los Gatos. It is a better-tempered book than 'Wait Until Spring Bandini,' or 'Ask the Dusk'; it still has something of the strutting insecurity and overloud singing of a man who has tipped many glasses of Dago red. You might call Fante an Italian Saroyan, but he is less of a poseur; he has the same sense of magic in the American air and the same chip on his Italian-American shoulder." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 S 25 '40 300w

"One tires somewhat of the same Italians, rendered in considerable detail; and despite his accuracy and frequent sharp observation, Mr. Fante's work can be pretty dull. Eleven of the thirteen stories in this book concern the same family, and while Mr. Fante has written little that is untrue, he has managed to include much that is trivial. The twelfth story, 'The Wrath of God,' seems definitely to mark a change for the better and is the best story in the book." Harry Sylvester
— + Commonweal 32:533 O 18 '40 450w

"All of [the stories] represent, with warmhearted genuineness and good humor, the feelings of a young Italian-American, whose veins run with fervid Mediterranean blood and whose tongue runs with brash California slang."
+ Nation 151:281 S 28 '40 60w

Reviewed by Jerre Mangione
New Repub 104:29 Ja 6 '41 190w

"Here is a book where the author's talent lies over each page bright as sunlight on a fresh green lawn. . . Fante's style is clear and simple, so simple that it could easily grow mannered under the hands of a lesser artist. There is no mannerism in Fante's writing, for its style belongs to the story as wine belongs to a good Italian meal." Marianne Hauser
+ N Y Times p7 S 29 '40 550w

"Mr. Fante is very skillful at describing the warmth and color of life as it is lived by Italian immigrants."
+ New Yorker 16:78 S 28 '40 40w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport
Sat R of Lit 22:18 O 12 '40 400w
Time 36:85 O 7 '40 110w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 30:xii winter '41 20w

FARGO, LUCILE FOSTER. Come, colors, come. 283p il $2 Dodd
(W) 40-14195

The scene of this story for older girls is the Coeur d'Alene mining country in northern Idaho in the '80s. Janet and Jerry McNair, the first young people to come to Silver Seam, have plenty of excitement, with a fire, tracking down a thief, or doing their own prospecting, to take up their attention.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 13 '40 600w

"A good career book with an unusual background. Girls from eleven to fifteen will probably like it best, but boys and adults interested in mining will enjoy it as well." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 65:815 O 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:851 O 15 '40 30w

FARGO, LUCILE FOSTER. The library in the school. (Lib. curriculum studies) 3d ed 552p il $3.50 A.L.A.

027.8 School libraries. Library administration (W) 39-28974

"An enlarged edition, rearranged and thoroughly revised. Several chapters are completely rewritten. The integrating and coordinating aspects of school library work are the subject of a new chapter; there is an up-to-date discussion of the government of the school library, its organization and support, and of its relation to educational and library associations." (Booklist) For second edition see Book Review Digest, 1934. Index.

Booklist 36:153 D 15 '39

"The format of the book is excellent and superior to that of the earlier editions. The material is well organized, with numerous topical headings forming a helpful basic outline, and is obviously written in a style designed to interest students. Bibliographies are brought up to date and complete for the purpose, with the possible exception of those in the chapter on backgrounds and objectives where additional significant studies pertaining to the secondary school and its population might well have been included as being basic material upon which to predicate objectives of the school library. The third edition of The Library in the School supersedes the earlier editions and admits of no substitution by them." Frances Henne

+ Library Q 10:438 Jl '40 900w

"Planned as a textbook for students in library schools, this publication also has value for school librarians, school administrators, and teachers." B. L. Johnson

+ School R 48:474 Je '40 320w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Aunt Sunday takes command [Eng title: Aunt Sunday sees it through]. 300p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins] 40-33783

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p26 N 24 '40 170w

"Bizarre as the situation seems to be when baldly stated, Mr. Farjeon has contrived to make it appear completely credible and has injected into it such a blend of mystery, thrills and comedy as to provide entertainment of superior quality. Our only quarrel with Mr. Farjeon is that there are not enough of his stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p29 N 17 '40 200w

"The old ladies and the plot are neatly blended most of the time, but the solution is slightly incoherent. Good prewar."

+ New Yorker 16:96 N 23 '40 50w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:46 D 7 '40 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 22 '40 90w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Friday the 13th [Eng title: Exit John Horton]. 290p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins] 40-7010

Detective story.

"You get the usual agreeable but thinnish Farjeon tale until the police move on to the lonely inn at Shrewsbury, where there are indications of three or four murders all in a bunch. Inspector Kendall's reconstruction of the crimes is all it should be." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p16 Ap 28 '40 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 27 '40 60w

"It is a strangely fascinating story that Mr. Farjeon tells and there are very few writers who could have told it one-half so well." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 21 '40 170w

"Atmosphere, background, characters, suspense and detecting all top-notch, with writing, as usual, impeccable. First rate."

+ Sat R of Lit 21:18 Ap 20 '40 40w

FARLEIGH, JOHN. Graven image; an autobiographical textbook. 388p il $3.75 (15s) Macmillan

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Wood engraving

Combination textbook on engraving and an autobiography of this English painter, illustrator, and engraver, best known, perhaps, for his illustrations for Bernard Shaw's Black Girl in Search of God. Index.

Books p11 Ag 4 '40 170w

"In spite of the obvious difficulties, his book is by no means without form, and most certainly is not devoid of interest on its technical side for the layman. It is absorbing. If one has any delight in handling tools, or is open to the glamour of studios and workshops, and the 'mysteries' carried on there, then, even if one has never done anything to wood but attack it with a saw, one will be fascinated by his description of the tools and methods employed in wood engraving. And his dissertations on wax engraving, book illustrating, and the dozen other arts in which he has adventured are equally happy." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 18 '40 550w

"Here is a book of the utmost importance to artists and art-lovers. Under the thin disguise of autobiography Mr. Farleigh has made a real contribution to the philosophy of art. . . The most fascinating chapter describes the genesis of Mr. Farleigh's illustrations to Berard Shaw's 'Black Girl in Search of God.' Shaw's letters to Farleigh and his pencil sketches (masterpieces of the 'this is what I mean' kind of drawing)." Eric Newton

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 9 '40 440w

"This aptly entitled book by a well-known wood engraver justifies its unusual form by practical convenience. The general reader can, if he likes, skip the technical discussions, without prejudice to the biography, while the student of engraving should find the discussions, with their clear illustrations, extremely useful. Some hesitation is felt at first at the inclusion of so many letters to the author, the majority from Mr. Bernard Shaw, but since they bear so closely upon the work in hand the remark of the author, 'Besides, without them my book would be incomplete as a textbook' is, in the end, cordially echoed. . . Seldom is an autobiography by so young a man as Mr. Farleigh so completely justified."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p162 Mr 30 '40 700w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. The happy harvest. 310p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Low] 40-27074

"Continuing the romance of 'The Crooked Furrow' [Book Review Digest, 1938]. . . Clia has been adopted by Sir Oliver Dale and lives with him at Abbeymead, and Robin, his adopted son, is in love with her, though Clia's heart has been given, once and for all, to her elderly guardian." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 36:238 F 15 '40

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Ja 28 '40 150w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 27 '40 100w

" 'The Happy Harvest' should not be read as a historical novel; there is too much in it to trouble the literal reader. Nor does it quite stand up as a murder mystery. Any detective story fan can pick the murderer of George Ash long before Jasper Shrig has the stage set for his apprehension. It is a work of pure and irrepressible romantic imagination, and any

FARJEON (far'john)

FARNOL, JEFFERY—Continued
reader willing to go along with Mr. Farnol on this basis will have an amusing ride." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 28 '40 600w

"For all Mr. Farnol's faithful readers, none of whom will be disappointed in this, his latest romance."
Times [London] Lit Sup p565 S 30 '39 80w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. A matter of business, and other stories. 279p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Low] 40-33103

Short stories by the author of The Broad Highway. Contents: A matter of business; Tomorrow; The man of destiny; The rook; Fine gold; Footprints; The angel unawares; Flower o' spring; A tale of a tale; My lady Calamity; The great silence; The saving grace; The puzzle; Justly due; The hazard; Only John; The quiet exit; A dog's chance; The black cat; Green things a-blowing; The owl; The account; A tale of my grandfather; Bagged; Husain Gulam; Immolation; Aladdin's cave; The face of Siva; The poor ones; Of betel nuts and other things

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p24 O 27 '40 70w

"It is easy to find the kind of Farnol you may want by glancing at the names of his characters. If you want the romance of sea and storm, look for Tamsin, who hated Pengelly and was loved by John. Or turn to Husain for a tale of Bombay. Or find Ralph Casson and Elizabeth for up-to-date wealth and poverty. There is a bit of everything, and all light and easily read." Charlotte Dean
+ N Y Times p28 O 20 '40 270w

"Mr. Farnol's collection shows great versatility. Several of these are in the true Farnol tradition—of highwaymen, Norsemen and gallant English gentlemen of a hundred years ago—while others are of a more modern type; but all of them are as stirring and effective as anything Mr. Farnol has written."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 23 '40 60w

FARRELL, JAMES THOMAS. Father and son. 616p $2.75 Vanguard
(W) 40-32291

This third volume in the author's series about Chicago slum life traces the unfolding of Danny O'Neill's character from adolescent days, up to the age of nineteen. At the same time he depicts the gradual break-up of Danny's father, Jim. For earlier books in this sequence see A World I Never Made, and No Star is Lost (Book Review Digest 1936, 1938).

"It has become clearer with each of Farrell's books that his capacity for seeing human nature objectively is boundless, his honesty savage, and his tools efficient to do justice to what he sees. He has no style in the ordinary sense and wants none, for each passage is written from the point of view and even in the lingo of a particular character; the story, not the author's personality, makes the style. . . And meanwhile, 'Father and Son' is another notable page in the extraordinary chronicle of a phase of American life that contemporary realism is slowly but surely putting together." Milton Rugoff
Books p6 O 27 '40 1300w

"Farrell's furious battle with his background and with Roman Catholicism is beginning to create the unhappy embarrassment in his readers of overhearing a confession. And in the deadly bitterness with which he tortures the most remote incidents into the scheme of his long, sad story, he has forgotten the elementary construction of a good novel. . . For all this lack of discipline, Farrell writes with a vigor and awareness that makes almost anything of his worth reading. The dialogue has an extraordinary validity and some of the minor incidents have the gruesome and fascinating precision of an autopsy." Eleanor Godfrey
— + Canadian Forum 20:324 Ja '41 250w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan
Commonweal 33:104 N 15 '40 900w

"In itself, 'Father and Son,' though far too long, is impressive. It suffers however, by the inevitable comparison with 'Studs Lonigan.' It lacks the intensity and dramatic force of that trilogy and moves at a slower pace. In relation to Studs, even the main characters in 'Father and Son' seem minor, and we are so familiar by this time with the tone and texture of life in Farrell's Chicago that his unrestrained presentation of it seems repetitious and superfluous. Similarly, one feels that his main characters are at times submerged by their very documentation. . . The world Mr. Farrell pictures is so real, so circumstantial, that one loses the sense of reading a book; but that is to say, as well, that one loses the sense of a shaping hand." Margaret Marshall
+ — Nation 151:335 O 12 '40 600w

Discussion by E. W. and the author
New Repub 103:595 O 28 '40 1600w

"In his approach to his material and in his handling of it, James T. Farrell is one of the most honest and unflinching of our novelists. . . His work grows in power and maturity, and in 'Father and Son' we have the best book he has yet written." J. D. Adams
+ N Y Times p7 D 1 '40 550w

"'Father and Son' is just as good as its predecessor, and just as bad. Mr. Farrell's seriousness, powers of observation, and insight into his particular world remain unassailable. Nor does his prose change in the least. He and the Chicago school he heads are still convinced that the lower the life you describe, the flatter must be your sentences, a notion that carries to a pretty fine point the theory of correspondence between content and form. His narrative has all the rather terrifying massiveness of a long line of slowly moving freight cars, and much of their monotony." Clifton Fadiman
— + New Yorker 16:100 O 12 '40 450w

"'Father and Son' continuing the main family story of 'A World I Never Made,' is nevertheless an independent novel that can be read by itself. And read by itself, it is, in many respects, Mr. Farrell's most mature and balanced work. . . It is all very humanly and genuinely told, in Mr. Farrell's sober style." S. V. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 22:9 O 12 '40 900w
Time 36:128 O 14 '40 380w

FARRINGTON, BENJAMIN. Science and politics in the ancient world. 244p $2.50 Oxford [10s 6d Allen, G]
509.3 Science—History. Science and state. Religion and science 39-20223

"The motivation of [this book] was, according to the author, 'the wish to make a comment on the passion of Lucretius,' which he believes to have been occasioned, not by mental unbalance, but by indignation at the 'political religion' in Rome. This latter is described as the 'conscious retention' by government of the popular belief in the gods as 'beings who punish or confer benefits upon men,' although the belief was recognized as irrational, as a means of maintaining the ruling caste in power. Professor Farrington believes that it was the advocacy and teaching of a political religion, especially by Plato and the Stoics, and particularly by the later Stoics who exerted great influence in Rome, that undermined the 'spirit of inquiry into the nature of things' which flourished so greatly in the Ionia of the sixth century B.C." Am Pol Sci R

"Though the argument seems in places somewhat strained, with what appears to be a consequent distortion of the picture, the account of political thought in the centuries here covered is vital and interesting. While making no direct allusion to the present, moreover,—nowhere, happily, does the word propaganda appear—the lesson to be drawn by the contemporary world is evident on every page." E. D. Ellis

+ — Am Pol Sci R 34:829 Ag '40 300w

"Professor Farrington's book is interesting and important, although it is far too slight a treatment of the problem with which he is concerned. . . There are defects in his statement of the problem and his assessment of the evidence. For example, his conception of science is much too simple. . . Again Professor Farrington exaggerates the importance of conscious policy. There is no evidence of continuous and consistent opposition of politicians in Greece and Rome to new ideas. Outbursts of fanaticism are not proofs of policy." C. D. Burns

+ — Ethics 50:229 Ja '40 380w

Reviewed by R. A. Gregory

Nature 144:764 N 4 '39 1350w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 18:58 Jl 8 '39 850w

"One's admiration for, and enjoyment of, a fascinating book does not necessarily imply a whole-hearted acceptance of a thesis which is plausible rather than convincing. The weight of Professor Farrington's learning oppresses neither his reader nor his style; he writes well, easily, and, at times, amusingly. . . The result is a gay and vigorous dissertation in which enjoyment is mingled with instruction." C. E. M. Joad

+ — Spec 162:1135 Je 30 '39 1200w

"Professor Farrington's book is permeated by a real humanism as well as by exact scholarship, and apart from classical students a wide circle of readers should find it stimulating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Jl 8 '39 490w

FASSETT, NORMAN CARTER. A manual of aquatic plants. 382p il $4 McGraw

581.929 Aquatic plants 40-27569

"The aim of this book is to make possible the identification of aquatic plants in sterile as well as in flowering or fruiting condition. An effort has been made to render such identification as simple as possible, but it must be remembered that the aquatics include many of the plants in groups that are most difficult for the taxonomist. For present purposes, an aquatic is defined as a plant that may, under normal conditions, germinate and grow with at least its base in the water and is large enough to be seen with the naked eye. . . The region covered is from Minnesota to Missouri and eastward to the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Virginia." (Pref) The book is divided into two parts: part one is a general key for identification of family or genus; part two contains detailed treatment, a few pages being given to cryptogams before the phanerogams are taken. The author is associate professor of botany, University of Wisconsin. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:7 S '40

Reviewed by J. R. Matthews

Nature 146:700 N 30 '40 750w

FAULKNER, VIRGINIA (MRS E. V. WEIL) (PRINCESS TULIP MURPHY, pseud). My hey-day; or, The crack-up of the international set. 152p $2 Duell

817 40-8488

Burlesque on the titled-lady type of memoir, in which Princess Tulip Murphy tells all with reckless abandon.

"The ribald note extract is maintained throughout the recital. It reads rather like a collaboration involving the Dolly Sisters, the Abbé children and Elsie de Wolfe. . . 'My Hey-Day' is flippant to the point of dulling the point."

— Books p10 My 12 '40 220w

"One sketch at a time, as originally printed in Town and Country, the bawdy wit may seem less labored; but read all at one sitting, 'My Hey-Day' is not half so amusing as its own jacket-blurb." Sarah Chokla

— + Boston Transcript p1 Ap 27 '40 120w

"Miss Faulkner is Saki on a boisterous bender, Dorothy Parker gone informal to the point of madness. She is Town & Country shrieking with laughter at its own image in a distorting mirror. Sometimes funny, sometimes just gaga, she is wicked, wicked, wicked as she can be. So curl up with 'My Hey-Day' and a pack of marijuanas (Crown size) and have yourself a good debauch." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 16:91 Ap 20 '40 300w

"In all these dizzy chapters, chock full of laughs (loud ones), Society's nervous breakdown is certainly not confined to the spaces between the lines. Princess Tulip tells ALL." Helen and Ruth Hoffman

+ Sat R of Lit 22:17 Je 15 '40 450w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. The hamlet. 421p $2.50 Random house

40-7705

"The story of 'The Hamlet' is the story of the gradual sucking dry of Frenchman's Bend by Flem Snopes and his endless kin. . . There was Flem and Mink and I. O., Ike the idiot, and the hideously untouched boy called Wall-street Panic. They came out of nowhere, they settled on Frenchman's Bend and the Varneys like wasps on a burst pear, they got the store and the big house, the money and the women. They fought among themselves with the obscure brutality of bacilli—but, when they were through, it was time for Flem Snopes to move on to Jefferson, for he had eaten the heart out of Frenchman's Bend." Sat R of Lit

"In Faulkner's pages we watch, as through the windows of a bathysphere, distorted creatures moving through a weird twilit world, performing before our eyes, casually, grotesquely, shamelessly, the most astonishing acts. But so lavish is the detail and so convincing the insights that the dark phantasy becomes in the end the reader's indelible conception of rural Mississippi. Whether reliable or not, Faulkner's visions get under the skin. Although his may be a narrow world with a limited range of characters and although he may exploit the sensationally morbid and pathological, when he cuts into his material he cuts to the quick. And like the Wedding Guest held by the glittering eye of that notorious Mariner, we cannot choose but hear." Milton Rugoff

Books p4 Mr 31 '40 1000w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard, Jr.

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 13 '40 500w

"For extremely limited library purchase because of its abnormalities and its tortured style." Esther Johnston

— Library J 65:300 Ap 1 '40 130w

"I don't suppose it makes sense to call a book wonderful, and then proceed to dismiss it. But I have come away from 'The Hamlet' conscious of its prodigious talent, yet unwarmed, unmoved, and unrefreshed. The book's poetry is close, at times, to magnificent—but it is poetry of the senses only, without regard to the emotions. The book's sly, perverse humor is undeniable; yet it is a humor which, for the very reason that it moderates the horrors it plays upon, somehow robs those horrors of the dignity and importance which alone would justify them. The book's imaginativeness has enabled Faulkner to create something like a world of his own; yet that world is too artificially lighted and too demoniacally propelled to mean anything as revelation." Louis Kronenberger

Nation 150:481 Ap 13 '40 750w

FAULKNER, WILLIAM—Continued

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 102:510 Ap 15 '40 1100w

Reviewed by Desmond Hawkins
New Statesman & Nation 20:312 S 28 '40 900w

"While the book as a whole does not cohere, sections of it are rich with anecdote, and in his horse-trading yarns Faulkner reveals a sense of humor which we had no cause to suspect." Harold Strauss
+ — N Y Times p2 Ap 7 '40 900w

"All in the line of duty, I have spent part of this week weaving through 'The Hamlet.' From the intense murk of its sentences I emerge, somewhat shaken, to report that the author apparently continues to enjoy as lively a case of the 'orrors as you are apt to find outside of a Keeley-cure hostelry. While there is nothing in 'The Hamlet' to rival the bloody waxworks of 'The Wild Palms,' still this chronicle has its own special assortment of shudders." Clifton Fadiman
— New Yorker 16:89 Ap 6 '40 600w

"Mr. Faulkner may be a great many things —he is seldom, if ever, dull. He can be clotted and confused, but his writing, at its best, has an hallucinative power which keeps one reading, like a man in the toils of nightmare, till the last page is turned. In 'The Hamlet,' his peculiar power is at its best. There are fewer of the long, winding sentences that strangle themselves to death in their own subordinate clauses—there is all of the earthy force that Mr. Faulkner can summon, like a spirit out of the ground, when he chooses to do so." S. V. Benét
Sat R of Lit 21:7 Ap 6 '40 700w

Reviewed by J. A. Smith
Spec 165:324 S 27 '40 240w

Time 35:73 Ap 1 '40 650w

"Mr. Faulkner's talent may be prodigious and highbrow fans of his and the critically knowing in general may be right in singing his praises, but he is difficult to read. He is, at any rate, more nearly unreadable in this new novel than in any previous one. In the past one was willing, up to a point, to put up with his terrific churning of words and his laboured passion for violence because some sort of queer illumination of mind or soul showed through. Here everything is as incomprehensibly opaque as the eyes of Flem Snopes."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p481 S 21 '40 490w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 29:viii summer '40 330w

FAXON, FREDERICKA. Rehearsal. 453p $2.50 Coward-McCann

40-12031

Character study of Amy Braide, beautiful daughter of unsuccessful parents, from her unhappy girlhood, thru three love affairs, to middle age. The scene of the story is laid in a small city somewhere in eastern United States, and the time covered is from about 1900 to the post war years.

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
Books p4 Je 23 '40 600w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 22 '40 310w

"The story is not unusual, but the manner of the writing is. By a weaving of thoughts back and forth between the present and the past, and an examination of events in the light of past ones, the author has produced a tapestry of exquisite texture and an atmosphere that lives and breathes and has a peculiarly three dimensional quality. So well has the author written, so completely has the story grown from within, that the result is far above the average of perfection." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 65:499 Je 1 '40 200w

New Repub 103:94 Jl 15 '40 60w

"The book is written with a sincerity which gives it a certain amount of dignity, and it has a considerable degree of emotional intensity. There is a great deal too much of it." L. M. Field
N Y Times p18 Je 16 '40 650w

"Miss Faxon has attempted a serious job of character drawing, and as such her book commands respect. But she has forgotten that a novelist's chief job is to be interesting; she is sometimes tedious and stiff. Give her credit for a good try."
+ — New Yorker 16:70 Je 22 '40 60w

"Although 'Rehearsal' tells an American story it is curiously European. The village with its hunting set, the gentlemen-farmers, the obliging mother hunting a mistress for her son, the place names—one has difficulty in assigning the novel its proper local habitation. But although 'Rehearsal' is an undisciplined novel, it contains enough good things to merit the hackneyed but useful 'promising.'" R. A. C.
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:21 Jl 6 '40 350w

FEAR no more. 96p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

821.08 English poetry—Collections [40-33966]

A book of poems by English poets for the present time, written for the most part, but not published, during the last five years. The poets and compilers remain anonymous, but the book is sponsored by the English poet laureate. Index of titles and first lines.

"There are dark sayings here, grim acknowledgments, there is bitter wisdom. But the burden of the book is not the one recalled by its title, that all must come to dust. It is rather the high resignation that comes of courage at its hardest and so at its purest, the delight, that no horror can wholly quench, in the glories of the physical universe, and, in the face of man's degradation, a re-affirmation of the human spirit." Babette Deutsch
+ — Books p17 D 15 '40 750w

"A good book of poems. The very unselfishness that made it what it is makes it a book of which one can say, 'There is a new, a simpler and stronger religious awareness in English poetry in our day.' I hope a large number of readers will obtain this book for themselves and their friends." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p11 O 7 '40 200w

Reviewed by Earle Birney
Canadian Forum 20:355 F '41 550w

Reviewed by D. M. MacKegg
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 26 '40 110w

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 13 '40 220w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 20:143 Ag 10 '40 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 270w

"If anyone wishes to play a pretty parlour game of guesswork concerning the authors of these poems he can find entertainment for hours; but he will miss the point of this testament of fear's defeat. From these verses we realize anew that the voice that utters the conviction of truth and beauty is of small consequence beside the conviction itself. The strength of the book is in its impersonality; it does not matter who the writers are."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p350 Jl 20 '40 1100w

FEARING, KENNETH. Collected poems. 149p $2 Random house

811 40-33832

Contains the poems previously published in Angel Arms; Poems; and Dead Reckoning, and twenty new poems not hitherto published in book form.

Atlantic F '41 150w

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
Books p27 N 17 '40 700w

"Because (almost) anything Kenneth Fearing writes, is genuinely stirring and honestly stated, I believe that this book is one of the most important of the season—which, of course, means of several years." John Holmes
+ Boston Transcript p11 O 21 '40 600w

Reviewed by Ronald Hambleton
Canadian Forum 20:293 D '40 350w

"If one is so conscious of the faults of this poet, one can, at the same time, be even more conscious of his virtues. The very stuff of poetry moves through his pages, moves at times with difficulty, through prose and bad taste and monotony." John Ritchey
+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 D 7 '40 350w

"Mr. Fearing's collected works will probably win the Pulitzer and are on the same level of brilliantly popular mediocrity. All of which could be forgiven, if, in effect, the poems, from the beginning to the end, weren't one enormous sneer at the sanctity and honesty of the individual."
— Living Age 359:394 D '40 110w

Reviewed by J. P. Bishop
Nation 151:340 O 12 '40 300w

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
New Repub 103:597 O 28 '40 700w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 16:94 N 9 '40 170w

Reviewed by Weldon Kees
Poetry 57:264 Ja '41 1500w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 30:384 winter '41 480w

FEDERAL WRITERS' PROJECT. See Writers' program

FEDERN, KARL. The materialist conception of history; a critical analysis. 263p $3.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

901.1 History—Philosophy. Marx, Karl [40-9188]

An exposé of the deficiencies and fallacies of the conception of history propounded by Karl Marx and his disciples. "The author, who is a Viennese in exile, has taken the trouble to go through the fifteen propositions in the introduction to Marx's 'Criticism of Political Philosophy' written in London in 1859 and other Marxist writings, and tried to sift out any grains of truth there may be in them." (Nature) Index of names.

"A competent historian and clearheaded thinker on social institutions, Dr. Federn is properly aware of the immense complexity of the factors involved in historical phenomena and of the prosaic necessity of investigating numerous facts before a little knowledge is won. Attractive generalizations, plausible simplifications, and a priori formulas do not appeal to him, and he views with disapproval the procrustean methods employed by Marxians in forcing history to fit the 'laws' enunciated by their master. With such a habit of mind, Dr. Federn addresses himself to an examination of the Marxian theory of history. The result is an incisive critique, brilliant in places, mature and lucid throughout. . . The book would have gained in strength if, instead of confining himself to a single quotation from Marx for an explanation of the Marxian thesis, the author had opened his discourse with a comprehensive exposition of the theory, and if he had not built his analysis exclusively around the particular pronouncements in this initial quotation." M. M. Bober
+ — Am Hist R 46:359 Ja '41 700w

"This is the most admirable exposé of the fallacies of the materialist conception of history that I have ever come across. . . Dr. Federn is a historian apparently familiar with both ancient and modern times, and he writes with impartiality and in a clear and very attractive style. The style indeed is so good that one wonders that any foreigner should have been capable of writing it. But, as no name of a translator is given, one supposes that the author is as perfect a linguist as he is undoubtedly a wide and accomplished historian. . . It is much to be wished that the book in some form should become available for all students and teachers of history." F. S. Marvin
+ Nature 146:600 N 9 '40 850w

"Although Dr. Federn's direct attack is made less often upon Marx himself than upon his disciples, particularly Heinrich Cunow, and he thus sometimes denounces fallacies that Marx had perceived and evaded, his criticism of the system as commonly expounded to-day is none the less damaging. . . [His] argument is supported throughout by a keen insight into the broad movements of history."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Ap 13 '40 750w

FEDOROVA, NINA, pseud. See Riasanovsky, A. F.

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Positive democracy. 256p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press [11s 6d Oxford]

323.4 Democracy 40-27143

An historical and philosophical study of democracy, its origins and fundamental beliefs. The author argues that in order to retain the best or saving elements in democracy, the "negative" democracy which has so far been largely accepted must be replaced by what he terms "positive" democracy. Index.

Reviewed by M. Q. Sibley
Am Pol Sci R 34:810 Ag '40 600w

"The wish of the author to strengthen the ideological foundations of modern democracy deserves praise, and also his method which tries to combine political research with philosophical principles. But it is a pity that the author is unable to think his ideas to the end. He has a good knowledge of philosophical books and terms, but he does not possess the real ingredient of philosophical study—the ability to find correct 'definitions." Arthur Rosenberg
+ — Ann Am Acad 210:147 Jl '40 460w
Booklist 36:258 Mr 1 '40

Reviewed by H. A. Larrabee
Ethics 50:458 Jl '40 490w

"The volume is a cultural portent. Mr. Feibleman's book may even be of use, and not only to positivists, in providing illustrations for courses in elementary logic. It contains more non-sequiturs per page than anything this reviewer has read in years." Sidney Hook
— J Philos 37:557 S 26 '40 950w

"A stimulating thesis is here very clearly set forth."
+ Nation 150:577 My 4 '40 100w

"This book is, to my knowledge, unique in both aim and approach; the end result is to set democracy on a firmer foundation of reason and meaning than many of us heretofore could have supplied. . . Although the treatment is somewhat abstruse, it is not obscure, and the practical implications of theory are suggested again and again. The faith that is in us regarding the primacy of democracy as a way of life has, in short, never been better or more profoundly supported at the philosopher's hands than here. The author has done splendidly what he tried to do—and a needed job it was—namely, he has considered 'the saving elements of democracy in order that they may be made available whenever and wherever democracy is to be applied again in action.'" Ordway Tead
+ Survey G 29:302 My '40 550w

FEIGL, FRITZ. Specific and special reactions for use in qualitative analysis, with particular references to spot test analysis; tr. from a revision of the 3d German ed. by Ralph E. Oesper. 192p $3.50 Nordeman

544 Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Analytic —Qualitative. Chemical tests and reagents 40-30863

"First English translation of the theoretical part of Feigl's complete German text on qualitative analysis, this volume presents familiar theoretical bases which are of peculiar significance in the special field of detection reactions. Among subjects discussed are types of complex compounds, masking of reactions, enhancement of reactivity, effect of certain atomic groupings, weighting effects, capillary phenomena and fluorescence analysis." Chem & Met Eng

Reviewed by A. B. Lamb
Am Chem Soc J 62:2889 O '40 250w

"This translation will undoubtedly be welcomed by scores of workers in this fascinating new approach to qualitative analysis; it will convert many devotees of the older techniques." B. L. Clarke
+ Chem & Chem Eng N 18:778 S 10 '40 200w

Chem & Met Eng 47:658 S '40 120w

FEINER, RUTH. Three cups of coffee. 390p $2.50 Lippincott 40-33700

After the conclusion of the divorce proceedings of Holmes vs. Holmes, three women sit over cups of coffee, each reviewing in her mind her knowledge and experience of Robert Holmes: the woman he had married; the woman who had loved him; and the woman who had been "the woman named" in the divorce case.

" 'Three Cups of Coffee' is high in emotional content and has an engaging quality of youthful maturity. This is not a contradiction in terms; Miss Feiner's maturity is still one of fresh discovery rather than of well worn acceptance." Rose Feld
+ Books p12 N 3 '40 600w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham
Library J 65:808 O 1 '40 100w

" 'Three Cups of Coffee' is clever, but it conspicuously lacks what it was quite evidently meant to have—English atmosphere. Ruth Feiner has better books in her. Perhaps her forthcoming large-scale novel, with Europe, which she knows so well, as its theme, will be one of them. This reviewer, who has always stoutly believed in her but thinks that, this time, she chose her subject unwisely, will look forward to it." J. S. Southron
N Y Times p7 N 3 '40 650w

FEIS, HERBERT. The changing pattern of international economic affairs. 132p $2 Harper

330 Economic policy. Commercial policy 40-35647

A series of lectures delivered at Columbia University by the man who has been economic adviser in the Department of State during the last nine years. Contents: The pattern for which reason reached; The destruction of the pattern; International economic relations in the on-rush of war; The unique position that we seem to hold; Of opulence and defense. Bibliography.

"It is a pleasure to come upon an economic treatise with the quality of a literary saying." Walter Millis
+ Books p26 D 1 '40 480w

Christian Century 58:26 Ja 1 '41 150w

Commonweal 33:261 D 27 '40 70w

"While at first sight it would appear to be the height of temerity to select this moment in the world's history, when the so-called laws of economics have been repealed or are in suspense everywhere, to assay the value of past economic thought and to forecast what that thought will be in the future, Herbert Feis has dared to do just this. The result is interesting and stimulating, although by necessity speculative and inconclusive." H. B. Hinton
+ N Y Times p7 D 8 '40 1000w

FELS, MARY (MRS JOSEPH FELS). Life of Joseph Fels. 192p $1.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Fels, Joseph. Single tax 40-7170

Revised edition of a book first published in 1916 (Book Review Digest, 1916). After a few pages devoted to Joseph Fels' private life and business successes, the bulk of this biography, written by his wife, is devoted to his services as a disciple of Henry George, a fighter in the cause of Single tax.

"Everybody has heard of 'Fels Naptha' soap —which is a tribute to the business acumen and success of Joseph Fels and his firm. But probably very few people indeed have heard of the activities and achievements of Joseph Fels outside the realm of soap-making. Now twenty-six years after his death, his widow presents us with an excellent brief life of her husband." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 32:64 My 10 '40 350w

Reviewed by Frank Chodorov
Survey G 29:521 O '40 210w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE, and FENTON, MRS MILDRED (ADAMS). Rock book. 357p il maps $6 Doubleday

552 Rocks (W) 40-30728

A book on geology for the young student or collector. Covers not only description and identification of rocks and minerals but also their origins and occurrence thruout the world. Index.

Booklist 37:64 O 15 '40

Bookmark 2:5 Ja '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:50 O '40

"From a conversation with a boy who came to the Fentons with questions about stones he had collected, has come this informative book. Designed to answer the questions of both students and adults interested in what rocks are and what they mean, it is a most comprehensive type of reference book, written in an informal manner. There is nothing casual about the presentation, however, for the Fentons are authorities in the broad field of the geological sciences. . . The final chapter consists of advice for the amateur collector regarding field methods, places, equipment, and ways of cataloging and gaining additional information. The illustrations are particularly noteworthy and profuse. There are not only really beautiful photographs of all types of rocks but also excellent tables, including a long geologic time chart."
+ Scientific Bk Club R 11:4 S '40 320w

FENWICK, CHARLES GHEQUIERE. American neutrality; trial and failure. 190p $2.50 N.Y. univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Neutrality 40-14263

"The purpose of these lectures, delivered by a Bryn Mawr professor, is to show that neutrality has failed as a system of American foreign policy. The author discusses the development of neutrality law, recent legislation on the subject, neutral rights and duties, blockade, contraband, and problems of the present war. Appendixes include the Proclamation of neutrality of the United States, 1939, the Neutrality act of 1939, and the Declaration of Panama." Booklist

Reviewed by Margaret Sprout
Am Pol Sci R 34:1201 D '40 450w

"The volume is both interesting and timely. It is not large enough to repel the general reader, and it contains information which every citizen should know." E. I. McCormac
+ Ann Am Acad 213:190 Ja '41 550w

Booklist 37:6 S '40

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 24 '40 250w

"Dr. Fenwick's study of American 'neutrality' legislation is factual and detailed, with appended documents. Originally offered as lectures on the Stokes Foundation, it brings the past to judge the present scene." E. M. Lynskey
+ Commonweal 33:402 F 7 '41 800w

FERGUSSON, ERNA. Our Southwest; phot. by Ruth Frank and others. 382p maps $3.50 Knopf

917.8 Southwest (W) 40-7056

History, description, the manners and customs of the inhabitants, their language and their industries, of that portion of our country known as the Southwest—a much disputed term, here taken to include Arizona, New Mexico, western Texas, and southern Colorado. Index.

Booklist 36:380 Je 1 '40

Bookmark 2:8 Ja '41

"Miss Fergusson, who has a shrewd talent for sizing up a country and a people, a good reporter's instinct for detail, and a sensitive appreciation of the currents of history, has set down, in this handsome and authoritative work, a full-bodied picture of the American Southwest as it is today, and has placed it accurately and with a fine sureness of touch against the backdrop of four centuries. It is a thoroughly admirable performance." Stanley Walker
+ Books p3 My 5 '40 2400w

"'Our Southwest' is a book with deep roots and rich foliage. It is critical, intelligent and passionate. It is more than about the Southwest; it is itself a part of the Southwest, old and new." Lewis Gannett
+ Boston Transcript p11 My 10 '40 1250w

"Our Southwest is much more personified than a formal guidebook could be; it presents fact and opinion with charm as well as with skill. . . A colored symbolic map by Covarrubias and 24 excellent photographs supplement the text in conveying the flavor of the land and its people." H. N. Smith
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 13 '40 650w

"The author writes with a breezy, easy, lively style and one finishes the book with regret that it is only 376 pages long (or short). Suggested titles for further reading are interspersed throughout the text and add greatly to the interest and value of the book. Will be popular in any general library." Edith Crowell
+ Library J 65:396 My 1 '40 170w

"Through contrasted scenes that are like scenes of enchantment, through man's passage in ambition and enterprise across changing time, into today's new problems and responsibilities, Erna Fergusson guides her readers with a gifted pen. She has a warm, human social sense and a keen sense of humor, and neither forsakes her; and her clear visualization, with its assimilation of honest study, stamps her work with a rare literary excellence. Her book is as comprehensive as her mind is many-sided and her sensibility broadly acute." Katherine Woods
+ N Y Times p3 My 5 '40 1350w

Reviewed by C. W. Ferguson
Sat R of Lit 22:15 Je 22 '40 490w

Reviewed by Haniel Long
Survey G 29:475 S '40 280w

FERNALD, MRS HELEN (CLARK), and SLOCOMBE, EDWIN M. River empire; il. by Eleanor Eadie and Gladys Peck. 218p $2 Longmans

Burr, Aaron—Juvenile literature 40-13167

Adventure story for boys. Pierre Dupres, the seventeen-year-old son of a Canadian trapper, trails the murderers of his father into the Mississippi river country. There he succeeds in capturing the men, becomes involved in the Aaron Burr conspiracy, and uncovers a plot against the United States.

Booklist 37:17 S '40

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 17 '40 60w

"Here is a stirring tale which gives color and life to a pioneering era." F. B. Sloan
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 14 '40 230w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:348 S '40 110w

"Written in the first person, this adventure story holds the reader's interest from beginning to end. Will appeal to the boys of twelve to fifteen." J. E. Stromdahl
+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:845 D 16 '40 40w

"Good idea well handled." Robert Van Gelder
+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 N 16 '40 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Pfaelzer
Social Studies 32:93 F '41 60w

"Mrs Fernald and Mr Slocombe have found an effective formula for combining wholesome adventure with a historical setting."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 180w

FERRARA, ORESTES. The Borgia pope, Alexander the Sixth. 455p $3.50 Sheed

B or 92 Alexander, VI (Rodrigo Borgia) pope 40-33348

An attempt in some measure to rehabilitate the character of Alexander VI and to refute the legend of his misdeeds and evil influence on the Church and secular history of his times. The author is a Latin-American lawyer, scholar and statesman, who was for some years Cuban ambassador in Washington. Index.

"The chief merit of this book lies in the author's exposure of the downright malice that went into so many early documents. We are not so much impressed by his new discoveries. He has, in fact, added very little to the copious materials already available in the over-enthusiastic volumes of Monsignor De Roo. Scholars will thank him for whatever stimulus he has given to further study and interpretation. The shock, if any, will be for those who still cling to the wild myths of Borgia greed, lust and wholesale poisoning. They will find it hard to accept the paltry square-root of romantic tales. And they will be a bit disappointed in a Caesar, a Lucretia or an Alexander who have shed their story-book abnormality." R. Corrigan
+ America 64:161 N 16 '40 420w

Cath World 152:628 F '41 320w

"The book is interesting if only for its unconventional treatment of the subject, and the justice it probably does to Alexander VI as a political personage. But despite the claim made for Mr. Ferrara's objectivity as a 'Free-thinker', the book might bear an official 'imprimatur' for its delicate handling of any matters which might cause ecclesiastical embarrassment, and its constant pleading the cause makes suspect its handling of the evidence." S. L. Riddle
+ — Churchman 154:19 N 15 '40 230w

"Whether so radical a departure from the conclusions reached by historians of the stature of Pastor will find acceptance among Renaissance scholars remains to be seen. Certainly no charge of religious bias can be made since the author is not a Catholic. In a work so controversial in nature, it is unfortunate that the notes and bibliographical references were not more carefully prepared and more nearly free of typographical errors. . . Yet 'The Borgia Pope' will prove interesting to general readers. The elucidation of little known aspects of papal

FERRARA, ORESTES—Continued
policy will serve to emphasize those solid achievements which Alexander's reputation has obscured." M. W. Baldwin

+ — Commonweal 33:129 N 22 '40 500w

"It is an eloquent book, and also a persuasive one; and so thorough is the research that lies back of it that it cannot be dismissed categorically except by an investigation equally patient. Yet despite this, it is not much more than skillful pleading. It is 'the case for the defense' made by a brilliant lawyer. But it does not prove the client not guilty." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p9 O 20 '40 1000w

"Superficially, the work has every appearance of being done in the best manner of modern scholars. Mr. Ferrara, indeed, dwells at length on the extent of his critical examination of available source materials. Then, as his narrative proceeds, it becomes obvious that too often the test he applies to determine the authenticity of documents and similar evidence is whether or not he personally approves what they say. In this respect, 'The Borgia Pope' is an excellent illustration of how a writer with a preconception can employ the devices of sound historiography to his own ends." D. D.

Springf'd Republican p12 N 8 '40 700w

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. The Christian fellowship. 236p $2 Harper

280 Church unity. Christianity—Philosophy 40-31473

In his Preface the author sets out the purpose of his book as follows: "The great challenge to-day to the Christian fellowship is the idea of the ecumenical church. . . The greatest obstacle in the way is the fact that three approaches to Christianity seem irreconcilable. These are the literalistic, the liberal, and the sacramentarian. Honest Christians cannot become one by the forsaking of what they believe Christianity to be. They can come together only when they see so deeply into the nature of the Christian faith as to be inevitably united by it. This book is offered as an aid to that end." Index.

Booklist 37:111 N 15 '40

"Nels Ferré, the young professor of theology at Andover-Newton Theological School, shows in this book that he is one of the most original and one of the most religiously sensitive among American theologians. The reader should know in advance that he cannot do justice to this book in a single reading, for the author's thought is somewhat lacking in directness and in the clarity that can be achieved by those who reduce what they see to the familiar. . . I should strongly recommend this book to students of theology if it were only for the first chapter. . . My chief criticism of the book is that the author is so hospitable to traditional theological concepts that he introduces them sometimes when they darken counsel." J. C. Bennett

+ — Christian Century 57:1517 D 4 '40 1000w

"As is so often the case with books of this sort, the author presents a clear analysis of the situation, but does not seem to the reviewer to offer a convincing solution." W. L. Caswell

+ — Churchman 155:20 Ja 15 '41 330w

Reviewed by V. D. Scudder

J Religion 21:76 Ja '41 650w

FERRER, MELCHOR G. Tito's hats [il. by] Jean Charlot. [28p] 50c Garden City pub. co. 40-31719

Tito, a little Mexican boy, goes to market with his father and has his first haircut and gets a new hat. Illustrated with line drawings.

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:847 O 15 '40 20w

"It is a very slight story, though not without its universal points, but it would have been improved by a sharper pointing-up of incident and brisker climax. The pictures, however, are carrying the gist of the story and the background. Jean Charlot is an artist who has lived and worked in Mexico."

+ N Y Times p10 O 13 '40 240w

FERRIS, ELMER ELLSWORTH. Jerry at the academy; il. by Everett Shinn. 321p $2 Doubleday

(W) 40-33279

This sequel to Jerry of Seven Mile Creek (Book Review Digest, 1938) is the story of Jerry's efforts to get an education, hampered as he is by his father's attitude to higher education. The setting is Wisconsin in the 'nineties, and the story of Jerry's stay at Wayland academy is partly autobiographical.

Booklist 37:157 D 15 '40

"As sound a story as I have read about an American prep school. There isn't a sport in it, unless you call debating one. I certainly would, for the debate in which Jerry wins out on the proposition that the town meeting is a necessary part of the American political system brings back a time when this form of exercise was fitting clumsy, eager country boys to be lawyers, salesmen and above all politicians." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 O 27 '40 320w

"A better than usual school story, in which scholastic honors instead of athletic prowess are the hero's objective." Maude Adams

+ Library J 65:1044 D 1 '40 190w

Wis Lib Bul 36:171 D '40

FERRIS, WARREN ANGUS. Life in the Rocky mountains; a diary of wanderings on the sources of the rivers Missouri, Columbia, and Colorado, from February, 1830, to November, 1835; ed. by Paul C. Phillips. 365p il maps $5 Old West pub. co, 406 15th st, Denver

917.8 West—Description and travel. Fur trade 40-14456

"At twenty Warren Angus Ferris, a New York Stater of descent from John and Priscilla Alden, joined the ranks of the American Fur Company in St. Louis as trapper and was soon promoted to clerk. His narrative as it ran consecutively in The Western Literary Messenger, Buffalo, N.Y., 1843-1844, has been an ignis fatuus to students of the Far West fur-trade period. . . This book contains not only the Ferris narrative but much elucidative matter: a first-hand map, by Ferris, of the fur country as known by him; a sketch of the ups and downs of the Literary Messenger; a biography of Ferris, who died, upon his plantation near Dallas, Texas, in 1873; a chapter, by Dr. Phillips, upon Rocky Mountain fur-trade exploration previous to the Ferris travels; and an Appendix of fugitive articles by Ferris descriptive of Indian tribes and ways—with a brief account, 1842, of the 'Chanion of the Colorado.'" Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Phillips' successful search for the missing numbers of the magazine and the family correspondence of his subject constitutes one of the romances of scholarship; his editorial apparatus is scholarly and comprehensive, and the book constitutes one of the great 'finds' in recent research on the West." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 2 '40 460w

Reviewed by W. J. Ghent

N Y Times p5 D 8 '40 280w

Sat R of Lit 22:19 Ag 24 '40 450w

FESSENDEN, MRS HELEN MAY (TROTT). Fessenden, builder of tomorrows. 362p il map $3 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Fessenden, Reginald Aubrey 40-33684

Biography of the American engineer who first spanned the Atlantic with two-way radio, invented the wireless telephone and the Sonic depth finder, originated the submarine telephone, and pioneered in short-wave radio. The book is written by his wife, and is based on her husband's unfinished autobiography, and his letters. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 37:152 D 15 '40

"This book is one of the few detailed, intimate accounts of a true genius, that will be read by all engineers who know what Fessenden did and should be read by all who realize that creative ideas are the only hope of the nation and the race. Mrs. Fessenden's simple factual account of her husband's life constitutes a perfect though unconscious tribute to him." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p8 N 24 '40 600w

"Mrs. Fessenden has brought to her task an extremely intelligent appreciation of the scientific work that her husband did as well as of his personality and character, and the result is a valuable and entertaining biography." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p3 D 29 '40 700w

"This biography is a loving testimony to a great personality. The human equation frequently disappears from the discussion, and we see him only as a magnificent and benevolent mind, intent upon breaking down the barriers between men, opening up new avenues of wealth and resources. Helen Fessenden allied herself so closely with her husband and his work that we get the impression that she, too, had considerable engineering talent, so intently and intimately does she dwell upon the circumstances surrounding highly technical discoveries. Overflowing with descriptions of laboratory methods and patent discussions, the book might present some difficulty to the reader of popular biographies, but anyone with a fair knowledge of physics and mathematics and the time to read leisurely will enjoy this excursion into the personal thoughts and problems of a great practical dreamer." A. N. Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 N 9 '40 390w

FETTA, EMMA LOU. Murder on the face of it. 304p $2 Doubleday 40-7858

Detective story.

"The reader, after catching up with the original corpse at the halfway mark, should finish the book with three loud cheers for Emma Lou Fetta and some of the cleverest bafflement of the season." Will Cuppy

+ Books p12 Je 16 '40 280w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Je 15 '40 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 16 '40 220w

"Very fine mystery, remarkably free from feminine clichés in spite of a background of fashion shows and cocktail parties."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Je 22 '40 70w

"Attractive characters, colorful background of fashion circles, ample suspense, and plot that mixes dope-dealing and murder cleverly. Ultra-stylish number."

+ Sat R of Lit 22:20 Je 15 '40 40w

FETZER, HERMAN (JAKE FALSTAFF, pseud). Jacoby's Corners [il. by David Hendrickson]. 242p $2.50 Houghton
818 Farm life (W) 40-30927

Describes a summer vacation on an Ohio farm, where the author went to visit his grandfather and grandmother some thirty years ago. The comfortable family life, the numerous cousins, the good food, and the friendly neighbors, all figure in the narrative.

Bookmark 2:12 Ja '41

"It is a worthy and beautiful book. Maybe as you read it you will think wistfully of Mark Twain. And maybe you will say to yourself: 'He would like this. These are his people; railroaders, auctioneers, horse traders, farmers, little boys, big boys and Coffee Potters.'" S. L. White

+ Books p2 S 22 '40 1350w

"'Jacoby's Corners' might be the reminiscences of almost any American now middle-aged and a long way from the rocky pastures and ripe meadows of boyhood. It will make plenty of people comfortably homesick." R. H. Bonner

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 21 '40 300w

Reviewed by Lewis Gannett
Boston Transcript p9 D 17 '40 600w

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon
Christian Century 57:1378 N 6 '40 200w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '40 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '40

"The faults of 'Jacoby's Corners' are faults inevitable in a posthumous paste-up book of newspaper pieces. The long first chapter is the only one the author worked over with a view to more permanent publication. The others have been strung together right from the files, with too little cutting of the repetitious inanities of rural flip talk and too much effort to retain an unnecessary narrative thread by including the 'action' episodes in which Jake was weak. The virtues far outweigh the weaknesses, however." Howard Wolf

+ — New Repub 103:454 S 30 '40 550w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p10 O 20 '40 370w

"It is a book characteristically high-hearted and affirmative, but it is more than that. It is so fine a piece of writing, plainly a fresh turn in his development that the loss we sustained in his untimely death seems greater than we had known. . . Our high school boys and girls have to worry through a great many admirable but, for them, meaningless books. . . Why not give them a good, evocative, local document like 'Jacoby's Corners'? They could get from it a very warm and solid sense of the mid-western American landscape, and the folk of the region. They could get, too, a feeling for what may and what should be expressed in simple and unaffected prose." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 22:6 S 14 '40 500w

FEUCHTWANGER, LION. Paris gazette; tr. by Willa and Edwin Muir. 860p $3 Viking [9s 6d Hutchinson]
(W) 40-7414

The Paris Gazette is a German newspaper appearing in France in 1935. Sepp Trautwein, an exiled composer of pure Aryan blood, is the central character. With his wife and eighteen-year-old son, Sepp lives at a fourth-rate Paris hotel, and contributes articles to the paper to make ends meet. The Nazis intrigue to get control of the paper, because it is hostile to their régime, and their kidnaping of a Jewish contributor to the Gazette is the starting point of the activity of the story.

Booklist 36:364 My 15 '40

Bookmark p12 My '40

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
Books p3 Ap 21 '40 1050w

"Feuchtwanger is more than reporter and more than creative artist. He is a political commentator and a philosopher; he is a dreamer in places, a skeptic in others; he is hopeful and he is defeated. The people who come to life under his pen, those driven and those who drive, are real and full-bodied. His integrity of portraiture is such that one can at moments admire the ruthlessness of the destroyers and despise the pettiness of the destroyed. . . Feuchtwanger has painted a huge canvas of men living in the shadow of exile. If there are times when the detail seems too heavy and the action too slow it is because preoccupation with little things and monotony is part of their tragedy. The world

FEUCHTWANGER (foikt'väng-ĕr)

FEUCHTWANGER, LION—Continued
is accustomed to the drama and excitement of headlines; Feuchtwanger gives the human documentation that makes them." Rose Feld
+ Boston Transcript p11 Ap 22 '40 750w

"Feuchtwanger writes in a strangely traditional style, which is strongly reminiscent of the present lull in German fiction. Otherwise there is no comparison: his humanism and nobility of purpose belong to a better tradition, as does also his technique. With regard to the latter not even the publisher's blurb is able to overstate when it claims that the reader sweeps into an ever-widening scene with perfect mastery of the situation." H. B.
+ — Canadian Forum 20:123 Jl '40 490w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '40

"This novel gives us, as no other novel we have read gives us, a sense of crisis in our history, a sense that the civilization we were born into, with all its beliefs, is being challenged and that behind the challenge is an unexpected and terrifying power. The very quietness of the tone of the book, the absence of striking characters or exceptional situations, adds to this effect." M. M. Colum
+ Forum 103:324 Je '40 450w

"Solid, but without being heavy or dull, 'Paris Gazette' is distinguished above all by masterly characterisation. It is at the opposite extreme from a novel in which people are chosen to illustrate a thesis. The characters, and there are a great many of them of almost equal importance, are so clearly imagined, deeply understood, and effectively presented that the reader becomes interested in them for their own sake to the comparative disregard of the story that grows out of them." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 2 '40 390w

"Mr. Feuchtwanger's literary crusade does not, so to speak, hit one between the eyes. As an indictment of Hitlerism it is effective by accretion, by the indefatigable piling up of factual material from the press and the underground opposition, by anecdote, comment, song, opinion, speech, and, of course, the story behind each emigrant's exile, voluntary or compulsory. The characters, if they have not been made warm and memorable, have been dissected with clinical dispassion by their creator so far as their mental processes are concerned. Convictions he respects, but no writer is better equipped to track down the true determinants of conviction, which may as easily be prejudice as wisdom. Perhaps his greatest skill, among so many, is this ability to uncover underlying motives and to pull apart the structure of rationalization man builds around his deeds and his thoughts." D. M. Young
+ Nation 150:546 Ap 27 '40 650w

Reviewed by F. C. Weiskopf
New Repub 102:769 Je 3 '40 750w

"Mr. Feuchtwanger's novel is a pleasant change from the run of novels about exiles, the usual cry for pity is dispensed with and instead there is a picture of émigré life as it is... The moral disintegration produced by living too long on uncertain favours, the émigré delight in intensified party politics, the whole emotional distress of exile, these things are brilliantly and impersonally described. There is also an extremely fine study of Nazi Paris seen from the strong point of complete understanding." Anthony West
+ New Statesman & Nation 19:472 Ap 6 '40 230w

"Feuchtwanger, adept at reaching historical perspectives, and knowing that 'one cannot judge Homer by the excavations of the German Archaeological Institute,' has been able to treat this spectacle in a heroic vein. He pleads no special cause, and he seeks to substantiate no brief... His own fine new novel is heroic both in size and in mood. In dramatizing the strange, impossible, inhuman, tragicomic existence of the émigrés in Paris, he has left far behind him the merely reportorial and melodramatic. He offers us a sweeping vista, which, while it includes all the facets of reality, in its synthesis creates something new and splendid, something meaningful to all men. For, as it should be, the whole of the novel is greater than the sum of its parts." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 21 '40 1000w
Pratt p23 autumn '40

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Sat R of Lit 22:5 Ap 27 '40 850w

Discussion by the author
Sat R of Lit 22:5 Ap 27 '40 1450w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 16 '40 550w
Time 35:88 Ap 29 '40 480w

"Much thought and sharply candid feeling have gone into this latest novel of Herr Feuchtwanger's. An immensely long book, it exhibits all this author's industry and technical resource and a very understandable urgency of mood as well... Despite its variety of tension, the narrative works all too obviously to a thesis. One admires separate scenes, character studies, arguments and so on, but misses in them the transforming quality which might give imaginative coherence to the whole."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 30 '40 490w

FICHTER, JOSEPH HENRY. Man of Spain: Francis Suarez. 349p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Suárez, Francisco 40-33272

Biography of the Spanish Jesuit philosopher, theologian, and jurisprudent, born in Granada in 1548. He is best known for his political controversy with James I of England; and was, according to some authorities, the last of the great medieval schoolmen. The book does not include a critical study of his writings; it is essentially the story of his life. Index.

"An enthusiastic and very readable story of his life, written because the author thinks, not without reason, that the great Spanish scholar who was addressed even before his death by a Roman Pontiff as Doctor eximius et pius deserves of posterity a more popular place than has been accorded him." R. A. Hewitt
+ America 64:190 N 23 '40 490w

Reviewed by J. T. McNeill
J Religion 21:101 Ja '41 190w

"There has been no adequate biography of Suarez in English, and no really comprehensive analysis and estimate of his work; so there is a large place for a book about him. The present biography fills only a part of the gap. Pious and popular, rather than critical and scholarly, it gives an account of his life based on a thirty year old French biography which is probably quite adequate... Its account of Suarez's thought is either superficial or evasive, it includes no bibliography to stimulate further reading, and several of the best things that have been written about Suarez are omitted from the sparse footnotes." G. M.
Sat R of Lit 23:20 O 26 '40 330w

FICKLEN, JOSEPH BURWELL. Manual of industrial health hazards. 176p il $4 Service to industry, box 133, W. Hartford, Conn.

613.62 Hygiene, Industrial. Gases, Asphyxiating and poisonous. Air—Analysis. Dust 40-8987

"In this book, a well known chemical engineer presents methods for evaluation of industrial hygiene exposures resulting from many gases, fumes, vapors and dusts. The first of the book's 63 chapters contains notes on air sampling and each subsequent chapter is devoted to a particular material or family of materials. Occurrence, uses and physical properties are given for each material as well as physiological effects, allowable concentrations and a simple test method." Chem & Met Eng

"This is a reliable guide by an experienced authority who has covered the essentials for many poisonous substances. . . It has evidently required extensive and patient endeavor and, as characterizes good engineering expositions, is brief and to the point." E. R. Hayhurst

+ Am J Pub Health 31:93 Ja '41 350w

Chem & Met Eng 47:443 Je '40 90w

FIELD, KENNETH. Introduction to investment analysis. 340p il $3.50 Ronald

332.67 Investments. Securities 40-5787

"This book is designed to serve primarily as a text on investments for college use. . . The author in his treatment of the subject has emphasized throughout methods of analysis to be applied to different types of securities, having devoted a chapter each to public utilities, railroads, industrials, real estates, insurance companies, banks, investment trusts, and governments. Treatment of the legal versus the economic basis for values while not exhaustive is adequate as an introductory discussion. . . A list of references follows each chapter and where the author has limited his discussion of certain topics in the text, he has furnished adequate material for further study in his reference list. Tabular and chart material, as well as copious examples, add to the value of this book as a text." Am Econ R

Reviewed by R. E. Badger

Am Econ R 30:621 S '40 250w

"Professor Field has a tight, uninspired style which appears on the surface to make for simplicity but which in many places actually results in difficulty of understanding. . . The author is careless in using terms not previously explained in the text. . . He is given to making assertions that are out of place in the text and strike an unsuitable tone." S. G. Hanson

— Ann Am Acad 210:176 Jl '40 450w

FIELD, PETER, pseud. Law badge. 279p $2 Morrow

40-7011

Western story.

Booklist 36:384 Je 1 '40

"Here's another sure-fire Western." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 Ap 28 '40 140w

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 20 '40 20w

"A fast and salty tale of the old troublous days in the Southwest of the Eighteen Seventies and, with the exception of 'Doctor Two Guns,' the best that Peter Field has yet published." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 14 '40 220w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN (MRS ARTHUR PEDERSON). All through the night [il. by the author]. [38p] 50c Macmillan

(W) 40-34280

A little book, "stocking size," retelling the story of the first Christmas eve as it seemed to the animals in the stable at Bethlehem.

"Perhaps if I read this story often enough I may be able to do so without choking up. I haven't yet. In telling this story, the simplest way is always the best. It needs not to be made new; it never grows old. Miss Field tells how simple spirits welcomed the night that changed the world." M. L. Becker

+ Books p12 N 10 '40 200w

"Read every word of this moving tale, reverently and simply told. This is the kind of book you would be happy to find in your own Christmas stocking or you would love to tuck into someone else's, for its beauty will appeal to any age and it is just the right size." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 16 '40 310w

Churchman 154:4 D 15 '40 30w

"As welcome as Yule is Rachel Field to the Three Owls' Christmas Tree." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 16:431 N '40 30w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill

Library J 65:849 O 15 '40 40w

"Miss Field has illustrated this small volume, which measures only four by five inches, with tiny green line drawings. It makes a perfect book for children's Christmas stockings, and a most appealing gift for a person of any age." Irene Smith

+ Library J 65:1043 D 1 '40 120w

"This little book is just the right size to be loved and cherished and carried about by small readers. The drawings of manger and stable, of lambs and oxen, and the Holy Child, have the simplicity and childlike quality of the text." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 1 '40 390w

"Short, sweet, and gentle." Katharine Scherman

Sat R of Lit 23:22 N 16 '40 40w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 24 '40 80w

FIELD, WOOSTER BARD. House planning. 271p il $3 McGraw

729 Architecture, Domestic (W) 40-30237

"A logical treatment of the problems—personal, aesthetic, and technical—met with in planning a house. An attempt has been made to simplify the discussions as much as possible without causing them to lose their significance in the house planning study. After a consideration of drafting methods, the book takes up the study of a house which is already built, dealing with each feature by itself as far as possible, and introducing added details in each project as the work progresses." (Publisher's note) The author is an architect and professor of engineering drawing in Ohio State university. Index.

Booklist 37:65 O 15 '40

"The book is not too technical for reading by the home economist really interested in the subject. Text, diagrams, and illustrations will all help her to understand what is and is not practicable in a moderate-priced house."

+ J Home Econ 32:633 N '40 80w

FIELDHOUSE, MRS FELICE. Yukon holiday; il. by Raymond Lufkin. 230p map $2 Longmans

40-13168

A California girl on vacation on the Yukon agreed to teach in a small settlement, Fort Windsor. During the winter she learned to shoot, to handle a dog sled, and to meet the responsibilities of living in that cold climate. For older girls.

"It is a winter full of natural but often dangerous events, one to be remembered with gratitude. The pictures are clear, cold woodcuts, with the atmosphere of the Far North." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 22 '40 260w

"Authentic background, plenty of action, and a hint of romance. The rather gruesome finding of a half-starved man, well handled. Author is successful in her evident desire to leave the reader with the feeling of the fascination of an Alaskan winter and an admiration for the good-natured, blunt sourdoughs. Recommended for girls eleven to fifteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 65:714 S 1 '40 80w

Social Studies 31:336 N '40

"The events which make Northern life both interesting and thrilling are told in a simple style, with a sense of humor and with appealing characterizations." M. L. Pfaelzer

+ Social Studies 32:93 F '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 8 '40 60w

Wis Lib Bul 36:141 O '40

FIELDS, WILLIAM CLAUDE. Fields for president; drawings by O. Soglow. 120p $1.50 Dodd 817 40-8230

The comedian of stage and screen here throws his hat into the presidential ring and explains his motives, and other affairs, in eight chapters of non-serious comment.

Books p13 Jl 21 '40 100w

"'Fields for President,' I am sorry to have to report, is a gag book that doesn't nearly live up to the promise of its cover. . . There is no evidence in this book of Fields's comic superiority. Its author or authors clings or cling to the undergraduate idea that all names like Schmackenpfeiffer, Hemmendinger and Thistleberger are funny per se." Carlton Brown
— New Repub 102:864 Je 24 '40 160w

"At the end, needless to say, the reader will not be entirely convinced that Mr Fields has made out a case for his election to the highest office within the peoples' gift. This will neither surprise nor disappoint the author. The book provides some mirth, which is enhanced by characteristically clever sketches by O. Soglow."
Springf'd Republican p7e My 12 '40 170w

"Even without the Fields voice and the Fields mannerisms, the Fields pen shows a delicate sense of U. S. language. The book contains some mothy, mechanized, professional gagging, some second-speed samples of the purest, most incapturable Fields comedy."
Time 35:102 My 13 '40 150w

FILSON, FLOYD VIVIAN. Pioneers of the primitive church. 194p $2 Abingdon 225.92 Christian biography. Church history—Primitive and early church. Christianity and other religions—Judaism 40-5742

"The author discusses the relation of the early church to Judaism and sketches the leading personalities and the processes by which an independent Gentile church arose." (Publisher's note) Contents: Peter; Stephen; Barnabas; Paul; James, the brother of the Lord. Index of Scripture references. Index of subjects and persons.

"This is an interesting and valuable book. It brings the primitive church before us as a vital, living reality. Evidence of careful thought and of acquaintance with the best literature on the subject appears on every page. It is written in a clear and readable style. Ministers may well have it alongside Glover's With the Twelve." J. D. Martin
+ Christian Century 57:737 Je 5 '40 360w
Churchman 154:35 S 1 '40 150w

"The sketches themselves are well done; they are critical and discerning. The book is the substance of lectures offered to a pastor's institute, so that the studies are presented on a popular level. This is no defect but a virtue. The substance of the book is 'edifying' in the proper sense of the word, but the tone is never homiletical. It must be said, however, that the claim which the publishers make for the book—that this procedure thus offers a history of the early church—is not borne out by the content." D. W. Riddle
+ — J Religion 21:101 Ja '41 150w

FINDLEY, MRS FRANCINE. From what dark roots. . . 292p $2.50 Harper 40-9519

Family chronicle covering the years from 1839 to the Civil war. A young Southerner, shouldering the guilt of a weaker brother, leaves his Natchez home forever, and goes with his bride to a lonely farm near Malone, New York. There in the new country he makes a name for himself, and founds a family to carry on the name.

"'From What Dark Roots' is a completely sincere, carefully thought out novel of the period. It is decked out with the political talk of the time, an occasional good song, and brought to a climax and a resolution by the Civil War. Yet there is scarcely a convincingly real person in the book. The novel gives, nevertheless, a fair and interesting picture of the times." F. H. Bullock
+ Books p8 My 26 '40 650w
Canadian Forum 20:191 S '40 110w

"As much a pamphlet as a novel, but more sincere and meaningful than most period fiction."
New Repub 102:834 Je 17 '40 70w

"Francine Findley has constructed a full and firm-textured story about her nineteenth-century intelligentsia, a story packed with incident and peopled with a score of minor characters, as real in their own way and as essential to the book as the Burdetts themselves. Few novelists have given us so broad or so just a view of a period in American life which was in many ways, though we tend to forget now, strikingly like our own." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p7 My 26 '40 950w
New Yorker 16:93 My 25 '40 60w

"Although 'From What Dark Roots' has no great distinction of style—in fact it is often banal and hackneyed—the Burdett family commands our interest, and the book helps illuminate and humanize the most vigorous and critical era in our history." R. A. Cordell
+ — Sat R of Lit 22:11 Je 29 '40 450w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Golden tales from faraway; il. by Helen Finger. 233p $2 Winston
(W) 40-7296

Thirteen tales retold by the author, each of which is based upon a story told him somewhere in his travels. These were collected from Java, Mexico, England, South America, Scotland, and other countries.

Booklist 36:400 Je 15 '40

"How much of all this is his alone, I can't say; it all sounds so new to me I have an idea he must have made some of it up. But it all has the authentic story telling sound; I wanted to read it all aloud and many others will. This diversified book should be noted by story-tellers to varied ages." M. L. Becker
+ Books p14 My 5 '40 270w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 26 '40 90w

"The story-teller will find use for many of these folk tales and will be very interested in the introductions to each story which explain how the author gathered them. Many children, however, will feel that these accounts detract and slow up the book. Attractive make-up. Illustrations by the author's daughter, Helen Finger, show originality, humor, and action. Recommended for ages, nine to twelve." Sonja Wennerblad
+ — Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 100w

Reviewed by R. A. Hill
Library J 65:848 O 15 '40 10w

"The book, with its quality of tales told orally, will be useful to the story-teller. Helen Finger's drawings have gayety and humor and she shows genuine power of characterization. For boys and girls from 9 to 13." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 21 '40 170w

FINK, DONALD G. Principles of television engineering. 541p il $5 McGraw 621.388 Television (W) 40-4898

"Mr. Fink is the managing editor of Electronics and the author of Engineering Electronics (1938). He assumes that the reader is acquainted with the general principles of radio engineering as applied to vacuum tubes, circuits, amplification, modulation, carrier transmission, and demodulation. Such subjects as scanning, illumination, camera tubes, picture tubes, wave-form analysis, are treated in detail and follow the standards of the Radio Manufacturers Association Committee on Television. The work is practical and although the calculus intrudes in a few places the mathematics are not difficult. There are plenty of references to the literature and more than 300 illustrations and diagrams." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Booklist 36:301 Ap 1 '40
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '40
N Y New Tech Bks 25:13 Ja '40

FINLEY, JOHN HUSTON. The coming of the Scot. 186p $2 Scribner

325.241 Scotch in the U.S. 40-7951

Six lectures, delivered at the University of Edinburgh in 1929, in which the author pays tribute to his Scotch Irish ancestry in a review of what Scotch immigrants have achieved in America.

Booklist 37:6 S '40

"Not many men have so widely and effectively spread the gospel of intellectual pleasure to so many of their own generation as did Dr. John H. Finley. His familiar voice and his endearing presence were the expression of human kindness; his mind that delighted so in its possessions and in sharing them with any listener was the best kind of stimulus to thought. It is hard to realize that they have all passed into the long silence. A small book which he put together shortly before his death [1940] is doubly welcome; welcome because, though written, it brings back the voice, the style, and the personality of an endearing speaker, and welcome because its subject was one in which he was greatly interested and which is of special importance at times like these." Angus Fletcher

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 28 '40 1300w

Reviewed by E. N. Jenckes
Springf'd Republican p6 My 11 '40 1050w

"It is a fine little book, and has all the characteristic qualities of sweetness and light of the good man and serene scholar who wrote it." G. W. Alger

+ Survey G 29:409 Jl '40 600w

FINNEY, JOHN MILLER TURPIN. A surgeon's life; [his] autobiography. 396p $3.50 Putnam

B or 92 Surgeons—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 40-35789

"While primarily the self-portrait of an eminent American surgeon, now Professor of Surgery Emeritus at Johns Hopkins, Dr. Finney's autobiography is much more. During more than fifty years of practice in Baltimore the author has witnessed and participated in almost unbelievable advances in surgery and medicine, and he has touched life in almost all its aspects. He has lived for seventy-seven years. High professional honors in America and decorations by foreign governments do not obscure the fact that here is a man who has been motivated by a deep love of his fellow men." (Library J) Dr Finney is a noted raconteur and his book is enlivened with many humorous stories. Index.

Booklist 37:173 Ja 1 '41

Reviewed by Hugh Cabot, M.D.
+ Books p14 N 24 '40 950w

"The greatest charm of the book is its artlessness. It offers entertainment as well as information, but transcends both humor and erudition. In the sense that it covers faithfully the development of surgery from its pre-asepsis day to the present it could be called an historic document. It certainly is a human document." Eugene de Savitsch

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:3 D 24 '40 440w

"Dr. Finney likes a good story and knows how to tell one. Perhaps that is why this reviewer believes that this story of a doctor's life will not only be a guide to the young man thinking of medicine as a profession, but also an intensely interesting book for all who read it." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 220w

"With supreme restraint and modesty Dr. Finney records the outstanding events in his long and influential life. . . His dignity and his great humanity shine from every page without the slightest effort on the part of the author. If every young surgeon would read this book and take its author as his ideal, the prestige of surgery would rise even higher and the usefulness of autobiographies would be reinforced." Karl Menninger

+ Nation 151:640 D 21 '40 170w

"Worthy of special mention are the many passages in which the author gives us his interesting general observations on such subjects as life, death, marriage, children and old age. In these discussions Dr. Finney reveals himself as a fine type of doctor—thoughtful, honorable, human and humane." Saul Jarcho, M. D.

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 5 '41 900w

"[Dr Finney's] intimate portraits of Johns Hopkins's Big Four, Osler, Halsted, Welch, and Kelly, will delight all who knew this extraordinary quartet. His story abounds in anecdotes, many amusing, some significant, some trifling, but all told in the easy, informal manner we associate with a pipe and an open fire. The net result is a lovable, folksy book, the tale of a happy man to whom human relations are supremely important." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 N 30 '40 750w

FINTA, ALEXANDER. My brothers and I; il. by [the author]. 185p $2 Holiday

Children in Hungary 40-27485

Continues the story begun in Herdboy of Hungary (Book Review Digest, 1933). The tale describes the author's boyhood days in the Hungarian city of Nagyvarad; his adventures capturing birds and especially his prize capture, an eagle; and the lively doings of his gang in their club, their aeronautical experiments, and their troubles with adults.

Booklist 36:385 Je 1 '40

"The pictures have the same dash as those in the earlier book and more body; their strong, sharp directness belongs with the incidents of which they are truly illustrations. The book has the distinction of anything designed by Helen Gentry; it will be collected. But it will also be used." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 My 19 '40 500w

"A thoroughly delightful story." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 152:376 D '40 110w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 16:271 Jl '40 130w

"The bravado and self-conceit of this venturesome oldest brother makes a story quite different in tone from Miss Seredy's tales of Hungary. Although the book is beautifully designed, some of the drawings are unpleasantly disproportionate." Florence O'Gara

Library J 65:544 Je 15 '40 120w

" 'My Brothers And I' is well written, the illustrations have the same originality and strength as those in the earlier story and the book is designed with charm and distinction." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Je 2 '40 500w

"The doings of the irrepressible Kinta boys, their gang fights, their scientific experiments (which usually end in disaster) are of universal appeal and yet have enough of the exotic to be thoroughly fascinating to an American of, say, twelve to fourteen. Well written."

+ New Yorker 16:98 My 18 '40 70w

FISCHER, MRS MARJORIE. The dog Cantbark; il. by Roger Duvoisin. [32p] $2 Random house

40-13977

Picture-story book for the very young. Cantbark was a white woolly dog whose impulse to bark was completely conquered by the practising of his four musician owners. When he went to live in the country he made friends with a baby on the farm, and found his bark the day the baby was in danger.

FISCHER, MARJORIE—Continued

"The brilliant differences of Roger Duvoisin's colored pictures from those of any other illustrator make this one of the most striking picture books of the season, and as the story has much the same sort of difference from other stories for little children about little dogs, it should be a find for people who want to bring something to the children of a family with whom they are spending the week end." M. L. Becker
+ Books p5 Jl 28 '40 250w

"The story seems forced and to lack the spontaneity and sparkle usually found in this author's work. The illustrations are by Roger Duvoisin and are done in his usual style and spirit. I would recommend it only for large collections." E. G. Mullan
Library J 65:660 Ag '40 130w

Reviewed by E. W. Steele
New Repub 103:843 D 16 '40 30w

"The story, first told for a small boy, is built with sure touch, clear-cut phrase on phrase, and a gratifying use of sound effects, and leaves the young audience with the glow of satisfaction which stems from difficulties overcome and the feeling that all's right in the miniature world of childhood. The pictures in vibrant colors seem to have been drawn from the level of a child's eye, and, in the impressionistic style of a child's own drawing, supply plenty of details to be picked out with glee."
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 4 '40 350w

"The pictures are funny and decorative, and the story of the dog who cannot bark, and his musician friends, is good entertainment."
+ New Yorker 16:125 D 7 '40 30w

FISH, HELEN DEAN. Doll house book; il. and diagrams by Hilda Richman. 154p $2 Stokes 649.55 Doll houses. Handicraft
(W) 40-27644

Directions for the making, decorating and furnishing of an eight-room doll house. Tools and materials are inexpensive, and patterns for each object made are included. Can be used by children themselves, or by adults.

Booklist 37:39 O 1 '40

"There is a lasting fascination in doll house making and furnishing: I promised myself, as soon as I had gone through this book, that the moment the Book Week Number had gone to press I would give myself the relaxation of making a house out of cartons, with all its furniture, just like this. In sober moments I suspect I will not do so; in this life so many things one really wants to do are crowded out. But this is the sort of book to convince any one that he can." M. L. Becker
+ Books p26 N 10 '40 250w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 19 '40 140w

"As is pointed out in the enthusiastic Introduction, this is not only a fascinating hobby but has a distinct vocational trend. It is excellent training for interior decorating and other professions where small scale models are used. . . With time, patience, and a little ingenuity, a very complete doll house can be made at small expense. Age appeal, ten years and up." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 65:660 Ag '40 140w

"Here is a hobby for children treated with charm and intelligence and accompanied by suggestions for patterns, materials and procedure that are workmanlike and practical. . . The diagrams and drawings are clear, the directions easy to follow, and little girls will be tempted to make use of them. True scale models are often made in schools and in such an undertaking Miss Fish's explanations will be helpful. But the appeal of Miss Fish's book lies in her imaginative joy in doll houses and doll-house days, and her enthusiasm is infectious." A. T. Eaton
+ N Y Times p12 O 20 '40 460w
Wis Lib Bul 36:152 N '40

